U.S. HAS 200,000 MEN IN EUROPE

LT.-COL. WILLIAMS SPEAKS ON THE WAR IN TORONTO CHURCH.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—There are now between 150,000 and 200,000 United States troops overseas. This definite statement was made by Lieut.-Col. G. H. Williams in the course of a brief address in Sherbourne Street Methodist Church yesterday morning. Lt.-Col. Williams is to resume the pastorate of Sherbourne Street Church as soon as he is relieved of his duties. Col. Williams, who has just returned from a tour on special work across the line, declared that the wholehearted manner in which the United States is undertaking its share in the great war is a revelation and an inspiration. The people are not yet touched by the tragedy of the loss of many of their youngest and bravest, as are others of the allied nations, but they are prepared for it, and are solemnly determined to go on to the end.

HUNDREDS ARE STARVING TO DEATH IN POLAND

BOB FITZSIMMONS TAKES THE COUNT IN BOUT WITH DEATH

Ex-Heavyweight Champion Dies This Morning After Four Days' Illness.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Oct. 22.—"Bob" Fitzsimmons former heavy weight champion pugilist of the world died in a Chicago hospital early today, after a short illness of pneumonia.

The former champion was taken sick last Tuesday while appearing in a vaudeville threatre and his ailment was at first diagnozed as ptomaine poisoning. Later it was discovered that he was suffering from double lobar pneumonia and the doctors declared that he could not live. His remarkable vitality sustained him until Saturday when he lapsed into unconsciousness from which he did not rally except at rare intervals.

Fitzsimmons made a fortune in the ring, his earnings soon vanished. He had a varied matrimonial career having been married four times.

Very Sudden Death of Mr. R. H. Johnston

DR. THOS. JOHNSON IS NOTIFIED OF UNEXPECTED DEMISE OF HIS BROTHER.

Dr. Thomas Johnston, veterinary surgeon, Chambers street, received word this morning of the sudden death of his brother, Mr. R. H. Johnston at Glenada, Sask., Friday morning. No other particulars are to hand.

The late Mr. R. H. Johnston paid a visit to Peterboro, renewing old acquaintances, last winter, when he seemed to be in perfect health. He left Bailieboro 20 years ago to seek a home in the west, where he had enjoyed a successful business career. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Bottom of Carlyle, and three sons, namely, Herbert, a farmer in the west; Thomas, a student of medicine in Winnipeg, in his last year; and Harold, who is attending school at Carlyle.

REVIEW NEWSBOYS' ON STRIKE

The boys demanded higher wages, claiming they were entitled to the same on account of the increased number of papers they were obliged to carry every night. On some routes the number of papers has more than doubled during the last few weeks, and the carriers felt that they were justified in asking for more money. Mr. Stratton held a conference with them, heard their claims, decided to readjust the scale of wages, and the boys went back to work.

The circulation of The Review has grown with such phenomenal rapidity since the contest opened that the work of the carrier boys has been greatly increased. Hundreds of subscriptions have been added, and in several sections the circulation of the paper has been more than doubled. This will be good news to the advertising patrons of The Review, as the paper is of much greater value to them on account of the hundreds of new homes in which it is read. The results of the big contest have been very gratifying indeed to the publishers, and a statement of circulation, which will be made in a few days, will show that The Review is fast becoming Peterborough's greatest newspaper.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1917.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND FOR 1918.

THE CITY WILL SOON be confronted with the annual problem of raising money for the Patriotic Fund. Last year $60,000 was required in the city alone, and for 1918 the sum needed will be as great or greater.

Peterborough must keep faith with the men who have enlisted here, and take care of the dependents they have left behind them. There is no question about the absolute necessity of raising the money. How best to accomplish this purpose is the problem, whether by subscription or by taxation.

Last year the city raised $60,000 for the Fund by the issue of debentures. There are property owners who objected to this plan on the ground that the burden was carried entirely by the people who were already taxed. The tenants, too, to a degree at least, opposed the taxation system. They maintained that the new levy gave the landlords an excuse for raising rents out of all proportion to the additional burden and that the people who were least able really paid the tax.

It has been proposed that the amount required for 1918 be raised by the voluntary subscription plan again. There is a well-founded fear, however, that if this is tried the attempt will prove considerable of a failure, as the people, after a year of freedom from this appeal to their generosity, have become indifferent.

Again, it has been suggested that the usual appeal be made for subscriptions, and if the amount received falls short of what is required, the balance be made up by a tax. One objection to this is that a considerable number might rely entirely upon the power to tax, and would contribute nothing.

Among the aldermen there seems to be little disposition to add to the already heavy debenture debt of the city. If the money is to be raised by taxation, the Council has one alternative, and that is to secure it in one levy. This would mean an additional five mills on the tax rate. The owner of a house assessed for $2,000 would thus be called on to pay $10 to the Patriotic Fund. There is a question as to whether the ratepayers, already complaining of high taxes, would stand for another increase to this extent.

Someone has suggested that the question be submitted to a vote of the people at the next municipal election, that is, the ratepayers to decide whether or not the Fund shall be raised by taxation. It would not be hard to forecast the result of such a plebiscite. The property owners alone would vote, and it is safe to say that the majority of them would be opposed to assuming a burden they regarded as one-sided.

The aldermen are certainly in a quandary, and no one can blame them if they proceed slowly in a matter of so much importance to the public. The question, however, must soon be faced, as the end of the year approaches.

There are people in Peterborough—and in the days when the subscription plan was followed they were among the most generous contributors—who maintain that the Government should take over this branch of war work and supply money for the Patriotic Fund out of the public treasury. One great objection to this plan would be the cost of administration. A small army of well-paid officials would be required. At present the Fund is operated largely by volunteer workers. No such amount of money in any scheme of the country is handled at so low a percentage for operating expenses. In Peterborough the cost is nominal.

Whatever happens, whatever plan is adopted, the money must be raised. The city has a charge to keep with the men overseas.

LABOR MEN IN PARLIAMENT.

THE TORONTO STAR has suddenly developed a friendliness for the workingmen of the country, a sentiment that recurs regularly to the Liberal press on the eve of every election, no matter how the class so fathered are slighted in the interval. This year the Opposition papers are unusually active on behalf of the wage-earners. It is their one hope of victory. They aim to split the vote. The secret has leaked out. A young man from Toronto is to be located in Peterborough, ostensibly to work in a law office, but in reality to work the political wires.

The labor men of the Province have one representative in the Legislature and none in Parliament. A lone member pleads the cause in the Dominion House, and he is elected in a Quebec constituency. For this condition the workingmen have only themselves to blame. It is not due to apathy, for labor is active in every election. The trouble is that they have consented to be hoodwinked by the plausible ante-election promises of politicians. They have proved their allegiance to some candidate who, once he is elected, forgets the class who favored him, and is nothing but a straight party man just the same. When labor flattered itself that it had landed a fish, it found out that it had simply hooked an eel.

Surely the eyes of labor have been opened after years of such disappointing experiences. Are they to be caught again in the same snare? Are they to allow some ambitious citizen, who has no claim upon their suffrage, who is himself in no sense a workingman, and as such can have no possible sympathy with their interests, to use their organisations as so many stepping-stones to place?

Labor is not likely to be deceived. Men have been elected to Parliament from this district, who went there unpledged so far as labor was concerned, and yet on every opportunity that presented itself, spoke and voted for the wage-earner. Such disinterested service will appeal to labor rather than the pledges of a candidate untried. A friend at court is worth half a dozen alleged champions who are still in the woods.

MR. SEXSMITH A UNIONIST.

MR. J. A. SEXSMITH, M.P. for East Peterborough, it is almost unnecessary to say, is a staunch believer in union government. He was one of the first members on either side of the House to come out in favor of coalition, so as not only to avoid a war-time election, but to get the benefit of the services of the ablest and most patriotic on both sides of politics. Mr. Sexsmith is naturally pleased over what Sir Robert Borden has so recently accomplished.

It looks as if there will be no war-time election, so far as Mr. Sexsmith is concerned. The Opposition are making no move. The record of the present member, both on the war and on all important public questions, is satisfactory. He has always been an earnest worker for his constituents, and has a faculty for making friends regardless of party affiliation. East Peterborough is a farming community, and in Mr. Sexsmith has a representative just as every such riding should have, a man who is a practical farmer himself.

INDIANS AND THE FRANCHISE.

A WRITER in The Toronto News maintains that the Indians of Canada should not be granted the franchise until they are able to converse intelligently in the English language and to read and write. To this, Chief Whetung, of the Chemong Reserve, very properly objects in a letter to the Toronto papers, which we reproduce in another column.

The Indian is the aboriginal resident of Canada, and his right as such is entitled to recognition. The alien who makes this country his home fares better at the hands of the Government than do the Indians. He is given the vote, and no conditions are insisted upon as to his ability to speak intelligently the language of his adopted country, not to mention reading or writing it.

The man dispossessed of his birthright by the whites is surely entitled to the same treatment that is accorded the illiterate resident who has been born abroad.

If there is to be an educational test for the voters, let the same conditions be made to apply to all classes alike.

THE SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL.

THE MEMBERS of the Board of Education who voted for the lesser expenditure on repairs for the South Central School are not without a case. They point to the fact that although Council voted $13,000 to renovate the building, the plans prepared were too low, and it was found, when tenders were submitted, that the work would require an outlay of several thousand dollars more. Even if this amount had been expended, the school would not have accommodated a single additional pupil, and the overcrowded condition would have remained. The question of providing a new building would still confront the Board.

Repairs were made by the Board under the direction of the property committee, of which Mr. Roland Denne is chairman. Their work has been highly commended, and now experts declare that the South Central School is as sanitary as any school building in the city. The system of ventilation is modern and complete, and by following the plan which was finally adopted, thousands of dollars were saved the ratepayers.

The building, however, is out of date, and no expenditure would make it anything else. That section of the city will always require school accommodation. A new building must be put up next year. What the Board in 1918 must decide will be a choice between putting up a new school on Sherbrooke street or erecting one on the site of the structure which has outlived its usefulness.

BRANDING THE CANDIDATES.

EVERY CANDIDATE who faces the people at the coming election must wear the trademark of his leader. The War-time Election Act provides that within three days after the nominations are made, Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier must designate their respective followers. This is designed to assist the soldiers overseas, who, when they vote, will be able to distinguish between the friends and the opponents of the measure which was framed to help the nation's fighting men, to whom a list of the candidates will be sent.

No tricky politician can operate in the campaign under false colors, professing to be of one faith while he really cherishes another. If he is a Unionist candidate, the endorsation of Sir Robert Borden is all he requires to make that fact clear. If he is a follower of Sir Wilfrid Laurier he must wear the trademark of the Liberal chieftain and accept the consequences of his associations.

In Ontario a man so branded will be in about the same position as the unfortunate cast into the sea and weighted down with a millstone.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Able To Handle Man.

Marie Willis — How inconsistent the Government is. For their officers' training camps they say they want applicants who can handle men.

Jane Gillis—Yes?

Marie Willis—And yet they won't let us women enlist?

Free Information.

"I suppose a great many ask for information who have no idea of taking a train?"

"Yes," said the weary official. "When some people spy a free bureau of information there's a free temptation to stock up."

His Pet Horror.

"So you chose the navy. Aren't you afraid of submarines?"

"Yes, mum; but they're not nearly so numerous as trench rats, and I'm scared to death of them."

What He's Going To Be.

"Yes," said the nice little old lady. "I am much interested in the war. I have two nieces who are going to be Red Cross nurses, and one fine nephew who is now at Fort Sheridan studying to be an Armenian."

A Thought.

"I was just thinking."

"What?"

"What a pitiful showing we should make in this war if our young men were as afraid to die as some of our older men are of giving up their dollars."

That we have money
We can give.
Let's not begrudge
The sacrifice,
The vict'ry will
Be worth the price.

Accepted His Fate

The village idiot gaped so long at the village grocer that that worthy man became irritated.

"Look here, what you starin' at? If you can find a man homelier than yourself, kill him!"

The villiage idiot went in earch of a man uglier than himself, and one day he found one.

He tapped him on the sholder.

"I've got to kill you," he said, smiling amiably. "You're homelier than me."

The stranger turned and looked at the other for a full minute.

"Am I?" he said. "Then for goodness sake kill me!"

Why He Lost

At a twenty-first birthday party a mother was praising the talents of her son, and, being anxious to make him appear at his best before the company present, asked him to show his prizes.

One of the guests, picking up the best of the articles, said:

"And what did you win this prize for?"

"Oh, that was for running," said the proud mother.

"And who presented it to him?" asked the guest.

"We did," said the mother.

"How was that?" asked the guest.

"Why, you see," said the proud mother, "he would have won, but he didn't hear the pistol go off."

Some Toothbrush

An American lady who was travelling in Canada collecting data for her next book, stayed with a farmer's wife. When the farmer came in from the fields he stopped some time to rub his gum boots on the doormat.

"Where is your husband?" asked the visitor. "I thought I heard him at the door?"

When the book was sent to the publisher this passage caught his attention:

"Canadian settlers in the out of the way districts can't get tooth brushes, so they use the doormat!"

EDITOR'S MAIL

Call It the Exemption Act.

(Mail and Empire.)

In Quebec the idea seems to prevail that the Military Service Act was passed in order that the male population might be legally exempted from military service.

WHICH MAN IS BETTER OFF?

A famous American weekly paper asks in one of its editorials this week, which of two men is better off; the man with one hundred dollars in his pocket or the man with a one hundred dollar American war loan bond in the bank. The writer concludes that the man with the bond is the more fortunate, first because his capital is quite as safe if not safer than the $100 bill since the government is the backer of both and the bond, if destroyed might be replaced whereas the bill could not; second, because the bond is earning money and the bill is not; and third, because the bond-owner has learned to invest, is a partner in his own government's business enterprises and has made at least this one step on the road to saving up a competence.

In November we Canadians are to have a chance to convert all our spare money from $50 up, into Canadian Victory Loan bonds. What the American journal says is true of the American with an American bond, is doubly true of the Canadian with a Canadian bond. No Canadian will for an instant admit that there could be any safer security than one which is guaranteed by the "bond" of the Canadian people backed by all Canada's wealth. And as for profit, it needs no argument that 5 1-2 per cent is much better than four per cent.—which our American contemporary calls good.

Patriotism and good business are the two things that commend the purchase of Victory war loan bonds to each and every Canadian citizen. The loan is not issued just for rich men to subscribe to. Every household is asked to take at least one bond. Every household in this district should prepare now to subscribe for one. Every part of Canada will, we understand, be expected to raise its share of the Victory Loan. Each district will be watched by its neighbors, and in this friendly competition the readers of this paper in this district are not going to be left behind. They will show that the enterprise, patriotism and good business judgment of our people is as alert and vigorous as ever.

U. S. LABOR MEN'S POSITION

To make absolutely clear the position of the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy regarding strikes and other industrial and economic problems, the officers of the alliance have issued a formal statement bearing on these problems in order that whatever misunderstanding there is may be removed.

Part of the statement follows:

"Whereas, There has been evident misunderstanding on the part of a considerable section of the people concerning present and recent strikes of organized workers the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy issues this statement through its officers:

"The organized workers of America are engaged in a world-wide struggle for democracy. They deem it of vital importance that democracy be maintained and extended in America and they will not countenance any infringement of democratic rights under cover of patriotism.

"We are confident that the American Federation of Labor will not sanction any interference with the industrial processes of this country when such interference has for its object the embarrassment of the American government.

"But the labor movement will not remain idle while employers seek to grind down the workers under the pretense of war necessity.

"The United States government has committed itself to a policy of fairness toward labor. But the government does not control all industry. Private employers have taken advantage of the war situation to seek to extend the hours of employment and to require intolerable conditions. In many cases the employes have revolted against such processes and in some cases have been branded by greedy employers as unpatriotic because of such opposition.

"The first concern of this nation is the well-being of its working people. Its working people are the foundation of its existence. They are loyal and self-sacrificing to the last degree. And because of their loyalty to America they will not permit employers moved by greed to inflict conditions out of all harmony with the spirit of the American nation. It may be well for the public to know that labor's loyalty to the American government does not mean servility to greedy employers. There have been strikes of organized workers and doubtless there will be more.

"Essential democracy is the watchword of the labor movement.

"Democracy can never countenance the plundering of the people by any profiteering group.

"This alliance insists that one of the gravest menaces America has to meet is the menace of that profiteering group which places greed above country.

"It is regrettable that energy must be expended against enemies within at a time when the enemy from without presses so brutally at our gates; it is regrettable that there are within our borders any who will stoop to take advantage of the nation's need for the sake of gain."

His Explanation

Mr. Brown was one of those fussy boarders who have always got something to grumble at and who make the most of trifles. And in addition to this, he was invariably behind in his payments.

One evening at dinner the guests were all seated when Brown came in. Directly he sat down at the table he started.

"Good gracious, madam, my serviette is quite damp! Why on earth is that?"

"I suppose, Mr. Brown," she said, "it must be because there is so much due on your board."

TODAY'S STORY

A teacher in one of our schools introduced nature study as a new branch in her classroom. She gave several talks on the trees familiar to the children. The maple, the elm, the spruce, and the poplar in turn, formed subjects of interesting discourse. The manner of growth, together with the use of the various woods, were topics assigned to awaken the observation of the pupils.

One day the teacher tested her scholars on their newly-acquired knowledge. "Name three kinds of woods, and state one use made of each," she wrote on her blackboard.

To her utter amazement one answer paper submitted the following: "In our town there are three kinds of woods. First, there is Kelly's woods, used for pasture. Second, there is Atwell's grove, used for the ash dump. But the third woods is the best of them all; it is the one down the river that is used for picnics."

TO HARRY MATHERS

Killed in France Aug. 17.

At the end of that day of anguish,
That terrible day of pain,
When the shells kept howling around us,
And bullets fell like rain,

Harry and I were busy, close to our own big gun,
When before my eyes there came a mist,
And I whispered:
"Thy will be done."

It seemed like a mighty thunder,
A terrific flash—then the dark;
After a while a whistle;
Then all I could see was sparks.

Then I heard somebody speaking
Of our own big matchless gun,
Telling a nurse and doctor
How the mischief was done.

Oh, yes, a shell had exploded
And sent Harry to his doom;
The other three had gone with him
Out into Kingdom Come.

And Oh! Heavenly Father of mercy,
When the boys come up to You,
Judge them by the moment
When the whistle sounded—do!

For God, their King and Country
They laid their brave lives down—
With a wreath of fame from mortals,
From Thee, Oh Lord, a crown.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

Interesting Figures Regarding Production of Butter and Cheese.

In a press bulletin issued from Ottawa the census and statistics office reports on the total production of butter and cheese in the creameries and cheese factories of Canada for the year 1916, as compared with 1915, the report being based upon returns collected from the dairying branches of the provincial departments of agriculture. The figures for 1915 represent approximate estimates, as the returns for that year are not quite complete. The total number of creameries and cheese factories operating in 1916 is reported as 3,446, including 993 creameries, 1,813 cheese factories, 624 combined factories (cheese and butter), and 16 condensed milk factories. The total number of patrons contributing to creameries and cheese factories during the year 1916 was 221,192, the deliveries of milk amounting to 2,600,542,987 lbs. and of cream to 157,620,636 lbs. The two chief dairying provinces of the Dominion are Ontario and Quebec. Both manufacture cheese and butter: in Ontario more cheese is made than butter; in Quebec more butter is made than cheese. In Ontario the total number of establishments operating in 1916 was 1,165, and the patrons numbered 87,325, whilst in Quebec the establishments numbered 1,984 and the patrons 79,145; so that the average number of patrons per establishment was 75 in Ontario and 40 in Quebec.

The total production of creamery butter in Canada in 1916 is returned as 82,564,130 lbs. of the value of $26,966,357, as compared with 83,824,176 lbs. of the value of $24,368,636 in 1915. Comparing the relative production of the provinces, the production in 1916 is highest in Quebec with 34,323,275 lbs. of the value of $11,516,148, as compared with 24,680,109 lbs. of the value of $8,031,998 in Ontario. These two provinces together produce about 70 per cent. of the total creamery butter of Canada. Of the other provinces the production and value of creamery butter in 1916 were in relative order as follows: Alberta 8,521,784 lbs., value $2,619,248; Manitoba 6,674,510 lbs., value $2,038,109; Saskatchewan, 4,310,669, value $1,538,180; Nova Scotia 1,586,679 lbs., value $505,000; British Columbia 1,243,292, value $497,316; New Brunswick 709,932 lbs., value $236,194; and Prince Edward Island 618,880 lbs., value $184,164. The average price per lb. of creamery butter for all Canada works out to 33 cents in 1916, as compared with 30 cents in 1915. By provinces in 1916 the highest price was in British Columbia 42 cents and the lowest in Prince Edward Island 30 cents. [illegible] provinces the price per lb. for 1916 was as follows: Nova Scotia, 32 cents; New Brunswick, 33 cents; Quebec, 34 cents; Ontario, 33 cents; the prairie provinces 31 cents.

The total production of factory cheese in 1916 was 192,968,597 lbs., of the value of $35,512,530, as compared with 183,878,898 lbs. of the value of $27,587,775 in 1915. By provinces the lead in production is taken by Ontario with a total quantity in 1916 of 126,015,870 lbs. of the value of $23,312,935, Quebec being second with 61,906,750 lbs., of the value of $11,245,104. These two provinces together account for 98 per cent. of the total production of factory cheese. The production and value of factory cheese in the other provinces in 1916 were as follows: Prince Edward Island, 2,121,736 lbs., value $409,495; New Brunswick, 1,185,664 lbs., value $210,692, Manitoba, 880,728 lbs., value $158,931; Alberta, 745,122 lbs., value $154,454; Nova Scotia, 94,727 lbs., value $16,959, and British Columbia, 18,00 lbs., value $3,960. The average price per pound of factory cheese for all Canada works out to 21 cents in 1916 as compared with 17 cents in 1915. In 1916 the average price is highest in British Columbia, 25 cents. In Quebec and Ontario the average price is 18 cents, and in Alberta it is 21 cents.

Captured Machine Gun.

Details have reached Canada of the act for which the Victoria Cross was conferred upon Lieut. Frederick Maurice Watson Harvey, of Strathcona's Horse, Canadians, who is Irish by birth, but now belongs to Medicine Hat, Alta. The official records say he was given the Victoria Cross, the highest decoration for valor in the world, for the following:

"For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty. During an attack of his regiment on a village a party of the enemy ran forward to a wired trench just in front of the village and opened rapid fire and machine gun fire at very close range, causing heavy casualties to our leading troops. At this critical moment, when the enemy showed no intention whatever of retiring and the firing was still intense, Lieut. Harvey, who was in command of the leading Canadian troops, ran forward ahead of his men, and dashed at the trench, still fully manned. He jumped the wire, shot the machine gunners, and captured the gun. His most courageous act undoubtedly had a decisive effect on the success of the operation." The investiture took place before the King on July 21.

Private Edward McCulloch, a native of Paterson, N.J., who enlisted in a Canadian battalion, died on a military train while en route to a Maritime post. Ptomaine poisoning was the cause.

Around the House.

In planning meat for boiling remember that the thinner the piece of meat the greater will be the loss of taste and juices.

Articles to be dyed should first be washed so they will be free from dirt.

Lettuce and cabbage can be quickly shredded with the scissors.

Brass bedsteads will keep in much better condition if they are occasionally rubbed with sweet oil and then wiped and polished.

The great secret of frying is to have plenty of fat and have it hot, so the food cooks on the inside without absorbing any of the fat.

Salt dissolved in alcohol will often remove grease spots from clothing.

To brighten carpets wipe them with warm water to which have been added a few drops of ammonia.

To wash scorched goods boil them in a mixture of one part soap and one teacupful of turpentine in a gallon of milk.

To clean hairbrushes take a cupful of cornmeal and fill the brush, rubbing gently with the hand. As it absorbs the grease and dirt, shake it out and use fresh meal till the brush is cleaned thoroughly. This is better than ammonia, as there is no water to injure or loosen the back of the brush.—Exchange.

To Lighten Housework.

Your pot lids will always have their proper place if you will take a yard or so of picture molding and two lengths of picture wire and make a lid holder. Nail the molding on the wall near the stove and run the wire four or five inches apart parallel with the molding.

Keep a roll of absorbent paper over the sink. It will be found useful for other purposes besides drying your hands, such as wiping the grease from pans, etc.

If your kitchen is large put casters on your table and move it about whenever it is most convenient.

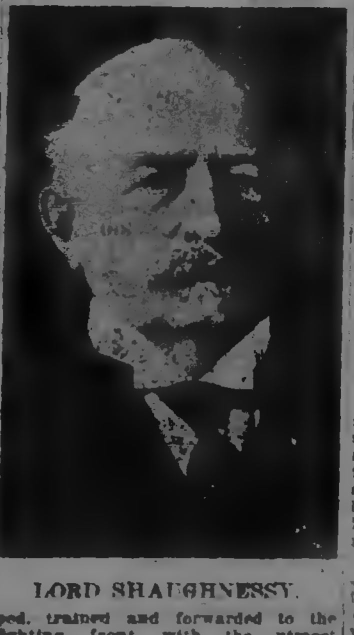
Fifty Wooden Ships.

Fifty wooden steamers of a uniform size of twenty-five hundred tons will be added to the ocean-going tonnage of Canada within the next twelve months. The first of them will be launched this fall and on the others good progress is reported. The ships are those which are being built for the British Government through the agency of the Imperial Munitions Board. About thirty are in yards on the Pacific coast, and the others at Atlantic or lake ports. From five to nine months is the time required for completion. Simultaneously with ships of steel construction the various ship building plants are stocked with orders to their full capacity for the coming year.

Back The Men At The Front

LORD SHAUGHNESSY'S APPEAL

In response to the request of a number of prominent French-Canadian gentlemen of the Province of Quebec, Lord Shaughnessy has expressed his views on the present conditions as follows:—



LORD SHAUGHNESSY.

THERE is a germ in my system that renders obnoxious every form of legislation calculated to invade the personal liberty of the subject, save such as may be necessary for the safety of the nation and for the peace, health and general welfare of the people.

Enforced military service in time of peace, as it existed in some foreign countries, would come within my category of objectionable measures because it has the effect of taking a man from his ordinary avocation, and, for given periods, making him subject to military regulations under the control of military officials, not because of any danger immediately impending, but because that within his life-time something may occur to involve the nation in war, making trained military forces necessary. The encouragement of the military spirit in normal times is not best for the people whose aim should be the promotion of a policy making for peace, prosperity and happiness. But it may be said if one nation neglects its military establishment, its aggressive and covetous neighbor with his trained army and ever-ready implements of war, will one day seek a cause of quarrel and overpower it.

The gravity of this contingency admitted, it becomes apparent that the effort of nations must be not only to create and maintain military forces sufficient for defence if there be attack, but strong enough to assume the offensive if that appear to be the best strategy.

Should it be conceded that the safety of the nation demands an unremitting condition of military preparedness, it may be properly asked where the limit is to be placed, because there must be a limit or a military autocracy will ensue, such as that which the Allies are now determined to destroy in Germany at very serious cost.

If the people are to be free from this menace of militarism, there must be a pride of country and a national spirit of patriotism that will provide all the necessary men, money and material with the least possible delay, whenever they may be needed to defend the rights and liberties of the nation, all citizens bearing their respective shares of the burden as nearly as possible in like proportion.

At the outbreak of the present war, Britain's navy was ready and the splendid achievements of that arm of the service, saving as they did a situation fraught with most serious danger, will always be a source of gratification and pride, but the regular land forces consisted of a mere handful of men, barely sufficient for the maintenance of order at home and it became a matter of momentous importance that a large army of [illegible] soldiers should be organized, [illegible] equipped, trained and forwarded to the fighting front with the utmost promptness. This work was undertaken by the late Lord Kitchener, and immediately all of the Overseas Dominions of the Empire expressed their willingness and, indeed, determination to supplement and assist the army of the King by sending troops and meeting other war requirements to the limit of their respective resources. Canada was among the first to declare that the war in which Britain and France were engaged for the defence of human liberty was Canada's war also, a declaration that was sounded throughout the Dominion from coast to coast by an overwhelming majority of her people. The men of Canada responded nobly to the call for volunteers and the Overseas Army went to the firing line where their prowess and bravery won for them universal admiration. Thousands of them made the supreme sacrifice, and are buried on the battle-fields. Other thousands were wounded or taken prisoners thus putting them out of service, and a great many others, after a long period in the trenches, require rest and recuperation.

They call to us for a further supply of men to fill the gaps in their depleted ranks, and failure to respond to that call would not only be a lasting disgrace to Canada, but might be a matter of no small moment in determining the outcome of the struggle.

Although we are remote from the scene of conflict, and, therefore, out of direct touch with its horrors, it is absurd to assume that our interest in the outcome is different in any degree from that of any of the other peoples of the Empire or Allies. [illegible] the Central Powers [illegible] in defeating Germany and her Allies our freedom would be [illegible]. We would be [illegible] arrogant and relentless foe, and we would be reduced to a species of vassalage. All our independence, all our hopes and aspirations, and those of our children for generations to come, are bound up indissolubly in the defeat of our enemies.

To the accomplishment of this purpose, let us continue to bend all our energies. Notwithstanding the apparent margin provided by the number of men sent overseas, our military authorities, having the most accurate information, declare that further reinforcements are essential and that they cannot be secured by voluntary enlistment. In these circumstances conscription, however pronounced may be our antipathy to legislation of that description, should be accepted not as an invasion of the personal liberty of the subject, but as a measure designed to preserve it. We must continue to equip, arm, and support our own troops and to give such material assistance to the Allies as is possible by most strenuous effort. Indeed, if it be necessary, the scope of the Conscription Bill should be so enlarged as to compel service in all branches of industry furnishing war material and supplies.

Why jingoism and incendiary speeches emanating as a rule from those whose only contribution to the war is in the form of language, and which may tend to encourage domestic strife, should be suppressed, and every utterance that savours of disloyalty should bring prompt punishment to the offender.

Conscription is now the law of the country, and no matter what his views about the policy of Government or the motives and methods alleged to have attended our recruiting and other war activities during the first two years of the war, it is now the sacred duty of every good citizen of Canada loyally and willingly to assist the authorities in putting the Selective Conscription law into effect with smoothness and impartiality, reserving his criticism of policy and practice until the war is over.

The man with a substantial income feels the effect of an Income Tax, while one with little or no income, having nothing to pay, can accept it with equanimity, and for somewhat similar reasons the man with one or more sons is apt to have a conception of conscription quite different from that of the man who has neither son nor grandson to contribute. The latter class should be moderate and considerate in their public utterances on the subject. Those of us who, like myself, have seen all our relatives of military age go overseas, and who have experienced the sadness of loss and separation, cannot help feeling compassion for the parents whose affection for their sons makes them exaggerate the terrors of military service, but for the young men themselves there is no such feeling because, if, being fit for service and having none of the recognized grounds on which to demand immunity, they are unwilling to take any posts that may be assigned to them in this hour of danger, they are neglecting their duty as citizens and selfishly evading their share of the burden that the country has [illegible]

Lies Come Home to Roost,

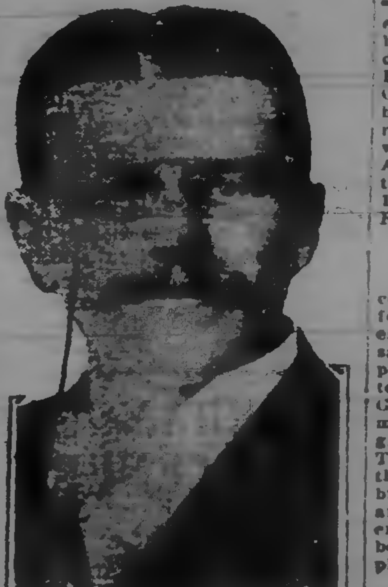
Even in German Empire,

The Land of "Hun-Truths"

"OFFICIAL communications" of the German Government "are coming into wide discredit abroad, owing to the many self-evident contradictions in them." Who says this? An enemy of Germany? An un-kultured Philistine? No, it is a leader in the German Reichstag, Herr Erzberger. His particular reference was to the offer of a separate peace which Kerensky had said Germany made to Russia. This was semi-officially denied; but that did not prevent general belief that it was true. It certainly shows the pass to which things have come when a prominent deputy can rise in the Reichstag to declare that even the official utterances of the Government are not to be trusted.

And it is a curious fact that some of the most damaging proofs of German official lies have been furnished by Germans. There was, for example, the impudent fiction, embodied in the German declaration of war upon France, that French airmen had dropped bombs upon Nuremberg. But it was from the authorities in Nuremberg itself that the evidence came which showed the whole thing to be an unblushing falsehood.

Other Germans are dealing with other German lies in the same way. A member of the German General Staff, General Freytag-Loringhoven, has been publishing an article on



MATTHIAS ERZBERGER

"The First Victories in the West." He was loud in praise of the German strategy which threw the French mobilization plans into confusion, by marching unexpectedly through Belgium. The question of law or morality was not considered by this German officer, but only the military astuteness of the violation of Belgian neutrality. General Freytag-Loringhoven is explicit on the point that the French high command was taken completely by surprise, and that it was not till August 22, 1914, that the Fifth Army got as far as the line Douai-Charleroi. This article was published in the Cologne Gazette. Yet the same German newspaper, in the autumn of 1914, stated that the Government had information that on August 1 the French had 150,000 soldiers at Maubeuge, and as many more at Givet, ready to invade Germany by way of Belgium. That particular lie, put about to justify the Belgian outrage, is thus neatly spiked on the helmet of the unwitting General Freytag Loringhoven.

Further official German lies—a whole series of them—have had to do with Austria's ultimatum to Servia and the conference in Berlin about that affair and the whole prospect of war. That the German Government did not know of the Austrian ultimatum was asserted by the Foreign Office, but was from the first flatly incredible. This was a lie so gross and palpable that it deceived no one. And the proof of the falsity, since forthcoming, was ample long before Foreign Secretary Zimmermann confessed the truth to Ambassador Gerard. The latest falsifications, and their detection, relate to the so-called "Potsdam Conference," a gathering which met early in July, 1914, to decide on risking a general war or not. The official Wolff Bureau has denied that such a conference ever was held. But this must hav been merely formal. It is now ev dent that the truth was notorious
Berlin. One of the attacks on t
Government made in the Reichsta
by the Socialist Deputy, Herr Haas related to this very matter. H words were: "We do not forget t
Austrian ultimatum to Serbia, n
the conference in Berlin on July
1914, and the activity of Tirpitz a Falkenhayn in those days."

For Linen Closets.

If bits of sandalwood are kept in the drawers and other places with the clothing its fragrance will penetrate and give everything a delightful odor.

For use with household linen this is recommended, and all the ingredients may be had of the druggist:

Dried lavender	12 ounces
Dried rose leaves	12 ounces
Ground orris root	6 ounces
Ground allspice	1 1-2 ounces
Cinnamon	1 1-2 ounces
Cloves	1 1-2 ounces

The spices might be had of the grocer.

Mix with twelve ounces of fine table salt and put into a fruit jar. Leave for a month to blend odors perfectly, then let stand open an hour or two each day in a closet or bureau drawer.

The ingredients are ground, not pulverized, and must be of the best. The merest suspicion of musk may be added to these preparations, but the slightest bit too much will ruin the odor, as musk is very strong. Only the most delicate odor is admissible if one is refined in taste.

Hygiene Tip.

Always hold milk bottles under the cold water tap until they are thoroughly washed as soon as they are received. It is impossible to tell what hands have touched them, and washing the bottles also prevents any filth entering the milk compartment of the ice box.

Poison Ivy.

Just as soon as you are aware that you have been exposed to poison ivy or begin to feel that itching and notice red spots rub the part with freshly gathered catnip leaves. Catnip is the enemy of poison ivy.

Galt's population is now 12,465, an increase of 575.

xecutive Council of Their Union is Empowered to Call One if a Board of Conciliation is Not Appointed to Abitrate Their Demands.

he letter carriers of the Domin- are on the verge of strike. The n in Toronto have authorized the cutive Council of their Federation all out the postal employes unless tisfactory answer is received to r request for a board of conciliation to arbitrate their differences the Department. The carriers Peterborough and all over the ntry are in accord with the mem- of the Toronto branch.

The patience of Job is prover- " said one member at the Tor- meeting, "and the letter-car- have him beaten a mile for ience."

This was received with great ap- use. There was no mincing of , judging by the temper of the . One man after another got and stated in clear terms to the mbly what the present wages to the letter-carriers.

Appealed Without Success

The officers read correspondence to w that the men had been appea- for over a year for better con s. Their case had been ,as one "has been made a football by Minister of Labor. It has been from his department to that the Postmaster-General and back in," he said. "All the men have today are official letters, which n nothing. At the last session of e House of Commons a sum was in the supplementary esti- tes providing for an increase of 00 a year to the letter-carriers. is is considered utterly inadequate meet the conditions of the letter- rs, but even this sum has never e to light. The men have not yet seen a cent of it, and can get no satisfactory answer as to whether they will ever see any of it."

The letter sent to the acting Postmaster-General reviews the whole situation, and asks for a Board of Conciliation to investigate the whole question. A copy of the letter will be sent to every member of the new Cabinet. The men are not leaving any stone unturned to get a remedy before taking drastic action.

Have to Seek Other Work

Some very hot stuff was handed out during the discussion. Several of the members said "they had no money to buy coal and no coal in the cellar."

It was stated that the wages were so bad "that letter carriers had to work nights at other jobs to eke out an existence."

One man said: "what is the use of going any further in this way? We are not living, we are not even existing. It is well known among our members that many have had to go in debt to get food for our families. No wonder the department will not grant a Board of Conciliation, too much of this information would come out. The cold weather is coming and what are we going to do for our wives and children?"

A great number of the local associations of the Federation have already voted asking the Executive Council to call a strike. The action of the big local in Toronto has brought the matter to a head: It is quite possible that the men would have declared a strike last week had it not been for the wise counsels of all the officers to leave no stone unturned to prevent the last drastic action being taken.

ORTY-FIVE MEN ARRANGE "EVERYWOMAN" SCENERY

usy Life Led by Stage Employes Behind the Gaily Painted Curtains and High up in the "Flies"—A World in Itself.

While the band of actors and act- were so admirably presenting pathetic and lifelike story of the r of "Everywoman" at the and Opera House Saturday night, e large audience had no glimpse d no idea of the busy stunts that ere being enacted by another small my of workers, equally drilled in ir calling, behind the scenes. here were thirty-six actors in the altogether. There were forty- e workmen required to shift the nery of the play and to attend to e thousand and one details that ke possible the presentation of play in all its perfect details.

It requires two box cars to carry he scenery that is used by the verywoman" company, and the lue of the equipment is placed at 0,000. The company carry seven perty men with them, including flymen, the electricians, the grips" and the carpenters. The ead man of these works is probably id as much as any actor in the t, drawing as he does $65 a week. Messrs. Turner furnished the other hirty-eight men required for the work, all of them old employes of the theatre. The local stage workers have a union, of which P. Adamson president and "Tom" Stenton sec- ary-treasurer, a union in which the initiation fee is higher than that of any labor organization in the city.

Behind the brightly painted cur- ains of the theatre there is a space filled with the requisites of the pro- ession. The flies are up near the top of the building, which at that int is about one storey higher than the gallery. In the flies are more ropes and blocks than are used on the ordinary sailing vessel. This region is reached by a ladder fastened to the wall and up which no timid person would care to climb. The ropes are used for raising and lowering the scenery as required, that which is not needed being swung up in the air out of the way. The men are carefully trained, every man knows his place, and the whole business is conducted with military precision.

Above the flies is the "block" gallery, where the pullies are fastened, a mysterious region that seems from the places below to be located somewhere among the clouds. It is a dizzy height to climb, but it must be reached occasionally when there are repairs to make. A walk about three feet wide with railings connects the fly galleries on each side of the theatre. This is called the painting bridge, and it sways under the footsteps of anyone who crosses it. All the perquisites, including rolls of tin for the making of stage thunder, are stored in different parts of the flies.

Preparing for a Play.

Forty-five men worked like Trojans, taking the scenery of the "Everywoman" company from the train and getting it in place for the matinee performance. They worked at this from 9 o'clock until noon. The scenery for the first act was arranged, the banquet table used in the third act was set and ready to be carried in when needed, and every possible detail was arranged beforehand so that the audience would not be kept waiting one minute more than was absolutely necessary.

Between the Acts.

Once the curtain goes down on an act, the region behind the stage becomes a scene of activity. Every man knows what is expected of him and does it. The actors change their attire, and no one is idle. The waiting audience has little idea of the haste that is made in their interest.

The seven men who worked in the flies Saturday night holding the ropes were ready to produce a snowfall at a moment's notice. The storm of feathery flakes that was a feature of the fourth act was let loose by two men, each of whom worked a rope. A receptacle folded like a hammock was stretched across the entire width of the stage in the upper regions, and this was filled with scraps of white paper. When the receptacle was set in motion by the working of ropes alternately, the paper sifted out through apertures for the purpose, and the result was a fall of stage snow.

Following the Show.

Teddy Crowe is head man of the local force of theatre stage workers. Sometimes a man of this city catches the travel fever and joins the staff of a company. Peterborough has three such men on the road now—George Hanley, with the Robinson Crusoe Company, Frank Graham with Robert B. Mantell, and Richard Graham with "Intolerance," the celebrated moving picture concern.

The curtain is no sooner down on the last act than the work of moving begins, and more than one waiting transport wagon was loaded before the last of the audience was clear of the theatre. With all their hustling it took the forty-five men nearly two hours to get the last of the scenery on the cars, which soon afterward left for Hamilton, where the play will be presented tonight.

The Play Itself.

"Everywoman" is a lesson play, a story and a sermon in one, a frail human life laid bare, virtue made brighter by its contrast with vice. The moral instruction was outstanding. It may not be the story of every woman's life, but it is the story of every woman who pursues the same baubles as those that lured the heroine. Love does not always mate with wealth. Flattery flies away when Youth, Beauty and Riches have gone, and Truth only remains the steadfast friend. That is the teaching of the play, which should be seen by every man and every woman. It teaches the truth to those who do not understand, and makes it clearer yet to those who do. It is unfortunate that the immence audience that heard it did not appear to appreciate it as its merits deserved.

Miss Paula Shay is the same actress who appeared in the title role last year. She is an artiste of rare dramatic ability, handling her difficult part with ease and without the slightest trace of exaggeration at any point.

HAROLD BALL, 11 YRS., IS MISSING

WAS LAST SEEN INSIDE ROYAL THEATRE AT 6 O'CLOCK SATURDAY EVENING.

Harold Ball, son of Mr. Jas. Ball, who takes tickets at the opera house, has been missing since Saturday night, and up to ten this morning no trace of him could be found by the police. The boy is eleven years of age, and was last seen outside the Royal Theatre six o'clock Saturday evening. His description is as follows: Fair hair and complexion, tall and sturdy for his age, dressed in brown cap, grey overcoat, dark blue sweater, dark trousers and stockings and white running boots.

The police think the lad has gone out to some farm, as he disappeared once before and engaged with a farmer, pleading that his father was sick and required assistance. The boy has a mania for farming and has of late been very anxious to secure his parents' permission to secure such employment.

POTATOES AND BREAD RATIONS

AND EVEN THE LATTER FOOD SUPPLY IS LIKELY TO BE REDUCED.

Copenhagen, Oct. 22.—A strongly-censored official report of the discussion of the food condition by the budget committee of the Prussian Diet, the session of which was held behind closed doors, shows that, except for the potato crop, which promises to be satisfactory, the food situation is by no means as rosy as the government has been trying to paint it. The grain situation is such that only hope, not certainty, could be expected that the bread supply will last the entire year, and in any case the present bread ration could be maintained only by the use of surrogates, further affecting the quality of the bread, for which flour is now milled to 94 per cent. of the grain. Conditions have not permitted improvement of the flour by less exhaustive milling.

Bread and potatoes will be the bulk of the ration, as the meat allowance will almost certainly be reduced. Milk and butter will be available even in scantier amounts than now, when infants' milk allowance has had to be reduced.

EXEMPTION TRIBUNAL
CANADA

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS.

Exemption Boards have been chosen in such a way as to make them absolutely independent and removed from all influence. There are over 1,250 boards throughout the country, each composed of two men, one appointed by the county judge in the district concerned and one selected by a joint committee of Parliament. Being familiar with local conditions where they sit, the members are well-fitted to appreciate such reasons for exemption as are put before them by men called up.

Exemption will be granted to those who can establish that it is in the national interest that they remain in civilian life. This is for the Exemption Board to decide after having received full information in each case.

The grounds on which exemption may be claimed (which are similar to the grounds recognized in Great Britain and the United States) are as follows:—

(a) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged.

(b) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he wishes to be engaged and for which he has special qualifications.

(c) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in Military Service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated and trained.

(d) That serious hardship would ensue, if the man were placed on active service, owing to his exceptional financial or business obligations or domestic position.

(e) Ill health or infirmity.

(f) That he conscientiously objects to the undertaking of combatant service and is prohibited from doing so by tenets and articles of faith, in effect on the sixth day of July, 1917, of any organized religious denomination existing and well recognized in Canada at such date, and to which he in good faith belongs.

(g) That he should be exempt because disfranchised under the War Time Election Act.

No Claim for Exemption should be put forward unless one or other of these grounds in fact exists, and no loyal citizen should assist in, or allow himself to be made a party to, any Claim for Exemption unless thoroughly satisfied that it is made in good faith.

Exemption may be applied for by the men selected themselves or by their parents, near relatives or employers. Application for exemption must be made on printed forms to be found at every post office, which are to be filled in and left with the postmaster if exemption is desired. The postmaster will forward the form to a Registrar, who will send it to the appropriate Exemption Board. In due time, then, the Applicant will get notice as to when he must present his case before the Board.

INDIANS AND THE FRANCHISE

Chief Whetung Has an Interesting Letter in the Toronto News.

Editor Toronto News:—The following letter in the Toronto News from Chief Whetung of the Chemong Reserve, explains itself:

In your issue of October 9th, Mr. Lucius F. Hardyman has written a letter, in which he says he noticed that the Indians of Ontario, at their annual conference, discussed the question of getting the privilege of a vote, and he further stated that he thought it should be provided that in order to get a vote that the Indians should be able to converse intelligently in the English tongue and read and write.

I am the chief of the Chippawa tribe at the Chemong Reserve, near Peterborough. We have a first-class brick school upon the Reserve as good as can be found in any section of this county and better than in a good many sections, and in addition to that every child in the reserve is attending school, and is receiving the same education and training that children receive in the public schools of this Province. I do not think there is a single man or woman or a child above the age of six years who cannot read and write. We have a large number of daily papers coming to the different Indians on the reserve. There are pianos, organs, gramaphones, and a large number of books, as the Indians of my tribe are persistent readers.

They are prosperous, dress well, and in their dealings are as honorable and fair as any of their neighbors off the reserve.

It seems to me that it is hardship to the Indian that Italians, Poles, and other foreigners may be naturalized and given a vote, and some of them can neither read or write, while the Indians, doing what they have in military duty, are still prevented from exercising their franchise.

I would appreciate if you would give this letter the same publicity that you did to the letter of Mr. Hardyman.

I attach a letter written by His Worship Mayor Duffus' opinion as to whether our tribe is entitled to the franchise or not.

Curve Lake, Oct. 18.

This is the letter from Mayor Duffus:

Chief Whetong,
Curve Lake, P.O., Ontario.
My Dear Chief:

I have read with a great deal of interest the report of your conference, and particularly that part with reference to the Indians not having the franchise, and it gives me very much pleasure to offer you my services in assisting you in any way I possibly can, towards securing the franchise for yourself and friends.

I assure you I have no hesitation in stating that I am most emphatic in the belief that you are fully entitled.

Trusting I may be of some use to you, I am

Yours sincerely,
JOS. J. DUFFUS,
Mayor.

ELECTION DATE SET THIS WEEK

MAY BE MONDAY, DECEMBER 17, OR TWO DAYS LATER, IS REPORT.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—Announcement of the date on which the Dominion election will take place has been deferred until next week. Sir Robert Borden, at the close of the Cabinet Council Saturday, said that there was no announcement to make in regard to the election date, the War Cabinet or other matters which have been under consideration. It is understood that the order in Council providing for the issue of the writs has been prepared, but that nomination and voting dates have not been definitely filled in. While Monday, December 17, is still the favored choice, voting may occur on some other nearby date, possibly Wednesday, December 19.

COULD NOT MENTION JESUS.

Accusation Made About Y.M.C.A. at Baptist Convention.

Woodstock, Oct. 22.—At the Baptist convention here severe criticism was leveled at the Y.M.C.A., following a recommendation from the Committee on Social Service that the Baptist Church co-operate with that institution in an interdenominational revival. One of the delegates characterized the "Y" as a place where the name of Jesus could not be mentioned, and T. Urquhart pointed out that during the Y. M. C. A. campaign in Toronto for funds the chief figure of the campaign was Lieut.-Governor Gibson, who, the speaker said, was one of the chief patrons of horse racing in Ontario.

After some rather warm discussion the recommendation was referred back to the committee.

DISFRANCHISED FOREIGNERS MUST APPLY FOR EXEMPTION

Need Not be Medically Examined—Naturalized Foreigners Are Reporting For Service—Order Requiring $1000 Bond From Canadians Desirous of Crossing the Border Revoked.

The order requiring Canadians entering the United States to do so under a $1000 bond has been revoked. A Canadian wishing to cross the border now simply has to be identified and show evidence of his good character.

Foreigners Report.

In Peterborough but two G men have reported for service, and no A or B men. In Toronto quite a few naturalized foreigners — Russians, Hollanders, Syrians, Norwegians, most of them fine types of young men, have registered for duty.

The Disfranchised.

The War-Time Elections Act declares all citizens of enemy country origin not naturalized subsequent to March 31, 1902, disfranchised and exempt from military service. Their sons are also included in exemption. However, these men must apply for exemption on that ground, but they need not be medically examined.

To Help Applicants.

To assist applicants for exemption or those desiring to register for service postmasters have been instructed to hang up in their office specimens of the forms to be filled in. These specimens are identical with the forms to be used by applicants, only they bear no reference number. Their consultation by men applying for exemption or registration for service will enable them to acquaint themselves with the method of filling out their particular forms.

There Are Two Forms.

Every man coming within Class 1 is required to fill out one of two forms. If he does not wish to claim exemption, he fills out the report form. If he wishes to claim exemption, he fills out the exemption claim form. Eight grounds on which a man may claim exemption are indicated in the form. The man merely places a cross opposite the one on which he makes his claim.

He has been a member of the Methodist conference for twenty-seven years, and under his last pastorate in Owen Sound a new church for workingmen was erected, worth $45,000, in less than eighteen months after he assumed the pastorate. The sum of $38,000 was subscribed before the doors were opened, and at the dedicatory services the balance of $7000 was in his hands. Perhaps he will tell the Peterborough ministers how it was done.

MARK STREET CHURCH AN INFLUENCE ON MANHOOD

Forty-Fourth Anniversary Observed Yesterday—Bright and Cheerful Services—Capacity Congregations—Revs. Robert Pogue and A. J. Thomas Deliver Forceful Sermons

For forty-four years Mark Street Methodist church, East City, has stood on its present site, an emblem of the Methodist branch of the Christian faith and an influence in the community for spiritual and moral principles. And yesterday its congregation observed the forty-fourth anniversary of this old land-mark of Ashburnham with services of thanksgiving for the faithful ministr[illegible] of past pastors and the present incumbent, Rev. R. A. Whattam, which together with a dominating spirit of christian fellowship amongst its members has made the church a spiritual blessing redounding to the glory of God. With the city this congregation has grown to proportions calling for a larger sacred building its working organizations have multiplied in number and weight. Its Sunday School has had direct influence on the manhood of the parish, its womanhood has done and is doing noble self-sacrificing work in support of the great war, and its young men have died and are fighting for our Empire and all that it stands for.

Excellent Music

The church yesterday, both morning and evening, was taxed to its capacity. An atmosphere of praise and thanksgiving prevaded both services, which were of a specially bright and cheerful nature. The choir was heard to advantage in creditably rendered anthems, under the direction of Miss E. Kemp, while the solos "the Publican" by Miss Dickson of Campbellford, and "A Dream of Heaven" by Miss E. Kemp, were of considerable merit. Miss Dickson is a strong and sweet soprano, whose notes are full and round, and whose enunciation is quite refreshing. The solos were sung to piano accompaniment by Miss Kemp.

Special Preachers

In the morning, Rev. H. J. Thomas of George Street Methodist church, conducted the service, and in the evening Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's Presbyterian church presided. Neither sermon was of a peculiarly anniversary nature, although both were tense and eloquent discourses on Christ and the Christian faith.

The Doctrine of Sacrifice.

Rev. Mr. Pogue took for his text "He Saved Others, Himself He Cannot Save," and applied it to the principle of sacrifice called for in the church today. While these words spoken to the cross were revolting in the extreme, he said, yet there never was a truer sentence spoken by man. Christ could not save himself, he had undertaken the salvation of man, and it was impossible for God and man to be reconciled except through the life and death of the son God. The text expounds a great truth applicable to us; men can only be saved by some one's sacrifice, and to save life in the largest sense of the words life must be given. In the church today it is only by men giving themselves in sacrifice for others that the Christian Church can do the work for which she has been raised by God.

Sacrifice in War

Before the war broke out continued the speaker, the country pictured a soldier's life in glowing colors as one of pay, pleasure and attractive uniforms—not a word of untold sufferings and hardships in the trenches, short rations and even sacrifice of life in battle. But Christ reverses the picture and invites a Christian life of hardship and sacrifice. He says, "Whosoever would follow me, let him pay the price." Still joy and sacrifice go hand-in-hand; Christ's life was the most joyous and yet the most sacrificial. And christians should look upon the church as an organization through which they should be ready to pour out their lives if necessary in the service of the Lord. This spirit of sacrifice Mr Pogue believed to have impelled Canadians to volunteer for military service. They fully realized the gravity of the situation and readily went in full knowledge that the call was to fight and pour out their lives if necessary in defence of christianity and all it implies against Hun militarism.

Not a Social Club

Referring to the church and its great work the reverend gentleman went on to say that it is sometimes difficult to get workers and Sunday school teachers because members too frequently consult their own case rather than the eternal welfare of others. They are prone to look upon the church as a social club or an institution to lend an atmosphere of respectability to their lives. They come to church to get, not to give. The doctrine of Christ is not popular because it is one of self-sacrifice and surrender. All through His life He was pouring out His life for others, and to be a [illegible] having the spirit of Christ. When church members become like their Master, then the church will be a power in the land. He believed that when the sacrificial call of Christ is understood by church men and women, and disseminated as such, more young men will unite with them than were they invited to do so for a good time. For Canada's young manhood enlisted for the war in a spirit of self-sacrifice for a great cause. "Men can only see Christ through you and me," declared the speaker, "and when the church becomes a witnessing church men will be drawn unto her. When the church lifts Christ up in the life of her members then the whole world will stand in wonderment and go with you.

All a Gethsemane

The speaker concluded a forceful sermon by touching reference to mothers who had given sons to the Empire in sacrifice—some five and some even six—thus exemplifying the Christian motive of service, which shall make for the expansion of Christ's church. When the collection plate is passed, men and women realize that they are not giving to the church, but to the Saviour, when the service of Christ is accepted as one of sacrifice, then shall the knowledge of the Lord cover the earth as the waters of the sea. But this cannot be until the world is one great Gethsemane in the cause of Christ as is Canada and England today in the glorious cause for which we are fighting.

Mark Street Church was established as a Bible Christian Church in 1873. Rev. George Copeland, an ex-president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was the first pastor. This charge is one of the two Protestant churches in East City. It has therefore a wide opportunity and good outlook in soul-saving and character-building, and it has an excellent record through the years.

The church and parsonage improvements, increased ministerial support, and the purchase of a new church lot, indicate the interest, loyalty and liberality of the congregation, and give hope and promise of better things for the coming days.

With well-organized departments, especially in boys' and other young people's work, this cause goes confidently forward. As the East City outpost of Peterborough Methodism, Mark Street is a large centre.

The anniversary services yesterday were a decided success. Rev. A. J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., of George Street Church, preached in the morning, and Rev. Robt. Pogue of St. Paul's in the evening. Large and appreciative audiences heard with pleasure two eloquent sermons by these brethren. The music rendered by the choir, assisted by Miss Mary Dickson, Campbellford, was good. The financial returns to date are encouraging and give promise that when a number of contributors who have intimated a willingness to add to the amount already at hand, have made their contributions, and the usual week-night service has been held, the full amount required by the official board will be received. Sunday, October 21st, was a red letter day in the history of Mark Street.

1 Acre Field Yields 80 Bags of Potatoes

GROWN ON A VERULAM LOT AT A COST OF BETWEEN 60c AND 70c A BAG.

Mr. Elmer Long of Verulam reports a big crop of potatoes off an acre of land. Eighty bags of unusually splendid potatoes is what this lot has yielded unto him.

So far that part of the country has not suffered from the black rot and all the potatoes are in excellent condition. Mr. Long grew his potatoes at a cost of between sixty and seventy cents a bag, which bids fair, if all potatoes are in the same condition, to speedily lower the price asked at present.

HINTS BY COOKERY EXPERT.

Christine Terhune Herrick of the Vigilantes Suggests Less Expensive Meats, More Vegetables and Simpler Desserts—Get Used to Cheese.

Let us look at the ordinary dinner bill of fare for a moment. Suppose we begin with soup. The expensive clear soups are taboo on most tables unless they are made like the French bouillon and the bouilli or meat used to make the soup also utilized, and even then they are rather beyond the purse or the inclination of most of us. But is their departure a real loss to our palate? Are we not as well fed with purees of different kinds, with the boundless number of vegetable soups, either clear or cream, with soups that have a fish or a milk foundation as with the consomme of any order?

Of course the meat course is the crux of the situation for most persons. I grant that there are a few persons who decline any cuts of meat save those that are tender enough to be roasted or broiled, but even before the late stringency I fancy there were not many who could indulge this preference. Most of us have had to depend upon the less expensive portions and tried to make up by care in cookery and seasoning for the defects in flavor and juices. If nutriment is any object it is well to recollect that some of the pieces of meat richest in nourishing qualities come from the less costly sections of the animal.

As a matter of course, all meat is dear now, but I venture to believe that those who think no meal is complete without it lack a certain kind of education in gastronomy. If meat substitutes are despised it is usually because those who have cooked them have not understood how to compound and season them. Fish of all kinds should have an honored post on the table meat has evacuated. Vegetables, especially in this season, should be plentifully employed and combined with a little meat to give savoriness, or with cheese or with eggs or served in salads. We have not begun to comprehend what can be done with vegetables or to learn how easily we can become accustomed to a dish of these, or of cheese fondu, or cheese souffle, or cheese pudding, or cheese sandwiches, or any one of half a dozen preparations in which cheese is served as a flavoring and a nutriment, instead of the inevitable roast, boiled, stewed, broiled or fried animal food.

When we arrive at the sweets, there is another station at which we can offer a plea as to the excellence of the less costly kinds. With ripe fruit, either fresh or stewed, in abundance, as it should be for months to come, the question of desserts seems one of minor importance. Yet even here we can offer trifles, custards, "floats," blanc-manges, jellies, delicate puddings and puffs which are no whit inferior in taste to heavy, rich sweets, such as pies and tarts, and are far more wholesome. Their good qualities ought to offset, even with critics, the fact that they cost less than the substantial compounds I deprecate. I incline to fancy that those who include all inexpensive sweets along with meat substitutes in one sweeping condemnation lack experience of what can be done.

Brown Sugar Cookies.

Beat together one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar and one-half cupful of butter, and when that is well creamed beat in one egg. Add one-half cupful of milk. Sift together one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one scant teaspoonful of soda and two and three-quarter cupfuls of flour. If it is preferred to drop the cookies instead of rolling them out use only two cupfuls of flour.

GIBSON EXCUSES McGRAW

Unjust to Blame Him For New York's Failure

London, Ont., Oct. 22.—George (Mooney) Gibson, the London member of the New York Giants, runners-up in the world's series, has returned to his home here, making the trip from New York city in his motor since Wednesday.

The veteran Canadian catcher, who now is lieutenant to Manager McGraw, while reluctant to deprive the White Sox of the credit due them for their victory over the Giants, opines that it was merely bad baseball by the Giants that lost the series for them and not the superiority of the American League champions.

Blaming McGraw for not relieving Sallee in the seventh inning of the fifth game in Chicago was unjust, Gibson says, since it was his poor support and not lack of pitching ability that lost the game.

PUGILISTIC ANNALS.

1903—Terry McGovern defeated Jimmy Briggs in fifteen rounds at Boston. That battle was the last of Terrible Terry's real career, and although twice thereafter he tried to pull off a come-back stunt, his Boston bout was really the finish of the famous Brooklynite as a headliner. Soon after that he became ill and dropped out of sight for a couple of years. In October, 1905, he started another campaign, but it didn't get him anywhere. Again in 1908 Terry fought a couple of unimportant bouts. Jimmy Briggs, showed a lot of class, defeating such good men as Kid Broad, Martin Flaherty and Tommy Feltz among many others, but when he went against the top notchers he wasn't quite good enough.

1909—Harry Lewis knocked out Dan Sullivan in one round at Boston.

"BOB" FITZSIMMONS' RECORD

Bob Fitzsimmons, former heavyweight champion of the world, who died this morning in Chicago, was probably the lightest man to ever win the title. When he fought Corbett his weight was only 165 pounds. Though he won many bouts in Australia, "Red Robert" did not jump into prominence until he defeated Jack Dempsey, then middle weight champion, in 1891. He began boxing when he was only 17 years old. This was in 1880, when he knocked out al comers in an amateur tourney.

In 1897 he won the heavyweight championship of the world when he knocked out Jim Corbett in the fourteenth round on March 17 at Carson City. The year following he lost the title to Jim Jeffries at Coney Island by a knockout in the eleventh round on June 9. In the same year he knocked out Jim Thorne at Chicago in the first round on Oct. 28.

He took part in five engagements in 1900 and won them all by the knockout route. On March 27 he disposed of Jim Daley at Philadelphia in one round, and on April 30 at Brooklyn beat Ed Dunkhorst in two rounds. On Aug. 10 he knocked out Gus Rublin at New York in the sixth round, and on Aug. 24 knocked out Tom Sharkey at Coney Island in the second round. He did not fight in 1901.

On July 25, 1902, at San Francisco he was knocked out by Jim Jeffries in the eighth round.

FIGHTING THE FIENDS OF HELL

New York, Oct. 22.—A despatch to The Herald from Camp Upton, Yaphank, L.I., says:

Before a gathering of American officers and enlisted men, who heard him in almost awe-stricken silence, Harry Lauder yesterday afternoon stripped the glamour of romance from war and characterized it as a "contest between civilization and the fiends of hell," declaring that the United States has undertaken the biggest task in her history.

His appeal to the men to stamp out the fires of militarism and relight the lamps of civilization came as a climax to a series of Scotch ballads. He made no mention of his son, Lieut. John Lauder, who met death in France, but a slight tremor in his voice frequently betrayed the memory of his boy.

Mr. Lauder had just finished a lively ballad when from the rear of the tent came the cry, "Sing th' Wee Hoose Amang th' Heather."

"Aye, I'll sing it; but it's no song to me now; it's a hymn. I sang it to the boys just before the battle of Arras. There were fifteen thousand Scots there then. Many of them are gone now."

He sang the song. The two thousand officers, their wives and enlisted men joined with him in the choruses. Then he began to speak of the war.

"I would like to impress upon you that this war is serious, that it is no picnic," he said. "We are fighting the most diabolical foe that ever trod civilization into the earth."

"When you boys go 'over there' you'll find the brawny hand of Great Britain stretched out to meet you, and you'll get a warm reception. This war has made the civilized world a great melting pot. We're in it today; you're in it today. And out of the melting pot will come a better and a wiser civilization.

"The world is on fire and you have been called upon to extinguish it—to extinguish it to the last spark."

CAN'T CUT DOWN GENERAL PRICE

FOOD CONTROLLER'S CHIEF DUTY IS TO EDUCATE THE PUBLIC.

Victoria, Oct. 22.—Dr. J. M. Robertson, representative of the food controller, told the local committee on food control that the people of Canada are laboring under a misapprehension when they form the opinion that the food controller should bring about a general cut in the prices of commodities. He asserted the question was one of supply and demand. In some cases, he pointed out, prices must continue to be high if producers are to be encouraged to increase production.

The primary duty of the food controller, he explained, was along educational lines, so that there should be a surplus of products for supplying Great Britain and her allies.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:—At the monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women held recently, a report was read from one housewife of the city on the fact that lately she had bought three loaves of bread from three different bakers, all short in weight, which resulted in Mrs. Parsons being appointed to look into the laws governing the weight of bread. A very proper proceeding, but it would be of infinitely greater importance to the welfare of the community at large to see that a law is enacted and put in force providing for a thorough baking of bread. I bought a loaf last week, half baked at one end and the other end was heavy dough unfit for man or beast. It would try the well known digestive powers of an ostrich. I can assure you that it was not under weight.

The bakers can easily make the weight by adding a plentiful supply of water and then half bake the bread to retain the moisture and thus give good weight.

MOTOR CLUB TO SEND DELEGATES

CITY WILL ALSO BE REPRESENTED AT GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

The Peterboro Automobile association has been notified by the Board of Railway Commissioners, Ottawa that a hearing of the oBard on the subject of good crossings and the reduction in loss of life due to same, will be held in Toronto City Hall on Tuesday morning, Oct. 23, 1917, at 10 a.m. The local associations are invited to send representatives and the municipality is also requested to do the same.

A meeting of the directors of the Motor Association was held Saturday evening at the office of G. A. Gillespie, the president. The city was represented at the meeting by Mayor Duffus and others. It was decided that owing to the great danger existing from grade crossings, even in our local district that this matter should be followed up closely. Suggestions as to warning signs and signals, the removal of signboards, buildings, freight cars, etc., from property to grade crossings were adopted, and it was decided to send representatives from both the local Motor Association and the city to this hearing to protect as far as possible the interests of the people of Peterborough including the motorists from the dangers of unprotected grade crossings.

SEES NO SIGN OF LASTING PEACE

PEACE NOW SAYS LLOYD GEORGE WOULD MEAN AN ARMED TRUCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 22.—"I have scanned the horizon intently," said Premier Lloyd George today, "and can see no terms in sight which will lead to enduring peace. The only terms now possible would mean an armed truce ending in an even more frightful struggle."

Lloyd George said Germany would make peace now only on terms which would enable her to benefit by the war. He asserted that it would be encouragement to every Buccaneering Empire in the future to repeat the experiment.

More than twice as many German submarines were lost in first ten months of this year as in all of last year, the Premier asserted. British tonnage lost monthly now is not much more than one third of the total destroyed last April.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes, should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband

BUT—

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of marrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

Complete and absolute Family protection can be had by your taking a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA, THE LEADING CANADIAN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

Children's Day in all Anglican Churches

SPECIAL SERMONS IN ST. JOHN'S MORNING AND EVENING YESTERDAY.

Yesterday was "Children's Day" in all the Anglican churches of the Dominion. The importance of the work of children in the church was made the "special intention" at all the services in St. John's. Intercessions were offered for Sunday school scholars and workers, also for the Sunday School Commission. Both Morning and evening the Rev. A. Egerton Ryerson claimed for Sunday School work, more active co-operation between Sunday school and congregation, paying special attention to the psychological aspect of religous education.

At the children's service in the afternoon a record attendance for this season was established and a bright, happy service was held, all the Bible Classes participating. The scholars marched to the altar rail and each one presented an offering for the work of the Sunday School Commission.

The offertory numbers were sung by a trio of boys. Harry Murduff, John Yarnold. Sherwood Kennett who sang Sir John Stainers beautiful setting of "Christ who once amongst us" Both in solo and combined the boys sang splendidly, the result of skilful training.

St. John's Sunday School is run along the lines of the Commission and for the last year has joined the lantern slide exchange which now possesses thousands of slides on Biblical and historical subjects which are found to be a great help to Sunday School work all the world over.

LABOR LEADER GOES TO CABINET

Rain and Snow Alike Fail to Keep Them Out of the Trial of Skill—Charles E. Would for Three Years the Champion is Still Favorite.

Seventeen farmers ranging in ages from 15 to 50 years or over are competing today for the prizes offered in the yearly plowing match, open to residents of Peterborough County. Rain and snow fell alternately from early morning, but this did not deter a fair number of candidates from entering, nor did bad weather dampen the ardor of the spectators, gathered from all parts of the county to watch the work.

The match was held on two farms on the Fourth Line of Smith Township. The veterans who contested for the sod prizes worked on the farm of Mr. J. A. Young, while the boys who have not yet graduated from the stubble field were over the line fence on the farm of Mr. J. K Moore.

No county plowing match would be complete without the presence and competition of Mr. Charles E. Would of Indian River, with his well trained horses and his "Gray" plow, the most perfect implement of its kind in that particular line of work in the county. Mr. Would is the champion plowman of the county by long odds, and, if he cared to try, would easily win honors in the provincial field. For the past three years he has won the cup offered by Capt. Burnham as a prize, and to judge from the work he is doing today he will carry it off for the fourth time in succession. The cup remains his property only so long as he is able to hold it against all comers. The work which he did today was the very acme of the agricultural art and demonstrates that really good plowmen are rarer than landscape painters or poets.

CHARLES MOORE
One of the younger members and a vice president of the Association.

Another veteran in the field in the class where general purpose plows were used was Mr. Dan Crough of Ennismore. His skill has been transmitted to his son Wilfrid, who was a contestant in the class for boys under 18 years of age. The elder Crough was driving the same handsome pair of grey Percherons with which he won the special prize for the best team in the field last year. He has them as fit as ever, resplendent in brass mounted harness, and no doubt will bring home the bacon with them again.

The Men Who Competed.

The following were the entries in the different classes:

Class 1, in sod, high cut or sod plows to be used—Chas. E. Would, Indian River; E. Kelk, Otonabee; W. G. Henderson, Otonabee; W. J. Cleghorn, Otonabee.

Class 2, in sod, ordinary plows to be used—Thos. Metcalfe, Smith; Hugh McFee, Otonabee; Ed. Archer, Smith; P. O'Reilly and Dan Crough, Ennismore.

Class 5, in stubble, two-furrow plows drawn by three horses—Vernon Campbell, Douro; W. J. Bell and —— Blewett, Smith.

The soil was in excellent shape after the recent rains, although some of the contestants in sod complained of stones.

One fact established was that the farmers of Peterborough County own some of the finest agricultural horses to be found anywhere in the province.

The gentleman upon whom devolved the task of deciding on the merits of the various competitors and allotting the prizes was Mr. J. A. McLean of Richmond Hill, who officiated in the same capacity here one year ago. Mr. McLean is an expert both as a judge and a performer, as he won the provincial championship a number of times in his younger days.

Mr. Joshua Smithson, president of the association, was on hand early. Secretary Brown looked after the entries and the records.

CHARLES E. WOULD
Of Indian River, champion plowman of Peterborough County, who has won the Burnham cup three years in succession.

A Red Cross Booth.

The men contesting were required to plow one-third of an acre each, and were allowed from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in which to do it. At noon they were tendered a dainty lunch by the ladies of Smith township. These ladies had a booth on the farm of Mr. J. A. McGregor, where lunches were served, the proceeds to go to the Red Cross. The ladies on duty were Mesdames J. K. Moore, Proudlove, Archer, Tully, J. A. McGregor, Simpson, Scott, Graham, Young, Stinson, Hunter, R. Darling, Sanderson, Blewett and Miss Paul.

"Farm and Dairy" had a rest tent to which all were made welcome.

During the afternoon Mr. Russell Darling gave an exhibition of his three-furrow tractor plow.

The prize list will be published tomorrow.

RECORD DAY AT ARMORIES FIFTY SIX ARE EXAMINED

Thirty-Four go Into A Category Yesterday, Two in B, Three in C and Seventeen Rejected—Poor Physical Type of Manhood Last Night.

Yesterday was another record-breaking day at the Armories when Drs. Cameron, Eastwood and Greer, medically examined no less than fifty-six applicants. Their grading was as follows:

Category A	34
Category B	2
Category C	3
Category E	17

Twenty Yesterday Afternoon

Twenty farmers from outlying districts were examined yesterday afternoon. Their certificates read, Category A 10, C one and E nine. Nine out of twenty rejected is not a very gratifying quality of manhood from a military standpoint.

Fourteen Last Night

Only three out of fourteen applicants were totally rejected by the medical board last night. The men were graded as follows: Category A nine, B one, C one, and E three.

About one hundred applicants from surrounding localities rushed the Armories this morning and they were, to all appearances, a splendid battalion of physical perfection. The doctors handled 22 and graded them in the following categories: A, 13; C, 1; E, 8.

NINE MEN HAVE REPORTED FOR MILITARY DUTY

One Hundred and Thirty-nine Claiming Exemption To Date.

THOUSAND DOLLAR PENALTY

For Men Attempting to Secure Two Hearings at Different Tribunals.

Twenty exemption applicants filled out their forms of appeal at the local post office yesterday, and one "A" man registered for duty. This morning at 11:40 there were but three applicants for papers, but one of the three was an A1 registration for service. To date there have been nine medically examined men who have reported as ready to respond at once to the call to arms. One hundred and thirty-nine men have demanded exemption privileges.

One thousand dollars is the penalty for any men who attempt to secure two hearings before different tribunals in the hope that the one will override the decision of the other. Its chief application is to men who may wish to make their personal applications to the tribunals on Nov. 8, 9 and 10 rather than send in their written applications before that date. As matters now stand, there is nothing to prevent a Grade A man making a personal application to a tribunal, say on Nov. 8, and if the decision does not suit him, continue his search for an exemption on one of the two succeeding days. Rather, the only thing to prevent him doing this is the danger of the $1000 fine as provided in the Act. This penalty applies not only to any attempts which the man may make himself along this line but also to any attempts at a second hearing, other than before an appeal tribunal, which may be made with his knowledge by a relative or employer.

Written Applications.

In cases where written applications are made for exemption by the use of forms obtainable at the post offices, there is no danger of incurring the above penalty, unless the man attempts to make a personal application in addition on one of the above dates. The number of written applications which may be made in the interests of one man are limited only by the number of relatives who may be sufficiently interested in him to take the trouble to go to a post office to secure and fill in one of the necessary forms, and his employer may also add to the number.

Foe Forces Back British Position

TROOPS GAVE WAY AT ONLY ONE POINT—OTHER GAINS ARE MAINTAINED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23.—The Germans last night attacked one of our newly captured British positions in Flanders, and forced back troops holding it, the war office announced today. Elsewhere all British gains of yesterday have been maintained.

THE ISSUE BEFORE THE VOTERS

(Editorial in The Globe.)

A Government opposed to conscription and pledged not to enforce it unless authorized by referendum, would not have recourse to the draft, pending the taking of a vote. A referendum, owing to the necessity of voting the men in the trenches, would consume precious time. There would be no reason to hope that in the interval another resort to the voluntary system would reveal appreciable results, judging by the number of exemption claims under the Military Service Act. This is the situation which will confront the country if anti-conscriptionists control the next House of Commons. It is idle to try to rule the Military Service Act out of the election campaign or to blink the truth that if its opponents triumph the Canadians at he front may wait in vain for reinforcements from home.

LOOK TO THE FIRST CLASS

Preparations have been rushed at Ottawa to take care of the first men called up under the Military Service Act, since all indications point to a heavy response at the very first. It requires a huge organization throughout the country, to take care of the operation of the Act.

The Governor-General's Proclamation was printed in all the newspapers of the country on October 13, calling up the first class. This includes all male British subjects between the ages of 20 and 34 who were unmarried on July 6, 1917, or are widowers without children. All such men must report for service on or before November 10 next, if application for exemption has not been made in their behalf before that date.

Since, by this time, the country has been fully informed as to each man's duty under the Military Service Act, and knows the severe penalties provided for those who try to evade the law, a speedy formation of the required reinforcements to the number of 100,000 is expected from the first class called.

RUSSIAN NAVY HAS GREAT POWERS OF RESISTANCE; ITS PERSONNEL IS LOYAL

Temporarily Disabled and Put Out of Action at Least Fifteen German Warships in the Gulf of Riga—Russian Gunners are Good Marksmen—Hun Ships are Lining up in the Baltic.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23.—Today's Petrograd statement, reporting that fifteen German warships of various classes were at least temporarily disabled and put out of action by Russians in fighting around Dago, Oesel and Moon Islands, is occasioning much satisfaction here, as indicating that the Russian navy still has great powers of resistance and that its personnell is loyal and courageous to a high degree.

It is notable that most of German ships were sunk by Russian gunfire, indicating also that Russian marksmenship is very good.

Immense Fleets

News from Scandanavian sources is that immense fleets of German ships are now lining mouth of the Baltic indicating German preparedness for any attempts of British allies to enter the Baltic to help the Russians.

CONSCRIPTION WILL NOT BE ABANDONED

RUMOR TO THIS EFFECT REPORTED OFFICIALLY AS WITHOUT FOUNDATION

FIRST CLASS CALLS DEC. 10TH

MEN IN YOUKON DISTRICT WILL BE FIRST DRAFTED ON JANUARY SEVENTH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—It is stated, positively and officially today that there is no foundation whatever for the stories in various cities, particularly in Montreal to the effect that the Government will abandon conscription. Because of large number of exemption applications on their hands military service board here is carrying out its plan to have first drafts called out for servie on December tenth. It is believed exemption boards will have completed work by that time. This applies to all parts of Canada, except Yukon. The date of calling out there will be January seventh.

BRITISH WIN IN AERIAL BATTLE

FIFTEEN GERMAN AIRSHIPS BROUGHT DOWN AFTER FIERCE ENGAGEMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23.—Fifteen German aeroplanes were brought down by British aviators in the recent fighting over the battle area in Northern France and Belgium, says the war office official statement today on aviation. German aerdromes and stations were bombed heavily with excellent results. Heavy fighting took place in the air. Eight British machines are reported missing.

Hakon A. Hammer, late manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Elfros, Saskatchewan, was allowed out on suspended sentence when he came before the Supreme Court at Wynward charged with having defrauded the bank of $10,000, while manager.

JOINT COM. OF VETERANS AND CITIZENS TO CONFER ON TEMPORARY PLANS

To Provide Club and Business Headquarters for Returned Soldiers until after War—Citizens May Guarantee Permanent Quarters when Soldiers Return.

In regard to larger and more adequate headquarters or club rooms for the Great War Veterans' Association, the veterans are back again practically to where they started from the public meeting in the Council Chamber on this question. That is to say the conference in the Armories last night with representative citizens resulted in a committee being appointed to again meet a committee of the Vets. This time, however, there promises to be more unity of opinion between veterans and citizens, the former having abandoned the memorial idea, and recognized the advisability of accepting temporary premises adequate for all needs until after the war, when citizens, under pledge, will undertake the larger and permanent scheme.

The citizens committee named last night is as follows: Mayor Duffus, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Messrs. J. J. Turner, E. A. Peck, ex-M.P.P., G. N. Gordon, and Alderman F. H. Dobbin. His worship is to be convener of the committee, and when date of conference with the veterans is arranged Mrs. Morris is to bring to the meeting two other ladies.

Enthusiasm Prevailed.

A large number of veterans were present, and Peterborough's citizenship was represented by Mayor Duffus, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Ald. Dobbin, J. W. Worth, J. J. Turner, Col. Miller, B. F. Ackerman, G. N. Gordon, J. Guise-Bagley, E. A. Peck, and others. The Dominion Government was represented by Capt. Burnham, M.P., and the military authorities by Lieut.-Col. Joseph Mills. Lieut.-Col. Johnston of the 93rd Battalion was also present with the veterans. The meeting was characteristic of keen enthusiasm to a degree which promises the boys eventually getting all they want from both the nation and this municipality, and in measure full and running over.

Defer Big Scheme.

Captain Burnham said the opinion of citizens generally seemed to be that the larger scheme for permanent G.W.V.A. headquarters should be deferred until after the war, on account of the stupendous needs for Red Cross and all the other patriotic organizations. Still veterans would like an understanding with citizens as to when they think it advisable to begin to canvass for funds with which to secure the object in view. Buildings of a very pretentious character, he declared, have sometimes begun in a very humble way by keeping before the public, by means of entertainments and so forth, the desired end, and thus providing a monetary nucleus of the ultimate amount desired.

Government's Responsibility.

Continuing, Capt. Burnham advised that there is another side of this question, and that is, it is up to the Government, which represents the people, to provide a solution of the problem of caring for

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1917.

AN ENVIABLE RECORD.

THE SALVATION ARMY is not affected by the Military Service Act. In all its large membership there is not one man who is included in the first class called to the colors, not an unmarried man between the ages of twenty and thirty-four years. The honor roll of the Army shows that it has sent its fair quota and then some to the trenches. Is there in the city of Peterborough any religious denomination that can make such a showing as this, that has not some member or adherent who, if not actually claiming exemption, is hesitating between the promptings of inclination and the call of duty?

WHERE IS THE COAL?

A FEW DAYS AGO it was stated on the authority of a local fuel expert that here is more coal in sight than there has ever been in Peterborough at this season of the year. Will someone help Alderman Dobbin, manager-in-chief of the civic fuel yard, to locate it? The alderman is certainly in a position to report that business with him is brisk. At least he has plenty of orders. The only trouble is a painful shortage of stock.

A citizen's supply of coal in his place of business ran out, and he telephoned in vain to every private dealer in the city. "We are not taking any orders just now," he was told. "Ring us up again, and in the meantime why not try Alderman Dobbin?"

The citizen acted on the latter suggestion, but Alderman Dobbin was unable to help him out. The civic coal yard was reported as having something over four hundred and eighty orders on the books. When these were filled the citizen's case could be considered. Poor comfort this when the "probs" hinted at a cold wave on the way.

The people whose coal bins are all but empty have one solace left them. There is probably more wood piled up in the dealers' yards than was ever known. The dealers, however, seem loath to part with it, even though the price is several notches above all previous marks. But anyway the wood is there.

THE DURATION OF UNION GOVERNMENT.

AS THE REVIEW intimated a few days ago, the Union Government just formed at Ottawa is, even if sustained at the coming election, to last only until the close of the war and the soldiers are back from Europe. It was on that understanding that the Union Cabinet was organized.

The single purpose of the Unionists is to win the war. When that record is accomplished, the record of the Borden Government on other issues is to be passed upon. In the meantime the proposition is to drop all contentious subjects. No man need hesitate about severing political ties of years to meet the present emergency. Any Government returned to power now will be short-lived. The end of the war will mean a new election.

The voters of Canada, for example, who are opposed to the purchase of the C. N. R. need not worry on that score. They will have an opportunity to speak their minds when the graver issue of saving the life of the nation is disposed of. Let all the patriots in the country forego party for the present and make a united effort in conjunction with the new Government in the stupendous task which confronts it.

A LABOR MAN FOR THE CABINET.

LOCAL LABOR MEN are dissatisfied with the composition of the new Union Cabinet because it so far contains the name of no representative of their order. They should possess themselves in peace. Premier Borden has given his word that labor will be represented. Over a week ago The Review received a special despatch from Capt. Burnham, who stated that before the new Cabinet deal was completed labor would be represented. Capt. Burnham in this case, we have not the slightest doubt, spoke with authority after a personal interview with the Premier. Sir Robert Borden no later than Saturday reaffirmed his pledge to recognize labor. He has been once more asked to repeat this promise, and another announcement may be looked for in a few days.

Why, then, is Hon. T. W. Crothers retained in the Cabinet? Simply because the labor men of the country themselves are unable to agree on a man for the position. As soon as they do this, Mr. Crothers will retire. He is anxious to give up the office himself on account of his health, and it is his physical condition that prevents him from doing more work in his department.

The members of the Independent Labor Party and the wheelhorses in the Dominion Trades Congress are at odds over the selection of a candidate. While this condition obtains, Premier Borden is powerless to do anything. As soon as the two factions get into agreement, The Review is in a position to state with authority that their nominee will at once be vested with the mantle of a Cabinet Minister.

Senator Robertson, a member of the Telegraphers' Union, was the first union labor man to be placed in the Senate, and his appointment was made by Sir Robert Borden. He would be transferred to the Cabinet now if the labor men themselves could agree on him as their representative. It seems, however, that he is not high in favor with all sections of organized labor.

Capt. Burnham believes that the new Cabinet will not be complete until labor has a place at the Council table. He believes that the Cabinet should be representative in every sense and that all classes should be given a show. This is especially true in the case of labor, which, so far as numbers go, comprises the majority of the population of the Dominion.

Mr. Crothers, it was announced the other day, stated in an interview that he was to remain in his present position. The probability is that he was misquoted by some enterprising newspaper man. At all events, his remaining or going is a matter which rests with Sir Robert Borden, who has already passed his word.

VOLUNTARY SYSTEM DEAD.

THE FIGURES published from day to day are all that are required to convince the most skeptical that the voluntary recruiting plan has run its course, and that no hope was left that the men needed could be secured by an attempt to operate it further.

Up to noon yesterday the number of men examined by the Medical Board was 861. Of these, 510 were passed as fit for trench duty. How many of them have accepted the inevitable and applied for service? Of all the men passed and catalogued in the different classes—619 in all—only 130 had called at the post office, and of these 123 claimed exemption.

If men will not enlist, even in the face of a draft, does anyone for a moment suppose that appeals to them to enlist would have availed? The Government exhausted every device to get men into the ranks of their own accord. The draft was employed only as a last resort. Carping newspapers called upon the Administration to "do something," but what such papers had in mind was carefully kept to themselves. Whatever it was, it was not the draft system, for even that fails to secure the distinguished consideration of their support.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier says that if he is returned to power he will give the voluntary system another trial. If it fails, he does not commit himself as to what he will do further than to pledge himself never to resort to any measures that smack of compulsion. And fail the voluntary system most surely would. The records at the local post office tell their own story.

LABOR'S PLATFORM.

THE POLITICAL PLATFORM of Labor has been resurrected again. It is dug up just before every election and submitted to candidates, actual and prospective, for their endorsation. Labor never fails to find some ambitious politician to subscribe to it. Thus armed, he goes into the fray. If he is elected, he forgets his pledges. Partisanship gets the better of him and he votes with the old party.

The Labor party of Canada have beyond all doubt the most progressive platform of any political party in existence. It takes note of every defect in the present system of government and suggests practical and feasible remedies. Labor's platform, if given effect, would make this country a democracy in very truth. It would benefit all classes alike. It would especially make it impossible for the law courts to nullify the legislation enacted by the people's chosen representatives.

The proposition to so amend the British North America Act that the decisions of the Supreme Court in Canada shall be final in all cases, instead of submitting such matters to the Privy Council in England, is one of the best features of the platform.

The pity of it is that a political creed that has so much to commend it should be to so great an extent used as a ball by political jugglers for their own ends, men ready to endorse it before the election and to ignore it once the polling places have rendered their verdict.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Good Times Out West.

(Moosejaw News.)

Favorable weather conditions, a [illegible] demand for wheat, high prices, and the satisfactory working of our financial machinery in marketing the crop, are combining to make this Fall probably the best for business that Western Canada has ever experienced.

Pretty High Potatoes.

(Boston Globe.)

A traveller actually complains because at a New York hotel he was charged eighty cents for a portion of mashed potatoes consisting of three tablespoonfuls. Aren't people ever going to get accustomed to high prices?

SOME SETTING UP EXERCISE

The lackadaisical, careful-don't-muss-your-hair style of "physical training" perpetuated in many of our public schools, in a reluctant effort to meet the demands of the country, is quite in keeping with the antique methods of discipline in vogue in these same schools. A principal or teacher who believes in keeping pupils after school as a penalty for faults in scholarship or deportment just naturally has no use at all for physical training. La-de-da calisthenic movement, for red blooded boys and girls, is the sort of nonsense that prepares them to stand on the bank and scream when a companion is drowning. They need exercise; they event want, before the craving is starved out of them by molly-coddling.

The proportion of young men found too deficient physically to serve the army is a reproach to the methods of education which have turned out these defective products. A man's posture, his knowledge of personal hygiene, his physical development and his self-respect are more or less intimately interrelated.

1. Erect. Hands high above head. Lean forward until hands touch floor in front, then sweep up high above head again. Repeat four to twenty times, according to muscular condition.

2. Erect. Hands high above head. Sweep over sidewise and touch floor with hands behind level of heels (bending knees if you wish), then up high above head again, then sweep down on other side in same way, then high above head. Repeat this four to twenty times.

3. Erect. Hands on hips. Squat down and right up again without sitting on heels. Repeat four to twenty times.

4. Erect. Lift right leg straight out forward and up to horizontal, then down again. Repeat with left leg. Repeat four to ten times.

5. Prone on floor. Stiffen body and push up body on arms, then let body down again to floor. Do not repeat the first day, but increase by one time twice a week.

6. Supine. Body rigid. Without lifting head from floor raise one leg to vertical, then let it slowly fall to floor again. Repeat with other leg. Do not repeat at first. Increase by one time twice a week.

7. Supine. Body rigid. Without lifting heels from floor attempt to raise body to upright sitting posture. Once is plenty for the first few days, and three times would be plenty for any one to repeat. Curl up as you please when attempting this stunt.

8. Supine. Rigid. Raise both legs at once to vertical, slowly, then slowly lower again, without lifting head from floor. Once or twice is enough to do this stunt.

9. Erect. Hands clasped behind as for rider to mount. Turn thumbs forward, down and under without loosening grasp of fingers. Now pull in your chin, and raise the right leg out to the right side to horizontal, and right down again. Repeat four to twenty times. Same with left leg.

10. Finish off your act by turning six somersaults down the hall to the bathroom.

Any man or woman or child who will run through some such system of physical culture even once a day may depend upon the training to develop good posture, good carriage and good circulation.

TODAY'S STORY

By Frank G. Menke.

This is a football story with a twist that even a layman probably will appreciate.

Two or three years ago Tom Keady took unto himself the job as coach of the football squad of a certain eastern university. Soon afterward he discovered that he had become the foster father to a lot of "foundlings" who felt that observance of training rules wasn't at all essential. On several different occasions Keady reprimanded his athletes—but without success.

One night Keady was passing one of the—er—ah—soda water dispensaries in the town where the university is located. Loud and familiar laughter issued forth, whereupon Keady wandered in to find the bulk of his football squad busily engaged in trying to absorb the visible supply of liquid. The youngsters were a bit flabbergasted when they saw Keady's familiar frame in the doorway—but flabbergasted only for a second or two. Then one of them, daringly, shouted:

"Oh, here is our coach boys! Welcome, coach! Please advance and permit us to buy you some soda water."

An idea flashed through Keady's mind at that instant—and he accepted the invitation.

When the youngsters, tired of buying soda water for Keady, half of which he didn't drink, he unsheathed his bankroll and began to reciprocate. Along about midnight some of the noble footballers hazarded the opinion that it was time to retreat in the general direction of a featherbed, whereupon Keady exclaimed in apparent surprise:

"Why, what's the use of going now, boys? This party is just getting good. Let's stick around."

So the boys stuck and the merry throng became merrier. They mixed up sandwiches and pickles and things like that with their liquid inhalations. They smoked innumerable cigarets which Keady bought for them. They had what a small-town fellow would term "one whale of a time."

Just as dawn was purpling the eastern landscape the party broke up. As the youngsters departed for their separate homes Keady's final words were:

"Report at 3 o'clock in the gymnasium, boys."

At 3 p.m. a sad, weary looking crowd of athletes reported. Only a few hours' sleep following a "large night" had put them very much on the blink in a physical way.

"I guess we won't do any real scrimmage work today, boys," Keady said. "Put on your heavy boots and heavy clothes and heavy sweaters and we'll just do a little road work."

The youngsters were delighted. They lifted feeble voices in a cheer for their coach. Once upon a time they had considered him "too strict." But now, of a sudden, he seemed to have developed into a regular he-man. Hadn't he frolicked with them the night before? And wasn't he making things easy for them now in ordering "just a little road work" instead of an hour or two of scrimmage?

"Hooray for our coach!" they cried.

While the footballers were "dolling up" in their heaviest togs, Keady slipped into a little side room where five former prize fighters awaited him. Each and every one was a husky. Keady employed them as rubbers and general utility trainers for his football team. Calling the quintet to him, Keady held a whispered conference and then concluded:

"Follow orders! Here is your equipment," and Keady pointed to five clubs of about the size and thickness of sawed-off baseball bats.

When the squad was ready for its "short run," Keady told them that he guessed he wouldn't go along with them, but put them in charge of the five trainers, who would map out the course for them.

"I have given these men my orders," said Keady to his football players. "Do as they tell you."

And then the squad started out.

Cross-country running in that particular district is quite an up and down process. There are numerous hills there—each one steeper than the other. The five boxing persons, acting as shepherds, led their flock to the hill section. Then the footballers, already wearied by a three-mile jaunt, made noises like a protest against further progress. In fact, they decided to return to the gymnasium, feeling they had performed their "short run."

Then one of the box fighters spoke up:

"You fellows will keep a trotting along until we trainers say stop. And that goes. No monkey-doodling! See?"

One of the footballers made a motion like a person about to desist from walking further, which action was rewarded with a belt on the back. Another one attempted to sit down and was given the "hot foot" treatment. Deciding, finally, that the prize fighters were not to be frivoled with, the gridiron gladiators started up the hill. But they didn't go fast enough for the five Simon Legrees. Each laggard was requested to "speed it up." Failure to obey brought a few whacks with a club.

Wit and Wisdom

Fundamental.

He looked at his wrist watch.

"Will you marry me?" he said.

She blushed.

"There is really no time to lose. You see I have only had 24 hours' notice. I must report at headquarters tomorrow at nine. We sail for France in three days. Will you marry me?"

"I don't mind," she said. "Only—I should like to make one condition."

"And this is?"

"I have dreamed for years of getting married, but not in this way. But I will marry you if—when you return—you will propose to me all over again, and we can go on a honeymoon, and I can be courted, and—well, you know, I am sure!"

"All right," he said, with a smile. "To be honest with you, dearest, I thought I was going to escape all that—but I see it's no use. I might have known better. Even a war like this cannot keep a woman from having her own way—especially about a wedding."

Must Have Been Censored.

"Is anything wrong?" anxiously inquired Anna Sophia. "I didn't see the word camouflage in your paper today?"

"Did you get all the editions, Anna?"

CRINOLINE OF OUR MOTHERS' TIME MAY RETURN TO VOGUE

Just What is Required to Set off Slim and Willowy Figures—Some of the Various Types.

By Mme. Frances

Time has arrived, mes enfants, when we are pleasingly threatened with a reversal of form which will with one leap carry us back to the debutante days of our most charming grandmothers and place us midway between the crinoline and the pointed bodice.

We were reasonably assured that the empire, the directoire and the other "period" vogues had been buried too deeply ever to be resurrected, but there was always an element of doubt about the crinoline and its kindred features of that day.

Anatomy of the Crinoline

The crinoline that threatens to invade the circle of unanimous approval is the one that starts at least 12 inches above the hem, and, in the strictest confidence, has every indication of being our old friend, the hoop, dropped a space of a foot, or two, or even three.

It is but natural that the vogue, if it should develop, will first attach itself to the gowns for the evening. If it fails to catch the popular stamp of approval it will stop there. Should it succeed I would hardly dare prophesy where it will stop.

The crinoline has the supreme advantage of grace and is the type of thing that rarely detracts from its wearer's appearance. There is something infinitely chic about the manner in which the skirt hung to the hoop from the waist sways with the every movement of the wearer. Tall women will come into a heritage that they will cherish. Short women, I am afraid will hurry the season and ask for a newer idea more compatible with their comfort.

Sweet Alyssum, one of my crinoline creations, typifies a crinoline as it could be worn in this day and date with every propriety preserved and with every advantage emphasized.

A Fascinating Type

The bodice is fitted tightly and brought to a sharp point below the waist. The top is low rounded, while the sleeves, to me the piece-resistance of the frock, are puffed just below the shoulder and then extended long and tight to the waist. The straps, a 1917 contribution to the habiliment of another day, are jeweled.

The skirt is gathered in soft pleats below the waist, but it loses its folds as it reaches the crinoline and drops to a hem not more than five inches from the floor.

The frock in its ensemble presents a picture of studied simplicity and graceful lines that would be difficult to improve. Still, there are one or two basic elements to be considered without which the crinoline is doomed to quick failure.

Crinoline's Demands

The crinoline requires youth, tall, slim, impeccable youth, of flawless complexion and glorious hair that will lend itself to the coiffure of days gone by that conjure up visions of old lace and lavender and all the dainty graces of the period.

Another necessary element in the presentation of the crinoline frock is a single color. In other words, I am afraid that any combination of color, either in the material or decoration of the dress, will render it theatrical and in bad taste.

Black chiffon velvet comprises the ideal material for the gown. It has the element of softness and beauty of fabric that lends itself to the particular style.

As a matter of sheer pictorial fascination it must be admitted that the fluffy, flowing loveliness of a crinoline gown has in it something impelling, and the pictorial always will have its potency, even in the most practical age that ever may happen. There is much artifice, if you insist upon being critical but much beauty also, as any gallery of crinolined portraits will attest, not to speak of those demure and distinguished daguerreotypes which reveal the grand-ladies of an earlier day. As a sheer matter of gown these graceful and gracious draperies can touch the ultimate note of coquettish femininity, affording as they do infinite opportunity for decorative device as well as textural exploitation. The history of clothes bears out this sentiment.

There is no certainty that this fashion will have a vogue. If it should it will be a pretty one. If it shouldn't I, for one, shall be sorry.

BOWSER'S TRAMP.

Our Hero Makes Amends For an Unfeeling Woman.

HIS EFFORTS UNAPPRECIATED.

Biffed on the Nose For Resenting Undue Familiarity and Humbled in Spirit, He Knows Mrs. B. Had the Right Idea, but Won't Admit It.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, ——, by Associated Literary Press.]

THE girl being out, it was Mrs. Bowser who answered a ring at the front door at 8 o'clock in the evening. Mr. Bowser had finished his cigar and was half asleep, but he roused up and caught her words as she said:

"Nothing for you this evening. I gave you money two or three days ago."

"Who was that?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"A big, lazy tramp. He has called here four or five times in succession. It's a wonder the police allow such men to ply their vocation!"

"But you spoke to him mighty curtly."

"Of course I did. I got through saying 'please' to tramps long ago."

"In other words, you didn't care whether you hurt his feelings or not. It was not enough that he must go away with hunger unsatisfied, probably to walk the streets all night, but you must add to his miseries by your cruel words."

"Perhaps I ought to have invited him in and given him the guest's chamber for the night!"

"There is no call for sarcasm," said Mr. Bowser. "A tramp is simply an unfortunate. He is entitled to our sympathies. If people extended an encouraging hand there would be no tramps. You are like all the rest—you want to kick a man when he's down. I shan't envy your feelings if that poor man is found dead tomorrow morning."

"What do you want me to do?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"I want you to speak kindly and gently, even if you can give nothing. A word may turn one of these men for good or evil. I would not have your frozen heart for all the money on earth."

"I'M AN ORPHAN IN HARD LUCK."

"He's probably hanging around on the block yet. Why don't you call him in and extend your sympathies?"

Acts on Mrs. Bowser's Suggestion.

"Your suggestion is a good one. I will call him in."

"Don't be foolish."

"Never you mind about my foolishness. That poor old tramp shall be made to understand that there is at least one person with feelings on this street."

Next minute Mr. Bowser was on the front doorstep. He hadn't the least idea of finding the tramp and therefore was disagreeably surprised to find the fellow leaning against the gate. As he had started in to raise a racket, he must carry it out, and he could do no less than call the man in. He proved to be a big, strong "tourist," with a red nose and a strong smell of whisky about him, and there was nothing gentle or sympathetic in his tones as he stopped in the hall and said:

"If it's ashes you want carried out I've got a lame back and can't do it."

"Are you hungry?" asked Mr. Bowser as he conducted him to the dining room and found Mrs. Bowser gone.

"Not just this minute. What I want is to raise the money for a night's lodging. If you can spare me a quarter, old man, I'll never forget it. I'm an orphan in hard luck."

Weary Willie Makes Himself at Home.

Mr. Bowser winced at the familiarity, but invited the man to sit down. The invitation was not promptly accepted, but the tramp pulled a pipe from his pocket and looked inquiringly about in search of tobacco and a light.

"You need money, of course," said Mr. Bowser after awhile, "but you also need something else. If you could feel that the world sympathized with you it would give you encouragement and ambition to make a new start."

"It would, sir. Yes, Uncle Joe, you have struck it dead right. What I'm after is sympathy and money."

"The want of kind words must harden your heart."

"It do, sir. Yes, sir, when I'm turned away from a door I feel like killing some one."

"It is not your fault that you are down."

"Not at all, old pard. I held three aces and bet all my money on 'em, but the other feller had four kings. I ought to have won on them three aces."

"You would like to make a new start in life, wouldn't you?" asked Mr. Bowser, but without much interest in his voice.

"You bet! Yes, sir, you just sympathize with me for about four weeks and put up a hundred in cash and I'll make a new start. I'll blossom out in some sort of game to skin the public and divide the profits with you. Give me your hand. You are a trump, you are!"

Mr. Bowser's Ire Aroused.

"Look here, but I don't like your way of talking," said Mr. Bowser, as he rose up, "you evidently need manners more than sympathy."

"And what's manners got to do with it?" impudently queried the man. "You invited me in here to sympathize with me and pony up. I'm not doing the society act."

"I—I'm afraid you are not in need of sympathy. If you are, I've got none to give you."

"Oh, you ain't? What's your little game, grandpa? Did you call me in to make a fool of me?"

"Who are you addressing as grandpa?" demanded Mr. Bowser, as he bristled up.

"Well, I'm sorry if you don't like it. Come down with a plunk and I'll go."

"I'll come down with nothing, sir! I find that I've been mistaken in you. You are evidently an old bum instead of an unfortunate man!"

"And you invited me in here to say so, didn't you? Your wife turns me away cool as ice, and then you invite me in to hurt my feelings. Don't monkey with Tom the Tourist!"

"I'll see you out!" replied Mr. Bowser, as he preceded him to the door.

"And no plunk?"

"Not a penny!"

"And I'm an old bum?"

"You are!"

"Then smell that!"

His Visitor Also Loses His Temper.

The "that" was the tramp's fist, and it smashed against Mr. Bowser's nose with such force as to land him on the floor in a sitting position and brought blood pouring out over his chin. It was a couple of minutes before he could struggle up and figure out what had happened, and then the tramp had disappeared. Mrs. Bowser hadn't, though. From her position on the stairs she had seen and heard all. As Mr. Bowser stood with his hands to his nose she called down:

"Did you speak kindly to him, dear?"

Mr. Bowser looked up at her and gasped—but he couldn't say a word.

"He seemed to have new aims and ambition as he went out!" she said, as she sat down on the stairs.

Mr. Bowser began jumping up and down, but the words wouldn't come.

"I'm sorry about my frozen heart," she went on, "and you'd better go down to the kitchen to wash the blood off. When you"—

He didn't wait to hear any more. She had been in bed two hours when he came softly upstairs and undressed in the darkness and without uttering a word. He wanted to say thousands of things and yell them out at the top of his voice, but his nose was swelled to three times its usual size, his back ached, and he was in a hurry to get to bed and sleep. He owed Mrs. Bowser one, but it was on ice to keep till the next time.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 591D Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Canadian Girl Drove Ambulance

WHERE the roar of London's traffic echoes to the skies, drowning the shrieks of the raid sirens, muffling the very thunder of the bombs themselves, by the crowded curb past which flows that endless stream of taxis, motor vans, carts, wagons along the mighty river of the Strand, the writer stood chatting the other day with a blue-uniformed Canadian girl just back from France. Her neat navy serge and tight black cap proclaimed her an ambulance driver in the British Red Cross.

"And would you believe," she remarked, "driving a car in Toronto is far harder than steering a vehicle through this maelstrom? See how smoothly everything goes, how well paved the streets are, how the traffic policemen have everything under control. Then, too, notice the lack of 'tooting' their horns. People over here wouldn't stand for the row drivers are permitted to make at home, grinding their Claxtons at you half a mile away."

This young lady with the Red Cross on her shoulder had been over in France all winter driving a car in one of the hospital areas, no easy life, though vacancies in France are eagerly accepted, and some of England's most aristocratic girls are chauffeuring wounded men from the hospital trains to the base hospitals. One of her companions there was a distinguished artist with pictures in the National Exhibition, another a girl golf champion. Driving an ambulance in winter in France is most exacting work for a woman.

Every member of a unit goes on duty twelve hours daily, taking night and day shifts in turn. Sometimes there is little doing, at others it is terribly strenuous. And every girl must clean her own car, a performance which, needless to say, takes hours. French roads, too, in winter, are not like London pavements, though there is this advantage in driving out there. In France you keep to the right as in Canada, and a Canadian thus runs less risk of making a mistake as she might do caught off her guard in England where traffic goes to the left. There are few self-starters on the Red Cross cars in France. Misused by some, they were taken off pretty generally, so girl drivers must crank up their own engines, heavy work which in winter sometimes takes half an hour, and which I am told in the case of Miss Jessie McLaughlin of Ottawa, resulted in that young lady breaking her arm.

Lady drivers get small pay. Two dollars and a half a week for messing allowance is every cent they receive, though, of course, quarters and good board are provided for them. Harder still is the condition on the contract that should they get really ill, that same day this allowance stops, and their post is soon filled by another. But withal it is noble and interesting work, and there is no lack of patriotic girls to volunteer.

Crops of Spain.

One-fourth of the crops of Spain are produced on irrigated lands, although only 6 per cent. of the nation's cultivated land is irrigated.

FALL TIPS.

Cellars Are Veering Over Into Tailored Effects Now.

Have you noticed the collar changes on dresses and suits? They are decidedly different from the big sailor and capuchin effects that have finished gowns, fashionable and otherwise, for the past three or four seasons—that is, when the collar has been permitted to exist at all.

Those collars that have timidly made their way back are narrow, trig and mannish when a component of the trotteur or tailleur. As the garment becomes more conspicuous it flattens out, assumes greater breadth and inclines to the ornate.

Up to the present moment there seems no place in the revised scheme of fashion for the halfway collar. It must be small, after the manner of the shawl or tuxedo collar, or large, like the muslin neckpieces featured in the portraits of women painted by Rembrandt, Frans Hals or Rubens.

Those that follow the Dutch idea may be of satin, linen or cloth, preferably the first named, with here and there an exception in favor of filet lace.

It may be that there is some relation, speaking in a tailored sense, between the neat tuxedo collar on the little frock of satin or serge and the mannish sailor hat of pineapple straw with its band of polka dot or striped silk.

Or the adoption of khaki uniforms by women in government employ may have its influence in shaping the neck finish of new gowns and suits. However this may be, it is certain that the present is a transition period in style accessories as they have to do with collars.

It is something of a relief to see the narrow collar. It is a part of the low cut, crossover front of dresses of serge or satin, and, according to the depth of the opening, there may be introduced the plastron of satin or linen cut either high or low. Usually narrow cuffs accompany such a collar.

REAL STYLE.

Isn't This Turban the Jauntiest One You've Seen?

CLEAR SOUP.

The Way to Make It Like a French Chef.

Four pounds of shin of beef, two pounds of knuckle of veal. Cut the meat off the bones in pieces about a quarter of a pound each and break the bones in four or five pieces. Have ready your stock pot, put into it one ounce of butter, let it just warm, then place the meat at the bottom of the pot with the bones. Let this fry very slowly for one and one-half hours, turning the meat two or three times till it is nicely browned. It must not be allowed to burn, and the pot must be kept covered. The bottom of the pot should be covered by a rich, thick gravy. Now add to it five quarts of boiling water, let it boil, then throw in a teacupful of cold water to accelerate the rising of the scum. If this operation is repeated three times it should make a clear consomme.

Have ready two carrots, two turnips, two onions stuck with two cloves, one head of celery, two leeks, one salt, a fagot of herbs weighing abo one ounce, consisting of parsley, thy marjoram and tarragon. Put th all in the soup and allow it to sim four or five hours. Strain and leave cool for use. When cold, carefully r move all fat. The meat from this will bear another addition of wat about three quarts, and will boil ag for common soup.

Bean Soup.

One and one-half cupfuls cooked na beans, two teaspoonfuls chopped onio six cupfuls water, one teaspoonful ce ery salt, two teaspoonfuls lemon juic salt and pepper.

V. C. for Calgary Man.

The Victoria Cross is gazetted to 808887, Pte. John George Pattison, Canadian Infantry, for conspicuous bravery. "In an attack, when the advance of our troops was held up by a machine gun, inflicting severe casualties, Pattison," it is gazetted, "with utter disregard of his own safety, sprang forward, jumping from shell hole to shell hole, and reached cover within thirty yards of the enemy gun. From this point, in the face of heavy fire, he hurled bombs, killing and wounding some of the crew. Then he rushed forward, overcoming and bayonetting the surviving five gunners. His valor and initiative undoubtedly saved the situation and made possible a further advance to the objective." Pattison was born in Woolwich in 1875, and his parents now reside in New Cross, London. His wife and four children live in West avenue, Westmount, Calgary. Pattison went to France in January last, and was reported missing in June.

The Wearer Was Blessed.

A private had received from home a gift of a new pair of woollen socks, and put them on joyfully on the morning before a heavy march. He was soon limping, but got no chance to take off his shoes till the end of a twenty-five mile day. Then he got the socks off and found in the toe of one a piece of stiff writing paper, on which he could just read the words, written in a childish hand:

"God bless the wearer of this pair of socks!"

Sand, silt, and clay may all be from the same source.

OBITUARY

EVELIN BLODGETT

velin Blodgett, infant daughter of and Mrs. George Bladgett, 213 rim street, city, passed away yes- day. The funeral took place this rnoon to St. Peter's cemetery interment.

JOINT COM. OF

Lieut.-Col. Johnston had every faith in Peterborough citizens doing what is right for returned citizens. Peterborough people have always been warm-hearted in such matters, and would undoubtedly meet the larger scheme in view eventually. In the meantime, temporary arrangements could be entered into.

A Government Job

Mr G. N. Gordon thought Captain Burnham's suggestion the best solution of the whole problem because a G.W.V.A. club should be on a pretentions scale, in keeping with the dignity of the demands, government built, and of lasting endurance. In the meantime, he enquired, what about now, until the government is in a position to decide so large and momentous a question? What is need is first class up-to-date temporary accommodation until the government can act in a national way.

Use the Armouries

Talking to the city's position, Ald Dobbin declared that it is going to take $135,000 to see it through all its patriotic calls, including the Patriotic Fund, British and Canadian Red Cross, Sailors' Relief Fund, and so forth. He considered that patriotic calls and all war demands should take precedence now, until after the war, and advised that the matter of a permanent club house be deferred indefinitely. A canvass for $40.000 now would prove disappointing. Get something comfortable and attractive for the present until a more pretentious scheme is forthcoming from the government. Why not use the armouries, and let the citizens furnish the recreation rooms or enlarged accommodation comfortably? Such a course should satisfy pressing needs for three or four years.

Nothing Unreasonable

Col. Miller was sure the Veterans expected nothing unreasonable and was equally sure that Peterborough will do its best for them until national action is in effect. We owe a debt to returned soldiers it is going to take us all our time to pay.

Willing to Defer

President Staunton explained the objects of a club for returned soldiers as before outlined, and said the association was quite willing to defer a campaign for permanent premises were they guaranteed that after the war monies now going to patriotic purposes were set aside for substantial headquarters.

Remember the Dead

Mr. J. W. Worth thought the war and its continuance should have precedence over all other calls. He fed in line with propositions for deferring definite action on the larger club scheme, and was anxious that some thought be given to those who had made the supreme sacrifice and to the welfare of their dependants.

Not to the Point

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley described the Chelsea Hospital in London, the Duke of York school for soldiers' orphans, and the inadequacy of provision for returned soldiers in Canada. He did not want a club house which would attract men away from their home and families.

Temporary Quarters

Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.P., was deeply interested in the War Veterans, and pledged his personal support of their needs. He, however, decidedly opined that the time is very inopportune to endeavor to collect $40,000 for a club and strongly advised the deferment of such a canvass in favor of temporary accommodation. He was quite convinced that after the war the permanent structure would be provided by a grateful community.

Fifty-Seventh Quarters

Ald. Dobbin here suggested that the government and military authorities permit the use by veterans of the large and comfortable 57th battalion quarters in the front of the armories, citizens to purchase the present furnishings.

Strong Opposition

This brought Lieut.-Col. Mills to his feet who characterized Ald. Dobbin's suggestion as absurd "there is not enough money in Peterborough" said the Colonel, "to buy out the officers' quarters of the 57th battalion for any other purpose than that for which they were created. He thought the veterans had upset the kettle when they asked for $40,000. It would cost $10,000 a year to properly maintain such headquarters. They should, he declared, have accepted any proposition like that of the Peterborough club. He strongly advised that waiting until after the war would mean a slim chance of getting anything at all, and contended that the armories' recreation rooms for temporary premises could be made quite suitable. In the meantime, the nucleus of a fund for permanent premises could be created by means of social concerts, entertainments, etc.

Big Club Some Day

Mr. B. F. Ackerman thought that some day large and commodious quarters would be imperative to take care of the nets. It is a large question, but he believed the city of Peterborough would leave no stone unturned to solve the problem. At present, however, that proposition should be deferred until after the war.

returned soldiers, who, amongst other things, must have a suitable home for their declining years, something like Chelsea Hospital in London, England, and the G.A.R. Home in the United States. "I am pleased to say," he said, "that the Government has no intention of shirking its duty in this respect. But there are at present great financial problems to be threshed out, and as soon as the government can see its way out of the difficulties in this regard you have the promise of provision for returned soldiers on a large, ample and national plan, and not one of a local nature. Such homes, however, will not be situated in cities, towns and villages, to meet the needs of those municipalities, but, as in England, America and France, they will be centrally located. As to Peterborough Veterans' local requirements, the question is what should be done, and when."

Women With Them.

Mrs. W. R. Morris said Capt. Burnham had reported the ladies' sentiments exactly. Peterborough's women's sympathies are with the returned soldiers, and there is no doubt that if this or any government did not do their duty by veterans, the latter in cooperation with the ladies could force their hands. The several women's societies, Mrs. Morris declared, consider it a large portion of their duty to see that returned soldiers want for nothing within reason, and were this matter of permanent and expensive headquarters deferred until a more opportune time, and temporary accommodation now agreed upon, she could assure the Vets that the larger scheme would be sure to materialize after the war; they could trust the women for that.

Time Not Opportune.

Mayor Duffus was in direct sympathy with the Veterans' position, and contended that everything in reason should be undertaken. However, the question is a large one, but the time for a canvass in its interests not opportune. He thought the better policy would be to defer action on any such proposition as the $40,000 one advocated, and in the meantime furnish adequate temporary headquarters until after the war.

SIR JOSEPH HAS TOLD HIS STORY

SAYS HE HAS NO REGRETS IN CONNECTION WITH BUSINESS CAREER.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—Emphatic denial of any attempt on the part of the William Davies Company to benefit by combination or relation in any way wtih other combinations were made by Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart when, in giving evidence at the cold storage investigation, he said:

"Twenty-five years ago I came into the William Davies Company. I found it an old-fashioned business, in which integrity and good conduct were paramount. I have lived in that business for twenty-five years. I believe the standards that we found when we took over the business have been maintained. I know of no transaction, during those twenty-five years that, under the most searching examination to get the truth of the transaction I would have the least embarrassment in answering any questions that might be asked me.

"We have sought to secure accurate knowledge of administration. We have never sought any advantage of combination or association with others, by combination with others, by attempting to control by reason of having any relation with either corporations. We have tried to do our business well; we though we had won the confidence of the great body of the community. I think we deserved it, and I would personally like to bear tribute to the body of officers of the company. I have grown up in it, and I believe have decently and faithfully carried out the spirit that was passed on to them by the original William Davies Company when they came into occupation of the works of that company. That is all, Sir."

COUNCIL FIX THE PRICE OF COAL

FUEL CONTROLLER SAYS ALL HE CAN DO IS TO LIMIT PROFITS.

Toronto, Otc. 23.—The deputation from the Earlscourt Business Men's Association, which went to Ottawa with the avowed intention of inducing the Fuel Controller to fix the price of coal in Canada, met with disappointment. While undertaking to prevent all profiteering in the handling of coal, the Controller made it very clear that he could not fix the price to the consumer.

In replying to the deputation Mr. Magrath stated that many of the suggestions made would be of value to his department in dealing with the situation. On the other hand, however, he could not fix the price of coal to the consumer, even if he thought such a course advisable, as he had not the power. All he could do was to limit the profit to dealers at 50 cents, and to brokers at 30 cents per ton.

Ring of Doorbell Frightened Her

MRS. PITMAN WAS SO NERVOUS SHE WALKED FLOOR NIGHTS FOR HOURS.

"I was actually on the verge of a nervous breakdown when I started on Tanlac, and it has not only restored my health, but has added ten pounds to my weight," declared Mrs. John Pitman, wife of an employe of the Hobbs Manufacturing Co., Ltd., and living at 143 Bruce street, London, the other day.

"My health began to fail seven years ago," she continued, "and I suffered terribly from nervous indigestion. For over a year I could hardly retain anything I ate, and most of the time lived on a diet of malted milk and eggs; anything else nauseated me so I couldn't keep it down, and I was slowly starving to death. My nerves were in such a wretched state that whenever the doorbell rang it frightened me so I had it removed, and many a night I was so unstrung that I would walk the floor till my feet ached. I got worse in spite of everything, and became too weak to do a thing about the house, and I got to the point where I didn't know which way to turn.

"By the time I had used up half my first bottle of Tanlac, I felt so much better that I threw away all the other medicines I had in the house. I have stuck to Tanlac ever since, and my appetite has improved so I can eat most anything I want—meats and pastry and all sorts of things I had to shun, and I am taking on flesh right along. My nerves are quiet again, I sleep like a baby, and get up in the mornings fresh and strong and able to do all my housework. I am feeling better than I have in years, and am so grateful for what Tanlac has done for me that I feel it my duty to tell everybody about it."

BOMBARDIER BRECKENBRIDGE OF ASPHODEL IS HOME AGAIN

On Friday evening the Town Hall at Westwood was filled with the residents of the Township of Asphodel and surrounding country for the purpose of welcoming home Bombardier Charles Breckenridge, son of Mr. Matthew Breckenridge and grandson of Squire Breckenridge of Westwood.

A splendid program of music was rendered and an address was read to Bombardier Breckenridge, and he was also presented with a gold watch suitably engraved. Addresses were delivered by the chairman, Col. Birdsall, and by the Rev. Mr. Cooke, Rev. Mr. Thompson and by Col. J. W. Miller and F. D. Kerr of Peterborough.

As usual the patriotic ladies of Westwood were to the forefront with splendid refreshments, for the speakers and for those taking part in the program in connection with the reception.

It will be remembered that Bombardier Breckenridge had both legs broken in action, and after being in hospital for over a year is now home slowly recovering from his very severe injuries.

The returned soldier is a brother of Signaller Max Breckenridge, who was killed last spring while on active service.

PENSIONS TO VETERANS RAISED BY 40 PER CENT

Government Makes Generous Provisions for Men Who Have Been Disabled in Their Country's Service

The new pension scale, as announced by Sir Thomas White, minister of finance, includes the following provisions:

Every man up to and including the rank of sub-lieutenant in the navy and lieutenant in the army is to receive an increase.

The increase will amount to about 40 per cent.

The new pension scale will date from April 1st, 1917, and all now receiving the pension will be entitled to an extra cheque making up the difference.

The country is now paying $5,000,000 for pensions. Under the new scale the yearly expenditure will be $7,000,000.

The married pensioner who is disabled will receive an extra allowance. At present he receives only the amount paid a single man.

Allowances for Children

With regard to the children of a disabled pensioner a very definite change has been adopted. Under the pension regulations, as approvel last year, only those receiving a pension for a disability of sixty per cent. or more were entitled to allowances on account of their children. Again, no distinction was drawn as between the allowance for the children of those sixty per cent. disabled and those totally disabled. For instance a man fifty-five per cent. disabled, with four children, received $16 per month pension for himself, but nothing for his children; the man sixty per cent. disabled, with four children, received $24 per month for himself and $24 per month for his children; and the man totally disabled, with four children, received $40 per month for himself and $24 per month for his children. The allowances for the children of disabled men have, therefore, been graded down in accordance with the disability. The totally disabled man will be entitled to $8 per month for each of his children; the man disabled eighty per cent. will be entitled to $7; the man disabled sixty per cent. will be entitled to $6 and the man disabled fifty-five per cent. will be entitled to $5.50, and so on in descending amounts, so that the man disabled five per cent. will be entitled to fifty cents per month for each of his children. The totally disabled private will thus receive an additional increase of thirty-three and one-third per cent. in the allowance payable for his children. The percentage of increase on account of the children will be less as the disability decreases to sixty per cent. Below sixty per cent the disabled man will now be entitled to allowances for children, although under the previous regulations he was not entitled to any such allowance.

If the widow is drawing allowances on account of the children she will be entitled to a flat increase in their allowance of thirty-three and one third per cent. For instance, a private's widow with four children will receive $40 per month for herself and $32 per month for her children instead of $32 per month for herself and $24 per month for her children.

A flat increase of thirty-three and one-third per cent. has been made in the allowance for orphan children. They will receive $16 per month each instead of $12 per month each.

For Dependent Parent

Up to the present time the allowance to a dependent parent has been $24 per month, that is to say, $8 per month less than the pension of the widow. The amendment made authorizes the same pension for the dependent parent as that authorized for the widow. Instead of $24 per month the dependent parent will now receive $40 per month, being a flat increase of sixty-six and two thirds per cent.

Dependent brothers and sisters were not previously provided for in the pension regulations. A very large number of cases came up, however, in which the eldest boy of a family had been supporting his mother and his younger brothers and sisters, and continued to support them until he died on service. With regard to his younger brothers and sisters he might almost have been said to have taken the place of a father in their respect. The amendment provides, therefore, that for dependent brothers and sisters under the ages of sixteen or seventeen years the same allowances shall be provided as are provided for children. Thus, a younger brother who has been dependent on a private will receive $8 per month if one of his parents is alive and $16 per month if both of his parents are dead.

Directions for Employers

Who Purpose Claiming Exemption for Class One Men in Their Employ

THE following course is recommended for employers who have in their employ any number of men—bachelors and widowers without children (not otherwise excepted) who were 20 years old on the 13th October, 1917, and whose 34th birthday did not occur before Jan. 1st, 1917, and who propose claiming exemption for any of these men, to continue in work which is deemed to be in the National interest:

First, it will simplify matters for you and for the exemption tribunals if you instruct Class One men in your employ to go up for medical examination at the nearest Medical Board Centre.

Only Class One men, who upon medical examination are placed in Category A are liable for immediate service under the Act. Class One men placed in Categories B, C or E satisfy immediate requirements if they attach their medical report to their claim for exemption.

Employer's Statement and Schedule

Second, prepare a full statement of the total number of your employees grouping them according to their respective occupations and qualifications and stating the number in each group. Indicate the possibility or otherwise of replacing the labour of Class One men with the labour of those unavailable for military service, or outside the statutory class called up; the extent to which the withdrawal of men in the statutory class would affect the business, the reason for considering that the carrying on of the business is in the National interest, and such other facts and circumstances as may appear to be relevant.

Append to this general statement and classification, a schedule of the names, ages and occupations of all men in Class One, indicating as to those who have been medically examined, the medical Category in which they have been placed, noting against each name whether or not you propose to claim exemption on behalf of the man.

Where exemption is claimed employer should state his opinion whether such exemption should be conditional on the man's continuing to follow his present occupation and whether it would suffice if exemption were granted for one, two or more months, as the case may be.

A copy of both statement and schedule should be prepared for each man for whom the employer is applying for exemption.

Forms for Exemption

These forms may be obtained on request from any Post Master, who will transmit the forms when filled in, to the Registrar.

Claims for exemption must be made not later than November 10th.

CANNED CHICKEN

Clean and draw the chickens as usual. Peel all the raw meat off the bones. Pack the bones in a pot, cover with water, add a tiny bit of whole mace, 1 clove and 2 allspice berries, for each chicken, and boil gently 5 or 6 hours. Wash and scald wide-mouth fruit jars. Spread the raw chicken out, sprinkle it lightly with salt and pepper, and pack it into the jars. Lay the covers on without rings or rubbers. Steam 2 hours and set aside till next day. When the bones—stock is cooked, strain it off. The following day, remove the fat from the top, melt the jellied stock and use it to fill up the jars. Put on the rubbers and tops, and screw the rings partly down. Steam for one hour longer and screw the rings down tightly.

REPORT OF FARM CONDITIONS

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Threshing is active and the results continue to show good average yields for most of the grain crops. The Kenora Representative claims an average of 50 bus. per acre for oats, and instances one field that yielded 80 bus. per acre.

Beans and late buckwheat have been more or less injured by frost. Considerable husking corn also got nipped, and will be unfit for seed, although good enough for feed, while from the same cause the general quality of ensilage will also be inferior compared with that of more recent years. Rain has been delaying corn cutting.

Most of the fall wheat will enter the winter with a good top, but some has been sown rather late, and there has been but little October growth.

A Fair Crop

Potatoes on the whole will be a fair to good crop both as to yield and quality should rot not develop. They have done remarkably well in the Fort William and some other districts of Northern Ontario. The Durham County Representative states that this season has proved to the satisfaction of many farmers that spraying with Bordeaux mixture will control the potato blight.

Some mangels, turnips and sugar beets have been pulled, and are generally turning out most satisfactory, although a number of turnip fields in Bruce, Oxford and Durham were reported to be injured by the Zebra caterpillar.

Tobacco in Essex has been all harvested and mostly sold at 18½c a pound for the Burley variety.

Helped by Rains

Pastures have been somewhat helped by recent rains, although the week was rather too cold for much growth. Young clover looks well.

Tomatoes have been late in ripening and a larger quality of green ones than usual had to be picked to escape the frost.

The onion crop, which is growing in importance in some of the western countries, has been pulled. At Leamington they have been selling at $2.30 a bag, f.o.b.

Live Stock

Market prices for live stock have remained firm except in the case of horses. Some farmers have disposed of their finished cattle, and are purchasing feeders to turn off for the market later on, as there are plenty of coarse fodders on hand, although silage corn is not as well cobbed as usual. Already a number of enquiries are being made with a view to taking advantage of the Federal Department's offer of free freight for breeding stock.

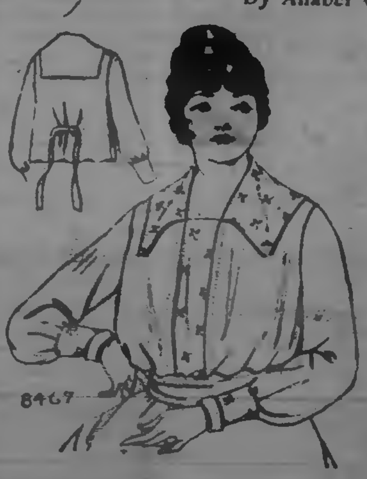
Live stock will be left on pasture for a few weeks yet should the weather not prove too cold. The milk flow, while decreasing is up to the average for the time of year. However, in Peel some farmers are selling dairy cows on account of the scarcity of labor and the price of milk being too low to net a profit.

Labor

One representative states that farmers never before worked together in exchanging labor as they have done this year. There is scarcity of help for the fall ploughing, silo filling and threshing now demanding attention, and broken weather during the week has been adding to the strain. The recent rains have made ploughing easier on heavy clays, although some soils are yet very stiff. Middlesex reports that some farmers are buying tractors for silo filling, ploughing, and other purposes.

LADY'S SHIRTWAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.



A splendid suggestion for using remnants of white goods—for instance, voile and a bit of allover embroidery—is presented in No. 8467. Just to make the design vary a little from the usual type of shirt waist, it is given a narrow inset vest which forms a square neck at the upper edge. The collar of eyelet embroidery ends at the vest and is cut square at the back, with a slight roll at the neck. Bishop sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs of the embroidery, the lower edges finished with or without the narrow turn over.

The lady's shirt waist pattern, No. 8467, is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. As on the figure, the 36 inch size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

POTATO CROP OF N.F. IS VERY BIG

AS MUCH AGAIN PER HEAD THIS YEAR AS IS ORDINARILY CONSUMED — PRICES.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.— Newfoundland's potato crop will exceed 2,500,000 bushels, according to a report received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from W. B. Nicholson, Canadian Trade Commissioner in St. John's. This, Mr. Nicholson writes, is equal to a supply per head per year of as much again as is ordinarily consumed.

Reports received by the Food Controller show that potato growers in the Annapolis Valley are receiving $1.75 per 90-pound bag, and Eastern Nova Scotia, $1.35. Shipments of seed potatoes are being made from Nova Scotia to the West Indies. Growers in Prince Edward Island are receiving $1.13 per 90 pounds in bulk.

TAKES OVER SHOE PLANTS

Paris, Oct. 23.— A Ministerial decree requisitioning all the shoe factories in France, effective Nov. 15th, is supposed by the shoe trade to be intended to overcome the disinclination of the manufacturers to make the new national shoe.

One hundred New York High school boys went on strike against longer hours yesterday. Following a demonstration the police arrested thirty-three.

SOME FREAK PLAYS IN GOLF

Usually it is the more or less unknown golfer who makes the freak and encounters the unexpected and curious situations that turn up every now and then on the links, but once in a while the real star is the hero of such an episode. I came across a description of one of the freakiest of freak shots the other day, and the golfer involved was none other than Harold H. Hilton, who has won the British amateur championship so many times that I have lost count, and also has to his credit victories in the British open and amateur championships. I will let the Hoylake golfer tell his story in his own words:

"I may say that I hold one unique record in connection with the game, in that I holed out from a distance of about twenty yards or so without even touching the ball with a club or even attempted to touch it. The incident happened at Llandudno many years ago, and the occasion was a medal round. I forget the exact number of the hole we were playing, but it was about the twelfth. I had hit my tee shot, and before playing my second an iron shot—I had perforce to watch the players in front approach the hole. One of them (a local habitue who knew every inch of the course) played quite a short approach boldly past the hole up a steep turf bank beyond and after the ball had finished rolling back he had merely to walk up and tap it into the hole.

In Rabbit Hole.

"Oh! oh! I said to myself, so that is the way to approach this hole. And I also boldly played my second beyond the hole, but to my consternation it never came down again. I walked up in wonderment to find out what had happened. The reason was a simple one. A rabbit had decided to commence some sort of delving operation at this spot. He had not proceeded far in his task, but just sufficiently to clear a space which would hold my ball. The natural result—just a little strong language and raillery at fate.

"The local rule demanded that the ball should be dropped behind the rabbit scrape under penalty of one stroke. So I dropped the ball, quickly jumped astride to allow it to pass between my legs and watched results. Slowly the ball wended its way down the hill. First steering to the left, and then tacking to the right, until eventually it acted just as if it had seen the hole and wanted to get there. It swung around in a delightful semi-circle, and the back of the hole finally arrested its progress.

What to Score?

"The face of my partner exhibited an admixture of wonderment and perplexity. Having slowly taken my card from out his pocket he then remarked: 'What am I to mark down?' I promptly replied, 'Why, three, of course.' In a tone of remonstrance he answered: 'But you can't hole a drop.' 'Can't I?' said I, 'but I have done it, and the full total is two strokes played and one penalty unfortunately occurred, making three in all.' Eventually I persuaded him to put down the figure three. But he did so with the air of a man who knew he was doing wrong.

"Fortunately, perhaps, the incident made not the slightest difference on the result, but there was a wealth of discussion on the point, and in considering that the ball should be counted as holed out in three I found myself in a minority, the main argument being that the ball must be holed out by a stroke with the club; and they quoted all manner of rules as having a bearing on this point. But no one could supply me with any proper mode of procedure which I should have adopted, though some seemed to consider that I should have taken the ball and placed it behind the rabbit scrape in such a position that it remained stationary."

BASKET BALL AT "Y" LAST NIGHT

TWO FAST AND EXCITING CONTESTS PUT ON—OFFICERS ELECTED.

Two exciting and fast games of basketball were played at the Y. M. C. A. last night. It was the forerunner of a successful season, as the spirit of the boys was shown in the contests.

The first game ended in a victory for "White's Reos" over "Brown's Packards" with the score of 14 to 8.

The second game though not as snappy ended in a score of 11 to 8 with the favor for "McLeod's Fords" over "Tudhope's Cadallics."

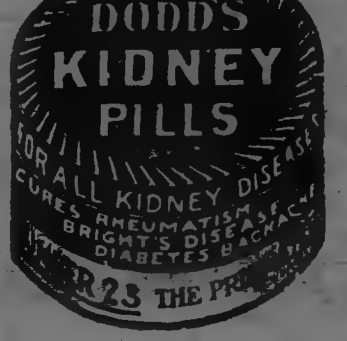
The first meeting of the Life Club was held in a form of an organization meeting. The following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres., Mr. Roper; president, A. McLeod; vice pres., H. Tudhope; sec. treas., J. White; topic com., A McLeod, G. Lamb, C. Feinberg; social com., H. Tudhope, R. Brown, Ken. Copping.

Lindsay Fortune Teller Took Hint

A fortune teller who had been operating in Lindsay the past couple of weeks, has taken a hint from the chief of police and shaken the dust of Lindsay from off her feet. She hailed from Buffalo, had been applying her vocation on Peel street, and reports state she did a lively business with the local "easy marks," both male and female.

Chief Short received a hint of the woman's operations, and called on her Saturday afternoon. She expressed surprise when the Chief informed her that she was violating the law and was subject to a heavy fine. She was given until five o'clock to get out of Lindsay, and when the Chief went back to the house in the evening he found that she had departed.



Famous Boxers Train Soldiers for Service in United States Army

When boxing was declared by Gov. Whitman of New York State to be a demoralizing and useless sport, the prophetic vision of the executive quite clearly did not extend to the military training camps that have sprung up all over the United States. Possibly the governor was not alone as to lack of advance information regarding the important part boxing was to play in fitting our soldiers for the serious work at the front, but now that the facts are public property it would appear that those responsible for the removal of the state control of the sport should restore it with all possible celerity.

Action in that direction on the part of the legislature is due, not only for the maintenance of the sport under proper control, but also because of the patriotic attitude of nearly all the leading boxers of America, who are giving their time, experience and skill to the teaching of the science of self-defence to the boys who will fight the great battle for democracy.

Many expert boxers are now actively engaged in the training camps and others are volunteering daily to give their services.

Battling Levinsky, the light heavyweight champion of America, has gone to Camp Devens at Ayer, Mass., and has been training the soldiers for some time past.

Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion of America, is at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, and has started to teach the 30,000 men there some of the fine points of boxing. Kilbane was the first man selected by the commission in charge of training camp activities to teach boxing to the soldiers.

Mike Gibbons, the cleverest man in the middleweight division, and who could handily win the title if he got the chance, has gone to Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Ia., and it goes without saying that the soldiers in that camp will be well taught.

Benny Leonard, the world's lightweight champion, has been notified by the war department that he has been selected to teach at a camp, probably Yaphank, and he replied he would be ready for the work as soon as he received orders.

Johnny Dundee also has been asked to become an instructor and has accepted.

Joe Welling, one of the ablest contenders for the lightweight title, has joined the navy and will impart his skill to his fellow-seamen. Joe Cox, a heavyweight, is also in the navy.

Bladek Zbyszko, one of the greatest wrestlers in the world, has enlisted, and is at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., teaching the soldiers some of the fine points of grappling.

Pete Herman, the bantam champion of the world, is slated for service Nov. 15, and will defend his title once before joining the colors.

Earl Caddock, also a great wrestler, and contender for the championship, has been accepted by Uncle Sam.

It does not follow that these great boxers and wrestlers will be at liberty to give lessons at intervals and spend the remainder of their time in public contests. In fact, the understanding is that they will devote nearly all their time to teaching the soldiers, and their appearances in public will be few and far between.

It cannot be denied that the boxers who thus give their services in order to fit our soldiers for the great struggle are doing a great work for the country. If the soldiers are not physically fitted for the work before them they would not be effective in the trenches. Therefore, if the boys in khaki are in condition to fight skilfully and scientifically, their teachers will be entitled to much credit. Unquestionably the boxers will well deserve the restoration to state control of a sport that is doing so much in the interest of Uncle Sam's fighters.

Highland Hunting In New Ontario

Probably the best hunting districts in America are located in the Highlands of Ontario, and that section of the Province recently opened up by the new Transcontinental Railway stretching for a distance of 750 miles from the western boundary of Quebec to the Manitoba boundary. This immense virgin area offers unlimited opportunities to the hunter for moose and deer. The open season for the Highlands of Ontario district is from November 1st to November 15th, both days inclusive, with an extension to November 30th in some of the northern districts, including Timagami. The open season in the new area north of the Transcontinental is from October 10th to November 30th. Ask any agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System for full particulars. A synopsis of the game laws is contained in "Playgrounds," sent free on application.

No One Offers to Build a Dam

SIR ROBERT BORDEN SETS AT REST UNEASINESS OF HYDRO FRIENDS.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—Sir Robert Borden has telegraphed to Mr. T. J. Hannigan, secretary of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, stating that so far no application has been officially presented to the Department of Public Works for permission to construct a dam in the St. Lawrence River. The telegram continues:

"I am advised that —— in case it is so presented some time will have to elapse before the stage could be reached where a hearing would be appropriate. In any case you may rest assured that at the proper time a hearing will be accorded by the department to all parties interested."

The telegram was in reply to one sent by Mr. Hannigan asking if such an application had been made, and asking for an appointment. Mr Hannigan has written Mayor Church explaining the situation and stating that he is taking the matter up with Sir Adam Beck so as to decide what action should be taken by the association.

MORE PENSION MONEY FOR VETS.

GOV'T WILL INCREASE ALLOWANCE 25 PER CENT. AT ONCE.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 23.—An order-in-council has been prepared and will be considered by the privy-council, dealing with the question of pensions. It is rumored that the order provides for a straight increase of twenty-five per cent., although nothing official will be announced until today when Sir Thomas White, who is the Minister in charge of pensions, will make a statement. Sir Thomas is in Toronto in connection with the Victory Loan. This increase will be temporary pending a complete readjustment and reconsideration of the whole question of pensions next session of Parliament. However, in view of the increased cost of living, it was felt there should be a general all-round increase at once.

A CORDIAL, kindly manner and a cheerful, smiling voice—everywhere people are awakening to the value of these in telephoning.

Not that anyone ever meant to be rude or discourteous. Many of us were just thoughtless, forgetting how sensitive the telephone is, reflecting our every mood.

And in addition to telephone courtesy, it is very helpful to speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece of the telephone, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

And then, of course, we should always make sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling.

Good Program At S. A. Concert

GIFTS FOR MEN IN TRENCHES BROUGHT BY THOSE IN ATTENDANCE.

The concert at the S. A. Temple last evening was well patronized and appreciated if applause counts for anything. The Songster Brigade excelled itself. The orchestra did well as did the individual performers.

The donation of chocolates, gum, handkerchiefs, trench candles and soap was very generous. An offering in cash was taken, from those who brought nothing else and was generous also.

The Home League are well pleased and are very gratifying to all who took part and helped to make the evening a success.

Brother and Sister Overcome by Coal Gas

Mr. Samuel Fanning and his sister were found in their home on London street, this noon, overcome by coal gas. A next door neighbor, Mrs. Bickle, having seen nothing of Miss Fanning all morning had her suspicions aroused, and entered the house at noon, only to find the couple in bed in an alarming condition. She at once phoned for medical assistance, and the sufferers were removed to Nicholls Hospital, where they are progressing favorably.

400 DELEGATES EXPECTED

Every local Sunday school and church worker is interested in the annual meeting of the Ontario Sunday School Association which will be held in this city October 30, 31 and November 1.

When the Convention was first instituted the entire province assembled at one place, but the work has grown so it would be almost impossible to visit any of the smaller cities and find accommodation with the result the province has been divided into Western and Eastern parts. The Western division is meeting in Kitchener this week, while the Eastern, including Toronto will meet in Peterboro on the dates specified.

The citizens are asked to provide for 400 delegates on the Harvard plan, namely, providing bed and breakfast for three days. Dinner and supper will be provided at some central point at a nominal charge. The program promises to be good, as a number of prominent speakers will be present, together with heads of Departments of the various branches of Sunday School work. The Music will be led by Prof. Excell, which in itself is sufficient to guarantee bright, hearty singing. The George St. Methodist Church has been chosen as the Convention Church, while St. Pauls, Murray St. Baptist, St. Johns, and Bethany Tabernacle will be used as auxiliary churches for department meetings. The work of convention has been divided among various committees who are giving every attention to details, so that when delegates begin to arrive everything will work smoothly and effectively.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF HOUND

WAS STOLEN THREE YEARS AGO, AND MAN ACCUSED OF ITS THEFT ARRESTED SATURDAY

Frank Londo is facing in the police court a charge of having stolen a hunting hound from Mr. C. Lech, this city, valued at $100. The dog disappeared in September, 1914, and was located by Detectives Newhall and Meaghre in Apsley October 15th the same year. Always alleging that the dog was taken by Longo, the police could not lay hands on him until three days ago, when he was arrested near Blackwater Junction, accused asserted that the animal was given him by another man. The case was remanded this morning until Monday next.

Mr. Lech says that the hound was the best ever used by the Ketchecum Hunt Club.

DIRECT ANSWER TO HIS PRAYER

RELIGIOUS WORKER IN TORONTO TELLS OF SOME SURPRISING EXPERIENCES.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—In presenting the annual report of the work of the Missionary Rest Home at the Bible Training College last night, A. W. Roffe, the Superintendent, gave some remarkable instances of direct answers to prayers.

"Some time ago," he said, "we needed coal at the home. We only had $3 in the exchequer at the time, but we ordered a load of coal and prayed God to send the money. A few days afterward we received a cheque from New York for $250, the donor stating that this was to be used for coal if we required it. The gentleman who sent the cheque did not know anything about our predicament or our prayers for coal."

"Recently we prayed for the money to purchase storm windows," he continued, "and very shortly afterward a lady, observing that the home was without storm windows, sent a cheque to be devoted to that purpose. They felt they needed a cooking range in the home, so special prayer was offered for that. A few days later a very handsome electric range was donated the donor knowing nothing about the prayers for the stove."

Rev. Dr. W. H. Hincks spoke on "The Place of Prayer and the Supernatural." He showed how the human element alone was an utter failure in facing such a crisis as that which the home had just passed through, or any important problems of life. Alone, the supernatural, too, was a failure. It was the blending of the human element with the supernatural that accomplished things. Fanaticism on the one hand and Rationalism on the other were to be avoided.

BRITISH RED CROSS ASKS HELP

LOCAL BAKER ADJUDGED NOT AT FAULT FOR BREAD BEING FOUND UNDERWEIGHT

The Machine Which Divides Bread Out of Order at Time in Question — Some Loaves Were Over-Weight.

A local baker was charged in the police court this morning with making or offering for sale short weight bread. He pleaded not guilty.

Police Sergt. Reid, bread inspector testified that on Monday last and at Nelson Routley's grocery store, corner Park and Brock streets he found five large loaves from one ounce up to 3 1-2 ounces under the three statutary pounds. One loaf was 3 1-2 ounces short, the other four were from one to two ounces under weight.

To his worship, witness replied that he did not weigh each loaf separately and his worship said he should have done so.

Constable Reid—"I don't know when the bread was made, but it was fresh. Routley informed me it was defendant's make. Constable Blade and the two Messrs Routley were present at the weighing. Three large loaves of another make were all of full weight.

More At Puttick's

Witness said he found in Mr. Puttick's store, corner McDonnel and Park, five large loaves of defendant's bread. He weighed them separately and each loaf was from one to two

TO UNITE ON A CANDIDATE

The following official statement has been issued from Ottawa:

"The formation of a Union or National Government has changed the political situation throughout Canada, and in many constituencies two or more candidates, Conservative, Liberal, or Labor, may desire to run and be recognized as Union Government candidates. Under the military voters act it is the duty of the Prime Minister to designate a candidate in each riding as the Government candidate, who thereby may receive the benefit of the soldiers' votes which are given, not for a particular candidate, but for the Government. It is the earnest desire of the Government that in each constituency the supporters of Union Government, whether Conservative, Liberal, Labor, or Independent, should confer together and see if they cannot agree upon a candidate who will be acceptable to and who may be designated by the Prime Minister as the Government candidate for the purposes of the soldiers vote under the military voters act."

NICHOLAS' FATE TO BE DECIDED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Oct. 25.—The Russian preliminary Parliament, according to the newspapers, shortly will discuss the fate of the Romanoff family, now imprisoned near Tobolsk, Siberia. Particular attention will be paid to the question of the eventual banishment abroad of the former Emperor and his immediate relatives.

POLICE FORCE GET SLACKERS

SIX HUNDRED ARE CAUGHT BY OFFICERS IN ROUNDUP IN CHICAGO.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Thirty men out of a total of six hundred taken last night by the police and federal agents as slackers are being held today for further investigation by the federal authorities. The remainder of the six hundred were released after an inquisition lasting nearly all night.

Plans for the round up were made several days ago following a conference between the federal authorities and the officials of the exemption board district No. 44. Six hundred and eighteen registered men in that district failed to respond to call for examination.

ONLY NINE EXAMINED AT ARMORIES LAST NIGHT

Day's Work Was Heavy, However, Fifty-One Men Securing Medical Certificates—New Orders From the Department Expected Any Day.

The pressure at the armories relaxed by ten applicants yesterday, there being examined fifty-one men as against sixty-one the day previous. The weather undoubtedly accounted for this, particularly affecting last night's session, when the doctors got off with nine examinations, the lowest record but one. Yesterday's grading resulted as follows: A 32, B 4, C 2, E 13.

15 A's Yesterday Afternoon.

Twenty-one applicants for medical examination learned their fate yesterday afternoon, when four were recorded unfit, two for home duty and fifteen for service in the trenches.

5 A's Last Night.

Last night only nine men weathered the rain storm to consult the doctors, and they were classed as follows: Category A 5, Category B 1, Category E 3. This means one third "unfits."

Continue For Some Time.

Drs. Cameron, Greer and Eastwood are looking forward to a continuance of examinations until the end of the year. Dr. Cameron expressed himself last evening as what with his own private practice and the armories duties, being pretty hard worked. They certainly find no leisure in their military quarters. It is expected that within a few days some new orders bearing on the situation will be issued by the department.

Fines and Imprisonment.

The Military Service Council at Ottawa has issued new regulations governing exemption tribunals, and there are 97 different clauses. Following are in brief the offences cited and penalties provided therefor:

A fine of not more than $200 or less than $25, and imprisonment for not more than three months for refusing or neglecting to attend for medical examination when required by local or appeal tribunals. A tribunal may issue a warrant for the apprehension of any man and compel him to undergo medical examination.

Imprisonment For Bribery.

Bribing or attempting to bribe any member of a tribunal, medical board, registrar or any person concerned in the administration of the act—imprisonment for not more then five years," and not less than one year. No fine.

Employer stipulating or offering to stipulate with an employe for reduction of wages in consideration of employer exerting right, or refraining from exercising right to claim exemption for employ — fine not less than one hundred dollars, and not more than one thousand dollars and (or) imprisonment not to exceed six months.

Employment of men called out who, after expiry of time limit set by proclamation, have neither reported nor claimed exemption— fine not less than fifty and not more than five hundred dollars.

75 Rush for Examination.

With the opening of the Armories this morning at 10 o'clock no less than seventy-five farmers and farmers' sons presented themselves for medical examination. Sergeant Copcock selected thirty-five, and deferred examination of the remainder until other sessions. But two grades of men were to hand, A's and E's. Twenty-three were examined and were graded as follows: A category, 17; E category, 6.

CITY TEACHERS ARE IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Large Attendance This Morning at an Interest-Retaining Session.

ADDRESSES ON LIVE QUESTIONS

Lecture Tonight in Collegiate Institute on "The British Empire."

The city teachers are meeting in annual convention at the Public Library today and tomorrow. This morning they met in the lecture room at 9.30 o'clock, all teachers being present.

Helpful Papers.

The roll call showed a full attendance. After the usual business was finished two papers were given.

Miss L. C. Caldwell in a very interesting and profitable paper on, "Nature Study in City Elementary Schools," showed that this important branch of study was undoubtedly entitled to a place on the school curriculum; and that teachers, when they realize its full value in the after life of pupils, will rise more adequately to the presentation of it. The suggestions along methodical lines were unusually good, also the exhibit of actual work in nature study.

Miss H. Moffatt, B.A., in a clever and forceful address, "The Place of Household Science in the Elementary School Curriculum," showed that the home in many cases was not rising to its responsibilities. Since the prosperity of the home governs the rise and fall of nations, too much emphasis cannot be given to fit girls for the two great problems of the home—cleaning and cooking. If these two basic principles of home life are lacking, no better place can it be made right than in the youth of today through the medium of the school. By raising its standard of homes through the study of household science the benefits are both economic and patriotic.

W. A. O'ROURKE IS AWARDED MEDAL FOR SAVING LIFE

Capt. Burnham Secures Reward for Modest Hero of Seven Rescues From Drowning—Premier Asked to Make Presentation.

William A. O'Rourke, who about five years ago was engaged as a printer in The Review office and since that time has been employed in Ottawa, has been awarded a medal by the Royal Humane Society for saving from drowning John E. Crough, of Ennismore, who almost lost his life in Chemong Lake, in August, 1916. There is an interesting story connected with the career of Mr. O'Rourke, a story of effort without any thought of reward, and a recognition of these services even though he would have preferred to have them passed without notice.

Mr. O'Rourke is a deaf mute Last summer the Ottawa Government was asked to send a delegate to the international convention of mutes at Saranac Lake, New York, and Mr. O'Rourke was selected. While at the convention he saved the lives of two ladies who got beyond their depth while bathing in Saranac Lake. On his return to Ottawa he happened to mention the circumstance to Capt. Burnham. It transpired on furher investigation that Mr. O'Rourke had at different times saved seven persons from drowning, in nearly every case at the eminent risk of his own life. When he was told that he was deserving of a life saving medal he declared that he had done nothing more than his duty and deserved no special recognition.

Capt. Burnham took the matter up with the officers of the Royal Humane Society. These officials regarded the case as something out of the ordinary, not only because of the number of rescues but from the fact that the hero was intent on escaping notice. On this account they followed up the matter without any cooperation on the part of Mr. O'Rourke.

Capt. Burnham received the medal this morning with a request that he arrange for its presentation. It is a beautiful bronze medal, the highest honor that is awarded by the society. It is inscribed as follows:

> Awarded to William A. O'Rourke for rescue of John E. Crough, Chemong Lake, Ont., Aug. 16."

Presented by Premier.

Capt. Burnham has sent the letter from the society, together with the medal to Sir Robert Borden, with the following communication:

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 25, 1917.
The Prime Minister of Canada.
Sir,—

I have received the enclosed medal and letter from the Royal Humane Society of Hamilton. O'Rourke, the winner is employed in the Printing Bureau at Ottawa. He positively refused to furnish evidence for a medal on the ground that he had simply done his duty, therefore you will agree, I am sure, that he is all the more entitled to the most distinguished consideration.

I would therefore respectfully ask you, Sir Robert, to send to the Printing Bureau for William O'Rourke and present him with this medal. He has saved seven lives.

I have the honor to remain, Sir,
Yours truly,
(Sgnd.) J. H. BURNHAM.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH

His Majesty the King, the British Parliament and people have sent out an urgent call to Canada for assistance to the British Red Cross. The need is greater, the demand more insistent, than ever before. Toronto has just given $850,000, and other cities in propotion. Our own City Council has wisely and generously granted $5,000 as a start. Last year a similar grant was supplemented by private subscriptions to nearly $9,000.

This year I am asked to urge our good people to make it at least $10,000. Shall we do so? We can if we will. No personal canvass will be made, but private contributions are urgently asked for. Please send them in to Mr. Peter Campbell, treasurer of the local fund. All subscriptions will be by him acknowledged personally and also through the local press.

E. C. S. HUYCKE,
Chairman Local Committee,

LOCAL MAN IN HOSPITAL BOMBED BY THE GERMANS

Pte Bert Jones Writes Home Telling how Eleven Patients in His Ward were Wounded.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jones, 650 Concession street, have received an interesting letter from their son, Pte. Bert Jones, who enlisted in Brockville and went overseas with the 59th Battalion and who has been at the front for over a year. Pte. Jones was recently confined in a hospital that was bombed by the Huns. His letter says:

Royal Berks Hospital,
England, Oct. 2, 1917.

Dear Father and Mother,—

I did not write the usual letter on Sunday as I was leaving France for England and arrived at 2 a.m. this morning. The trip over the Channel was beautiful, but the rest was slow and tiresome, however I arrived all O.K., which is the main thing.

I stated in my last letter that I hadn't heard from Walker, but a few days ago I received a letter from him telling me he had been on pass. Of course that explains it. I was pleased to hear of it, too, for he fully deserved a few days rest. Eighteen months without a break is too much at anything, and I think he had a good time which would do him good.

Well, this is my first experience in hospitals. While I was in France I was in an American Hospital, at least one they took over about four months ago. There were some fine doctors there. Some don't speak well of it, but I found it all right. It is very different here to the free and easy American style. However, I won't be here long, I don't think. Where I will go next I don't know, but my address for the present will be—

Waiting Hall, Ward,
Royal Berks Hospital,
Reding, England.

Till you hear differently my mail will follow. If I ever stay long enough in one place it may catch up. I would have some money sent if I knew where to have it sent to, so if ever I send a telegram asking for money don't be alarmed. I could send a wire tonight and it would reach you sometime tomorrow. In that case I would get it about two weeks sooner than if I waited to write.

I hope you are all well. I won't say "and working hard," but I suppose you are. I have not had a letter for a long time. However, I will get them all sometime. And now I think I have told you all the news for now.

By the way, I had rather an exciting time one night while I was in the hospital in France. Frits came over and bombed the hospital. There were thirty-three casualties altogether. Two Americans were killed and three or four wounded. There were three wounded in the ward I was in. Well, I have a lot of writing to do, so will close now.

Hoping this finds you all in the best of health and write soon,

As ever,
BERT JONES.

CLOSING RULES OF BIG CONTEST--TWO DAYS MORE

Contest Will Close at Ten O'clock Saturday Night—Candidates Must Cast all Their Vote Ballots—Result Should be Known by Eleven O'clock—Just a few Hours Left.

Saturday is the last day of the big contest—the closing hour will be 10 p.m.

The candidates now realize that the degree of success which attends their participation in the contest will depend upon the work of these last few days.

The leading candidates are doing better work now than ever before and some of them have never ceased to work since they entered the contest. Each contestant is keenly alive to the fine chance for success offered to the hardest workers and are making the most of present opportunities.

Of course, there are many rumors current, involving the plans of the different contestants, but the contest is surrounded by as much secrecy as a political campaign. Rumors are not very dependable things anyway. It is only reasonable to suppose that the participants in the contest who expect to be in the fight at the finish have decided upon their plans and know their resources. It is also reasonable to suppose that the candidates will be discreet enough to preserve secrecy.

Rules For Closing

The contest will close at ten P. M. October 27.

Candidates must enclose all their subscription orders with money to correspond in sealed envelopes and deposit same in the ballot box.

Candidates must cast all their vote ballots received up to the present. Place those in a sealed envelope and deposit in box.

Candidates must see that the name of subscriber and his address is plainly written on each order. Also name of candidate and amount of votes must be on each order.

No subscription will be accepted for more than three years. Votes will be given only according to the schedule. In case where a subscriber gives a candidate more than three years—four years for example — make two slips out, one for three years and one for one year. The three year slip wil earn 25,600—the one year slip will earn 5,120.

Candidates must cast their ballots and put their subscription orders and money in the box by ten o'clock.

Two days more and it is all over.

Crothers Orders Girls Taken Back

Montreal, Oct. 25.—The Great North Western Telegraph Company is ordered by Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor, to take back the recently discharged employes in this city on pain of the government's displeasure. He wrote a letter to George D. Perry, Toronto, general manager of the G. N. W. Company, putting the matter very clearly before E. Y. Young. Mr. Perry, district chairman, Montreal, was authorized to make public the letter addressed to Manager Perry.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1917

IN THE HOUSE OF HIS FRIENDS.

WHILE THE REVIEW is convinced that Mr. G. N. Gordon is too wise in political lore to offer himself as a candidate at this juncture, it is recognized that he is a coming man in his own party, and, barring mistakes, has a future ahead of him. Like every other person who finds himself in the same position, he does not lack for jealous rivals who would sidetrack him if they could.

In order to do this Mr. Gordon's rivals will find it necessary to do something more than write anonymous letters to a local contemporary.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END.

YESTERDAY'S DESPATCHES tell of growing discontent in Germany. The poulation is tired of the war, sick unto death of making sacrifices all to no avail. The workingmen are on the point of revolt, goaded to desperation by short rations and poor pay. One writer hazards the guess that the war party in Germany will be forced to collapse by the end of November at the latest, a consummation devoutly to be wished but almost too good to be realised.

Worst of all is the report that even the helpless children are being denied a full supply of food and that they are forced in some places to remain in bed for eighteen hours at a time in order that they may feel to a lesser degree the pangs of hunger.

The war may come to an end sooner than the most optimistic hope, and, if it does, the German masses will be the prime factor in the move for peace. A nation can be kept in the proper spirit of sacrifice and loyalty so long as the object for which the suffering is endured seems attainable. When the task in hand is hopeless, there is sure to follow a revulsion in public feeling. Men will submit to almost anything but hunger. Mothers will pray for the national cause while hope is left them, but their prayers will turn to curses as they see their children pine before them and cry in vain for food. Hunger has driven many a down-trodden populace into rebellion. Hunger brought about the first French revolution, which was really a general strike of the workmen against the taskmasters who kept them reduced to the point of starvation. Lack of food has before this driven the myriads of India into taking up arms against the powers over them.

Lacking the support of the masses, the junker party in Germany cannot hope to persevere in the war. They have broken faith with the people whom they deluded into believing that they were invincible. Not a single promised of easy conquest has been kept. Even their submarine campaign has failed to bring England to her knees, as the junkers openly and blatantly boasted. The German army is being slowly but surely pressed back to their own country. Germany, if the conflict continues, will soon be called upon to endure the horrors of defending their own territory.

Perhaps it is too much to take at face value the rumors that reach us from Germany by roundabout routes. Affairs in our own country could easily be so reported as to convey comfort to the enemy. The schism in Canada between the two races is likely to be interpreted by the Teutons as an indication that our people are not united on the great issue. The censure which a section of the press heaps upon the Administration is a serious matter, compared with any of the strictures which even the enemy's socialistic press venture to print occasionally about the powers that hold the country to the battle line. While the applications for exemption from military duty exceed the offers to enlist by over one hundredfold, the situation at home is not framed with hope.

The food campaign here might be taken in Germany as a sign that Canada is on the verge of a famine, whereas the truth is that there was never so plentiful a supply in sight as there is at present.

In spite of all these flies in the national ointment, the majority of the people of Canada are still set in their purpose. The war will be pushed to the end. Internal conditions in war time are apt to be misrepresented or misinterpreted in one country as in another.

THE ONLY ISSUE.

FOR THE FIRST time since Confederation Canada is to have an election in which the trade question in some form or other will not be an issue.

The C. N. R. Purchase Act will not figure in the coming campaign unless it is dragged in by the heels by politicians who wish to cloud the real issue before the people and to cover up their own position. That matter has by common consent been shelved until the war is over. Other contentious subjects have been relegated to the background for the present.

The old problem of provincial rights will not be paraded before the eyes of the electors. The religious agitator will find himself lacking an audience. There is only one issue before the country today, and that is the winning of the war. The Union candidates alone are entitled to support. With the patronage system eliminated from the reckoning, the party workers will be deprived of any incentive to busy himself with the spoils of office as his hope of reward.

THE VETERANS AND THE VOTE.

THE VETERANS of the war are out and out for conscription. They realize the need of it as no other class in the community can. They have not forgotten the comrades whom they have been forced to leave behind them in France, bravely striving to hold the battle line. There is only one method left by which that line can be kept up to strength, and the Union Government stands as the champion of that plan.

Acting President Shanahan, of the Great War Veterans' Association, has spoken to his comrades. "We must," he says, in a manifesto published yesterday, "leave no stone unturned to secure the defeat of the candidate who will not give the fullest guarantees that he will use his power to enforce conscription."

None but a Union candidate can give such a guarantee. A follower of Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot get away from the fact that his leader stands outwardly pledged to abrogate the Military Service Act if power to do so is given him.

"Liberal" writes to a local paper suggesting that a party candidate be put in the field. What would be the fate of such a candidate, so far at least as the veterans are concerned? And with the votes of the veterans will go the votes of the wives, mothers and other relatives of the soldiers? So long as he remains the head of the Liberal party Sir Wilfrid Laurier will decide that party's policy. A Liberal elected in West Peterborough would simply mean a recruit to help Sir Wilfrid demolish the law which the veterans are so intent on upholding.

The veterans' vote is not likely to go to any man or party whose voice is raised in opposition to the Franchise Act which deprives the alien of the power to render the soldiers' vote of no effect.

There is no party politics in the stand taken by the returned soldiers. Their policy is one of unswerving devotion to country and of fidelity to their former comrades who are still enduring the horrors of actual warfare.

MR. HANNA AND CEREALS.

MANUFACTURERS of cereals claim that the new order issued by Food Controller Hanna providing that after a given date their products shall be sold only in twenty-pound lots will all but put them out of business. In Peterborough alone it will mean loss of employment to over three hundred girls at present engaged in the packing departments.

Retail dealers, too, do not welcome the new order. It will, they say, tend to decrease their sales, as plenty of people will buy a small package who would never think of investing in a twenty-pound lot. Handling cereals in bulk also tends to waste, which is unknown when the product is put up in packages.

Mr. Hanna is not disposed to be arbitrary in this matter. He has just announced that if the manufacturers can convince him that their objections are well founded, the order will be rescinded. One thing is certain—his object in issuing the order was to reduce the cost of breakfast food to the consumer.

FARMERS AND THE INQUIRY.

IT IS INTERESTING to note what the farming community thinks of the recent bacon investigation, as it is the farmers who furnish the basic product for the packing house business. If the sentiments of the farmers are properly reflected in the columns of the Weekly Sun of Toronto, then the disposition is to exonerate the packers from all blame. The Sun in its issue of this week says:

> It is just to say that not a tittle of evidence was offered that the preferences and advantages alleged were corruptly procured. The army buyer was said to have been anxious to avoid price raising here, and the most that can be said with certainty is that his measures miscarried.
> It is impossible to say what the prices of hogs might have been if there had been, in fact, open competition with the world. According to all the canons of the business, nineteen cents was out of proportion to the general rise of prices.

In another editorial article The Sun deals with the price of hogs after the following fashion:

> The Americans have a practical rule for determinig the price of hogs. They say from experience that it is determined by the price of corn, nearly in the ratio of one to ten. At the present time, for example, the suggestion that the Food Controller will fix the price of corn at one dollar a bushel leads to the conclusion on the market that hogs ought to or will be ten cents a pound, or, ten dollars a hundred. There is little doubt that the price of nineteen cents reached in midsummer was out of proportion, and insofar as the price was due, as alleged, to the operations of the packers, the producers received more than they would have been entitled to under conditions of normal trading.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

BUT FOR THE approaching election, the labor men would never learn that here are so many men and newspapers ready to profess friendship for them and their cause.

• • • •

IF THE EXAMINER will only strive to keep its temper for a few days, all will be well. A labor man will be in the Cabinet as head of the Labor Department.

• • • •

IT WILL STILL further be demonstrated that no anti-conscriptionist cares to declare himself except anonymously.

• • • •

SECRETARY OF WAR BAKER of the American Cabinet has proved himself the safest and sanest prophet to date. He says this war will be over when it is won, and it is a wonder that more men with the prophetic vision have not thought of that before.

• • • •

THE WAR may be costly, but defeat would be infinitely more so.

• • • •

BUY WAR BONDS, cheer for the flag and support the Union Government, but through it all do not fail to avoid waste in the household supplies.

• • • •

IN PETERBOROUGH there is talk of putting up a party candidate by the Liberals. In other constituencies that we read of saner counsels prevail and the Liberals candidates nominated before Sir Wilfrid Laurier disrupted his party are withdrawing.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A Contrast in Systems.

(New York World.)

General Smuts, once a Boer in arms against Great Britain, may be entrusted with the air defence of England. There are some millions of Czech, Roumanian, Polish, Serb, Danish and French soldiers in Mitteleuropa who could never be set to guard Berlin. They might turn their guns on the city.

TODAY'S STORY

At last King Otto the Ninth reached his palace and was hurried up the stairs to the room where the council waited. Not at all a royal figure, but a tired little boy in gray trousers, a short black Eton coat and a rolling collar which had once been white.

"He gave one glance around the room. 'My grandfather!' he said, and fell to crying into his dirty pocket-handkerchief.

"The Chancellor eyed grimly from under his shaggy brows the disreputable figure of his sovereign. Then he went toward him, and put his hand on his head.

"'He was very eager for this rest, Otto,' he said.

"Then he knelt and very solemnly and with infinite tenderness, he kissed the small, not over-clean hand.

"One by one the council did the same thing.

"King Otto straightened his shoulders and put away the handkerchief. It had occurred to him that he was a man now and must act a man's part in the world.

"'May I see him?' he asked. 'I—didn't see him before.'

"'Your people are waiting, sir,' the Chancellor said gravely. 'To a ruler, his people must come first.'

"'And so in the clear light from the room behind him, Otto the Ninth first stood before his people. They looked up, and hard eyes grew soft, tense muscles relaxed. They saw the erectness of the small figure, the steadiness of the blue eyes that had fought back their tears, the honesty and fire and courage of this small boy who was their King.

"Let such of the revolutionists as remained scream before the Parliament House. Let the flames burn and the drums beat. The solid citizens, the great mass of the people looked up at the King and cheered mightly. Revolution had that night received its death-blow, at the hands of a child. The mob prepared to go home to bed."

Omemee is proud of the fact that although not Omemee boy, still the township of Emily can claim Harry Brown (V.C.) as one of her heroes. Pte. Brown who enlisted in London is the son of Mrs. P. McAuliffe, East Emily. For most conspicuous bravery, courage and devotion to duty he was awarded the Victoria Cross. After the capture of a position the enemy massed in force and counter attacked. The situation became critical. All the wires being cut. It was of the utmost importance to get word back to headquarters. Pte. Brown and one other were given a message with orders to deliver same at all costs. The other messenger was killed while our hero with one arm shattered continued through intense barrage until he arrived close to the support lines, where he found an officer. Pte. Brown was so spent with pain that he fell down the dugout steps retaining consciousness long enough to hand over the message and tell them it was very important. He then became unconscious, and died in a dressing station a few hours later. His devotion to duty was of the highest possible degree imaginable. The successful delivery of the message undoubtedly saved the loss of the position and for the time prevented many casualties. Sincere sympathy is felt for the bereaved family, and at the same time heartiest congratulations to Mrs. McAuliffe on being the mother of such a hero.

Pte. Dewart Lewis of Toronto spent the week end under the parental roof.

ABOUT CHURCH MUSIC.

When the Salvation Army or some peripatetic evangelist adapts "sacred words" to some such tune as "Poor Butterfly," or "Who Were you With Last Night" men of civilized feelings are offended. Yet it is not a new proceeding. It began long ago in the Italy of the Middle Ages, and this was the manner of it. Certain portions of the Church service, then as now, were sung. It was a time of counterpoint rather than harmony, a time when musicians were mathematicians rather than artists, and took delight in combining four, eight, or even sixteen melodies for simultaneous performance. To find the melodies the monks went to the common folk-song of the period. Frequently the air of a ribald and perhaps improper song was taken bodily and transferred to the mass. Immediately devout people were scandalized. Going to church in a worshipful mood they were distressed to hear a Kyrie which reminded them of riotous and drunken scenes. Therefore the Church instituted a thorough-going reform and the Gregorian system was devised.

When the Reformation was effected, Luther introduced congregational singing. This was possible only by making use of folk tunes with which everyone was familiar. Thus grew up a body of church music utterly different in type from the church music of the past. Luther was a musician and perhaps his good sense prevented the use of common tunes associated with the baser sides of folk melody. Certain it is that the Lutheran Chorale soon lost its secular associations and became wedded to the hymn provided for it.

In England some of these hymn-tunes were imported. Others were picked up anywhere. The tune known as "Hemsley" "Lo He Comes with Clouds Descending" was composed for a comic song, and even yet the absolute divergence of temperament between words and music flicks every choirmaster on the raw. Meanwhile musicians were composing and arranging suitable tunes for the burst of hymns that appeared in the Johnsonian age and before.

Moody and Sankey the American evangelists discovered anew the principle of stepping down religious music to tickle the ears of the groundlings. For them and their successors. the existing Church music was too dignified. They wanted sentimentalism wedded to a refrain, and for fifty years they and their successors poured forth a flood of alleged religious music united to alleged poetry. There never was a time when a Wesley or a Doddridge hymn with its traditional tune was permanently supplanted by the religious jig. That fact alone should be proof enough to the Churchmen that the evangelical garden has been too long devoted to the propagation of weeds. It is an extraordinary thing that the Church which stands for right living and right thinking accepted such a de-civilizing agency as the cheap and banal Gospel song. It never was needed and it has had a bad effect upon the taste and understanding of generations of men.

AN EXCLUSIVE PARADISE.

The study of Music awakens a new perceptive faculty. Everyone can hear, but the Musician can hear overtones. Music does for the ear what woodcraft did for the eye of Fennimore Cooper's heroes. No common person could see as much as Leatherstocking, and therefore no common person got as much enjoyment out of life. Thoreau when walking with a friend listened to him wondering that any one could ever find such a small and modest thing as an Indian arrow-head. Then suddenly he stooped to the ground and picked up something. "Here is one now," he said. Just as many people go through the world comparatively blind, so many others jog along comparatively deaf. Naturally enough they wonder at the enthusiasm of musicians. A story is told of a western organist who was managing a series of concerts. He required a guarantee fund, therefore he called on a number of the wealthy and prominent men of the city for their support. One of them, a Banker, and non-musical acceded to his request, but not graciously. Something must have happened to disturb his equilibrium that morning, for as he signed the list he said sharply that he wished all musicians were in a place not generally mentioned in polite society. The organist was equal to the occasion. He said: "On the contrary, we have a little and exclusive Paradise that you mere business people know nothing about. Further, you could not get into it if you had all the money in the world. Ear-gate, celebrated by Old John Bunyan, leads into this select and peculiar Paradise and if it is to open easily music study in childhood is necessary.

ORGAN GRINDER BETWEEN THE COMPOSER AND THE DEEP SEA.

Coleridge — Taylor's biographer relates that the composer was engaged on a long work requiring complete concentration, and he was tormented intolerably by a street organ which would take up its station about two houses away from his and grind forth ditties which completely precluded any work during the performance. One day, unable to endure it any longer, he threw down his pen, sallied forth and asked the itinerant musician to go away. Whereupon a neighbor rushed out and asked: "Why are you sending this man away?" Coleridge-Taylor explained patiently: "I am a composer and I am engaged on a long and important work, and the interruption caused by this organ is serious to me."

"Well," rejoined the other, "my children like the organ as much as you dislike it, and we have as much right to have it as you have to send it away; and as for your piano, it is a good thing it is interrupted, for there is too much of it."

At this moment a policeman came in sight and the organ-grinder made off, and so for the time being, Coleridge-Taylor secured quiet. He learned later that the organ-man had been tipped by his neighbor to come and play outside the house for the amusement of a sick child. This gave quite another complexion to the affair, since Coleridge-Taylor was a great lover of children; and when the organ-man came again he consulted him in order to avoid work during his performances. It amused the composer greatly when the itinerant musician drew out an engagement book and showed his questioner a series of appointments. Beyond this, out of consideration for the child, Coleridge-Taylor refrained from touching the piano during night hours—no small sacrifice on his part.

WIDER SCOPE FOR MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS

The matter of giving more serious attention to the teaching of music in the schools is receiving some attention in Australia as it is in Canada. Speaking on the subject of introducing music into the school curriculum a prominent citizen of Melbourne emphasizes some points that are worth consideration in this country. He says: "In the midst of the heartrending appeals of the musically famished, are we to remain idle? We may, by organization, secure a permanent orchestra, etc., but I agree that the real root of the problem is in the education of the young mind to a perception of beauty, in form and sound.

"Why cannot we draft a practical scheme for submission to the Educational Board? Of course, the application of such a scheme should be entrusted to artists. The present futile arrangement for singing instruction in schools is a farce. Not only are the children too young to use their voices without distinct and ineradicable harm, but they receive not the slightest encouragement to look upon art seriously as a beautifier of life. Hence, we have the unlovely prospect of at least another generation of Goths, in whose midst the artist is superfluity. I think a special course of non-technical lessons should be written for the "School Papers" of all grades, the lessons dealing with aesthetics and biographies. Also periodical (or daily) performances of art works be given to the school en masse. This could easily be arranged by the members of the profession. In some such way would the love of the beautiful develop with a corresponding antipathy to the ugly."

A GOOD PLACE TO STOP.

You have perhaps attended a musical programme at which a soloist was to appear on both parts, one and two. After a most acceptable rendering of the number on the first part, she yielded to the request for an encore, and perhaps pleased her audience by finally reappearing for a second encore. For some reason or other when she came on the platform in part two, the greeting was just a little less enthusiastic, and the indifferent applause did not signify any insistent demand for an encore this time. The audience had had enough.

Tactful performers do not give the public all they want. They know when an audience is hot for more is a good time to stop. The same is true in another way. While lovers of music will recall notable exceptions to the rule, they will probably agree with this comment that, the composer who writes a sequel to a popularly approved song does it at his own peril. Sequels are dangerous. They often miss fire. Why? Because, as a rule they are made and not born. A composer gives to the world a song that leaps straightway into popularity. In order to keep the world's smile, a sequel is offered. Generally speaking, the sequel is but a concoction, not a spontaneous effort.

Still another illustration bearing on this thought, and an interesting one in more ways than one, came to the writer's attention in an old copy of the Newmarket Era bearing the date January 3, 1896. In the "Reflections by the Editor" column, this appeared: "The author of 'When you and I were oung, Maggie.' Mr. G. W. Johnson of Toronto, has composed another song, entitled 'Loved and Lost Awhile.' It is very pretty, but hardly likely to have the sale of the former composition, which was over half a million copies."

AN OLD GERMAN LEGEND.

The Greed of Hatto, However, Remains To-day.

A thousand years ago, and three years over, one of those who sat in high places took advantage of the necessities of the people and cornered the food supply. There had been a protracted period of rain in Mainz, the harvest was ruined and famine followed. The people were perishing with hunger.

But, as the story goes, the granaries of Bishop Hatto were overflowing. He had gathered grain during the years of plenty, and he had enough to feed the whole population. Naturally enough, the popualtion came to him to be fed. They worried his lordship with their importunities. So, according to the legend, he gathered them all together in a big barn and set fire to the barn.

That was the end of the people, but there were still the rats to reckon with. The rats also were hungry for the grain, and Hatto couldn't get them to go into an empty barn to be burned. Finally, they chased him from his palace, and he took refuge in his strong tower, built in the middle of the Rhine. But the rats swam the river, stormed the tower, and ate Hatto up. So generally credited is the story that the tower is called "The Rats' Tower" to this day.

A thousand years of uplift and enlightenment have passed since then, and it is no longer likely that the food sharks will burn hungry people by wholesale to keep them from eating the grain. The modern food sharks become milder of manners—he does not desire the lives of the populace, but will be content with their money. If they have no money, that is their lookout. And such a campaign has been waged against vermin, that it is highly improbable that enough rats can be mustered to do the justice that was done to Hatto. The only thing we can do is to prevent the Hattos of the present time from hoarding the food from the people.

Russia Is Free For All Time

I DO not know what form of government will be adopted in Russia. I hope it will be a republic, but I am sure that we shall never return to the depotism of the past. I know personally many of those who are now in power. They have been my friends for years.

Long ago, before the constitution was granted in Russia, there was an association of the most prominent people, writes Count Ilya Tolstoy, in The Century. It formulated the main outlines of a more desirable form of government. Their meetings, which I attended, were secret and under government espoinage. Nevertheless these people continued to meet. They were the chief exponents of the most liberal thought of the time. I rejoice to say that many of those progressive men are now in power, representing free Russia. They are Prince Lyoff, Prof. Miliukoff, Ridichiff, governor-general of Finland; Gutchkoff, Rodzianko, the president of the Duma, and many others of the leaders of that body, who are now supporting the present government.

Knowing those people and acquainted with their political views, I can predict some of the changes which are likely to take effect in Russia. Indeed, many of these are taking place at present.

First, direct election of representatives.

Second, freedom of speech, of the press, and of religion.

Third, the autonomy of Finland, Poland, and probably of the other nationalities on the outskirts of Russia.

Fourth, the abolition of all restrictions upon the rights of the Jewish people in Russia.

Fifth, a responsible cabinet of ministers.

Sixth, amnesty of all political prisoners in Russia and Siberia.

Seventh, the proper settlement of the land question.

These are the principal changes that I see ahead, that all Russia earnestly longs for and will certainly have. Outsiders should be patient, helpful, and wary of false rumors. The weaknesses attributed to the new regime are the accumulated deficiencies of the autocracy. We shall remedy them as fast as we can.

The sole ambition of the illiterate peasant is for land, mere land, and again more land. This question will be the principal problem to face not only at the present time, but in the future. This question cannot be settld by the abolition of property in land, because that would be an attack upon the principle of property itself. It cannot be determined by state purchase of the land, and therefore the question will remain, I fear, the most acute problem for Russia, and one which not infrequently prove the cause of new disturbances in the future. The only solution must be found in an increased tax on land, and this principle leads us inevitably to the doctrines of the single tax as advocated by the great economist, Henry George.

Lea Tolstoy, who lived closer to the people than any other man in Russia, realized the needs of the Russian people and their struggles for land. He devoted to this question a great deal of his attention, believing that the solution of the problem was in the adoption of the single tax. After studying Henry George's "Progress and Poverty," he became a confirmed believer in the latter's principles, and wrote several articles on the subject, particularly "The Great Inquiry" and "The Slavery of Our Times." He even consecrated to his ideal the whole of the second part of his novel, "Resurrection."

He also tried to interest the members of the second Duma and the president of the cabinet. But single tax interested only a few members of the more radical party. Henry George's followers in Russia are not many, and I fear that during the present crisis his beautiful ideal will not have adequate support, although I hope that at some future time his dream will be realized in Russia.

The Wily Ostrich.

Naturalists state that an ostrich never goes straight to its nest, but always approaches it with many windings, in order, if possible, to conceal the locality from observation.

The egg-laying record of the world is claimed for a hen in Ontario with 310 eggs in 355 days.

Attractive Model For the Autumn Girl's Delight.

GOOD LINES.

Here we have navy georgette and navy and white polka dot foulard fashioned in a medish model. The overskirt effect is caught up in a drape in the back, and white georgette gives the collar and vestee.

ENGAGING SERVANTS.

How to Go About It So They Won't Overwhelm You.

It is more satisfactory to have servants sent from reliable employment offices to your house for personal interviews.

Remember they are interested in your location, style of kitchen, equipment, demands and personal quarters, which can be satisfied at a house interview.

Ask a servant these questions:

How many years have you been a cook?

Can you refer to your last employer?

Have you print dresses to wear in the kitchen?

Can you make your own ice creams?

Will you divide the washing with the second maid?

Will you keep your room to my standard of cleanliness?

Your cleaning includes dishwashing, maid's bathroom, back and cellar staircases, kitchen, pantries, icebox, back porch, laundry, garbage can. Are you equal to it?

By the time she has answered all these questions and her manner and attitude have been studied you will have an estimate of her ability and willingness.

ANTIDOTES FOR POISONS.

A knowledge of the antidote for a specific poison may often be the means of saving a life.

For acidulous poisons, those that cause burning from the mouth down to the stomach, the remedy is magnesia, soda or soap dissolved in water. Administer this antidote every two minutes while waiting for the doctor.

For arsenic poison give a prompt emetic of a tablespoonful each of mustard and salt dissolved in a cupful of warm water; then follow with sweet oil, melted butter or milk. The white of an egg in half a cupful of milk will also help counteract the poison, as also will chalk and water.

If one partakes of corrosive sublimate, blue vitriol or bedbug poison give at once large quantities of freshly mixed white of egg and water, or give freely of wheat flour and water or soap and water.

Oxalic acid is frequently mistaken for epsom salts. Give immediately soap and water or magnesia or chalk and water.

The Meat Flavor.

Cold ham, chicken or other meat left over in quantities too small for use alone may be used advantageously by mixture with other foods. Here is a recipe for one way to use such meat.

Chop the meat fine and season it well. Mix in enough butter or other fat to make it "shape" well. Form into rolls about the size of a finger and wrap around each a thin piece of short dough made from a pint of flour, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder, salt and milk enough to mix. Bake the rolls in a hot oven until they are a delicate brown. Serve hot.

Rough Skin.

A simple diet, with little pastry or rich food and plenty of cold water to drink, is the best cure for pimples of any kind. Fruit should be eaten every day if possible. A daily bath is also a necessity. A warm bath, followed by a cold shower, is the most cleansing kind.

Liberia Joins Nations Fighting Against Huns For the Cause of Freedom

THE entrance of the Republic of Liberia into the war against Germany throws another 40,000 square miles of territory and another 2,000,000 people into the balance against the Central Powers.

Liberia is situated on the west coast of Africa at the point where the coastline makes the great bend to form the Gulf of Guinea. Its position puts it directly on the line of ocean communication between Europe and South Africa and points by way of the Cape of Good Hope.

The republic has a coastline of some 300 miles and possesses a population estimated at from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000. The part of the republic that has been developed is only a coastline strip of about seven miles average width, or a little more than 2,000 square miles all told. The remainder of the country is occupied by native tribes. The population comprises from 12,000 to 15,000 descendants of American slaves, some 40,000 Christianized natives, with approximately a million and a half or two million wild people. The interior of the country is a plateau of considerable elevation, clothed with valuable forests of gum trees, all palms, and pepper shrubs. This region is healthful and productive, and is the abode of herds of elephants and buffaloes.

The colony dates from about 1822, when Jehudi Ashmun, a white American, took a number of the free Negroes there and settled them. The name Liberia was invented by Rev. R. R. Gurley in 1824. The colonists declared their country an independent republic in 1847, a status which was recognized in 1848-49 by all of the principal countries except the United States. Sometime before 1857, the two leading settlements split apart and considered themselves two republics, Liberia and Maryland. England and Liberia settled their boundary dispute, which involved the Sierre Leone-Liberia line, in 1903. The controversy between France and Liberia over the Ivory Coast—Liberia frontier then came to the fore, with the result that in 1909 President Roosevelt appointed a commission to go to Africa to investigate conditions in the country. As a result of that commission's report, negotiations were set on foot for an adjustment of the Liberian debt and the placing of United States officials in charge of Liberian customs. In 1910, the American Government, acting in general agreement with Great Britain, France, and Germany, took charge of the finances, military organizations, agricultural, and boundary questions of the republic. For the security of the revenue, a frontier police force sufficient for the maintenance of peace in Liberia was established, and the United States designated trained military officers to organize this force.

In 1912, Liberia had trouble with Germany, growing out of a quarrel between German merchants and the president of the republic. Two German gunboats forced an apology, and the president retaliated by granting privileges to English traders, in 1913, which were more favorable than those enjoyed by the Germans.

The country is rather remarkable for its flora and fauna. There is one species of tree that grows to a height of 200 feet, and 22 species of trees, shrubs, and vines that produce rubber. Among the animals encountered in the wild districts are the pigmy hippopotamus, the bay-thighed Diana monkey, and the zebra antelope.

The Government of Liberia is modeled after that of the United States. The president is elected for four years, and there is a congress, made up of eight senators and thirteen representatives. The judical system consists of local magistrates, courts of common pleas, quarterly courts, and a supreme court. Many of the presidents of the republic have been former slaves in America. Admiral "Fighting Bob" Evans in one of his books tells the story of, having visited the Liberian "White House" for a ceremonial call, in the course of which, having been born in Virginia, he, in a moment of reverting to type, addressed the wife of the president as "Auntie." The president thereupon inquired what part of the South he was from. He replied that he was from Floyd County, Virginia, and the president confessed that he was born in Dinwiddie County nearby.

Czarina's Jewels in Germany.

Mme. Nicholas Romanoff's intuition when she saw war clouds hovering over Europe in the summer of 1914 undoubtedly has saved her family $100,000,000. The Russia royal jewels, including the gem from the Romanoff crown, wer transferred to Germany before th outbreak of hostilities.

The then Czarina, who felt the i security of Russia and the compar tive safety of Germany, is describ as the "Woman who caused th war," in the Chronicle, a New Yor society magazine, which prints th story of the Russian jewels.

The Czarina, who, before her mar riage, was Princess Alexandra Alic of Hesse, assured German friends an relatives that Russia never would b a dangerous antagonist. Her pr German intrigues helped to pro her assertion.

Just before the outbreak of th war, trusted messengers carried th family jewels to the Czarina's br ther, the Grand Duke of Hesse, fo safe keeping until peace should b declared—and there they remain, a far as Russians know.

The Chronicle story, which ha been confirmed by prominent Rus sians, asserts that the tale of th missing jewels reached this countr by means of the Russian commission

CITADEL OF BERLIN.

Term Is Now Applied to Great Muni tion Centre.

Spandau, the munitions facto centre of Prussia, and sometime characterized as the "citadel of Berlin," had hardly ever been heard o in Canada before the war.

It is, of course, impossible to surmise as to the extent of the damage caused by the recent explosion in a hand grenade factory at Spandau, fo the German censorship on news of such disaster is very rigid. There are few richer fields for explosion in the German Empire, however, than at Spandau, where, prior to the war, there were more than 200 acres of Government arsenals, gun factories, and powder plants employing more than 6,000 workmen. The extent of these military works has, of course, been vastly increased since the summer of 1914.

When the war began Spandau had a population of more than 85,000, having nearly trebled in size since 1885. The town is situated on naturally swampy ground, at the confluence of the rivers Spree and Havel, the latter having been greatly improved for navigation in recent years. The distance by rail to Berlin, which lies to the south-east, is seven and a half or 11 miles, according to the railway station in the capital at which the traveler detrains. As a matter of fact, the two cities are practically continuous, Charlottenburg forming the connecting link. Both the Berlin-Hamburg and the Berlin-Hanover Railway lines pass through Spandau.

Spandau's history begins far back in mediaeval times. It received its civic rights during the first half of the thirteenth century, and was strongly fortified in the sixteenth century, but was unable to withstand an attack from the Swedes in 1635. During the Napoleonic era it succumbed to the French. After the war of 1870 the Germans thought it advisable to strengthen the fortifications, but subsequently many of the defences were rased.

Spandau has been one of the military treasure cities of Prussia for more than 40 years, a sum equal to $30,000,000 having been kept here in the Julius Tower ready for instant use in case of "military emergency." It is a pathetic commentary that this sum, which undoubtedly was used in launching the treacherous attack upon France through Belgium in the opening days of August, 1914, was a residue of the indemnity which Germany had collected from the French after the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-1871.

Four or five miles north-east of Spandau is the famous Castle of Tegel, the family home of the brothers Humboldt — Alexander, the great naturalist and traveler, and Karl Wilhelm, the diplomatist, philologist, and man of letters—both of whom are buried in the castle grounds.

Spandau was at one time the favorite residence of the Hohenzollern electors of Brandenburg. Ten miles to the south-west is Potsdam, one of the principal residences of the Kaiser.

Sterilizing Foods.

As a general rule cooking helps to sterilize food and keep it in an edible condition for a longer period of time than if it were in a raw state. An exception to the rule is found in the case of some eggs which were sent to soldiers by their families. The prudent housewife who boiled the eggs before sending them learned with dismay that they had arrived unfit to eat, while those who had run the risk of sending them raw, in their natural state, were assured that they were still fit to eat after several weeks.

MR. HANNA WILL CONSULT TRADE

MEETS WITH CEREAL MAKERS AND DEALERS IN TORONTO ON SATURDAY.

Toront, Oct. 25.—Mr. W. C. Miller, of the Retail Merchants' Association, says that he has received a telegram from the Food Controller, who says that he will meet on Saturday manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers who are interested in the recent order-in-council respecting cereals, etc. The meeting will be at 12 o'clock, and is to be attended by interested parties from all over the Province.

"The Food Controller has gone into the matter without taking into consideration the manufacturers and other interested parties. We intend to take exception to the order-in-council accordingly. It would mean the elimination of many foods which cannot be sold in bulk," said Mr. Miller.

All arrangements have now been completed at Brantford for what is expected to be the greatest provincial ploughing match ever held under the auspices of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association and the Department of Agriculture.

If the Review is not being received regularly, kindly notify the office at once. Telephone 189.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 591 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

HELD SPECIAL PRAISE SERVICE

(Special to Review.)

Mount Pleasant, Oct. 24.—The annual Thanksgiving and anniversary services of the Presbyterian Church, Mount Pleasant, held on October 7 and 9, were a great success.

On Sunday, October 7th, morning and evening services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Macintosh of Lindsay. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with chrysanthemums and fern, dahlias, asters, autumn leaves and mountain ash berries, and special music was rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. R. E. Grey of Toronto, whose solos at both services were highly appreciated. Handsome collection plates were presented to the church by Mrs H. Keen of Toronto.

On the following Tuesday evening a fowl supper was served in the Temperance Hall, followed by a high class program, given by the male quartette of St. Paul's Church, Port Hope; Mrs. R. E. Groig of Toronto, Mrs. McCarthy and Miss Pearl Merrifield of Port Hope, soloists, and Mr. Chas. Hornby of Omemee, violinist. The Rev. T. D. McCullough acted as chairman in his usual well-pleasing manner, and a short address was given by the Rev. Mr. Clarke of Cavan.

A hearty good time was partaken of by all present, and the proceeds were most gratifying, amounting to $180.00.

PERMITS SALE OF MARGARINE

ORDER-IN-COUNCIL REMOVING EMBARGO TO TAKE EFFECT NOV. 14.

Ottawa, Oct. 25. — An order-in-council has been passed, upon the recommendation of the Food Controller, allowing on and after Nov. 14 the manufacture and sale in Canada of oleomargarine and its importation free of duty. Suspension of the prohibition of its manufacture, import or sale is a war measure only, and will apply while th epresent abnormal conditions continue. The conclusion of such perior is to be determined by the Governor-General in Council.

The recommendation of the Food Controller was made because the high cost of production and the demand for export were putting the price of buter so high that many people were unable to purchase it. To reduce the price arbitrarily would have been unfair to the producer.

LIBERAL BANKS ON SIR WILFRID

PREDICTS HE WILL CARRY SIXTY OF THE QUEBEC SEATS.

Montreal, Oct. 25. — A prophecy that was made by a Liberal ex-M.P., again a candidate in his county, is of interest. Naturally he predicts success for his own party, and splits the returns as follows:

For the Liberals, Province of Quebec, sixty; Ontario, twenty-two, and even breaks in the West and Maritime Provinces, or nearly so.

It is felt that with the aid of sympathetic Liberals elected outside of their own party, it would be possible to carry on a government. However, this is but a one-man's guess.

LIBERAL NAMES HON. F. COCHRANE

FORMER MINISTER OF RAILWAYS TO RUN AS UNION CANDIDATE.

Cobalt, Oct. 25. — Hon. Frank Cochrane was the unanimous choice of an open convention in support of the win-the-war policy of the new Union Government, for the new riding of Timiskaming.

The meeting, which was presided over by Capt. Thos. Magladery, the chairman of the convention committee, attracted delegates from all parts of the riding. Men and women were invited from al political parties, and a special invitation was sent to the officers of the Liberal Association, asking them to join in the proceedings. Mr. Cochrane's name was the only one brought forward, and was proposed by Mr. G. H. Rochester, a past president of the Liberal Association, who said he could not consistently or conscientiously take any other course. There were a score who signed the nominating paper.

Early Tuesday morning the citizens were aroused from their slumbers by the ringing of the fire alarm and upon dressing discovered that the plant of the Hastings Tanning Co was in flames. The fire was first seen by night watchman Mr. J. Londerville who had made a round of the building about thirty or forty minutes before and who, upon returning about three o'clock found the flames bursting out in the second floor. He immediately sent out the alarm, the fire bells rung all over the town and the brigade hastened to the scene of the disaster, only to find that the fire had gained considerable headway and was threatening the destruction of the entire plant. Every effort was made to save the roller room (a separate building nearly new) but all to no effect and today nothing is to be seen but a smouldering mass of ruins. Dwellers in the immediate vicinity were greatly alarmed and picked up some of their valuables, but we are gald to say the dwelling houses were saved from catching fire, although the lighted cinders were carried to a considerable distance, indeed we are informed that farmers three miles out found the blackened cinders around the yards.

Much credit is due to the plucky firemen who worked so nobly to hold the fire in check. The loss to the company will be enormous, although partially covered by insurance. Mr. Breithaupt of Kitchener, main representative of the company has phoned that he will arrive on Tuesday evening to see what can be done. The loss of this plant means a great deal to Hastings as some forty to fifty men were employed. During the day great numbers visited the scene, and many comments made as to the enormity of the disaster.

Fortunately a steady rain has been falling during the day which will help to keep the fire from Spreading. We are pleased to report no loss of life.

Biggest Surprise of His Life, He Says

WILLIAMSON FINDS RELIEF FROM TROUBLES OF FIVE YEARS' STANDING.

"I have never been so surprised over anything as I have been over the results of Tanlac in my case," said William Williamson, a well-known brick mason living at 1115 St. Clarens avenue, Toronto, recently.

"My kidneys have been bothering me for four or five years," he continued, "but during the past year other ailments set in and kept me feeling miserable nearly all the time. I had terrible pains across my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything, then rheumatism settled in my right leg, and at times I simply suffered torture from it. The pain was so sharp and cutting at times I would almost drop in my tracks. My appetite went back on me, and nothing I would eat tasted right. I was very nervous—could hardly sleep—I would just roll from one side of the bed to the other, and many a night I have not closed my eyes for sleep at all. I just had that dejected, worn-out feeling, had no energy and din't care for anything and certainly felt awful.

"I had been reading about Tanlac, but I had tried so many things that did me no good that I was skeptical and had no faith in anything; in fact, I was depressed and discouraged and felt that nothing could help me. But one day a friend of mine said, 'Why don't you try Tanlac? I have taken it, and it surely did me good.' So with that I began taking Tanlac and improving every day. I have now taken four bottles, the rheumatism never troubles me at all, and my kidneys are in fine shape. My appetite is fine, and everything I eat tastes good and agrees with me. My nerves are strong and steady now, I sleep like a log, and all my tired, depressed feelings are gone. I now have my former strength and energy and feel like myself again. Tanlac has certainly been a great thing for me and I can't praise it too highly."

Abandonment of Package Policy Would Mean Reduction in Help---Purity of Breakfast Foods Affected by Selling in Bulk.

Food Controller Hon. W. J. Hanna has made the statement that the restrictions on the sale of package foods has for its object a reduction in the cost of distribution of goods to the lowest possible margin without upsetting the whole economic machinery.

"The principal reason for the ordinance restricting the sale of certain package foods, is that substitutes for wheat should be made available to the public as cheaply as possible in order to increase their use.

"We have found that rolled oats and many wheat products when sold in the smallest packages often cost over fifty per cent. more than when sold in bulk. People do not seem to realize when buying the common cereals in small packages that a large percentage of the cost is represented in the package and the advertising."

Throw 230 Out of Work.

In contradistinction to the above Mr. E. T. Carr, manager of the cereal department of the local Quaker Oats branch, emphatically contends that this measure will engender waste, as cereals in pound and two pound packages are handled more economically than in bulk. He could not see that putting up cereal foods in twenty pound packages could be resorted to generally as such would be too unwieldly. A twenty pound package would measure nearly four cubic feet and require a box two feet wide and one and a quarter feet deep. It would be necessary, he thought, to put 20 lb. lots up in cotton bags and not packages of paper or card material. He did not think the purchase of breakfast foods in such quantities would be popular with consumers, as 20 lbs. of Quaker oats or puffed rice would last the average family three months. On the contrary, grocers would be more likely to sell it in bulk, in which event consumers would not enjoy the present guarantee of purity offered by small packages, nor an assured knowledge of just whose cereal they were buying. His company, he said, stands to lose considerable by the order as millions of dollars have been invested in the package system and accompanying premium coupons (the latter, of course, would have to be eliminated), and what is, perhaps, more serious to Peterborough community, not less than 230 hands employed by the package system would have to be dispensed with.

Does Not Achieve End.

Mr. George A. McDonald, sales manager for the Quaker Oats Co., declares that anyone conversant with the handling of cereals will agree that there is more waste by selling it in bulk than in small units. Then impurity readily follows exposure, loose cereals are quickly invaded by insects and depreciation in quality follows. Small packages bear the manufacturer's name, their inclosure is guaranteed and hermetically sealed against impurities and should consumers have reason to complain, they know for a fact whose food is at fault. This would not be the case were they to buy in bulk from grocers, who themselves might not be always sure of whose cereal they had in any one receptacle. Of course, were consumers to buy generally in 20 lb. packages they would be practically storing up cereals contrary to the principle releasing it for war purposes as advocated by the government.

Mr. McDonald complained that the Quaker Oats Co. had not been consulted by Mr. Hanna on this matter, and said that while his company is willing to cooperate in every way in regard to food conservation, he thought the order in council would defeat the end it had in view. He was afraid the measure would interfere considerably with the plans the Quaker Oats Co. had in regard to its operations here.

Would Be a God-Send.

Dr. C. J. Hastings, Medical Officer of Health for Toronto, says regarding the order in council: "It would be a God-send to the public if this order were the means of stamping out altogether the sale of breakfast foods."

This official also expresses his feelings on this subject in the following:

COAL HOARDING TO BE STOPPED

FUEL CONTROLLER IS SAID TO BE PREPARING REGULATIONS.

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—In the absence of the Fuel Controller, C. W. Peterson, Deputy Food Controller, was shown the statement made in a Toronto newspaper regarding the alleged storing up of coal in the Toronto Canoe Club.

Mr. Peterson stated that the efforts of the Fuel Administration in Canada has heretofore been inclined exclusively on the all important object of procuring the greatest possible amount of coal from the United States before the close of navigation.

Regulations are now in the course of preparation which, if approved, will deal in a drastic manner with such cases as the one complained of.

If the Fuel Controller follows his present inclination, such accumulation of coal may not be entirely inviolate in case of any emergency. The Fuel Controller is determined to prevent any hoarding of coal.

Kingston, Oct. 25.—W. F. Nickle will run as Union candidate in Kingston in response to petitions from both sides of politics. RUSSIAN FLEET GUARDING ENTRANCE TO THE GULF OF FINLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Helsingfors, Oct. 25. — There has been no naval action in the Baltic or in the Gulf of Finland during the last two days. The Russian fleet is guarding vigilantly the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. It is not believed that Helsingfors is menaced by German successes in the Gulf of Riga.

Germans Retreating

Petrograd, Oct. 25.—The German retreat on the northern end of the Front Continues, the war office reports that Russian Vanguards lost Louch in some sectors to retiring Germans who destroyed all bridges roads and buildings.

German attempts to make another landing on Werder Peninsula, in the region of Tomba were frustrated yesterday by Russian artillery fire, the war office announced today. The statement says that Germans who left their advanced positions so far have retired about fifteen miles in the Riga region near Pskoff High Road and in the sector of Little Jaegel River.

BITTEN BY DOG.

A small son of Mr. Lacheur, 288 Dalhousie street, was bitten by a dog this morning. The animal cannot be traced and its owner is not known.

"In North Dakota some two or three years ago, Dr. Ladd, Food Commissioner for the state, made a calculation based on the results of the work of the North Dakota Agricultural Experimental Station, demonstrating that wheat at $1.80 a bushel, when sold in the form of certain breakfast foods represents an expenditure of $27 per bushel. One can hardly conceive of any person feeling himself in a position to pay such an exorbitant price for food fads in view of the fact that the claim of their vast superiority of food value is entirely unwarranted."

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

"CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" CAN'T HARM TENDER STOMACH OR BOWELS.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold, or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

LOCAL BAKER

ounces short, a total weight lacking of seven ounces. The five should have weighed 15 lbs. His scales and those of the grocer agreed.

At the Bake Shop

Inspector Reid said that he weighed twelve large loaves at defendant's bake shop, weighed them separately and found weights correct. They were of about the same freshness as those in the stores.

All Same Weight

To Mr. F. D. Kerr for defendant, witness said the loaves at defendant's bakery were each of the same weight, a pound and a half. He did not test these on defendant's scales, but on his own only. He visited four stores before reaching Routley's. The total shortage of five loaves at Routley's was about seven ounces, at Puttick's assuredly seven ounces short, without any "about."

To his worship, Reid replied that at defendant's bakery the bread was in a cupboard on the ground floor. The bakery was pretty warm. Defendant and others did not object to his weighing the bread. He tested on Monday, bread in eight bakeries and found the weights correct. He found one large loaf of another make two ounces short in Goheen's store.

Scraper in Machine

Witness said defendant had told him that one of his night men had put a scraper in a bread machine (this might have accounted for some shortage.)

Constable Blade corroborated Sergt Reid's evidence.

Mr. Norman Routley testified that the bread in question weighed on his own scales and all of defendant's was short.

Evidence for the defence claimed the greatest care was exercised in dividing the dough to statutory weight. The dough divider, however, happened to get out of order on the date in question, and consequently some loaves would be overweight, others underweight. Some consumers gained while others had lost by the incident.

Case Dismissed.

His Worship accepted the evidence in defence, and ruled that no intent to defraud bread consumers had existed on defendant's part and that his patrons, generally, had no cause for complaint. He dismissed the case.

HEAVY FINES FOR EMPLOYERS NOT REPORTING DELINQUENTS

Must Not Employ Deserters or Military Absentees Without Leave—Penalty of $500 or Six Months Imprisonment the Risk for So Doing.

Ottawa has issued an order that no men except those in Class A will be drafted to compose the army of 100,000 as indicated in the Military Service Act. It is only men fit for the front line trenches who are wanted and none other will be accepted. This clears up the rumor that Class B and C men would be drafted into the army or even non-combatant services.

Fines For Employers.

Employers, under the act must see that their employees who been been called out either report for duty or register for exemption. They must report all such delinquents; failure to do so will subject them to a maximum fine of $100 (not less than $50), or imprisonment for not more than three months.

Should an employer employ a deserter, or an absentee without leave, then he risks a fine of not less than $100 and not exceeding $500, or six months' imprisonment.

The regulations also provide that after the expiry of the time limit for reporting for service or claiming exemption (in the present case, Nov. 10), any man reasonably supposed to be a member of the class or sub-class called out, may be accosted by any commissioned or non-commissioned military officer or by any police officer and his name and address, place of employment, place and date of birth taken. "If," the regulation adds, "the officer questioning him has reasonable grounds to believe that the answers are untruthful or evasive, he may detain the man and take him before a Justice of the Peace to be dealt with according to law."

175 For Exemption

The Roll at the post office stands 175 for exemption and still ten only on record for duty, altogether fifteen exemptionists registered yesterday, and six this morning.

A CONVENTION WHICH INSPIRED

EPWORTH LEAGUES AND YOUNG PEOPLES SOCIETIES PLAN FOR FUTURE WORK.

The convention of Peterborough District Epworth Leagues and Young People's Societies, held in Trinity Church Sunday school hall yesterday afternoon and evening was not as largely attended either as anticipated or as the occasion warranted. This was unquestionably due to the inclement weather prevailing. However, the number of out-of-town delegates present, despite the rain, calls for a full measure of commendation for their active interest in these worthy organizations.

The reports and reviews of work of the past year were unusually gratifying, and stimulated all concerned to renewed energies in the future.

Trinity young people served tea in a very acceptable manner.

Afternoon Session.

The teachers again assembled this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the session is now in progress. Following was the program:

Report of Delegates to the O.E.A. —Miss E. Thomas and Mr. L. J. Colling.

The War and the Schools —Mr. J. M. Roszel.

Oral Composition — Miss M. G. Oakley.

Report of Committees.

WAS HE ONE OF BOSTON GANG?

SEEMS THERE MIGHT BE A CONNECTION BETWEEN TORONTO AND U. S. CROOKS.

It is significant that Sam Seartin, who was recently fined $50 on the assumption that he was a pick-pocket, because he was in company with a Boston trio of alleged pick-pockets, had his fine wired him from Toronto. His three companions had their bail of $1000 each furnished by a Boston lawyer named Sullivan, the men jumped their bail and it was this lawyer who wired from Boston that one of the number was sick and the others did not like to return to Peterborough without him.

American crooks are thoroughly organized in a protective association of their own, have plenty of funds and employ permanent counsel. This organization is international with, authoritative information says, a branch in Toronto. And the question is, was there any connection between Boston and Toronto in Seartin's case, and was the $50 fine a punishment to fit the crime. When in the prisoners box Seartin exclaimed in a tone of injured innocence, "I'll walk out of town if you keep the $12 you took from me." Well, he did not walk out of town, and the amount of his fine came by wire quickly enough the following day. One wonders why these kind friends of Seartin did not come down from Toronto and testify as to what a good boy he is. Such evidence might have saved them $50 at least.

MR. Q. HOPE JONES

He Delivers a Lecture on Ambition and Perseverance.

THE CASE OF C. COLUMBUS.

There Was an Ambitious Man For You—And Napoleon Too—Ditto Q. Hope Jones Himself—A Strong Argument Against Micawber Tactics.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, [illegible], by Associated Literary Press.]

ESTEEMED fellow men and women:

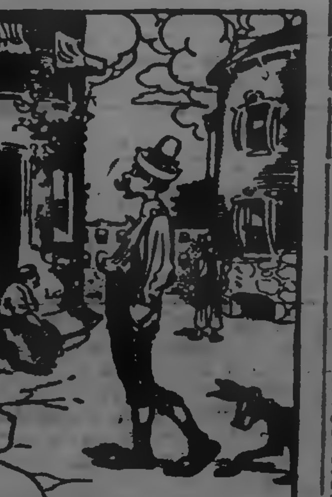
While I cannot say that this is the proudest moment of my life and worth thirty years of toil and poverty, I can conscientiously say that I am pleased beyond expression to note the cultivated and corpulent audience in the hall tonight. The pink handbills scattered around town with lavish hand have given you the subject of my lecture.

My friends, there are tens of thousands of men in this world who are waiting for money to help them begin a career. They are sitting around on the fences, loafing around the groceries and walking up and down the streets looking for some one to hand them a stake of $10,000. It never occurs to them that they have the capital wanted right at hand, if they would only make use of it—ambition and perseverance. Our first picture this evening may not be recognized at first glance, but after a steady squint you will be able to identify it as the man who upset Europe for years—the Emperor Napoleon. For years and years as a young man he hadn't a quarter left on Saturday night after paying his board bill. Nobody believed that young man had it in him to sell county rights for a patent churn. But they were mistaken. He had ambition and perseverance. All he was waiting for was to get a hold with his toes, and when he finally got it he went sailing for the top like a rocket. He jumped from the garret to the head of an army, from red herrings and dry bread to the fare of an emperor. He said to himself, "I will conquer," and conquer he did.

You who are wearing out the heads of the cracker barrels in Skinner's grocery night after night as you wait for some one to come along and give you an upward boost can do as Napoleon did.

Some of you in this representative audience have probably heard of Christopher Columbus. He hung around a corner grocery years and years waiting for his career to come along. Our artist has caught him as he loafed around town with his dog at his heels.

One morning Christopher woke up loaded with ambition. He had made up his mind to discover something. I don't suppose he was at all particular what it was at first, but after a little he decided on discovering America. That was ambition. Perseverance didn't come in till after he had been turned down. No one believed in his theories. No one would lend him a dollar. For several years about all his time was spent between sneaking free lunches and trying to make folks believe that Spain and Portugal were only half the world. He finally began to gain on it, and after discouragements enough to have driven most men to back up against a buzzsaw he was outfitted for a voyage, and America was duly discovered.



WITH HIS DOG AT HIS HEELS.

Suppose that Christopher's ambition hadn't been aroused? I tell you, my friends—and Q. Hope Jones knows what he is talking about—this country had the closest kind of a shave from being left out of the swim.

Take the case of Caesar. When his father died there wasn't $7 in cash in the house. Young Caesar had neither trade nor capital, and about forty different creditors were piling on to him for the old man's debts. He sat down on the fence to think things over. Should he throw his hands up in despair or should he call ambition and perseverance to his aid and conquer fate? He decided on the latter course.

Take my own case, for instance. Modesty forbids me to make any extended reference, but in a spirit of confidence I wish to observe that but for perseverance the name of Q. Hope Jones would never have stood out in letters a foot high in the Cohoes Exhorter, as was the case only yesterday.

Eighteen Carat Cynicism.

Simms—You're a poor sort of club member. I very seldom see you around at the clubhouse.

Timms—Why, I get around once or twice a week.

Simms—Well, look at me—I'm there every night.

Timms—Yes, but you're married and I'm single.—New York Times.

Of Course!

Barney Phelan, Father Healey's servant, was celebrated for his ready wit. One day while he was serving at dinner one of the guests said to him, "Barney, why is my ankle placed between my calf and my foot?" "Begorra, I dunno," replied Barney, "unless it is to keep your calf from eatin' your corn."—Boston Transcript.

Difficulties.

"I suppose your education was a matter of great care to your parents."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I recall that they had great difficulty teaching me to play the piano. And then they had still more persuading me not to."—Washington Star.

Was Quite Willing.

Girl's Father—I want you to understand, however, that I consent to your marriage only under protest.

Suitor—Oh, that's all right, if you will let none of the demands I may make on you afterward go to protest.—Boston Transcript.

A grand concert under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of Bailieboro Methodist church, was held in that church on Friday, Oct. 19. 1917. Although the state of the weather no doubt hindered many from attending, the church was well filled. The program which commenced sharp at 8 o'clock, consisted of vocal music by the choir, and solos and duets by other local talent. Miss E. Winnifred Haggas, a leading elocutionist of Toronto, delighted the audience with her readings. The Millbrook Methodist Sunday School Orchestra also added to the pleasure of the audience by rendering several selections. Interesting and instructive addresses were delivered by Rev. A. H. McConnachie of South Monaghan, and Rev. W. H. Higgs, of Millbrook. Rev. Mr. Leigh of Frazerville, occupied the chair in his usual pleasing manner and gave an interesting address.

Montreal magnates appear particularly optimistic with regard to the National Hockey Association. They consider theatrical patronage as a good barometer and state that it is now better in the metropolis than it has been for the past ten years.

Heinie Zimmerman and Catcher Bill Rariden are now falling over one another in an effort to take the blame for that famous "boner" in the World's Baseball Series. Neutrals state that the whole Giant infield was to blame.

With the passing of old Bob Fitzsimmons pugilism in particular and the sporting world in general lose one of their outstanding figures. The famous Cornishman always fought fairly. He was as brave as a lion and he never hesitated to tackle an opponent superior in every way, except gameness. Fitzsimmons' familiar name will always warrant upper case letters in the history of the prize ring. A squarer champion never climbed between the ropes.

Eddie Livingstone's press agent announces that the Toronto man has signed for a fight to the finish against the National Hockey Association.

Negotiations for a game between the Yale and Harvard football squads are still in progress. They may play for Red Cross purposes.

Fate dealt Captain Eddie Emmerson, of the Rough Riders, a cruel blow when it cracked his ankle in the opening game of the City Patriotic League. At last week's meeting "Emmy" said he was willing to take chances on being hurt in an exhibition game. He was.

Flight Lieutenant Connie Smyth, a well known Toronto hockey star, is reported missing in France. He is a military cross hero.

Harvard may not have a senior hockey team during the coming winter. All the maroon puckchasers are in khaki uniform.

And perhaps the Patriotic Football League will serve another grand purpose. May give Jim Vaughan an opportunity to score one more touchdown before he closes his Rugby career.

Toronto Hockey Club's delegate to the N.H.A. annual couldn't locate any welcome sign on the door mat.

If Omar Khayyam and Hourless keep on racing they'll soon be in a class with Sam, Langford and Sam McVey.

Football critics declare that the opening game of the Patriotic League uncovered in Art. Murphy the smoothest and fastest little quarter back the Capital has had since Alf. Smith and Pat Murphy were in their prime. Eddie Gerard had all his civil servants tipped off to watch the elusive little keystone star of the Rough Riders.

Exodus of hunters to the Gatineau Wilds will begin a few days hence. Deer are said to be plentiful.

Suggestion that hunting laws, owing to the food scarcity, be amended so as to allow each man to bring down two deer will hardly cause enthusiasm among the four-legged inhabitants of the Gatineau and Algonquin timberlands.

The Ontario Hockey Association will again operate its senior series. Dentals and the Toronto Rowing and Athletic Club have already announced they will play in it.

JOHNSTON TO CUT SCHEDULE

1918 Games in American League to Dwindle From 154 to 140

St. Louis, Oct. 25.—President Ban Johnston of the American League announced here that the 1918 schedule would be cut from 154 to 140 games. He said the season would begin about April 27 or May 1, and end the middle of September.

"I have always thought that 154 games were too many," said Mr. Johnson. "Each year I have contended that 140 games was the ideal schedule, but as the sentiment among the club owners did not seem to favor my idea, I never pressed the point. The shortening next season is in no wise a war move, although I think the war provides a very good reason for inaugurating the plan. The details will be worked out at the annual league meeting in Chicago."

August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, and president of the Cincinnati Nationals, in a letter to a St. Louis newspaper, said he favored a 140-game schedule.

President Johnson denied that he had signed Miller Huggins, manager of the St. Louis Nationals to manage an American League team next year.

ALL TRANSPORTATION LINES TO CO-OPERATE WHILE WAR LASTS.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—As a result of suggestions made by the Government that during the period of the war there should be closer co-operation between the railways of Canada, an association has been formed by lines corresponding to the railways war board of the United States with the object of securing greater co-operation not only between the railroads themselves, but also between the railways and the public.

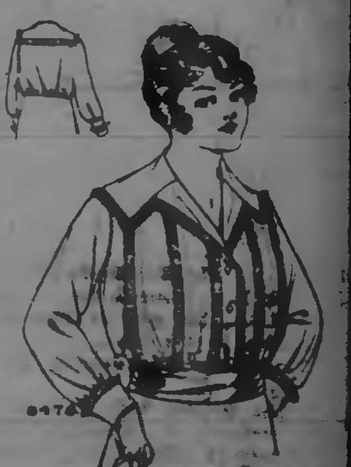
LADY'S WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.



As far as the pattern goes this business-like tailored waist is severely simple, but when it is trimmed with dainty ruffles or plaitings it becomes quite a dressy affair. No. 8478 has two tucks at each side of the front and a box plait at centre front. The back is plain. The broad sailor collar is a new feature on shirt waists and in this case it joins the revers which are formed by rolling back the front edges. The long sleeves are gathered into rolled cuffs, two styles of the latter being given.

The lady's waist pattern, No. 8478, is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. As on the figure the 36 inch size requires 2 yards 36 inch material with 4¼ yards of plaiting.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

"Holy Coat" of Treves.

At intervals of many years the old Prince Bishopric of Treves, where a fire is reported to have broken out as the result of a French air raid, wakens out of its half-slumbering condition and becomes the centre of a great pilgrimage. Besides its numerous Roman remains, this quiet old town, claiming to be 1,300 years older than Rome, is the shrine of the "Holy Coat," one of the most jealously guarded relics in the possession of the Roman Church.

The citizens of Treves are very proud of this seamless garment, and they have given it a prominent place on their coat-of-arms. It was not until 1196 that the "Holy Coat" was placed over the high altar, but it was not exposed to the public gaze for some three hundred years afterward. It was kept in a secret place of the cathedral known only to a few, and there were many who doubted its existence. A guide book of 1841 says:

"The existence of the relic at present is rather doubtful—at least, it is not visible. The attendants of the church say it is walled up." All doubts were removed in 1844, when Archbishop Arnoldi announced a centenary jubilee, at which it was exhibited to a million and a half of pilgrims from all parts of the world. The coat is a loose garment with wide sleeves, very simple in color, probably as the result of age, and entirely without seam or decoration.—Dundee Advertiser.

Call British "Limeys."

American bluejackets on duty in European waters have a nickname of their own for England's sailors and soldiers. They call them "limeys"; the individual being known as a "limey." The American sailormen apply the designation to all English fighters just as the British refer to their soldiers as "Tommies."

The sailor from the United States has his nickname for nearly everything he sees. Bluejackets who had served in the Near and Far East first started calling British sailors and soldiers "lime-juicers" because of their fondness for fruit juice and charged water. Now the designation has been shortened down and everything British is "limey." British sailors' and soldiers' clubs are known as "limey clubs" and British-brewed lager beer is commonly spoken of as "limey beer."

RARE TREAT IN STORE FOR ALL

REV. H. A. FISH WILL TALK TO MEN AND WOMEN TOMORROW NIGHT.

Those who avail themselves of the rare treat in store for them tomorrow night, Friday 26th inst., in Victoria Hall, will have little to regret. At considerable expense the Rev. H. A. Fish is coming here to talk to men and women on matters of vital importance, to all Protestants. His Father's life was threatened, his business ruined and his family driven out of the country. This story of persecution and illtreatment alone is sufficient reason to fill Victoria Hall (the old Opera House) to capacity. But this Fish is Irish and an orator of a high degree, consequently Irish wit is cropping out all through his talk.

There will also be a band in attendance, and with solos and recitations a most enjoyable evening is promised. It is free.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR

St John's Choir will practice in the Guild Room tonight at 8 p m Boys at 7.30. Music for practice. Haydns "Creation"; Maunders "Olivet to Calvary"; music for Dedication Festival.

SEDITION IN HAVELOCK.

Some Citizens Give Patriotic Workers Chilly Reception.

The canvass in Havelock Thursday last for the British Red Cross amounted to the enormous sum of $151.05. Eight ladies undertook the work and they were greatly encouraged in many cases by donations given in the most willing spirit, but in far too many the givings were cut down or refused. It is also reported that in some cases they were met with sentiments that in our opinion, were seditions and which if true, should be brought to the notice of the authorities. A Finlander in Toronto received two years in the penitentiary for statements that were not as serious or as traitorous as those we have heard credited to one of our residents. Following are the ladies taking the collection: Mesdames Edw Williams F. H. Falkner, W. H. Jones, J. Howe, J. Overend, P. NcCann, W. B. Ritchie, and J. Burnett.—Havelock Standard

PARK STREET BAPTISTS.

The new Baptistry, which is now complete, will, for the first time, be used on this occasion.

No doubt a large congregation will be present to join in the solemn, yet interesting service.

MR. PARDEE RUNS AS UNIONIST

CHIEF LIBERAL WHIP NOMINATED FOR SECOND TIME FOR PARLIAMENT.

Sarnia, Oct. 24. — Liberalism in West Lambton thronged the big Sarnia Auditorium to the very doors this afternoon. Despite the wet day hundreds of farmers drove for miles to be present, and the galleries were crowded with ladies. Mr. Fred. F. Pardee, the late sitting member, who was formally renominated more than two years ago, in a telling speech—at times cheered to the echo, at times met with sharp and pertinent questioning—placed his position definitely and unequivocally before his electors.

Mr. Carvell Speaks

Mr. Carvell the Liberal Minister of Public Works in the Union Cabinet was one of the speakers. In the course of his remarks he said:

"I am in the Government to do what I can toward winning the war. I went in freely, and if there are things happen of which I cannot approve I can get out just as easy. This is not a Conservative Government; it is not a Liberal Government. This is a War Government. Its purpose is to carry on the affairs of this country in a non-partisan way until the war is won. After demobilization the contract is concluded, and each man can take the course he thinks best. Does someone say I will become a Tory," asked Mr. Carvell. "Well, I don't believe it. There is only one thing for a man to do in a crisis like the present, and that is to do what he thinks is right."

PROF. EXCELL AT S.S. CONVENTION

WELL KNOWN SINGER OF SACRED SONGS WILL VISIT PETERBOROUGH.

One of the notables who will attend the Sunday School Convention for Eastern Ontario which will begin a three days session here October 30, is Prof. E. O. Excell, the well known singer and hymn writer.

Many, many years ago Sam Jones found Mr. E. O. Excell, then a comparatively young man, conducting a choir in a very humble quarter. Somehow he realised especial gifts in Mr. Excell, and saught him as an associate. For many years the two were associated. It was while leading the singing in Sam Jones' great mass meetings of thousands of people that Mr. Excell got his skill in leading large choruses. There is no question about it, he is without equal, all things being considered.

Mr. Excell is to lead the music at the International Convention at Buffalo next June. He has been with the Ontario Sunday School Association at Ottawa, Owen Sound, Hamilton, and the Golden Jubilee at Toronto. While at the Owen Sound Convention, Professor Excell met Prof. C. C. Laugher, now of Bowmanville, and at Mr. Excell's request, Professor Laugher will play the piano, accompanying the organ, for the music at the Convention.

Guy Bros. Ministrels come as regularly as the season with the inevitable street parade, but the company never fails to bring with them new faces and a new set of songs and jokes. The performance given by them at the Grand last night was up to their usual stantard and the audience certainly enjoyed the bright program of songs and dances.

"A Daughter of the Gods" will run for the remainder of the week with the usual matinee. This is regarded by universal consent as the greatest picture ever made.

CHIMNEY FIRE

The fire brigade was called out at one-ten this afternoon to a chimney fire at No. 39 Conger street, north city. The incipient blaze was extinguished by the use of four gallons of chemicals. Fire originated through an over-heated stovepipe. No damage resulted. The firemen were summoned to a chimney fire at the same house a year ago, since when the chimney has been reconstructed.

Civilians Move From Kronstadt

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Oct. 25.—The evacuation of the civil population of the naval base of Kronstadt has begun. This removal of civilians from Kronstadt which is most important Russian naval base probably is a military measure. The evacuation of Reval, another important port on the Gulf of Finland, was reported last week.

SAYS LEAGUE IS A NEW PARTY

Editor Review: After reading the report in the Toronto papers of the meeting of the Win-the-War League in that city, I am forced to the conclusion that in the League we have a third party in Canada. This third party is pushed forward at a time when an attempt is made to foster harmony in the community, and it will most certainly have quite the opposite effect. If the members of the League are sincere and disinterested in their attempts to win the war, my advice to them is to withdraw. They are likely to make more trouble than can possibly be caused by either of the old political parties.

They speak at considerable length about the Union Government. There are really no win-the-war representatives in the Cabinet. The members are either Liberal or Conservative, and no third party is recognized. Let us by all means have political peace.

UNIONIST.

It is only fair to state that he writer of the above letter is a Liberal in good standing in his own party, and a man who has no personal interest in the present local situation.—Ed. Review.

RUSSIAN ARMY REPULSE HUNS

GERMAN NAVAL SQUADRON IS NOW ANCHORED OFF MOON ISLAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Oct. 26. — Russian forces on the Worder coast of Bethonia yesterday repulsed a German detachment, the Russian war office announced today. Part of the German naval squadron, including some dreadnoughts, the statement adds, is anchored in Kuivast Bay, on the eastern side of Moon Island, in the Gulf of Riga.

The Russian troops on the northern end of the front, following the Germans in their withdrawal in that sector, have advanced as far as the Riga-Orel railway without discovering the enemy, the war office reports.

MASS MEETING OF CITIZENS TO BE HELD TUESDAY NIGHT TO DISCUSS QUESTION OF SELECTING WIN-THE-WAR CANDIDATE

Speeches Will be Delivered by Prominent Members of Ontario League After They Have Interviewed Sir Robert Borden---Platform Adopted by League at Toronto.

A mass meeting of citizens will be held on Tuesday night of next week in Victoria Hall under the auspices of the local branch of the Win-the-War League, for the purpose of discussing the question of placing a win-the-war candidate in the field. Full particulars as to program will be announced later. The speakers will be John M. Godfrey, president of the Ontario League; Col. C. R. McCullough, of Hamilton; Ben Gould, of Toronto, and Mrs. Hamilton, the well-known suffragist of the same city. The gentlemen mentioned were appointed a delegation to wait on Premier Borden at Ottawa to lay before him an official report of the deliberations of the meeting of the League held yesterday in Toronto. They will leave for Ottawa Sunday night and meet the Premier next Monday.

Mr. Gould is the American consul who renounced his citizenship and became a British subject as a protest against the attitude of the United States before war with Germany was formally declared.

THE LEAGUE MEETING.

Messrs. R. B. Rogers and J. A. Aylmer and Mesdames W. R. Morris and F. C. Neal were the local delegates to the Win-the-War League meeting in Toronto yesterday.

War Necessities.

The other statement, which one delegate referred to as "the ten commandments of the Win-the-war League, was as follows:

We believe in the following war necessities:

(1) The fullest possible participation by Canada in the war.

(2) The military service act of 1917 and its continued enforcement.

(3) The encouragement of shipbuilding and the training of crews.

(4) Conscription by taxation of wealth, and especially of war profits.

(5) Regulation when practicable of prices of food and necessities.

(6) Prohibition of the use of grain in the manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

(7) The curtailment or prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of luxuries.

(8) The mobilization, regulation and requisition, when necessary, by the Government of industries, utilities, resources and of the personal services of men and women for adding to Canadian war efectiveness.

(9) The promotion of Canadian unity and the elimination of party politics.

(10) The election of candidates pledged to support the Union Government.

One Way To Do It.

Col. Floyd of Cobourg said that in Northumberland party candidates were already in the field, and they refused to retire unless certain conditions were complied with.

"Call a meeting of the Executives of both parties and try and get them to agree on a candidate," advised Chairman Godfrey.

Mr. Kerwin Martin of Hamilton explained that legislation had been passed under which the sheep would be separated from the goats for the benefit of the soldiers. Borden would recognize his candidates and Laurier would do the same, after the nominations.

On motion of Mr. Martin the meeting decided to send greetings to the Hamilton Liberal Convention shortly to be held, and to express the hope that the meeting would be able o support the Union Government.

ONE HUNDRED NINETY SIX ARE FOR EXEMPTION

None Have Reported for Service for Two Days and a Half.

TEN HAVE SIGNED UP SO FAR

Save Trouble by Having Certificate When Applying for Exemption.

Postmaster Jas. Edgar reports that up to eleven-thirty this morning one hundred and ninety-six men have filled in exemption blanks and a paltry ten registered for duty in response to the signal that the British Empire expects every man to do his duty. There have been no reports for service for two days and a half now.

Not Examined

One Douro man this morning applied for exemption without having his medical certificate. He says his examination at the armories was deferred owing to so many applicants being ahead of him, and he finds it inconvenient to return to town again at an early date.

Get Examined First

In this connection men should bear in mind that the attaching of medical certificates to their application for exemption renders it unnecessary for them to appear at the tribunal personaly, therefore it is to their own advantage to undergo medical examination first and thus avoid inconvenience and trouble.

Applying For Others

Postmaster Edgar also wishes it distinctly understood that any person applying for exemption on behalf of another will have to appear before the tribunal himself or herself, as the case may be. The better policy to adopt, where the principal cannot apply personally, is to give reason advanced for exemption in writing. In such a case the applicant who is not the principal affected need not be present at the tribunal when application is considered.

BRITISH FORCES IN NEW ATTACK WIN AGAINST HUN LINE

Excellent Headway Made According to Official Reports From General Haig---French Attack Successfully and Join in Offensive

British Front in Belgium, Oct. 26—By Associated Press)—FieldMarshall Haig's forces this morning made two separate attacks on the German positions north and east of Ypres. The first was from a point near Saint Jansbeck westward through the southern fringe of the Houthulst ridge to the region of Nieuwemolen. The other assault was on both sides of the Ypres-Menin highway along the Cheluvelt ridge in the direction of the town of that name.

The British troops as well as the French, who also attacked on the left, made excellent headway, pushing forward on a wide front. A group of enemy guns on the high ground southeast of Cheluvelt, constituting one of the main defenses, was comparatively quiet This probably was due to the British heavy bombardment last night.

Again one of the greatest barraces yet seen was employed by the attackers. The preliminary bombardment was made more effective by the recent moving forward of the guns over the marshy ground. A brisk wind had dried the ground wonderfully.

Score Two Triumphs.

Shortly before 7 o'clock this morning British forces which began an offensive on the Ypres front were seen entering a German pill box upon the Bellevue spur and shortly afterwards signals showed that the British had carried Poelderhook Chateau which had been strongly fortified by the Germans, telegraphs the correspondent of Reuters Limited, at British headquarters in Belgium.

Hundreds of Prisoners.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The village of Draelbank, Papegoed Wood and a number of foreified farms were captured by the French in an attack launched this morning on Flanders front, the war office reports. Hundreds of prisoners were taken.

BRITISH GOVERN QUARTER OF EARTH'S WHOLE SURFACE

Brilliant Modern Historical Address by Chancellor McCrimmon—P.C.I. Assembly Hall Crowded—Facts Concerning British Empire Every Britisher Should Know.

The address on "The British Empire," in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, last night, by Chancellor McCrimmon of McMaster University was a real intellectual and modern historical treat, and not at all of an academical nature. His revealing truths of the might and power and resources of the British Empire, together with its influence on the world's mankind, were peculiarly acceptable at this time, when the British flag is in the van of modern democracies fighting for the liberties and national freedom of all races alike. The address was intensely interesting, instructive, revealing and far from dry. It was agreeably punctured with humor, and at times of a stirring aesthetic nature. The Chancellor's oratory is versatile, his utterances clear and his effort last night was a clear and concise presentation of facts and figures understandable to all present.

The occasion was an evening session of Peterboro City's Teachers' Institute Convention, attended by County teachers and the elite of this city. The hall was filled, there being quite five hundred present.

Influential Profession

Chancellor McCrimmon expressed his appreciation of the honor accorded him in the invitation to talk to a meeting under the auspices of the Teachers' Institutes of Peterboro city and county. His whole active life had been spent teaching, commencing in a rural school at Cross Roads and onward to post graduate work in McMaster University. He declared that no profession except the ministry exercises so much influence on individual and national life and character as that of teaching, and teachers should have more public sympathy and financial recognition than they are experiencing. Turning to his subject in the course of an hour and a quarter's address he said in part.

The British Empire is rather a large subject, in which there is plenty of room to knock about. We should sum up its resources, endeavor to understand its vast possibilities and ascertain our duty, as members of that empire, and our obligations in our relation to the remainder of the world.

The Kaiser's Mistake

The Kaiser made a tremendous mistake when he declared that the British Empire is waging war for more territory. It has enough as it is, when controlling 12 or 13 million square miles of territory out of the earth's 52 millions.

The British rule one quarter of the earths surface, but since Great Britain lost Calais to the French she has never attempted to acquire territory in Europe. The British Isles are composed of 120,000 square miles of land, in Europe the Empire has but 118 square miles, the remainder of its vast territory is made up in India, Asia, Australia, Canada, America and Islands all over the world. All this vast expansion of Great Britain's rule has been brought about since the days of Elizabeth, through adventure, indomitable energy and enterprise.

World Comparisons

Compared with other Empires the British is half again as big as Russia, two and a quarter times the size of the French and nine times as large as the German, and includes all races and religions and colors of men. We are practically represented wherever the sun shines. Sometimes I think he said that the British Empire is bounded on the north, south, east and west by the day of judgment, and as far as the Kaiser is concerned that day of judgment cannot come too soon.

The population of the world is 1700 million people of which 434 million are

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1917

AN OUTSIDE VIEW.

(Toledo, Ohio, News-Bee.)

Canada enfranchised a large part of her women to suppress political slackerism. In the next Canadian election every wife, mother or sister of a Canadian soldier overseas will cast the vote for her soldier, whether he be alive or well, in the hospital or buried "somewhere in France." At the same time new laws allow the soldiers in France and elsewhere to vote. The politicians who opposed conscription in Canada and counted on the immense slacker vote of Quebec to return them to office are up against the new political expedient, born of a nation's necessity. Canada has adopted woman suffrage as a military measure. The Canadian legislation conveys a valuable political hint to America also. A year from now, when a new Congress is elected, some three million American voters, the pick of the nation, may be in France. The slacker vote left behind might constitute a danger in some sections.

WHEN CONVENTIONS ARE NEEDED.

PREMIER BORDEN has issued an appeal for unity. Where there are two or more candidates in the field, they are asked to get together and decide which one is to stand on the win-the-war platform.

In some constituencies candidates nominated before the formation of the Union Government are withdrawing, leaving the field clear for a Unionist. In this way a contest is avoided.

There is only one regularly nominated candidate in either East or West Peterborough. Both are Unionists. Premier Borden's request for unity does not call for a joint convention to endorse these candidates.

If there were a Liberal and a Labor man in nomination in West Peterborough, and none of these was willing to give way to the others, then what Sir Robert Borden evidently has in mind is that a convention should be called so as to let the people decide. Peterborough in this case has plenty of precedents to follow, precedents that have been established in other ridings.

THE SOLDIERS' PLATFORM.

CANADA'S SOLDIERS at the front and at home have just two planks in their platform, says The Toronto Telegram:

1. Lam Laurier with ballots.
2. Hammer the Huns with bullets.

PATRONAGE ABOLISHED.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER not so long ago said that half the time of the members elected to Parliament on the majority side was taken up in treating with the office seeker whose political creed is set forth in the maxim that "to the victor belongs the spoils."

There are few members of Parliament who will not welcome as a relief the abolition of the patronage system, as announced by the Union Government. Candidates can go into the campaign without being pestered by party workers who, as a return for their services, exact a pledge of future favors. With the patronage bogey out of the road, elections in the future will be won more than ever on their merits.

SIR WILFRID'S PLATFORM.

WITH THAT FACULTY he has for getting at the root of everything, General Sir Sam Hughes says that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has "a pretty slick platform."

He has. As last announced, it should act as so much oil to the wounded feelings, and allay any uneasiness on the part of the only section of the community from whom Sir Wilfrid can hope for support.

If he is returned to power, he will at once leave for London and ascertain what the Imperial authorities ask Canada to do further in the war. If it can be shown to his satisfaction that more men are really needed, Sir Wilfrid will return to Canada and attempt to raise the recruits required by voluntary enlistment.

So far as this part of his platform is concerned, the operation of the Military Service Act has demonstrated the utter futility of relying further on the voluntary system.

Sir Wilfrid's plan is doomed to failure and his trip to England would be so much time worse than wasted. Everyone in Canada knows what is expected of the country in this crisis. The appeals of the soldiers for help tell the story.

Sir Wilfrid says he will never consent to conscription, lacking a mandate from the people. With the issue in this election clearly defined as it is, he would be justified in interpreting his return to power as a popular demonstration against military compulsion, and he would proceed no further. Canada's part in the war would be practically ended.

THE EXAMINER AND UNION.

THE EXAMINER has disclosed its policy to the extent of filing a semi-official demand for the holding of a joint convention to nominate a win-the-war candidate who will be pleasing to both parties. Further than that little is known of its program, although it is no difficult matter to read between the lines of its editorial utterances.

Posing as the friend of the soldiers, The Examiner proceeds to knock the only soldier candidate in sight in West Peterborough, throwing its columns wide open to anonymous carpers.

The Examiner has always conducted a submarine campaign against conscription. It seeks day after day to discredit the law by insinuating that it will be administered in the interests of the Government and party, in spite of the fact that the boards which will be charged with the local operation of the Act are composed of members who are above such petty partisan suspicion.

The Examiner is out and out in its opposition to the law which has for the duration of the war deprived the alien slackers of the vote. It insists, too, that the female relatives of the native-born slackers should be given the right to vote for their relatives to remain in safety at home while others fight their battles.

There is not a member of the party which The Examiner represents who does not take the same stand. They voice their sentiments in its columns anonymously and otherwise. Where in all that party is there to be found a candidate who would be acceptable to the soldiers or whom Sir Robert Borden could recommend to the consideration of the men in khaki?

The Examiner withholds from the Union Government the stamp of its approval. It knocks it at every turn, branding it as the resort of the opportunist. Yet it does not hesitate to call for a candidate of its own under the Union standard which it assumes to regard with scorn.

SAVING LEATHER.

THE UNITED STATES has set the world another example in economy. Owing to the scarcity of leather, the belts of the officers in the army are to be discarded, as it has been found that in one of these adornments there is more leather than the manufacturers were putting in the soles of the shoes required for half a dozen soldiers.

In the meantime Canada pursues the even tenor of its wasteful ways. The styles in ladies' shoes this year call for tops higher than ever. Last year cloth was substituted, but this fashion has been abandoned and the riot in leather resumed.

MR. PARDEE NOMINATED.

FRED PARDEE, M.P. for West Lambton and chief Liberal whip, but a win-the-war Liberal, has just been re-nominated. He was named as the candidate of his party two years ago, and in this respect is exactly in the same position as Capt. Burnham. In all parts of the Dominion there is being manifested a demand on the part of the people that political strife be dropped and that the entire energy of the nation be devoted to winning the war.

Win-the-war members of Parliament, regardless of party are in many ridings to be returned by acclamation. The Liberal who voted for the Military Service Bill will not be opposed by a Conservative. Members of the latter party are to be given a walkover or what amounts to an election by acclamation. No conscriptionist candidate can be opposed by any but a Laurier Liberal, and as such the latter leads a forlorn hope. The majority of the voters of West Peterborough are, we are convinced, opposed to having the riding torn up by political strife at such a time as this.

IT IS A CASE of either war bonds or bondage.

• • • •

AFTER THE WAR the taxes may be high, but if the Allies win the world will be better than ever as an abiding place.

• • • •

OVER IN MONTREAL the practical young men are beginning to send such valuables as eggs and other dainties to their fiancees instead of candy.

• • • •

WIN-THE-WAR candidates will be selected in all the constituencies in Alberta, and the task is easy, for the West is filled with patriots.

• • • •

• • • •

IF THE ELECTION is held on December 17th, Santa Claus will still have a chance to take up his usual line of business.

• • • •

THE ZEPPELINS seem to suffer more in those raids than even the cities that are bombed.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

The Richest Englishman.

(Buffalo Courier.)

The richest man in England is Sir John Ellerman, whose wealth is estimated to be $175,000,000, mostly invested in ships. At present he is one of the chief advisers of the Government in the matter of ocean shipping.

We Used To Like It.

(Boston Globe.)

Somebody rises to ask why people don't use salt instead of sugar on their breakfast cereals. It tastes better after a few meals, he says, and the sugar might be saved. How many people will agree to try the experiment for a week or two?

But Have They?

(Kingston Whig.)

The Liberal candidates in Brantford and Brockville have retired. If they run at all it will be as supporters of the Union Government and after new nominations have been made. Their example will be contagious.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

(Toronto Globe.)

Liberals who have broken away from the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the issue raised by the Military Service Act have done so with sorrow. For them there is no other choice. They believe that compulsory service resolves itself into a question of Canada's earnestness in every measure tending to hasten the end of the nightmare of terrorism that has drenched nations in blood, and that would strangle democracy on this continent as surely as it would kill freedom in Europe.

Can Russia Be Saved?

(London Daily News.)

The Germans are still a long way from Petrograd, but there is no power visible to check them. And if Petrograd were to fall the disaster would be irredeemable, for it would mean the loss of the power of manufacturing the material of war. Nor if the reactionaries win will there be any passion for material. Their sole purpose will be served when the Revolution is overthrown and the old regime is restored to become the creature of Potsdam and the tyrant of its own people. It was because they foresaw this that the makers of the Revolution so urgently desired peace on terms which would keep the Germans out and serve the cause of freedom. That cause is in deadly peril in Russia, and if it is lost in Russia it will be imperilled for all of us.

KEEP YOUR WEATHER EYE OPEN

Two hundred years ago smallpox was among the world's worst scourges. One-tenth of all deaths are said to have been caused by it.

The physicians of that time could do nothing to check its ravages. No means of preventing its occurrence was known; no sure method of treatment when it occurred.

This was the situation until one observant man, Edward Jenner, noticed that a certain class of people appeared to be immune against smallpox.

While the faces of royalty were pitted and disfigured by its destructive action, humble milkmaids invariably possessed smooth skin, and rosy complexions.

Yet the milkmaids were known to be peculiarly subjected to a pox of a mild sort, contracted by infection from the cows they milked.

Aware of this fact and perceiving also the contrast between the attractive faces of the milkmaids and the pockmarked faces of other people, Jenner asked himself:

"Can it be that the mild cowpox provides immunity against the dreaded smallpox?"

Experiment left no doubt that this question should be answered in the affirmative. Forthwith vaccination came into being.

Thus, because one man used his eyes, the world was at last relieved from an intolerable burden of physical and mental suffering.

Every beneficent discovery, every advance in practical knowledge, has similarly resulted from efficient use of the eyes, from intelligent observation.

And the world has not yet learned everything. There are innumerable problems to be solved, innumerable discoveries to be made.

If all men used their eyes efficiently these problems would quickly be solved, these discoveries soon made. The difficulty is that most men do not use their eyes as eyes were meant to be used.

The situation is much as it was in Jenner's time.

Thousands of physicians before Jenner must have seen that milkmaids were exceptionally free from smallpox. They must also have seen that these same milkmaids were exceptionally liable to cowpox.

But no physician before Jenner saw a possible relationship between the mild cowpox and immunity against smallpox.

All around us—in the home, the office, the store, the factory, the street—are other useful facts to be observed. The men who observe them are the men who achieve fame and success.

Think of those personally known to you as having risen in the world from humble positions.

This man rose because he saw a possible relationship between a clean store and an increase in patronage. That man because he saw a hitherto unnoticed but expensive waste in the manufacture of some article.

Here is a third man, today a millionaire, who gained wealth through seeing the eagerness with which people flocked to "bargain counters," and rightly inferring that they would flock with greater eagerness to "bargain stores."

Use your eyes.

TODAY'S STORY

A certain milkman with no fear of Inspector Ward before his eyes was in the habit of watering his milk to the required consistency before starting on his rounds in the morning.

One day recently, by some unlucky chance, the man omitted to do so, but, to his joy, he discovered at the first house he called at a huge cask strongly banded with iron, and filled to the brim with water, the head having apparently just been taken off.

Such a chance of repairing his neglect was too good to be lost, and the milkman had just succeeded in watering the milk most satisfactorily, when the figure of the master of the house appeared in the doorway and a voice asked, sweetly: "Are you sure you've put in enough, my man?"

Poor John was petrified.

"If I were you," continued the voice, "I would have chosen some other cask. My doctor has ordered me a course of sea water baths, you know, and you have just mixed your milk with salt water. But perhaps your customers like it that way."

subject to the British flag. Sixty million British whites govern 374 millions other than of European origin, and are responsible for educating them in political understanding, a civic sense of conditions which make for the ideal, and in national economy.

Self Sufficiency

The British Empire is self-sufficient in its products, in coal, cotton, mahogany, wool, sheep, butter, spices, tapioca, fish, sugar, coffee, wheat, iron, steel, gold, and in fact all vital necessities. The British Isles produce one quarter of the world's coal and one eighth of the globe's iron. Of wheat Canada grows yearly 240 million bushels, India 400 million and the wheat production of these two colonies, with Australia is four times that of France and six times as large as that of Germany. One thousand million pounds of wool comes yearly from Australia, 1700 million pounds of cotton from India, 75 millions in gold from the Trans Vaal (more than half the world's supply.)

Finance and Commerce

Financially, continued the speaker, London still is the centre of the world and Great Britain the world's broker. Before the war the yearly commerce of the world represented was 35 thousand million dollars; of this seven thousand millions, or one fifth that of the whole world was controlled by Great Britain. One third of the world's commerce—Eleven and one third thousand millions is operated by the British Empire. The precapita of British commerce is $125 for every man, woman and child, that of Germany $67 for every man, woman and child, and yet the war tyrants of Europe declare Britain is waging war because commercially, Germany is catching up to her.

Unity of Defence

The Chancellor here enlogized Britain's policy of defence as one emanating from wonderful political and national genius. When one looks at the Empire's geographical situation, the need for keeping communication intact is really seen; and this can only be accomplished by a dominating navy, for the British Empire holds all the stragetical points of world—communication. Coal enters into the situation here and the best in the world is produced by Great Britain, which is stocked at stations here and there the world over, for the use of her mighty fleets. The speaker here briefly reviewed the history of Britain's navy from the days of King Alfred to when it smashed the power of Spain and won its position as the dominating power in naval attack. The policy of Britain at one time was absolute independence and to maintain a navy at least twice the strength of that of the second strongest in the world, and to hold naval bases in all parts of the globe. Changes in foreign policies, however, and the growing naval power of other nations rendered it expedient to abandon her state of splendid isolation, form alliances and expect from the colonies naval contributions to preserve the safety and integrity of the Empire as a whole.

Open Door Policy

Turning to Britain's policy of the open door and freedom of the seas, Chancellor McCrimmon declared that while no vessel can leave any port in the whole world except by permission of the British fleet, other nations admit that she exercises her power in such a way that none feels the slightest restraint. And he would like to know what the world's experience in this respect would be were it dominated by tyrannical Germany.

Democratic Genius

Touching on comparisons between Imperial government and colonial self government, the social expansion of the British Empire by means of cable communication and the agitation for an all red route within the Empire, and the fostering of religious and political freedom wherever the British flag flies, the forceful speaker next turned his attention to Britain's political principles and influence. Her democratic genius evolved at Runnymead has blossomed forth and spread to France, through the world and to the Plains of Abraham. Her spirit of absolute justice to all her wealth of literature, the integrity of her connections, the morality of her association with other nations has had beneficial influence on mankind. As a result of this war were the British Empire's policy of advanced civilization replaced by that of Hun barbarism and pleutosratic tyranny the wheels of time would be turned back to the days of mediaeval history.

It is not Worth While?

In conclusion the Chancellor urged that in solving the populational problem Canada deals wisely and considerately with those races such as the Hindoos who are fighting with us on the planes of Flanders in defence of civilization, liberty and justice, and hoped that the British policy in regard to their immigration would be assimilated. Now that the English speaking races had united in one great cause he was exceedingly optimistic of the world's future, and hoped for an expansion of local defence, and unification of armament in preservation of world harmony and peace. He asked acceptance of the wonderful possibilities of the Empire for world up-lifting, which is stimulated by the great heritage which is ours. "The love we have for the centre of the British Empire," he contended, "means more to Canadians today than ever before, now that we have invested our life's blood in defence of the liberties of the whole human race. As a unit the English speaking race cannot be assailed with impunity, and is it not worth while to have a part in so great a course as that in which the Empire and her allies are engaged. The finest democracy in the world is that of the British Empire and the United States.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 109 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 133 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. Wm. CANADIAN BUTTERMAKERS DO NOT ADULTERATE PRODUCT

At the present time when the price of all foods is soaring almost beyond the grasp of the average housewife, it behooves the housekeeper to see that what she does buy has the essential nutriment and qualities of purity for which they are paying.

There is perhaps no meaner food profiteer than the manufacturer who sells prepared food that is not what it professes to be, a product that is cheating men, women and children out of the quality of food they need.

The Government at Ottawa endeavors to protect the people by its laboratory for food analyses. If any person purchases prepared food which she considers is not up to the required standard, she can send it to this department to be analyzed.

Butter Analyzed

For instance, at the beginning of this year, complaints had been made suggesting that there was an extensive sale of oleomargarine purporting to be butter, or as a butter substitute, being carried on.

During the first three months of the year, Government inspectors assembled 228 samples of butter from various sources. Not one single sample proved to be oleomargarine. But it was found that in seven cases there was an excessive amount of water incorporated in the butter and in a few cases there was too little fat.

There are certain required standards for butter. One is that 16 per cent. is the maximum amount of water permissible. Another is that it must contain 82.5 per cent. of milk fat.

Of the 228 samples examined, 187 contained the required percentage of fat, while many even exceeded the limit. Six samples showed a deficiency of from 5 to 13 per cent. of fat.

Who Was Honest?

The Government report printed in pamphlet form and available to the public tells precisely which manufacturing firms failed to live up to the requirements at the time the investigation was made.

Not one instance of a Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, or Prince Edward Island manufacturer, showed adulteration or excess of water. And one Prince Edward Island butter manufacturer instead of giving only 82.5 per cent. fat, gave 90.90 per cent.

In Quebec there were two instances where the fat was below the standard, the same two showing adulteration and excessive water (which, of course, means that the buyer paid for water instead of butter to a certain small per cent.)

Three Ontario Firms

Looking through the report of the Ontario firms, there is a clean sheet until you come to one Toronto firm and two Hamilton firms handling butter. Here, again, was excessive water, evidences of the butter being adulterated and in one case, fat 6 per cent. below standard.

Clean Sheet for West

Through the west until you reached the Rocky Mountain district, the report showed nothing wrong. One firm of Nelson B.C., in the Rockies, had fat 13 per cent below the standard (which makes it 21 per cent. less than the generous Prince Edward Island man). Two Vancouver merchants offended with below-standard product.

With those few exceptions, there was practically nothing to complain of in all Canada's buttermakers, so far as the samples tested could show.

There are continual outcries against the price of butter, but there is at least the satisfaction of knowing that the product you buy is pure.

What's that?

Oh, I said I'd give you one this week, and it's wrong to break my word? Now, look here, you don't know what you're talking about. It's not wrong; it's only fashionable.

Eh, what do I mean by fashionable? Why, all the big fellers do it. Even Mr. Hanna says he will set a price on potatoes, when it looked as though there were too many, and then broke his word when it was discovered that the crop wasn't up to expectations. What he does must be right, for a Food Controller must be like a certain lady mentioned in the Bible—"above suspicion."

Eh! what?

Yes, Potatoes will be 25c a peck here, and of course I'll sell those Hams.

Eh? Well, I'll see about next week. But for this week you can just say A. W. PASKINS, Corner of Hunter and Aylmer Sts., is still doing business at the old prices.

DRIED PEA PUREE.

Dried peas are both nutritious and good, and deserve more attention than they receive in most homes. The following is a delightful way in which to serve them:

1 cup dried green peas,
3 cups water,
Few grains soda,
2 tablespoons butter,
Salt and pepper.

Put the dried green peas through grain mill or food chopper and soak over night in three cupfuls of cold water. Then cook in this same water with a few grains of soda until very soft and the water is nearly evaporated. Rub through a sieve, add butter, salt and pepper to taste, and beat until light.

FRIED BARLEY BALLS.

One quart boiling water, 1¼ cups barley meal, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon butter substitute and 2 small eggs.

Cook barley meal in the boiling salted water for at least one hour, using a double boiler. Cool, add the butter and well-beaten eggs. Form into balls, roll in flour, and fry in deep fat.

Of course, you can buy cheaper teas, but is undoubtedly the most economical and what appears to be 'cheap' in price will prove to be extravagant in use. The fresh young leaves of "Salada" will yield you generous value for your money.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

A novel idea that pleases and surprises at a children's party may be made in the following manner: After baking any plain loaf cake, cut a number of little square holes in the top in such a way that one will come on each piece when the cake is cut. Into each hole press an opera-size chocolate cream, return the "lid" of the cake to its place, removing a little of the cake if necessary. Ice the cake thickly to cover the irregularities of the cutting.

The extra trouble is not great, and the children are always delighted when the candy is discovered.

WHOLESOME BREAD.

Whole wheat bread is much more wholesome than that from refined flours.

BEGIN AT HOME.

That charity begins at home is true in more ways than one. The housewife who plans her meals so as to get the most nourishment from the least amount of food, who buys only what she needs and who sees that nothing is wasted that can possibly be saved, is giving food to her neighbors as truly as though she carried it to them. We must realize that there is only so much food in the world and that the lack of what we waste may cause our neighbors to go hungry.

MILITIA MEN IN CLASS ONE MAY ESCAPE DRAFT

Many Holders of Commissions Volunteer Their Services in Any Capacity.

FIFTY-THREE MEN EXAMINED

Result of Last Night's Medical Examining Was 5 A's, and 5 E's.

The rush for medical examination at the armories still continues, although a slackening up in the number of outof-town applicants is expected in a few days. Fifty-three passed under examination yesterday, and were certificated as follows: Category A 32, B Category two, and E Category 19.

Only Ten Last Night

The Medical Examining Board quit earlier than usual last night with ten men graded in two categories— five A's and five E's. This was the first actual fifty-fifty record yet registered.

Twenty Yesterday Afternoon

Yesterday afternoon again taxed the doctors' energies with twenty different examinations—the quality of physical manhood was poor. The grading resulted as follows: A Category ten, B two and E eight.

Militia Officers May Escape

In spite of former announcements that militia officers will be exempt from draft it begins to look as though those who come in class A may have to enlist. The military headquarters officials have been looking into the matter more carefully, and in spite of recent announcements, the impression seems to be that the holder of a commission cannot be compelled to serve in the ranks. The authorities, however, are expecting a considerable number of militia officers to volunteer services in any capacity, and those who do so will be seconded and will retain their militia rank when they return. Any steps on the part of the higher officers will depend largely on the number of Grade A militia officers there may be in Class One, and it is suggested that if the number is found to be large the department may find a way around the difficulty by requesting them to resign their commissions in the militia temporarily. After this was done, the men could be drafted as privates, the same as the ordinary civilian.

WAR LEAGUE DECIDES TO SUPPORT ALL UNIONISTS

If Both Political Parties Fail to Unite on Candidate League Will Aid One Who Agrees to Stand for Union Government

Toronto, Oct. 26.—The Council of the Ontario Win-the-War League at a luncheon in the Carls-Rite Hotel yesterday passed a resolution supporting the Union Government and pledging itself to secure the election irrespective of previous party affiliations of candidates pledged to support of the Union Government. At the same time a resolution was passed that the Union Government ought not to recognize any candidate, nominated solely by any political party.

Just how the candidates who have been nominated by their parties can be induced to drop their nominations and run for a Unionist nomination, was a problem that the council found difficult to solve for some time.

He was told that any body of citizens had the right to call a convention.

President J. M. Godfrey thought that every means should be first exhausted in an endeavor to get the executive of both parties to unite in nominating a candidate.

Mr. Kerwin Martin, of Hamilton, pointed out that it was not in the Unionist candidate. "That is something that Premier Borden has to decide as to who should be the power of any organization to finally decide," he said.

Another delegate stated that it was the duty of the Win-the-War League to support candidates of win-the-war principles, and thereby make the Premier's selection an easy one.

Will Support Unionists.

It was finally decided that while it was advisable to have both parties unite on a Union candidate, that if this were impossible, the league would support the candidate who supported the Union Government.

On the motion of J. G. O'Donoghue it was unanimously decided that a committee of three, to be appointed by the president, should wait upon the Premier and express the views of the league.

SINN FEINERS IN CONFERENCE

WILL INSIST THAT IRELAND BE MADE AN INDEPENDENT REPUBLIC.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Oct. 26.—The Sinn Fein conference, reporting 250,000 members at its session last night, decided that the members of the organization should be trained in the use of arms. The conference promised that the Provisional Government of Ireland should be established without delay, and adopted a provisional constitution aimed at, securing international recognition of Ireland as an independent republic.

TOOK CHICKENS FROM NEIGHBOR

EAST CITY WOMAN CONVICTED BY MAGISTRATE AND WAS ASSESSED $13.60.

Mrs. Keyes, who was remanded a week ago on a charge of having stolen three chickens from her neighbor John McWilliams of Weir street, East City, was this morning, at the police court, fined the value of the chickens, $6.00, and costs of proceedings, $7.60, $13.60 in all.

His worship, in making judgment, said, "The evidence satisfies me that you took the birds. They were alive when taken, you could not have caught them but in the hen house, which was broken into on the date in question. Now I'm going to give you the value of the chickens, and make you pay the costs of the court. In default of payment in five days, imprisonment."

Imprisonment! I'll Pay.

Mrs. Keyes—"What does that mean, Sir?"

Chief Thompson—"It means that if you don't pay $13.60 you will go to jail."

Mrs. Keyes—"It will be paid."

On leaving the witness box, Mrs Keyes, struck by an after thought, said, "See here. I want that man McWilliams bound over to keep the peace. Nobody knows what I have put up with from him."

Chief Thompson—"You'll have to produce evidence."

Mrs. Keyes here departed, whether to seek this evidence or not is unknown.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANDRUFF

HAIR BECOMES CHARMING, WAVY, LUSTROUS, THICK IN A FEW MOMENTS.

Girls, Beautify kk.heRYm

EVERY BIT OF DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS AND HAIR STOPS COMING OUT.

For a few cents you can save your hair. In less than ten minutes you can double its beauty. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant, and appears as soft, lustrous and charming as a young girl's after applying some Danderine. Also try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few minutes you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

POLICE EARNING THEIR WAGES

RAID ON LOCAL BICYCLE RIDERS ON SIDEWALKS CONTINUES.

If latest informations are sustained, within the last ten days twenty wheelmen will have each been fined $2.00 and costs of $2.60 for riding on the sidewalks. This represents a total assessment of $92 on Wednesday and five cyclists were within the police toils, and assessed $4 60 each; yesterday six others suffered the same penalty, while this morning five informations are laid. Four others were fined previous to Wednesday.

Citizens in general will appreciate the police's efforts to enforce the bylaw in this connection.

Fall in Bicycles.

His worship remarked this morning that there will be a big fall in bicycles if this thing is going to keep up. "They will lose their value if wheelmen can't ride over people."

Montreal, Oct. 26. The College of Surgeon Dentists of the Province of Quebec at its annual meeting voted almost unanimously in favor of abolishing the rule prohibiting newspaper advertising by dentists. Failing the thirty days' notice which would be necessary to make the vote immediately effective, the motion must now be passed on by the board of governors. Favorable action by the board is expected.

MUST GO TO SCHOOL.

Citizens Charged With Keeping Little One At Home to Mind Baby

A father named Shaw appeared at the police court this morning to answer as to why he did not send two children between the ages of eight and fourteen to school.

His worship severely lectured the defendant for sending his wife to court yesterday to answer a charge laid against himself.

Shaw's defence was that but one of his children is of school age; the other, a ten years old girl, had to be kept at home to mind the baby, he being sick with rheumatism, and his wife going out to work. The child is going to school now.

On promising to keep the little one at school regularly defendant was discharged.

GEN. SAM HUGHES SAYS UNIONISTS SHOULD WIN

Toronto, Oct. 26. — Sir Sam Hughes, ex-Minister of Militia, who arrived from Montreal, stated in an interview that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had a "pretty slick policy" for the coming election. He heard it in Montreal on good authority, and it was to the effect that if Sir Wilfrid is elected he will not enforce the Military Service Act, but will set to work to fill the ranks with a vigorous volunteer policy. If that fails, Sir Wilfrid promises to refer the question of conscription to the people by means of a referendum.

Sir Sam, when questioned as to his views on the new War Cabinet of the Union Government, replied, "I am not in a position to judge. You have to judge them by their work."

"What is your opinion of the personnel of the new Government, Sir Sam?"

Able and Sensible Men.

"I haven't any opinions," Sir Sam answered, "but they are a lot of very able and very sensible men."

"How do you think the new Government will work out?" was the next question put to Sir Sam.

He again avoided it by saying: "I have not any thoughts on that subject. I judge things by results."

"Are you going to run as Union Government, Sir Sam?"

"I am running as the representative of the people of Victoria County, who are a very intelligent lot of people," replied the ex-Minister.

"Are you going to support the new Union Government?"

"I will give support to any Government that will show action and a vigorous war policy, and anyway no member should be tied down to support any Government," commented the Knight.

"Can the Union Government carry the country?" was the next question.

Will Support Act.

"It should win hands down," he replied. "Those who want the war carried on will support it."

Sir Sam Hughes was also certain that the Canadian people would whole-heartedly support the Military Service Act. "The men in this country obey the law," he emphatically declared. "There are no skulkers in Canada."

When questioned as to the situation in Quebec, Sir Sam stated that they are not reporting very heavily down there, and when asked as to the success of the Military Service Act he replied: "I will tell you better two years from today."

Sir Sam is billed to speak before the Robert Burns Club tonight and tomorrow night he will address the Toronto Liberal-Conservative Club in St. George's Hall.

FAIRYLAND IS SEEN AT GRAND

"A DAUGHTER OF THE GODS" IS CALLED GREATEST PICTURE EVER SHOWN.

"The Daughter of the Gods," the moving picture now running at the Grand many not be the most popular production of its kind ever staged, but it is certainly a marvel of its class. No moving picture line cost so much money to produce. There are more people in the cast than are included in any film ever yet flashed on a screen. It reveals the hidden secrets of the spirit world and of Fairyland. It grasps the audience and holds their interest from the first to the closing scene.

Some of the scenery is grand, especially the river the course of which in the original war diverted to create a mountain torrent. The reproduction of ancient cities and costumes are one to life and through the entire plot there runs a moral thread showing the conflict between good and evil with the ultimate real triumph of the former.

The exhibition as an educational factor is entitled to the patronage of the public. There was a special matinee today for school children and the little people centainly were pleased with a glimpse of the daily lives of the race, the adult members of which are no bigger than themselves.

The pitcure will be shown for the balance of the week with the usual Saturday matinee.

Berlin Says That 30,000 Are Taken

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Oct. 26.—The Austro-Germans in their offensive on the Isonzo front have captured more than 30,000 Italians, the war office announced today. More than 300 guns also were taken.

NOTABLES AT S.S. CONVENTION

Among the distinguished church workers expected at the Sunday School Convention for Eastern Ontario which will open a three-day session in this city October 30 are Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner and Mr. R. A. Waite.

Mrs. Bryner has had the longest public career in the Sunday School field of any woman on the continent. More than twenty years ago she began to be used by the Illinois Sunday School Association. Her excellence soon brought her into demand, and she visited different parts of Canada, as well as many parts of the States, before 1900. Since that time most of her work has been with the staff of the International Sunday School Association, first as general field worker, then for nine years Superintendent Elementary Division. No member that has ever been on the International staff, or is now on it, has as wide a grasp of the full range of Sunday School problems as Mrs. Bryner. Her late sister, Mrs Zillah Foster Stevens, of Alton, Ill., deserves the credit for organizing and launching the Temperance Department of the International Sunday School Association. They were famous sisters.

Mr. Waite is credited with having sent more boys, that is influenced more boys, to go to college than any other man in North America. If this be true, the occasion was furnished him during the nine years spent as Superintendent of the Religious Work Department, Boys' Division, of the International Y.M.C.A. While engaged thus, he spent a winter in the campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement some seven or eight years ago. Later on he resigned from the public work, and took a pastorate in a Congregational Church in Lincoln, Nebraska, but he could not be confined to one place, and during the present year was induced to accept the position of Associate Superintendent of the Secondary Division (Teen age) of the International Sunday School Association. Mr. Waite's father is a continent famous architect, with two monuments to his credit in Toronto the Parliament Buildings of Ontario in Queen's Park, and the Canada Life Bldg. on King street.

MARRIAGE ANNULLED

By Consent, As Couple Were Related to Each Other

Quebec, Oct. 26.—By mutual consent in the Superior Court the marriage of Marie Lucias Gaudet and J. H. J. Gosselin was annulled. Both are Roman Catholics. They were married at Cohoes, N.Y., some years ago. The marriage was annulled by Judge Cannon on the ground that the couple were related to each other previously to their marriage. The annulment was requested by the wife. The husband did not contest the case.

STREET LINE DETERMINED.

In regard to the threatened application by Mr. Grey for an injunction to prevent the erection of the new face wall to the old Snowden House building on propsed frontage line, on the ground that it would abut on the street, City Engineer Parsons has determined that the survey, which runs on a line with Banks' garage building, is perfectly correct. The adjoining building to the west is twenty inches back from the proper street line, according to the decision of the engineer.

WINES UNDER ANALYSIS.

License Board Prepares to Prosecute Manufacturers.

The Ontario License Board has six samples of different wines that are being manufactured throughout the province undergoing analysis. The Board believes that these wines are a violation of the Ontario Temperance Act. The analysis will reveal whether or not this contention is correct. Chairman Flavelle states that when the result of the analysis is at hand they will put it up to the manufacturer. He must either cease making the wines or be prosecuted. The Board intends to stop the selling of these wines by getting after the manufacturers first and later those who persist in selling them.

CAPT. HOPKINS IS GAZETTED

ONE OF FIRST UNIVERSITY MEN TO ENLIST WINS RANK OF FLIGHT-COMMANDER.

A student at University College of the year 1916, he volunteered for service at the outbreak of war, but was not attached until the 39th battalion was formed. He remained with this unit as lieutenant, and then Captain, until the battalion got to England, going from there to France with the 1st. In the summer of 1916 Captain Hopkins transferred to the Royal Flying Corps, and returned to take his training in England, after which he was attached to the 35th Squadron. In August last he became acting flight-commander and has now been officially gazetted.

Flight-Commander Hopkins is the third of the family connection to enlist. Two cousins, also university men, went overseas. Lieut.-Col. Fred Hopkins, who was killed in a motor accident in England, and his brother Lieut. R. H. Hopkins, B.A.Sc., 1907, now on active service.

TWO BILLIONS FOR WAR FUND

WILL COST THAT TO CARRY ON OPERATIONS UNTIL DECEMBER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 26.—The Government announced today that it will ask the commons Tuesday for an interim credit of two billion dollars to finance the war until December when an additional credit will be asked for.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

CANADA

Will Class One Provide The One Hundred Thousand Men?

It will be greatly to the advantage of Canada if the entire quota of 100,000 men to be raised under the Military Service Act can be secured from the first class; that is, from the men between the ages of 20 and 34 who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6th, 1917.

it is admitted that, between the ages of 20 and 34, the average man is at the height of his physical strength and is most adaptable to the change of conditions from civilian life;

the military Service of unmarried men and widowers without children would occasion less distress than that of most others, since they are largely without dependents. Also, it would entail less financial burden for Canada, through separation allowances, etc.

Authorities estimate that, after all proper examinations have been allowed, Canada should be able to produce from the first class 100,000 men fit for service, so the drain upon the man power of the country will not be severe.

Members of Class One will be well advised to present themselves for examination immediately to the Medical Board in their district. Upon examination as to their physical fitness, they will be placed in one of the following categories:

Category A—if fit for service in overseas fighting units.
Category B—if fit for service overseas in Army Medical Corps, Forestry Battalion, etc.
Category C—if fit for service in Canada only.
Category E—if unfit for military service of any nature.

If not placed in category A, the applicant will know that he is not liable for immediate service, but will go to the Post Office and send in a claim for exemption with his Medical Certificate attached, when he will receive in due course a certificate of exemption until those in his medical category are summoned for service.

Where a man, who is placed in category A, feels that exemption should be allowed, an application form can be secured from the postmaster. This form, when filled in, will be forwarded by the postmaster to the registrar of the district, and the applicant will be informed by mail as to the time and place for the consideration of his application by the Exemption Board.

Issued By The Military Service Council.

HORSEMEN WANT TO HOLD SEVEN DAY MEET IN 1918

Dominion Government to be Asked to Modify Regulations Passed This Year.

An agitation is already on foot to have the Dominion government sanction a seven days' meeting next year in each of the cities that had only one week's racing this season.

Racing in Ontario during the abbreviated season recently closed was responsible for over $150,000 passing into the treasury of this province from war tax and the daily license fee. The horsemen racing on canuck tracks and the Canadian Jockey Clubs repeatedly did "their bit" in the way of contributions and assisted in promoting schemes to raise money for patriotic purposes. The first call came from the Toronto Sportsmen's association, which put the 180th (Sportsmen's) battalion in the field, the Toronto to Hamilton race train was made the first target from which to draw funds. The first man approached put a cold $100 in the hat. The net result of the canvass of the train started the Sportsmen's association with a tidy sum on the right side of the ledger. The horsemen and racing associations are still anxious to continue in helping along the good cause. Plans are already under way among harness horsemen and the Toronto driving clubs to give a harness meeting here on the ice for patriotic purposes about Christmas time. The owners of the thoroughbreds are equally anxious for a resumption of racing next spring. In order to secure as much money as possible for patriotic purposes, they are willing to race for greatly reduced purses, the remainder to go to the "win the-war" campaign. The jockey clubs would no doubt contribute their share of the profits also over and above the legitimate expenses of operating and the up-keep of their plants. Under these conditions the horsemen would be given an opportunity of making enough to cover the expenses of maintaining their stables. The public, too, would be given entertainment for the money they would so cheerfully be contributing to the great cause of the present day.

A suggestion has been made that the new union government make provision for limited racing next year by allowing one meeting of seven days each to those jockey clubs which held only one meeting in 1917. This would be the fairest solution of the situation and would give the horsemen an opportunity to earn the keep of their horses as well as provide funds for the Red Cross and kindred war objects.

A second strike of the operators and linemen of the G.N.W. Telegraph Co. is threatened because of the dismissal of six girls from the printing department of the Montreal main office who went out in the recent strike.

More Polish American recruits have arrived rom Pennsylvania and other parts of the United States at Camp Niagara within the past few days. It seems to be settled that this camp is to be kept open all winter.

When two or more women get together one of the things you don't hear is silence.

DETROIT CLUB PLANS AHEAD

Manager Harry Brown of the Detroit Hockey club, is sending out information to the effect that Hamilton Rowing club will open the season in the City of Straits in a series of games. We hardly think so, say the Hamilton Herald. It is extremely doubtful if there will be an intermediate O.H.A. team here at all this winter. Billy Coir and Harold Reid, two of the mainstays of last year's intermediate champions, are now overseas; Billy Boyd and Alex. Murray will leave shortly to undergo training in the Royal Aviation corps, and Grant McEwen says he has played his last hockey game. That leaves only Goalkeeper Frank Sloan, Leo Reise and Harold Parker, and there is not sufficient material available to plug up the gaps. It certainly doesn't look like a rosy hockey season, as far as Hamilton is concerned. It would not be so bad, if the hockey stars who are enlisting remained in Hamilton during the winter, but Boyd and Murray will probably go to Texas for training.

LAURIER MANIFESTO.

Will Probably Be Ready to Issue Early Next Week.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier is preparing a manifesto to the country outlining his policy in the coming elections. He has been working on it all this week, and it is believed it will be ready to be issued about next Monday. Sir Wilfrid went to Montreal this morning to consult his Quebec followers in regard to the manifesto.

His Quebec lieutenants are, at least a portion of them, insistent that the manifesto should contain a clause announcing that if returned the Military Service Bill will be repealed.

BOWLING

Last night in a five pin league fixture played on the Water street alleys, the West Ends won two of the three games from the Eurekas. FIRE DESTROYS AN EXPLOSIVES PLANT NEAR MONTREAL EARLY THIS MORNING.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Part of the plant of the Canada Explosives Company at Vaudreuil was destroyed by fire at seven o'clock this morning and fifteen hundred hands employed had to beat a hasty retreat from the premises. Early reports from Vaudreuil indicated that there had been no loss of life. The neighborhood was rocked at intervals for nearly an hour by tremendous explosions while the sky was lit up with all the colors of the rainbow from the flames of burning acids.

The fire started in the shell filling house and a heavy wind blew the flames across remainder of the plant. A special train with fire fighting apparatus was sent from Montreal.

The regular monthly business meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club was held on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The president, Mrs. J. F. Crowley, was in the chair. The secretary gave an interesting report of the work done during the month of October, which is as follows:

Ten grey flannel shirts, twelve pairs pyjamas, one hundred and one sheets, four pillow cases, four hundred and three towels, thirteen wash cloths and six dressing gowns. During the past week the members have been busily engaged packing Christmas boxes for the boys overseas, and one hundred and twenty-four boxes have been shipped to Miss Plummer, each box containig a pair of socks, Christmas cake, writing pad, envelopes and lead pencil, shaving soap, tooth paste, tooth brush, two packages of gum, two bars of chocolate, three packages of cigarettes and one package of tobacco.

EDITOR'S MAIL

NO TIME FOR CONVENTIONS.

Editor Review: We are too busily engaged with more serious business to think of conventions and elections. The people vitally affected by this terrible war shudder at such corruptible suggestions.

CITIZEN.

Editor Review: I notice by The Examiner that Mr. Gordon states that Capt. Burnham is not a Union candidate. Let me state right here, sir, that Capt. Burnham is a conscriptionist or rather a selective draft man, and furthermore he is the soldiers' candidate. We have tried him and know where to find him. The returned soldiers and those with sons and fbriends at the front are behind him to a man. If he does not represent Mr. Gordon, we cannot help that. It looks as if this gentleman was trying to crawl in as a representative of the slacker.

RETURNED SOLDIER.

This is a sour world for the man with a sour disposition.

NEW WALTZ BY MR. ASA HUYCKE

"ALLURING" IS NAME OF TUNE, AND ALLURING IT IS BY NATURE.

Peterborough's talented young music composer, Mr. Asa Huycke, has copyrighted both in Canada and the United States a new waltz, entitled "Waltz Alluring," which is winning its way rapidly into the affections of all piano artists. Alluring by name and alluring in effect, this latest inspiration by Mr. Huycke is enjoying large sales both at home and abroad. The Peterboro Music Co. are the publishers.

Mr. Asa Huycke is also well and favorably known as the composer of the popular march "Irresistible," and he likewise set the soul-stirring music to Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse's "Battle Hymn."

MASS MEETING

The declaration of policy was in the following terms:

The Council of the Ontario Win-the-war League hereby declares.

(1) It supports the Union Non-partisan Government now established and will strive at the approaching elections to secure the election—irrespective of previous party affiliation—of candidates pledged to the support of this Government and of the policies which it has announced.

(2) It heartily endorses the policies of the Union Government as set forth in the manifesto issued by the Prime Minister on the eighteenth of October 1917, and is prepared to support the Government if it shall promulgate even more drastic policies for making Canada effective in the war, including the compulsory service, where needed, of its men and women in industrial and administrative as well as in military capacities; the commandeering or compulsory operation for Government account of utilities, industries, businesses and other resources; the encouragement of shipbuilding and the training of crews; the regulation of the prices of food and other necessities; the curtailment or prohibition of the importation, manufacture or sale of luxuries; the placing of embargoes upon exportation except under license, and the prohibition of the use of grain in the production of alcoholic beverages.

It is convinced that the safety of the nation demands that the election of members of Parliament to support this Union Government be assured by disregarding all questions of individual or party preferment, and by arranging, wherever possible, the election by acclamation of candidates pledged to such support. It believes that candidates should submit themselves to an open convention of all the Unionist electors of the riding—called irrespective of previous party affiliation—and that the choice of such convention should become the Government candidate and be entitled to the support of this league.

No Gift Like Socks for the Soldiers

CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE MAKE ANOTHER APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC.

A business meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League was held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening last, and the following officers elected for the year:

Pres.—Mrs. Jos. Knox.
R. Sec.—Mrs. Pitchford.
Cor. Sec.—Miss G. Mowat.
Treas. Mrs. Jos. Kimberly.

The reports showed socks shipped from February 1st, 1917, to October 16th, 1917, 1520 pairs. The cash on hand, $721.00.

The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League have decided that no better Christmas presents can be sent to the boys in the trenches than socks, and the League once again appeals to the ladies of Peterborough to spare all the time possible for the next two weeks, and help to make this gift to the boys as generous as possible. Yarn can be obtained from the Peterborough Creamery, Aylmer street, and the home of the president, Mrs. Knox, 481 Gilmour street.

REV. H. J. KEITH ON VISIT HERE

WILL PREACH IN KNOX CHURCH HIS FORMER CHARGE ON SUNDAY.

Rev. Henry J. Keith of Westminster Church, Edmonton, is expected to arrive in this city tomorrow evening. He has consented to conduct morning and evening services in Knox Church, his former charge, and his many friends in Peterborough will no doubt be glad of an opportunity to hear him again. While here he will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. McCulloch, Charlotte street.

TEACHERS IN LAST SESSION

Yesterday afternoon's session of the Peterborough City Teachers Convention met in the Public Library assembly room at 2 o'clock.

The session opened with a report of the delegates to the Ontario Educational Association. This consisted of a clear comprehensive and profitable collection of fact as gathered from various speakers at the O.E.A. Miss E. Thomas and Mr. L. J. Colling took charge of this portion of the program in a very efficient and interesting manner.

Paper on Composition.

This report was followed by a paper on Composition given by Miss M. G. Oakley, B.A. Paed.

To not teach composition in a proper manner would be our best way to discard the best interests of education and rob the pupil of opportunities of self expression which plays so important a part in the life of a child.

Language is an art and composition is the means to cultivate it.

Our aim should be to abolish self-consciousness and to aid pupils in free, clear and comprehensive speech. The weight of this responsibility falls upon the primary teacher, whose duty it is, to form the foundation for more advanced education. A most helpful outline in method for development of this free expression on the part of pupils was then given. Teachers having heard this address could not but feel additional responsibility and efficiency in this subject which plays so important a part in the life of those in their care.

War and the School.

Mr. J. M. Roszel then delivered a forceful and eloquent address on the topic, "The War and the School." He showed the wonderful opportunities the teachers of today have for building up true greatness in the nation of tomorrow. A plan of study was suggested which gave due credit to the place of the British ... and to Britain and her colonies as being the obstacle in the way to prevent Germany domineering the world and forever destroying the liberty, democracy and internationalism which must stand if lasting peace be found. Due prominence was given to the events which have built up imperishable honor of Canadian troops.

Children must be educated to a life of service and the life of service must be one of sacrifice. They must see that the cause of the Allies is just, that, of stern necessity they fight for world freedom. They must be taught to hate war and its desecration to love peace to live, each for all and all for each. Thus may be lain the foundation of a lasting peace.

Joint Sessions.

This morning at nine o'clock a joint session of both city and county teachers was held in the Collegiate Institute assembly hall. The attendance was large, practically every member of the profession being present, including quite a few of the Normal School students. The following technical program reflected credit on those who participated in it, and offered helpful and instructive recommendations:

Essentials for the Teacher—(1) Scholarship, Miss R. Sisson, (2) A Knowledge of the Arts, Miss M. Dorman; (3) A Knowledge of the Child, Miss M. Armstrong; (4) A Knowledge of Methods, Miss E. L. Fussee.

Teaching a Literature Lesson—based on "Honourable Toil." Book IV., (Bring Readers), F. F. Macpherson, B.A.

Closing Session.

This afternoon the closing session of the big convention is in progress, with the following papers under discussion:

A First Lesson in Volume, F. E. Kerr, B.A.

School Dentistry, Dr. Wallace Seccombe, Toronto.

TWO THOUSAND GERMANS MUTINY WHEN ORDERED TO ADVANCE IN RECENT BATTLE

Destroyed Their Rifles and Equipment and Stoned to Death a General Who Attempted to Quiet Them---War News From all Parts of Battle Line.

London, October 27.—British troops have made further progress west of Passchendaele, east of Ypres, says the official statement from Field Marshal Haig today. Two German counter-attacks were repulsed during the night, and the ground gained yesterday was consolidated.

HUN TROOPS MUTINY.

Two thousand German infantrymen at Cologne mutinied when ordered to the Flanders front last week, and destroyed their rifles and equipment. A general who tried to calm them was stoned. The mutineers were arrested and 26 of the ringleaders were courtmartialed.

ITALIAN SITUATION GRAVE.

The Austro-German blow on the Isonzo is featured by the morning papers, which comment rather anxiously.

TURKISH RETREAT REPORTED.

On Tuesday a Turkish column moving on both banks of the Tigris from Terkit approached our positions at Samara on the Tigris, above Bagdad, says an official report from the Mesopotamia front. The Turks retreated up the river during the night without fighting, on the advance of the British.

DROPPED TONS OF BOMBS.

An official statement on aviation activities issued tonight by the war office reads:

"During a raid into Germany carried out by our airplanes Wednesday night, another ton of bombs was dropped on the Burbach works west of Saarbrucken, in addition to three and a half tons already reported, making a total of six tons of bombs in the course of the night's operations. Three machines which took part in the raid are missing.

"Yesterday the weather was impossible for flying during the day, but at nightfall the sky cleared for a few hours and our bombing machines left the ground and attacked four hostile airdromes. Forty-five heavy bombs were dropped, and in one case a direct hit was obtained on a group of hangars. Before all our machines had returned the weather suddenly became bad again, and those of our airplanes which were out had great difficulty in reaching their airdromes. One machine has not returned."

ANXIETY AT ROME.

Rome, October 27.—A semi-official statement issued tonight says the struggle on the Isonzo front is more than bitter and that its alternatives are undecided. The situation created by the power of the enemy, says the announcement, is certainly grave.

60,000 Italians Are Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Sixty thousand Italians have been taken prisoners by the Austro-German forces in their offensive on the Italian front, army headquarters announced today. Guns to the number of 450 have been captured.

Enemy Fights for Opening on Plains

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Oct. 27.—An official statement says: After having crossed our boundary line between Monte Conin and the head of the Sucric valley the enemy is attempting to reach an opening on the plains. On the Carso the hostile effort is increasing. Strong offensive thrusts by enemy were repulsed by our troops.

MAN WITH PIPE CAUSES WRECK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Oct. 27. — Thirty-five passengers were injured, some having limbs broken, but the majority by flying glass, when two trolley cars on the Lachine-Montreal electric road collided at high speed this morning. There were 100 people on one of the cars, which was backing up at the time.

Passengers say the conductor was putting the car on a siding when the collision occurred, because one of the passengers persisted in smoking, contrary to the rules of the company.

Third Stories may be of Nine Inch Walls

Braund Bros. asked the City Councils' Committee of the whole last night permission to reconstruct the old Snowden house building with nine inch walls for the upper story. Mr. R. C. Braund presented the request and offered that in Toronto and all cities, while the first two stories must be of 14 inch walls, the third story may be of nine inch only, and he would appreciate the same privilege.

City Engineer Parsons reported that to the best of his knowledge all city building bylaws make this provision as presented by Mr. Braund.

The Braund Bros.' request was granted.

Boy Lost the Little Finger of Right Hand

The six-year-old son of Mr. Chas. Shannon, 294 Lake street, had his right hand severely crushed yesterday while at play on the city's road scraper on a vacant lot at the corner of Lake and Park streets. Dr. King was called, and had the little fellow conveyed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where the little finger of the hand was amputated.

Mr. Shannon threatens to bring suit for damages against the city on the ground that a road machine should not be left open to the public.

18 Yesterday Afternoon

The average of examinations for afternoon sessions was not maintained yesterday afternoon, there being but 18 applicants. The result of the doctors' work was ten A's, two B's, one C and five E's. Thus all grades came in for a quota of registrations.

REBATE INCOME TAX.

To the Amount of Contributions to Patriotic Fund.

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—Sir Herbert Ames headed a delegation from the Canadian Patriotic Fund which waited on the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance. The principal suggestion made by the delegation, it was stated afterwards, was that where a contribution had been made to the Patriotic Fund in 1917, it should be rebated as income tax.

PREPARING FOR S.S. CONVENTION

VARIOUS COMMITTEES ARE BUSY GETTING READY TO RECEIVE VISITORS.

Preparations for the Sunday School Convention to be held in Peterboro Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next are progressing very favourably. The local Sunday School workers are anxious to sustain the reputation of Peterboro as a convention city, so are leaving no stone unturned to provide for the comfort and pleasure of the convention delegates.

Committee Met

A meeting of the Reception and Courtesy Committee was held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening with the following members present: Chief Thompson, Mr. R. J. Kidd, Mr. T. W. Robinson, Mr. William Madill, Mr. Ingall, Mr. A. Mowatt, Miss Lees, Mrs. R. H. Parsons, Mrs. C. N. Meserve, Miss L. Scott, Mr. W. G. Shiner, Mr. Robert Sutherland and Mr. C. N. Meserve, Convenor. Other members of the Committee who have agreed to work but who were not present at the meeting are Mr. Hughson Johnston, Mr. H. W. Stock, C. C. Parsons, Mrs. C. E. Sisson, Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. J. John.

Reception of Delegates

The Committee will have four of its members at each of the C. P. R. and G. T. R. trains on Tuesday, starting with the C. P. R. train which arrives from the east at 5.59 a.m. up to the G. T. R. train arriving from Toronto at 9.14 p.m. The Committee will be assisted by fifty boy guides who are to be provided by young mens' Bible Classes from the various Sunday Schools. The Committee Members and guides will be distinguished by badges and will conduct delegates to the Convention church where registration will be made, and from the church to the billets.

Several members of the Committee will be stationed at the church auditorium doors to extend any courtesies possible to visitors. The Committee will also provide a check-room at the George St. Church where baggage only will be checked, believing that this will prove a convenience to delegates who will be attending the day sessions before going to their places of entertainment.

The other Committees, especially the Billeting Committee, are actively engaged in preparing for the Convention, so that those who are able to attend are assured of a period of pleasure and profit.

ELECTION TO BE HELD DEC. 17

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—All the ministers are expected to return to the capital next week and the writs for the election will be issued in time for nomination on November 19th, with polling December 17th. The overseas voting is expected to commence about November 22nd, and the overseas polls will close on December 17th. Practically all arrangements have been completed for both the home and overseas voting and the contest will be over before the Christmas holiday season, although definite results in many constituencies will not be known until the receipt of the overseas poll, late in January.

Before writs are issued, and before returning officers are appointed, the Government will try to work out some arrangement with nominated candidates in each constituency, both Liberal and Conservative, in cases where each has come out in support of the Union Government.

Pressure will be brought to bear in all such cases to have the two sides consent to at least make an honest and frank attempt to get together and agree on a fusion candidate. In cases where such an effort is made, and no agreement can be reached the intention is, as previously stated, to let the candidates fight it out between themselves, with a fair field and no favors.

CANADIAN TROOPS DRIVE BACK COUNTER ATTACKS AND TAKE MANY PRISONERS

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBOROUGH

His Majesty the King, the British Parliament and people have sent out an urgent call to Canada for assistance to the British Red Cross. The need is greater, the demand more insistent, than ever before. Toronto has just given $850,000, and other cities in propotion. Our own City Council has wisely and generously granted $5,000 as a start. Last year a similar grant was supplemented by private subscriptions to nearly $9,000.

This year I am asked to urge our good people to make it at least $10,000. Shall we do so? We can if we will. No personal canvass will be made, but private contributions are urgently asked for. Please send them in to Mr. Peter Campbell, treasurer of the local fund. All subscriptions will be by him acknowledged personally and also through the local press.

MR. HANNA WILL CONFER AGAIN

PROMISES TO LOOK FURTHER INTO COMPLAINTS OF CEREAL MEN.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 27.—That he would appoint a committee to confer with the manufacturers, was all that Food Controller Hanna would promise a deputation of breakfast food men from various parts of Ontario and Quebec, who waited on him today and asked that some elasticity be given in the operation of his recent order, prohibiting the selling of cereals in packages of less than twenty pounds. The manufacturers said that millions of cartons would have to be sacrificed, and the health and digestion of thousands of people affected if the law regulations were carried out.

Someone will own a beautiful $475 Heintzman piano at the same time. Others will own splendid other prizes, and many will receive cash commissions.

Who is going to win the Capital Prize Car? Well, just make up your mind that the race for this grand prize will be one of the closest in the history of contests, and no one will know till the votes are all counted.

Every subscription counts today. Don't overlook a single opportunity. Readers—if you want to help your favorite, call at the office and pay your subscription and cast the votes for the one you want to see win. Your subscription may be the one that will turn defeat into victory.

Just a few hours more and this great race will pass into history. The curtain will be rung down at ten o'clock. The Review will supply the contestants with large envelopes in which they must place their subscription orders and money.

THIS IS IMPORTANT.

Do not forget this matter, candidates. You must enclose all your vote ballots in an envelope and cast them in the box. Your vote ballots are those you received for coupons turned in by you and subscriptions turned in by you since the opening of the contest. Don't forget them in the big rush—the judges must count those along with the subscription orders you turn in tonight.

Be on time. Contestants, and don't forget to make every minute count between NOW and the closing hour.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1917

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

A CONVENTION of the Sunday school workers in Eastern Ontario will begin a three-days' session in this city next Tuesday, and the citizens are asked to extend their hospitality to the visitors who will include some of the best-known religious workers in Canada.

The convention will be valuable as an advertisement for the city, as the visitors are certain to carry away with them the most kindly impressions of Peterborough as a host as well as convictions of its business prosperity, present and in prospective. It means something, too, of vastly more importance. The holding of the convention here should arouse new interest in Sunday school work. The school that is held once a week in the class rooms of the churches is an indispensable department of the education of the young. No man or woman today can make any pretensions to scholarship if they do not possess at least a fair knowledge of the Bible. The study of the textbook of the Christian faith is sadly neglected in the homes in this busy age. In too many cases al lthe Bible training a child receives is what he gets during the hours which he spends once a week in the Sunday school. Then let this educational factor be developed more and more and let the disinterested workers in the cause receive the encouragement their task deserves.

The Bible holds its place as the greatest of all books, aside altogether from its spiritual nature. The histories of the Old Testament are unsurpassed as records of the events that shaped the character of the world so long ago. The literature of the Psalms and other books in the Bible is sublime.

When it is considered that the New Testament is the basis of all modern society, the code of morals and the guide of human life, the necessity for a knowledge of the Scriptures is apparent. The work of the Sunday school, dealing as it does with the children, is vastly more important than the church's efforts among the adults. The twig may be easily bent, but it is an all but hopeless task to attempt to incline the full-grown tree.

WHERE THE NICKELS GO.

A TEACHER in one of the city Sunday schools, with a practical turn of mind, recently made a canvass of his class in order to acertain how much money was spent by the scholars.

It appeared that the children in his class spent on an average ten cents apiece from Friday night, when the public schools closed, until they reopened on Monday morning. This class did not represent the wealthy element of the community. The children were nearly all the offspring of men who worked for salary or wages, so that the expedditure for youthful pleasure in this case is likely to be below the average.

The small sums that the children spend might easily be devoted to a better cause in such times as the present. All they require is counsel from their elders. It is gratifying to note that the public schools of the city are taking this matter up and that the pupils are being encouraged to save their pennies for one or other of the patriotic schemes now before the public.

The pupils in the school are being systematically trained in what the Red Cross is doing. For years there has been in the school law a clause which prohibited the teachers from taking up collections for any object among the pupils. This order was recently suspended and authority to make collections has been given to the teachers in a circular issued by Minister of Education Pyne. Not only are the children instructed in the aims of the Red Cross Society, but they are being encouraged to contribute their pennies to the cause, and the probability is that a thorough canvass will be made of all the schools in the city when it comes to raising funds for next year's work.

The children in the higher grades of the schools are also being grounded in the current events of the war. History to date is being taught them, a vastly different order of things than that which prevailed only a few years ago when pupils knew more of Alfred the Great or some ruler of the Tudor period than they did of their reigning sovereign. The senior pupil of today will grow up with a full knowledge of the events that are changing the history and status of civilization.

THE PROFITS ON COAL.

FUEL CONTROLLER McGRATH has gone to the limit of his powers in his attempt to regulate the price of coal. The United States authorities have set the price at the mines. After that the cost of transportation into Canada has to be considered. It would be impossible for the Fuel Controller to fix the selling cost of a product which comes from a foreign country.

Mr. McGrath has, however, done the next best thing, when he limited the profits of the various handlers of coal. His order, however, is not likely to lower prices. The local dealers claim that heir profits are not in excess of the limit allowed by the controller, and if this is so, no fairminded person will object. The new order will prevent he hoarding of coal in the yards, with a view to forcing up the price, as coal bought now is not subject to an increase of over 50 cents, not matter how long it may be kept in stock.

One of the best features of the new order is the specific prohibition of the storing of coal by those fortunate enough or rich enough to secure a year's supply. Rich and poor will fare alike. One man will no longer be able to hog the supply while the coal bin of his neighbor is empty.

BUTTER AND OLEOMARGARINE.

THE MAN WHO WISHES to eat butter will be required to pay for it the present fancy price, the removal of the embargo on the manufacture and importation of oleomargarine by Food Controller Hanna notwithstanding. The price of butter in Canada is regulated by the demand overseas, and is not affected to any great extent by local conditions. The price of the substitute can be regulated by the Food Controller, but this is not likely to be done, as the Canadian manufacturer must compete with the American maker. What the order really amounts to is that after November 1st a family unable to pay the present price for butter will be at liberty to use a cheaper substitute, but just how much cheaper this will be has yet to be demonstrated.

When the farmers and dairymen of the country objected to the removal of the margarine embargo they were not actuated by the fear that the price of butter would be lowered. What they did contend was that the substitue would be palmed off for the genuine, or mixed with it, and put on sale in the foreign markets. If this were done, the high reputation enjoyed at home and abroad by Canadian butter would be lowered.

Food Controller Hanna has, however, surrounded his new order with such drastic provisions that there is little danger of the fears of the dairymen being realised. Any dealer who handles the substitute, every proprietor of a hotel or restaurant who uses it, must do so openly, and there is little chance for fraud. The strict regulations in force in the United States have been adopted here.

Conclusive proof that the price of butter is not likely to be lowered is found in the American market. The manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in the United States has been permitted for years, and yet butter is as costly across the border as it is in Canada.

A CLUB HOUSE FOR THE SOLDIERS.

IN VIEW OF the movement now on foot to provide temporary quarters to be used as a club house by the returned soldiers, it will be interesting to learn what is being done by the veterans in Australia. The Daily Mail of Brisbane has a detailed account of how a soldiers' club house has been opened and maintained in that city. The article does not lack a touch of local interest, as the honorary secretary of the board of management, Mrs. P. E. S. Cooper, is a niece of Mr. R. B. Rogers, of this city. The article—an editorial—says:

> It is not surprising that he affairs of the Residential Club for Returned Soldiers and Sailors should be a subject for discussion, or that the public should be interested in the scale of charges that it is proposed to introduce. The club is, in the main, a gift from the people of Queensland to its returned men. The State Government has given generous aid; and other municipal and governing bodies have done something; but for the most part, it is the people of the State who have put up the £9000 that has so far been forthcoming. With that amount in hand—a creditable and, indeed, handsome sum in the circumstances—it has been possible to make a start. The building is now open to returned soldiers and sailors as a residential institution; it has its reading and refreshment rooms ,and the other appurtenances of modern comfort which men who have fought for Australia have thoroughly earned, and more than earned. Towards the result so far achieved, many people have worked hard and unremittingly; but it is not invidious to mention the hon. secretary of the committee, Mrs. P. E. S. Cooper, the lady mayoress, Mrs. Hetherington, and the hon. treasurer, Mrs. H. B. Templeton, for unremitting and disinterested work extending over a period of more than twelve months.
> The question has been raised of the scale of charges. Why, it has been asked, should a returned soldier or sailor have to pay 25s a week for residing in a building that he may fairly look upon as his by right? And why should the disabled man, whose weekly pension hardly amounts to that sum, be virtually debarred from residence? Well-meaning people can see only the desirableness of all being admitted and of all being entitled to share alike. The desirableness is granted; but the question is, and must be, one of ways and means. The first necessity is that the club should pay its way. The second is that no hint or suggestion of charity should attach to it. It seems fairly clear that if the scale of charges were brought much below that obtainig elsewhere, one of two things would have to happen—either the club would come up against financial difficulties or it would lose the cachet of distinction it now possesses. The management holds, and rightly holds, that its residential advantages should be retained as much as possible for country members who may be visiting the city. For that reason they think it undesirable that the charges for residence should be reduced to a figure that would make all returned men—of whom there are many hundreds now in the metropolis—want to live there. It is a club that is expected to prove a meeting place and rallying centre, less for officers than for the units of the forces. These are men to whom Australia owes a debt it can never quite repay; but the Queensland public may repay a fraction of it by taking a practical interest in the Residential Club which they have helped to establish.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Never Mentioned.

(New York World.)

At Constantinople the Kaiser and the Sultan exchanged decorations. What they had to say to each other about Germany's and Turkey's casualty lists was not revealed.

Rival Candidates.

(Hamilton Herald.)

If the new Unionist Government is obliged to declare which one of two or more rival candidates is the government candidate, it will probably name the conscriptionist member in the late Government, Grit or Tory, if he is again in the field. And quite right, too.

The Little Places.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Port Perry, with $4000 to the British Red Cross fund, and Port Elgin with $2700—two Ontario towns of about 1200 population put many larger places to the blush.

High Strategy.

(Savannah News.)

Whenever his people grumble, the Kaiser goes out and hits Russia on the nose, to blind them to the fact that the Allies are resolutely kicking him from behind.

Test of a Good Husband.

(Dallas News.)

Our position is simply this: That no man is a good husband who doesn't notice when he comes home that the sitting-room curtains have been moved to the dining-room.

TRY A WEEK OF EARLY RISING

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

When do you get up in the morning?

Are you a late riser? Are you not only a late riser, but a hurried one?

Do you give yourself just time enough to shave and dress in a rush, eat breakfast in a rush, and set off for work in a rush?

Or do you rise in ample time to attend to things calmly, with, perchance, extra time for a little thinking before you start in at your daily work?

Has it ever occurred to you that if you do exercise your mind a little before beginning the routine of the day you may get mentally "warmed up" to attend to that routine more efficiently?

"But," you protest, "I go to bed tired out. I have to sleep late. If I didn't I would not be fit for work all day."

That is what you say, and what you honestly believe.

Tell me, though, have you ever tried early rising for thirty consecutive days? Or for even seven consecutive days?

If you feel that you really must have acertain number of hours of sleep, for one week go to bed an hour earlier than is your custom. Then get up an hour earlier.

Dress fairly briskly, though not in your usual rush. When dressed go out for a stroll in your garden, weather permitting.

While walking, don't let your mind be alert. Think, really think, about something preferably something not at all connected with your regular work.

Think of the beauty of the early morning. Think of some editorial or important article you read in the newspaper the evening before. Or think of the interesting conversation you had with Brown at luncheon.

Think of something anything—that has in it meat enough to provide your mind with real food for thought.

After half an hour of thus physicaly and mentally exercising yourself come back to the house and sit down to breakfast.

You will find, I fancy, that you have an unusually good appetite for breakfast.

Also you will be giving yourself time enough to enjoy the eating of your breakfast. As a result you will have no trouble digesting it.

Nor, thanks to your earlier rising, will you be obliged to inconvenience your digestion, as you ordinarily have done, by galloping from the house the moment breakfast has been gulped down.

If the weather is too inclement for outdoor exercise before breakfast, vary your program a little.

Don't make rain or cold an excuse for lying in bed. Get up and do some calisthenics in your room. After dressing, read a book for a time. Meditate on what you read.

Try this for just one week. If at the end of that time you are not beginning to feel more "fit," then you may consider yourself at liberty to go back to your customary rising hour.

But give the plan I suggest an honest trial. And if you find that it is helping you to do better work—as I am sure it will—stick to it.

TODAY'S STORY

It was Gorgas Nails' first trip as announcer on the New York rubberneck wagon. He felt slightly nervous, for, although for years and years he had been chief explainer at Barken and Bitem's dime museum, he had not had much time to study up for his new role.

"Ladies and gents," he roared through his megaphone, "we are now on Fifth Avenue, one of the finest and longest streets in the world. It measures sixty-five feet from head to tail and swallows a live rabbit at a gulp and a half.

"This palatial mansion, ladies and gents, to our right, is the home of Andrew Carnegie. He chews glass and swallows swords with the same ease that you and me chew gum and suck on a lemonstick.

"To our left is the home of McGould Vanderbilt—he allows 8,000 volts of pure electricity to pass through his body and never loses his happy smile!

"From this hill, ladies and gents, we can see the justly famous statute of liberty. She weighs 498 pounds with her bracelets off and is beyond question the fattest woman in the world. On our right—"

But the man from Seeleby, Wis., had risen to clout him over the head wtih his umbrella, the woman from Mizzens, Ohio, had hurled her New York street guide at him, and the other passengers were all preparing to take a hand, when Gorgas Nails leaped gracefully but firmly down on top of a passing taxi and was whirled out of the story.

NOT ON THE BALLOT.

Editor Review: Let me say for the benefit of those misguided people who arrogate to themselves all political virtue that the official ballot has been declared by the Union Government to have four and only four headings on it, viz.: Liberal, Conservative, Labour, Independent. The Win-the-War League candidates are not recognized. 'Nuff said.

IS IT TRUE?

Wit and Wisdom

The Real Difference.

"I can't see why that man is boss over me. I do most of the work around here."

"I guess that is so."

"It is. I know more about the business that he does. Whenever he wants to know anything about what's going on he comes to me to find out."

"That's usually the way."

"I'm the fellow that ought to be the boss."

"A lot of men think that way, and yet there's one big difference. He knows something that you don't know."

"What is it?"

"He knows enough to hire good men like you to do the work. If you knew that you'd be the boss, and he'd be in your place."

Surprised Justice.

In a New England town a local celebrity was brought up before the justice for stealing chickens. The prisoner was noted for never telling the truth when he could help it, and consequently there was general surprise when he pleaded guilty. It evidently staggered the justice. He rubbed his glasses and then scratched his head.

"I guess—I'm afraid—well, Hiram," said he after a thoughtful pause, "I guess I'll have to have more evidence before I sentence you."

Refined.

"Got a chap yet, Liz?"

"Yes; and he's a regular toff. He's manager at—"

"You don't say so! Why, they tell me he's real refined."

"Rather! Why, he took me to a restaurant last week, and when we had coffee he poured it into a saucer to cool it, but he didn't blow it like common people would—he fanned it with his hat!"

In His Household.

Mr. Profiteer—Your clothes are costing me an enormous amount lately, Mary.

Mrs. Profiteer—Well, raise the price of something, George—that'll soon cover it!

BLOOD-MAKING MEDICINE

It took centuries for medical science to discover that the blood is the life. Now it is known that if the blood were always abundant, rich and pure, very few people would ever be ill. It was not until the end of the 19th century that an instrument was invented for measuring the red part of the blood. Then doctors could tell just how anaemic a patient had become; and with medicine to make new blood the patient soon got well.

All the blood in the body is nourished and kept rich and red by the food taken daily, but when for any reason a person is run down and cannot make sufficient blood from the food to keep the body in health, then a blood-making medicine is required. The simplest and very best of bloodmakers suitable for home use by anyone is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When a course of these pills is taken their good effect is soon shown in an ability to master your work and enjoy leisure hours. For women there is a prompt relief of or prevention of ailments which make life a burden. As an all-round medicine for the cure of ailments due to weak, watery blood, no medicine discovered by medical science can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BETTING MAN FAILED TO PICK WINNER IN THE WAR

E. R. Bradley Was too Optimistic as to the Result of United States Taking a Hand in the Conflict.

Shortly after President Wilson proclaimed that a state of war existed between the United States and Germany a group of sportsmen discussed the probable duration of hostilities. E. R. Bradley, the well-known turf-man and owner of Idle Hour farm, near Lexington, opined that the entry of the United States on the side of the Allies would make for a quick termination and in support of his theory laid the following wagers: $2500 that an armistice or that war would cease by September 1, 1917; $1500 that an armistice or that peace would be a fact by November 1; $1500 additional that an armistice or peace would be declared on or before December 1, 1917; $2500 additional that an armistice or a full peace would be declared on or before January 1, 1918.

All the bets were covered by the persons present and at that time Mr. Bradley was ready to bet much in excess of the above sums that were covered. Mr. Bradley has already lost his wagers hinging on condition that the war would be ended by October 1, and is in a fair way to lose the wager condition on a suspension of hostilities on November 1. It is also very probable that he will lose all other bets he made, including the one that peace will come by January, 1918. He is, however, of the opinion that when peace is declared it will come like a bolt out of the blue.

BROOKLYN WON FIRST PENNANT

The first series for the professional baseball championship was concluded forty-seven years ago tomorrow, at Philadelphia, when the Brooklyn Atlantics took the third and deciding game from the Cincinnati Red Stockings. These two clubs were the pioneers in professional baseball, and the rivalry between them was keen and bitter. It was not considered safe to play the decisive contest in either Cincinnati or Brooklyn, so the City of Brotherly Love was chosen as neutral ground. The first game of the series for the championship had been played in Brooklyn and resulted in a victory for the Atlantics by the score of 8 to 7. This was the first time the Red Stockings had suffered defeat since they had turned professional, and the pill was bitter to swallow. The Brooklyns then visited Cincinnati, and on the home diamond the Reds won 14 to 3. The Quaker City was then chosen as the battle ground for the final pastime, and the Atlantics were the winners, 11 to 7. The Red Stockings, under the management of Harry Wright, began their career as professionals in 1869, and were the first baseball players to receive a regular salary, although the poorest bush-leaguer of today is better paid. In 1869 the Reds made a trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific, going as far west as San Francisco and winning fifty-six games, with one tie and no defeats. That year they defeated the Brooklyn Atlantics 32 to 10. The Troy Haymakers, about the first of eastern professional clubs, were defeated 38 to 31, and the Philadelphia Athletics 27 to 18. The smallest score made in any game that year was when the Reds defeated the New York Mutuals 4 to 2. Another exciting game was that with the famous Forest Citys of Rockford, Ill., when the Reds narrowly missed defeat. Until the ninth chapter the score stood 14 to 12 in favor of Rockford, but in the ninth the Reds put over three tallies and won the game. The Reds had only one pitcher, Asa Brainard. Douglas Allison was the backstop on the pioneer "pro" club, and Harry Wright was center fielder and his brother George shortstop.

TUESDAY'S NIGHT'S MEETING

Editor Review:

In last night's paper there appears an announcement of a "Mass Meeting of citizens to be held Tuesday night to discuss the question of selecting a "win-the-war candidate". Why such a meeting? The Union Government is composed of the best men from Liberal, Labor and Conservative ranks, all of whom are in favor of winning the war of course.

For a little clique of people to adopt a catch name such as 'win-the-war" as if all the others including the Cabinet of course were not for winning the war and expect the public to recognize them is absurd.

The move is resented and properly so by all decent loyal citizens including the loyalists of both political parties.

The meeting on Tuesday night is the first note of discord to be thrown into the local camp. It is certainly ing and has of course annoyed both a stupid and presumptious proceed political parties, the soldiers and the labor party.

Call off your meeting, let the UNION GOVERNMENT run things now that it is formed, and approved by both the public and press everywhere.

They do not require the assistance of Messrs. R. B. Roger or J. A. Aylmer.

CONSERVATIVE

WHAT THE LEAGUE AIMS AT.

Editor Review: In your issue of last night, "Unionist" is wrong in his statement that the aim of the Win-the-War League is or intends to be a third party. If he had read the reports of the council meeting held in Toronto more carefully he would see that the intentions of the League were to eliminate party for the duration of the war and to give its hearty support to the present Union Government and its accepted candidates in all constituencies, that their efforts hould be directed to bringing the present parties together on a common platform, urging them to choose a candidate that would be acceptable to both parties.

This is in accordance with the desire and expressed wish of Sir Robert Borden, and he has stated that such candidate would receive the endorsation of the Government, but the Government will not endorse the candidature of any single party convention nominee. The Win-the-War League platform is the platform of the present Union Government. For the past two years it has been working for union government, military conscription, conscription of wealth, and war profits, active prosecution of the war, etc.

The League is out to support the Government in an active prosecution of all war work.

The meeting here on Tuesday evening is not to chose a candidate, but to place before the electors the reasons why both parties in this riding should get together and choose a candidate who would be acceptable to both parties and who would support the present Union Government in an active prosecution of the war. There is no intention on the part of the League to dictate to either of the political parties or to assume any authority for the calling of any convention. The sole purpose of the meeting on Tuesday night is to propagate the idea that for the object of winning the war all parties should unite in supporting the present National Government.

The Employer's Course

The Proclamation issued under the Military Service Act calls Class One men—bachelors and widowers without children (not otherwise excepted) who were 20 years old on the 13th Oct., 1917, and whose 34th birthday did not occur before Jan. 1st, 1917.

The claim for exemption may be made by the man himself, by his employer or by a near relative. So far as practicable, not more than one claim should be made in respect of any man. For reasons stated in the next paragraph, the claim is often best made by the employer.

When Employer Should Make Claim for Exemption

Where claim for exemption is based on the assumption that it is in the national interest that the man should instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged, it is usually preferable that the claim be made by the EMPLOYER, inasmuch as the decision of the claim will involve, amongst other things, a consideration of the nature of the business, the number of men employed, etc.

Medical Examination

It will simplify the employer's problem if all Class One men in his employ present themselves for Medical Examination at the nearest Medical Board Centre.

Upon examination they will be placed in Medical Categories—A, B, C, or E. Class One men placed in Categories B, C, or E satisfy immediate requirements if they attach the medical report they will receive to their claim for exemption.

Where an employer claims exemption for an employee on the ground that it is expedient in the national interest that the man should continue in the work in which he is habitually engaged, he should attach to the claim for exemption a statement and a schedule as follows:—

The Employer's Statement

Total number of employees, grouping them according to their respective occupations and qualifications, and stating the number in each group. Indicate the possibility or otherwise of replacing the labor of Class One men with the labor of those not in the statutory class called up, or of women; also the extent to which the withdrawal of men in the statutory class would affect the business, the reason for considering that the carrying on of the business is in the national interest, and such other facts and circumstances as may appear to be relevant.

The Employer's Schedule

This should state the names, ages and occupations of all Class One men employed, noting against each name whether or not claim for exemption is being made, and whether in the employer's opinion, exemption if granted, should be conditional on the man's continuing his present occupation, or whether it would suffice if exemption were granted for one, two or more months, as the case may be.

Forms for Exemption

These forms may be obtained on request from any Postmaster who will transmit the forms, when filled in, to the Registrar.

CROSS FEVERISH CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

LOOK, MOTHER! IF TONGUE IS COATED GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs' handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

REV. H. J. KEITH ON VISIT HERE

Rev. H. J. Keith, of Westminster Church, Edmonton, is expeced to arrive in the city this evening. He has consented to conduct the morning and evening services in Knox Church, his former charge, and his many friends in Peterborough will no doubt be glad of an opportunity to hear him again. While here he will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. McCulloch, Charlotte street.

Held an "At Home" For Normalites

Last night the Epworth League of George Street Methodist Church entertained the Normalites in the Sunday school hall, which was very prettily decorated in the Hallowe'en colors of black and yellow. About 300 young people assembled to enjoy the splendid program the League had provided.

Rev. A. J. Thomas, chairman, and Miss Alice Elson, president of the League, in short addresses welcomed the Normalites to the church and extended the wish that they might feel at home and spend a pleasant evening with them.

A very interesting program followed, including several good contests. The program was as follows:

Instrumental duet—Misses Ida Sanderson and R. McKee.

Solo—Mrs. J. H. Renwick.

Solo—Mr. C. E. Parsons.

Humorous reading—Miss Parker, Y. W. C. A.

After the program dainty refreshments were served by the members of the League, and the evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

LOCAL MARKET

Offerings on the market square this morning were small, but free in the market buildings. The following prices prevailed: Butter 48 to 50c, eggs 50c, chickens $1.50 pair, 75 and 80c each; geese 12½ lb. $2.25, potatoes $1.50 bag, parsnips 25c peck, carrots 20c peck. Very little fruit was offering.

TEACHERS EXCERISE INFLUENCE ON THE UPLIFTING OF HUMANITY

Instructive and Helpful Convention of County Teachers in Normal School—Teachers Return Home With New Vigar.

The annual convention of the Peterborough County Teachers' Institute of 1917 was held in this city on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Uplifting of Humanity.

Realising the necessity of keeping pace with the best and most up-to-date methods of building character and highest degree of citizenship there was a general movement toward Peterborough of all teachers of the Public and High Schools of the County of Peterborough. From every part and corner of the county the teachers faithfully wended their way to the beautiful centre to keep in touch with the best means of leading their charges into everything that leads to the uplifting of humanity.

The program was one of the best that has ever been prepared for the occasion.

Dental Conditions.

On Thursday morning the Public School teachers met in the Normal School. After the opening exercises and routine, Miss Hamilton and Miss McRae gave an excellent account of the different lectures at the Ontario Educational Association at Toronto last year, emphasizing the importance of improving dental conditions in schools. The next day Dr. Bothwell of Toronto in a stirring address drew the attention of the members of the institute to the very baneful result of bad mouth conditions of pupils; on their studies, future life and often dreadful parents as a rule do not realize that drawing is of great value in educating pupils to do things, to arouse his attention and taste for the beautiful.

The President's, Miss Edgar's address, carried out another part of the report from the Ontario Educational Association on, "The Ideal Teacher," who must be born with diseases and loss of vitality from their teeth being in an unhealthy condition.

Tastes For the Beautiful.

The value of supplementary reading by all pupils from the lowest grade in arousing their tastes for the beautiful and valuable things of human life and thus making pupils eager to acquire knowledge in every line of study was skilfully pointed out by Mr. Lees, M.A., I.P.S. and Mr. F.F. MacPherson, B.A, of Hamilton Normal School

Art in Rural Schools.

Miss McRae of Peterborough Normal School delt with the difficulties of the public school teachers in teaching Art in rural schools where certain abilities necessary to instill the best character in the youth of our country.

That the teacher's work is not confined to the mental development of the child was briefly but clearly shown by Mr. E. E. Ingall, B.A., The school master must direct and encourage a mingling of play with exercise to build a strong mind in the strong bodies of his pupils. This is best shown by the better humanity of British soldiers whose training is enlivened with play periods vs German soldiers whose training is only dry gymnastics.

Agriculture Dealt With.

Agriculture, the most essential of all industries was not ommitted in this splendid programme. Miss Hamilton drew attention to the need of greater efforts of fastening children's affections on their surroundings in the country in order that Canada's inexhaustible resources may carry out the prediction that "the British Empire will find its centre in Canada."

Music and the Empire.

On Thursday evening the public were entertained by a short musical program and a very enlightening address to every loyal citizen on "The British Empire."

Essentials in Teaching.

On Friday the Public and High School teachers met in joint session at the collegiate institute. "The Essentials in Teaching" were clearly outlined by Miss R. Sisson, Miss M. Dorman, Miss M. Armstrong and Miss E. L. Fussee. The teacher was likened to a guide and the pupil to a traveller. The teacher must know the way and the child must travel the road with the teacher's guidance in order to complete the journey successfully. In order to do so the teacher must be a scholar and have the best knowledge of all the Arts. She must know the child and the very best methods of guidance.

Concrete Material.

The importance of using concrete material to facilitate the most lasting knowledge on the part of the pupil by the pupil actually doing things with his or her own hands was shown in the last address by Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A.

Each and every teacher felt that they were richly repaid for their difficulties in navigating almost impossible roads or trails perhaps to attend these valuable lectures. After the singing of the National Anthem every member turned homeward to enter her activities with renewed physical and menal vigor.

Canada Needs More Money to Carry on the War

HERE, in a sentence, is the reason why the Dominion Government will ask you in November to buy Canada's Victory Bonds. But why does Canada need more money to carry on the war?

WATERLOO is remembered as one of the great battles of the world's history, but Canada has already sent overseas to the plains of France and Flanders more than twice as many men as were engaged on both sides of that great battle.

THIS army of Canada's splendid sons who, by their heroism are helping to protect us—every man, woman and child of us—from sharing the horrible fate of the Belgians, must be fed, clothed, equipped and maintained with every weapon needed in the fight.

For this purpose alone Canada requires over

One Million Dollars a Day

And this expenditure is constantly increasing.

This is one reason—a reason that will convince you, and every other patriotic citizen, that if Canada needs this money, she must have it.

Moreover, Great Britain has been expending in Canada, hundreds of millions of dollars for foodstuffs and the various munitions of war.

This has resulted in keeping our farmers, miners, lumbermen, fishermen and the workers in every branch of manufacturing industry fully employed.

Should this condition now be disturbed, every man, woman and child in the Dominion would undoubtedly be adversely affected.

Great Britain is anxious to continue buying supplies in Canada. But Britain is bearing so tremendous a financial burden on production at home, and in assisting our Allies, that she can now buy only on credit on this side of the Atlantic.

Therefore Canada proposes to extend to Great Britain the credit she must have by borrowing money from the people of Canada through the sale of Canada's Victory Bonds.

Thus Great Britain will be enabled to continue buying her supplies in Canada and to pay cash for them to the Canadian producers. This, in turn, will result in a continuance of that business activity so essential to the well-being of all the Canadian people.

So every man and woman in Canada should prepare to buy Canada's Victory Bonds to the very limit of his or her ability, when they are offered in November.

Some more notables among other prominent Sunday school workers who have promised to speak at the session are Mr. J. S. Durham and Rev. A. MacGillivray, D.D.

From a busy life as General Merchant, Greenburg, Kentucky, Mr. Durham was called by the Kentucky Sunday School Association for activities in connection with that Association, supervising the Visitation work. His success therein caused the International Sunday School Association to induce him nine years ago to give his entire time to them, during which time he has conducted Visitations reaching forty-seven millions of people. He is at present arranging a Visitation in the City of Toronto, with outreaches to Hamilton and Kitchener.

An interesting feature of the Peterboro Convention will be the reminiscences of Dr. MacGillivray, covering a period of fifty years of service in Sunday School work. Mr. MacGillivray began in his teens as a teacher of a little class, and has never been out of the service. Though he is far from being in appearance the old man that such a service would indicate, he is pastor and official head of one of the largest Sunday Schools in Canada, Bonar Presbyterian, Toronto. His home and early work were in Glengarry County. He was for

IT IS COMPULSORY THAT CLASS ONE MEN REPORT

Obligation Does Not End with Medical Examination—Only 227 Have Applied for Papers so far.

While 1165 men have been passed into either Category A, B, C, or E by the medical examiners only 227 had reported at the post office up to Saturday, and time flies toward the date of tribunal sittings, November 8th, 9th and 10th. It would be interesting to know just what conception men entertain of the Military Service proclamation. If they are not taking it seriously, it is high time they awakened to a recognition that the proclamation means exactly what it reads, and will be enforced. It is positively compulsory that all men in Class One report at the post office for duty or fill in the form of claim for exemption, no matter whether they are classed in Category A, B, C, or E. Their obligation does not end with medical examination, which does not relieve them from the call to report at the post office or register their whatever claim they may have to evade service. Neglect to comply with this order will subject delinquents to treatment as deserters, which, especially in time of war will be found extremely unpleasant, not to say dangerous.

Thirteen Report for Duty.

Up to 11:45 this morning 272 men had applied at the local post office for exemption and 12 had reported for service. Saturday was the busiest day yet for Postmaster James Edgar, he having handled 52 registrations for exemption and a lonely one reported for duty in A1 category. Seven filed exemption claims this morning, and another A1 man signed up in readiness for the front.

GIRL SAVED BY BABY SCREAMS

LONELY NURSE WAS ATTACKED BY A RUFFIAN IN TORONTO.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 29.—The police are searching for an unknown man who entered an apartment house on College street here Saturday night and roughly used Miss Ellen May Terry, aged 22, when she was taking care of a one-year-old baby while its mother was at a movie show. She tried to reach the telephone to give an alarm, but the ruffian held her firmly until the screams of the baby finally frightened him away.

CANADIANS IN NEW SUCCESS

(By W. A. Willison.)

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London), Oct. 29.—For the last twenty-four hours persistent fighting has been going on on the Canadian front. To the left of our advance the splendid success gained in the capture of Bellevue Spur has been followed by the final defeat of the enemy forces at Laamkeek. Very heavy resistance was encountered at both of these points, the enemy machine gun and artillery fire being particularly severe, but the Germans were finally driven out, after hand-to-hand fighting, in which our infantry stormed their positions and captured their formidable "pill-box" stronghold defences.

London—The admiralty report

ench torpedo boats had an endestroyers. Two hits were on the Geramns and they were

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?
My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.

Kept Good by the Sealed Package

RED ROSE TEA is good tea

Paris, Oct. 29.—A police search for evidence concernig a supposed Royalist plot was continued today. 1265 MEN EXAMINED AT ARMORIES—697 GRADED A

Hearings at the Tribunals will be Conducted in Public, Although it is Possible that Private Hearings, in Some Cases, May be Allowed.

Up to a quarter to nine Saturday night 1165 men have been medically examined at the Armories, 697 of whom are categoried as fit for the trenches. The tabulated grading since examinations commenced is as follows:

Total number examined	1165
Fit for trenches	697
For non combatant units	73
Home service	69
Rejected for any duty	326

Saturday's Results.

Three Out of Nineteen.

Saturday afternoon and evening sessions were somewhat quiet in comparison with the past couple of weeks' experience. In the afternoon nineteen applicants stripped for the medical test and were classified as follows: A 15, B 1, E 3.

Just Two Grades.

The doctors were through their week's labors at a quarter to nine Saturday night. But thirteen men were overhauled at this session, and divided into two grades only. Eleven were pronounced fit for active service in the trenches, and two were classed as unfit for any military requirements.

Public Hearings.

According to rule claims for exemption are to be heard in public, although it is thought that applicants particularly anxious for a private hearing may be granted that concession. But private hearings would not be in keeping with the spirit of the act, and will be granted, if at all, at the discretion of the tribunal.

Applicants will be notified when they are to appear, and they will then come and state their case. They will be cross-examined by each of the members of the tribunals if they wish, and by the army prosecutor and so the court will hear the complete evidence. There will be nohing formal about it at all, as in a court of law, although the applicant will be under oath. In support of claims affidavits will be accepted.

So many are claiming exemption that the tribunals have been busy from the first examining into the claims in preparation for hearing when they meet. Each one will be judged from a national point of view alone; private considerations will not influence judgment. Ottawa will shortly issue complete regulations governing the procedure.

Much Work Ahead.

There is plenty of work schedu for Doctors Cameron, Eastwood Greer for this week, there ahead of them registrations and including Wednesday, morning twenty-one men we ined, and graded as follo teen in category A; one C, and five in E.

Protestant Maidens Likely to Find Few Eligible Husbands When War is Over—Rev. H. A. Fish Disappoints Audience.

Victoria Hall was well filled last night in the expectation that the Rev. H. A. Fish, the well-known lecturer on Protestant rights and aspirations, would be on hand to address the people of this city. In his absence for some mysterious reason, Mr. H. Johnston, the chairman of the meeting and the Rev. H. Bolingbroke from South Monaghan explained to their audience the purposes for which the meeting had been convened.

Hunting up Sons-in-law

"It is an undisputed fact," declared the chairman, "that the Protestants of Peterboro have enlisted in larger numbers proportionately than the Roman Catholics. Large numbers of these lads will be killed and others will be more or less incapicitated when they return. Who then," he continued, "will the Protestant maidens choose for husbands in the next few years? It is high time for the Protestants to get together and do something if they do not want to see their grand-children Roman Catholics."

Social Intercourse Necessary

On November 9th a meeting of delegates from every Protestant organization will be held in the committee rooms of the Orange Lodge to make some arrangements to bring Protestant ladies into closer touch with each other. Box socials, basketball clubs, moonlight excursions, etc., are all under consideration."

One little point that the speaker overlooked was the scheme that would be adopted after the supply of Protestant bachelors was exhausted to induce the left-overs to finish their existence as spinsters.

Concentrated Sermons

Rev. Bolingbroke seconded very heartily the views set forth by the chairman. As a Presbyterian an Orangeman and a son of England he maintained that he could not do otherwise. "The Orange order brings into my church once a year certain men who would never otherwise attend it. On those occasions I preach for an hour or more as I know they will need it all before the year is up."

Naughty Little Autos

Just which particular make of auto the reverend gentleman had in mind when he declared that they were really a curse he did not say. It was not the racket that they kicked up when they were starting, not the pigs and poultry that they turned into undressed meat not even the gasoline that they left behind without burning no it was none of these things that roused his ire, but the fact that for every one that takes its driver and his family to church twenty take them somewhere else.

He also drew the attention of the audience to the fact that four hundred years ago October 31, Martin Luther nailed the ninety-five theses to the church door at Wurtemburg. This action was the first step of the movement that brought the Protestant church into existence.

Master Johnson, an elocutionist of extraordinary ability for his age, was before the footlights three times in Gunga Dhin, Bill Buller's goat and Jean du Pres. Mr. John Smith's vocal solos were also well received, but the men that really saved the situation were the members of the Salvation Army Band. The music was of a high order, despite the fact that every eligible young man in their order is now in khaki, some of the younger members playing with all the skill and confidence of old veterans.

Among the many floral tributes which showed esteem for the deceased, and brought a message of sympathy to the deceased family, was one from Trinity Methodist Church, Toronto, and one from the Great Commission Prayer League of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

Among the relatives from out of town were: Mrs. Kennedy's brother, Rev. Wm. Henderson, Gananoque; her niece, Miss Olive Russel Albert College, Belleville, her nephew, Mr. Henderson, Brampton; Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. Brown, cousins of the deceased, from Toronto; Miss Nina Sherin, Lakefield; Miss Millie Sherin, Omemee; Mrs. R. A. Ward and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Kennedy and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Kennedy and Maxwell, all from Toronto.

The funeral was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. P. Wilson, Pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, of which church Evangelist Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy are members. Revs. Benjamin Greatrix, R. A. Whattam and A. J. Thomas assisted in the service.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. Harry and Wesley Sherin, Lakefield; Wm. Madill, Geo. W. Mulligan, Dr Morrison, and R. J. Kidd, Peterboro.

"Weep not that their toils are over,
Weep not that their race is won;
God grant we may rest as calmly
When our work like theirs, is done;
Till then we would yield with gladness
Our treasures to Him to keep.
And rejoice in the sweet assurance—
He giveth His loved ones sleep."

LAST CHANCE TO SEE FAIRYLAND

Again last night a large and enthusiastic crowd gathered at the Grand to witness the fourth production of "A Daughter of the Gods", and it was still an enthusiastic crowd which left again at 10.45.

It was intensely interesting to watch the hundreds of little people taking their parts so splendidly as fairies, gnomes, and mermaids, dancing and frisking about without a care in the world, to follow the good and bad fairies in their battle for supremacy, and finally to witness the delightful exhibition of Annette Kellerman "the perfect woman" as she displays her skill as a swimmer and diver. Even the gnomes are held spell bound as she glides from her fairy ladder to the sea.

The special matinee for the pupils of the public schools held yesterday afternoon was one of the rarest treats the children of the city have enjoyed in many a day.

This great wonder picture is shown for the last time tonight and is well worth a trip to the Grand.

HAIG PRAISES CANADIAN TROOPS

ENGLAND AND FRANCE TO JOIN IN HELP TO ITALY

London Papers Urge This Action as One Demanded by Necessity and Due to Italy.

London, Oct. 29.—That Great Britain and France must go promptly to Italy's help is the view expressed by several morning papers. The Times which prints a statement implying knowledge that such help is contemplated, says editorially.

"Our word to the people of Italy is to stand firm, for help will surely come. Italy must not and will not be deprived of the fruits of the ultimate victory for which she has battled so long and so arduously"

The Daily Chronicle, taking similar view says it ought to be possible to have British or French divisions or both in North Italy in a very short time.

The Daily News on the other hand, while holding it incumbent on the Allies to consider how best to succor Italy, thinks it is impossible to send direct relief on a scale the situation demands. While all newspapers recognize the gravity of Italy's peril strong confidence is expressed in General Cadorna and the Italian army with the conviction that they ultimately will emerge victorious.

RUSSIAN MILITARY OFFICERS PAINT DARK PICTURE OF CONDITION OF ARMY

Russia Cannot be Defended as the Army Now Exists and the Ruin of the Country is Imminent---Time Has Come to Dispel All Illusions.

Petrograd, Oct. 12.—The officers of the Petrograd garrison met today to discuss the position of the Russian army and adopted a resolution declaring that any authority on the part of its chiefs is virtually nonexistent. The resolution says in par: "The community, as it is at present, cannot defend Russia. On he contrary the approach of winter and the present subviersive aspirations of the army and its lack of any sense of responsibility will complete the ruin of the country.

We do not renounce our duty but in answering for ourselves we do not answer for our men. The time has come to make a declaration openly so that nobody may be deceived or trust in vain delusions."

The Germans have evacuated the Warder peninsula on he Gulf of Riga where they made a landing recently, the war office announces.

THE WEATHER.

While the month of October is not yet completed, it is nearing its end. It already has the record of being the wettest October for many years—since 1896, at least, for search has been made that far back. Up to today (the 29th) there has been rain on 19 days, giving a total of 5.49 inches, and the outlook today is for still more. The nearest approach to this month was October of 1911, with 4.08; and October, of 1906 with 3.93. The other extremes were October of 1901, with .85; and October of 1908, with but .27 of an inch.

BOARD OF TRADE SHOULD ACT

Peterborough has a Board of Trade which is supposed to interest itself in trade matters which affect the welfare of the community. Food Controller Hanna's measure to practically eliminate the selling of cereals in packages is of no small measure of interest not only to Peterborough consumers, but also to two trade concerns—the Quaker Oats Co. and the Peterborough Cereal Co. The fact that Mr. Hanna is going to consult the trade before his new order goes into force points to the conclusion that he entertains doubt of its efficacy and desirability. And therein lies an opportunity for the Peterborough Board of Trade to awaken from its lethargy and take a lively interest in a real trade question which vitally concerns Peterborough. The Board of Trade might at least pronounce on Mr. Hanna's proposition, and in doing so offer him food for reflection. In such action it would have good company, even from away-off Saskatoon, from whence a copy of the following resolution from that city's board of trade has been forwarded to the Food Controller:

> "That not only will the abolishing of package trade in rolled oats, cereals, etc., increase wastage through loss in handling and depreciation, but that the increased consumption of such foods had been brought about by free use of convenient sanitary packages, and that restriction of trade to the large packages as suggested will lead to decreased consumption."

Stewart Lyon Says They Are Entitled to Furlough—War May Last Year Longer But Allies Must Win.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 29.—Stewart Lyon, correspondent for the Canadian Press on the Western front for the past year, returned home this morning. In an interview be said that there were not more than one twentieth left of the original strength of he first contingent and in his opinion some way should be found to permit these men to come home on furlough.

Commenting on the recent reverses on the Russian and Italian fronts Mr. Lyon said that while these should not be minimized, it was his opinion that the final decision of the war would not be on these fronts but on western front.

The war might take a year longer but the combined strength of Britain and her overseas Dominions and the United States must prevail.

On the Western Front.

London, Oct. 29.—Steps already have been taken for rendering the fullest possible assistance to Italians it is officially stated today.

In the House of Commons today Premier Lloyd George said that since the beginning of the war thirteen million men had been transported with a loss of only thirty-three hundred and that of those only twenty-seven hundred had been lost through enemy actions.

We raided enemy's trenches last night opposite Warnerton, says today's official statement. A hostile reconnoitering party was repulsed in the neighborhood of Reuter. In the course of yesterday's operations north of Merckem, a Belgian patrol captured German post of 21 men. Early in the night Belgian troops carried out a successful raid north of Dixmude and brought back twenty-three prisoners and machine guns.

1265 MEN EXAMINED AT ARMORIES---697 GRADED A

Hearings at the Tribunals will be Conducted in Public, Although it is Possible that Private Hearings, in Some Cases, May be Allowed.

Up to a quarter to nine Saturday night 1165 men have been medically examined at the Armories, 697 of whom are categoried as fit for the trenches. The tabulated grading since examinations commenced is as follows:

Total number examined ..	1165
Fit for trenches	697
For non combatant units..	73
Home service	69
Rejected for any duty	326

Saturday's Results.

Total examined	55
Category A	36
Category B	5
Category C	2
Category E	12

Three Out of Nineteen.

Saturday afternoon and evening sessions were somewhat quiet in comparison with the past couple of weeks' experience. In the afternoon nineteen applicants stripped for the medical test and were classified as follows: A 15, B 1, E 3.

Just Two Grades.

The doctors were through their week's labors at a quarter to nine Saturday night. But thirteen men were overhauled at this session, and divided into two grades only. Eleven were pronounced fit for active service in the trenches, and two were classed as unfit for any military requirements.

Public Hearings.

According to rule claims for exemption are to be heard in public, although it is thought that applicants particularly anxious for a private hearing may be granted that concession. But private hearings would not be in keeping with the spirit of the act, and will be granted, if at all, at the discretion of the tribunal.

Applicants will be notified when they are to appear, and they will then come and state their case. They will be cross-examined by each of the members of the tribunals if they wish, and by the army prosecutor and so the court will hear the complete evidence. There will be nohing formal about it at all, as in a court of law, although the applicant will be under oath. In support of claims affidavits will be accepted.

So many are claiming exemption that the tribunals have been busy from the first examining into the claims in preparation for hearing when they meet. Each one will be judged from a national point of view alone: private considerations will not influence judgment. Ottawa will shortly issue complete regulations governing the procedure.

Much Work Ahead.

There is plenty of work scheduled for Doctors Cameron, Eastwood and Greer for this week, there being ahead of them registrations up to and including Wednesday. This morning twenty-one men were examined, and graded as follows: Fifteen in category A; one in category C, and five in E.

JAMES LONG WAS BADLY MANGLED

ENQUIRY INTO DEATH OF VICTIM OF RAILWAY ACCIDENT—SISTER IN THIS CITY.

At Lindsay, Saturday afternoon, a jury was empaneled to enquire into the death of James Long, who met his death on the Grand Trunk Railway, 3 miles northeast of Lindsay on Friday, Oct. 26th, Coroner Dr. Blanchard presided.

Terribly Mangled.

The jury viewed the remains, which presented a horrible sight. The legs were terribly mangled and severed from the body while the head was badly bruised and crushed. An examination of his boots showed that they were torn and cut, which strengthens the supposition that the unfortunate man's foot was caught between the planking on the crossing and the rail, and that he was unable to extricate himself before the train bore down upon him.

The unfortunate man was born in Ireland and resided in Verulam township before coming to Ops township about fifteen years ago. Besides his wife and four sons he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Jas. Lithgow, of Bobcaygeon; and Mrs. Allison, of Peterborough; also a brother in South Dakota.

Interment was made yesterday afternoon in Riverside Cemetery, Lindsay.

ITALIAN TROOPS ARE STILL DOING THEIR DUTY

DID NOT WARN PRISONER NOT TO TALK IN STATION

Detective Says Statement of Man Charged with Stealing Valuable Deer Hound was Voluntary.

At the police court this morning Frank Longdo was charged by Mr. Cyril Lech, this city, with having stolen from him a valuable deer hound on September 14th, 1914.

County Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted and Mr. J. A. O'Brien defended accused.

Mr. Cyril Lech testified that he hunted with the lost hound two seasons in this district and the Katchecum Club used the animal two seasons. The dog disappeared from Peterborough on the 14th September, 1914, and no trace of him was found until October same year. He advertised the dog in the local papers and placed the case in Detective Newhall and Meagre's hands. The animal was found near Apsley in possession of Mr. Albert Leane on October 15th.

To Mr. Hatton witness contended that the dog was worth at least $100.

Bought For 50c.?

Detective Newhall testified that he knew the hound in question very well. He traced up prisoner's movements, found the dog at Leane's in Apsley, returned to town and found accused had left the city. Prisoner was arrested at Blackwater last Monday, and on reaching Peterborough police station same day, prisoner voluntarily remarked to me, "I suppose this is about Lech's hound," and declared he had bought the animal from Ira McMullen for 50c. I replied, "You know where to place the blame, McMullen being dead; Ira told me yon took the hound away from the Grand hotel, after he telling you to leave it alone, and sold it to Leane." Prisoner contended he did not know whom the hound belonged to, and admitted selling it to Leane. Prisoner gave as his excuse for leaving home that he got along better elsewhere.

To Mr. Hatton witness gave accused's main occupation as hunting and trapping.

Did Not Warn Prisoner.

To his worship, Detective Newhall admitted he had not warned prisoner that anything he said would be used against him. It was not necessary, contended Newhall, as accused was not under his arrest.

His worship argued that Newhall's testimony in the main was not admissable as he had led the prisoner into conversation, without having warned him.

County Crown Attorney Hatton contended that when a prisoner makes a voluntary statement, warning is not necessary.

His worship reserved judgment on this point.

Case Dismissed.

There was no other evidence submitted and his worship declared he would not be warranted in making a conviction on that of Detective Newhall and Mr. Lech. He dismissed the case.

IT IS COMPULSORY THAT CLASS ONE MEN REPORT

Obligation Does Not End with Medical Examination — Only 227 Have Applied for Papers so far.

While 1165 men have been passed into either Category A, B, C, or E by the medical examiners only 227 had reported at the post office up to Saturday, and time flies toward the date of tribunal sittings, November 8th, 9th and 10th. It would be interesting to know just what conception men entertain of the Military Service proclamation. If they are not taking it seriously, it is high time they awakened to a recognition that the proclamation means exactly what it reads, and will be enforced. It is positively compulsory that all men in Class One report at the post office for duty or fill in the form of claim for exemption, no matter whether they are classed in Category A, B, C, or E. Their obligation does not end with medical examination, which does not relieve them from the call to report at the post office or register their whatever claim they may have to evade service. Neglect to comply with this order will subject delinquents to treatment as deserters, which, especially in time of war will be found extremely unpleasant, not to say dangerous.

Thirteen Report for Duty.

Up to 11:45 this morning 272 men had applied at the local post office for exemption and 13 had reported for service. Saturday was the busiest day yet for Postmaster James Edgar, he having handled 52 registrations for exemption and a lonely one reported for duty in All category. Seven filed exemption claims this morning, and another All man signed up in readiness for the front.

GIRL SAVED BY BABY SCREAMS

LONELY NURSE WAS ATTACKED BY A RUFFIAN IN TORONTO.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 29.—The police are searching for an unknown man who entered an apartment house on College street here Saturday night and roughly used Miss Ellen May Terry, aged 22, when she was taking care of a one-year-old baby while its mother was at a movie show. She tried to reach the telephone to give an alarm, but the ruffian held her firmly until the screams of the baby finally frightened him away.

CANADIANS IN NEW SUCCESS

(By W. A. Willison.)

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London), Oct. 29.—For the last twenty-four hours persistent fighting has been going on on the Canadian front. To the left of our advance the splendid success gained in the capture of Bellevue Spur has been followed by the final defeat of the enemy forces at Laamkeek. Very heavy resistance was encountered at both of these points, the enemy machine gun and artillery fire being particularly severe, but the Germans were finally driven out, after hand-to-hand fighting, in which our infantry stormed their positions and captured their formidable "pill-box" stronghold defences.

London—The admiralty report says on Saturday six British and French torpedo boats had an encounter with three German torpedo boat destroyers. Two hits were made on the Geramns and they were compelled to retire.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1917

DENOMINATIONAL BICKERING.

THERE CAN BE no peace in a community, there can no national unity, so long as there is strife and bickering between the religious denominations. The Christian faith calls for tolerance. Justice is one of its essentials. It is supposed to stand for peace on earth and good will to all men.

Some exception has been taken to the report of a public meeting which was held recently. Any newspaper that reproduces the utterances of a citizen, made openly on a public platform, is not responsible for the sentiments expressed. It does not necessarily endorse what he says unless it does so in its editorial columns. The mission of a newspaper is to record the news. If it, for example, reports a murder, it does not follow that it is in favor of every citizen taking the law into his own hands. The newspaper that reports a bigamy case is not on that account to be accused of favoring the outstanding feature of the creed of Mahommed.

There is no chance for argument in the matters that were discussed at the meeting the other night. The Government statistics dealing with the matter at issue are available. These were published in The Review in August, and should be taken as conclusive. They show that one denomination is far in the lead in the matter of enlistments, a fact which is easily explained because that Church contains a majority of the British reservists. There is nothing in those statistics to reflect on any denomination more than another. If in a particular province of the Dominion the number of recruits has been below the average, that is due to the teachings of self-seeking politicians, and not to the counsel of the clergy. If the figures for enlistment in one province are quoted, it is only fair to cite them in another. In Nova Scotia, where the people of the faith in question have only twenty-seven per cent. of the population, they have forty per cent. of the men who have enlisted from that section of the Dominion.

This is not a religious war by any means. The British Empire is engaged in a conflict with the strongest Protestant nation on earth, and religious faith is not an issue with any power, either on one side or the other. One fact is outstanding, and that is that on the side of the Allies there are more men of one faith than all the other members of the fighting force combined.

There is political unity in Canada today such as this country has never before seen. This unity will work out the stupendous task which confronts the nation. Religious harmony would have the same effect. When the war is over creed differences will no longer be recognized by the men of different faiths who fought side by side in the trenches and whose spiritual needs have been ministered to by clergymen who took no note of denominational divisions.

DANGER OF RETALIATION.

SOME NEWSPAPERS are urging Food Controller Hanna to prohibit the export of fish to the United States, at least for the duration of the war. If any such measure were adopted, there is the danger that the Americans might retaliate. They might, for example, put an embargo on the shipping of coal to this country and so create a serious situation. There are always two sides to be considered in every question, and Mr. Hanna is in all his public acts proceeding with commendable discretion.

TIMELY ADVICE.

THE FOLLOWING from The Simcoe Reformer applies with equal force to the men in Class "A" in this community. It says:

> A man came into The Reformer office the other day. He was in search of information as to his duty under the Military Service Act. During the course of the talk that ensued, he said several young men in Class 1, living in his neighborhood were boasting that they did not propose to pay any attention to the proclamation and would not register. He had heard of others in various communities who were talking in the same strain; so has The Reformer. Our advice to all such is to take another think. The penalty for the men who does not register is five years in penitentiary. And registering does not mean that you will have to go to war. If you have not read the proclamation, hunt up last week's Reformer and do so now. It is better to be safe than sorry.

"RECALLED TO LIFE."

SUCH IS the striking title of a magazine in England devoted to a class of war relief which we shall ultimately have to undertake—namely, the care, re-education and return to civil life of disabled soldiers and sailors, says the New York Sun.

To rescue what may remain of the economic value of a man crippled or nervously wrecked in the nation's service is one of the highest national duties, and the most worthy motive of private benevolence. The United States accepts the duty of restoring its wounded, if not to absolute health, at least to a condition of comparative health. But it does not teach the man who has become a nervous wreck from shell shock to use his remaining faculties in useful occupations, that he may at once contribute to his own support, and what is even more important, by this concentration of his mind on a peaceful task blot out from it the awful recollections which have clouded it. The compositor who has lost his right arm, the waiter who has sacrificed a foot, the clerk who has sustained an injury affecting his sight or speech, are all in danger of becoming derelicts unless some organization or authority undertakes to teach them new trades and help them to find the niche still open to them in industry.

In England, orthopedic hospitals under government control restore their patients to essential health. The British Red Cross has opened shops in which such men may learn new trades. How great the need for such institutions is may be judged from the statement of Recalled To Life that the problem is one affecting fully one-third of the British wounded.

As yet no action has been taken in the United States to establish industrial centres for the re-education of our crippled soldiers. It is none too soon to begin. The Americans have the example of the Canadian people to guide them.

THE SOLDIERS' VOTE.

THE SOLDIERS' VOTE, so far as Ontario is concerned, is likely to be an important factor in the coming election. In 1911 the total vote in this Province was 355,738, the smallest in a dozen years. In 1914 the largest vote on record was polled when 462,450 ballots were cast.

The force recruited in Ontario up to the present is nearly 200,000 men, and every one of these, whether or not he has reached the age of twenty-one years, will have the right to vote under the new Franchise Act. It is easily seen, then, that nearly half the votes cast in Ontario will be by the soldiers, and it is no difficult matter, either, to estimate their probable stand on the conscription issue, the question in which they are most directly interested.

WHAT THEY WANT.

THERE ARE a good many Liberals in this district who profess to be in favor of Union Government. The great trouble with them, however, is that they insist that such Union Government be made up almost exclusively of members of their own party.

INDIANS AND THE FRANCHISE.

THE INDIANS on the Chemong Reserve are not all asking for the franchise. Two of them called at The Review to protest against the proposition. They say that the franchise is all right for the Indians that are well-to-do, but that it would mean a hardship for those whose circumstances are the reverse. If they are given the vote, they will be compelled to pay taxes, and some of them are not equal to this task. They say that they are in favor of having conditions among them remain as they are so long as the Government extends to them the same consideration that it has always shown.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MAY WE NEVER lack a slice of bread or oleomargarine to spread on it.

• • • •

IT WILL SOON require a sharp man to tell on which side his bread is oleomargarined.

• • • •

AS HEAD of the civic coal yard, Ald. Dobbin as a distributer goes the Fuel Controller one better.

• • • •

A YOUNG MAN writes an exchange asking how khaki is pronounced. Getting into it, however, is the idea.

• • • •

NO MAN who is really sincere in his desire to see the war won can consistently object to the new Alien Franchise Act.

• • • •

WITH MARGARINE, cheap fish and a stock of coal as good as assured, the coming winter loses some of its terrors.

• • • •

EXCEPT FOR THE BRAND it would require an expert to tell the difference between genuine butter and oleomargarine.

• • • •

IN THESE DAYS of commercial effort it will surely no longer be considered impolite to eat the sugar at the bottom of the cup.

• • • •

IF WE CANNOT have peace with the Germans, we can at least have it at home, if contending political factions will only consent to subside.

• • • •

DOLLAR PATRIOTISM is not to be spoken of lightly when it is applied to the purchase of war bonds or to making contributions to patriotic funds.

• • • •

AN EXCHANGE asserts that the present-day styles of trousers are the ugliest garments ever devised. Which tempts a cynical feminine to remark that at last the majority of men are fittingly attired.

• • • •

IF A PRO-GERMAN had a vote he would vote against the interests of the Canadian soldier. That he has no vote let us be truly thankful.

• • • •

THEY ARE inconsistent always. The woman who will not marry a slacker does not hesitate to make one of a man if he is already her husband.

• • • •

AND FROM WHAT Rev. H. Boltabroke said at the meeting last night, we gather that he would not hesitate to take the joy-riding out of every life.

• • • •

IF CEREALS are to be purchased only in twenty-pound lots, the agitation for every purchaser to be his own delivery boy is likely to receive a set-back.

• • • •

THE "NEWSPAPER STRATEGISTS," at whom military men are wont to sneer, hinted some time ago at the collapse of the Italian forces unless they were strengthened.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Under Prussian Rule.
(Springfield Republican.)

It is estimated that the total prison sentences imposed on the people of Alsace-Lorraine since the war began for their loyalty to France would come to 5000 years. It is hardly likely to increase love of German rule.

The Prussian Savages.
(New York Herald.)

Goethe said, "The Prussian is born cruel, and civilization will make him a savage." Civilization cannot be charged with the responsibility of making the Prussian a savage, as he never acquired civilization. What he has acquired is control over all other German peoples whom he seems to have successfully made over after his own image.

Simply Anarchists.
(Buffalo Express.)

Let no mistake be made about the Sinn Fein. It is much less an organization in behalf of Ireland than an Irish branch of the international anarchistic movement, seeking general social revolution and destruction for its own sake, of which the Russian Bolsheviki and the I. W. W. of America are conspicuous examples.

HOW TO AVOID BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is a winter disease which is said to be responsible for one-tenth to one-seventh of all illness.

It causes an inflammation of the bronchial tubes with the production of mucus of phlegm. The bronchii are the tubes which lead from the trachea into the lungs. The first part of the air tube is the nose. This leads into the back of the mouth, called the pharynx. The next part of the tube, that which contains the vocal cords, is the larynx. Below this is a low tube commonly called the windpipe, which conducts air from the area in which the vocal cords are through the neck and into the chest at the root of the lungs. Here, the trachea divides into two bronchii, one running to each lung.

When this passage becomes inflamed and produces mucus it irritates the throat and causes the patient to cough in order to get rid of it. Accompanying the cough may be fever, loss of appetite and diarrhoea.

The infection responsible for these disorders is caused by a germ. In more than 50 per cent of the cases the bronchitis the germ responsible is the same germ that causes common colds.

Other cases of bronchitis are due to the same germ that causes pneumonia.

To prevent acute cases of bronchitis the first rule is to keep away from all persons known to be suffering with the disease.

Avoid hot, close rooms where the air is known to be stale and dirty.

If strong enough to stand it take a cold sponge or a cold air bath every day throughout the winter.

If you do catch the disease it can be cured quickly if the victim goes to bed and stays there quietly for a day or two at the first signs of the attack.

EDITOR'S MAIL

NOT MEMBER NOW.

Editor Review: I see by the last issue of your paper that Mr. Burnham has inserted an announcement that "Mr. Burnham, M.P., will be at the office of the Superintendent of the Patriotic Fund, Simcoe street, on Tuesday and Saturday evenings of each week until further notice," for the purpose of those desiring to consult the "Federal member."

Does Mr. Burnham not know that Parliament being dissolved that he is no longer an M. P. or a Federal member? If not, somebody should put him right.

Yours.
ABOY.

A WORD FROM UNIONIST.

Editor Review: Mr. Burnham announces that he is a supporter of the Union Government. He has no mandate from any Union Government party. The only way he could get such mandate would be by nomination from such a party which should be done by committees from the leading parties agreeing to his being the standard bearer.

Nomination by the old Conservative party two years before the present Union Government came into existenc should not be taken by any honorable man as giving him any mandate or claim to represent a party formed two years after.

Why does not Mr. Burnham not follow the example set him by his former associates in Parliament. Mr. Nickel of Kingston, who was nominated by the Conservative party some two years ago but who resigned the nomination of the Conservative party and was then nominated by a joint committee of the Liberal and Conservative parties as their standard bearer to support the Union Government. Why?

Yours truly,
UNIONIST.

Editor Review: In a letter signed by "Reader" in your Saturday issue it is said that the ballots are to be marked Conservative, Liberal, Labor or Independent. Will you be good enough to say if this correct? If so, there is to be no Union Government candidates, which seems under the circumstances to be absurd.

ANOTHER READER.

So far as we are able to gather there will be four divisions on the ballots, which will be used by the soldiers overseas, Liberal, Conservative, Labor or Independent. These will enclose no names of candidates. The ballots used at home will contain the names of the different candidates with the political stripe of each. One of these will beyond all doubt be marked as a Unionist.

TODAY'S STORY

"Halt!" cried the sentry. "Friend or foe?"

"Splush yenpsh," replied the man who had been crawling through the underbrush on his hands and stomach.

"Come with me," said the sentry, and, seizing him by the small of the back, he dragged him to headquarters.

"I got a spy," he announced. "But I don't seem to understand his language."

The chief interpreter was sent for.

"Bish murra spelk wenska?" (What are you doing around here?") he asked in Swedish, after having tried him unsuccessfully in German, Hungarian and low Squillsh.

"Smush floopf," replied the prisoner.

"Yahooma nockways?" (Are you Portuguese?) demanded the interpreter.

"Pluff gopsch," muttered the suspected man.

The interpreted scratched his head.

"Yowhammer ding tistitt?" (what the heck are you, then?) he asked in Sloowegian.

"Moompf guh," said the prisoner.

"Maybe he's got an impediment in his speech," suggested the interpreter. Borrowing a ramrod from a soldier, he pried open the man's jaws. Stuffed in his mouth was a map, a yard square, of the allied battle front. The interpreter triumphantly pulled it out.

"Ach, sooch a relief!" said the prisoner.

Seven hours later was sunrise.

He likes his job, but he dislikes one thing about it: that he can't tell the boys—the friendly reporters—about all they wish to know. He illustrated his inability to give information once by quoting the case of Johnny.

Johnny was crying in the hall as his mother came along, hatted and coated. She asked what had happened.

"You are going away, and so is papa!" Johnny sobbed.

"Why, child, I shall be away two or three days; but father is not going away!"

"Yes, he is!" cried Johnny. "He is going to Rome."

"Rome? What do you mean, dear?" asked the surprised mother.

"He said today to Mr. Brown that he would make Rome howl when you left!"

"Indeed! Well, dear, I shan't leave you now."

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Great War Veterans' Association, through President Staunton, has accepted the invitation of the Y. M. C. A. for the use of the baths and other privileges, the Association to honor the Great War Veteran badge as a ticket for the Y.M.C.A. Messrs. Turner & Sons have painted a very attractive sign calling the attention of the members of the G. W. V. A. to the fact that they are more than welcome to the privileges of the Y. M. C. A. building.

The Canadian National Y. M. C. A. convention will be held in Ottawa November 2 to 5 and will be the most important Y. M. C. A. convention ever held in Canada. The National Y. M. C. A. is now organizing a program to be taken up immediately following the close of the war. One of the main features of this program is a national evangelistic effort with the end in view of counteracting the spiritual depression caused by the war. It is hoped that Peterborough will be represented by several members of its Y. M. C. A. board of directors. The men who purpose to attend should hand their names in at the Association office by Monday evenig at the very latest.

The Boys' Department program is working out well. Billiard tournaments are now under way for each of the six boys' classes. The gymnasium program is more attractive than ever, and Bible study is being faithfully conducted by the young men who are acting as mentors. A system of game tickets has been instituted, systematizing the use of the various boys' games, so that every boy is now sure of his share of the time allotted for the social work. Charts have been posted on the bulletin boards showing the standing of each class as scored by the points marked for physical, social and religious work. The boys are enthusiastic over their class percentages, as the class with the highest standing at Christmas time is to be given a sleighride and supper. A number of boys have already taken advantage of the Association offer of a free ticket to the boy who brings in five or more new members. A meeting will be held early next week of the class officers and team captains, when a real membership drive will be instituted between the six classes.

Plans are being perfected for a senior membership campaign to fill the places of the three hundred and thirty-five young men who have enlisted. It is thought that many men will be glad to take an Asociation ticket if for no other reason than to stand in the places of the fellows who have gone to the front.

"Wipers" Tower.

"Wipers" again! A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, in England, writes that those who know the beautiful old town of Rye, in Sussex, were not surprised when the British Tommy decided that Ypres was most properly "Wipers." Before the River Rother spread silt and mud round Rye, and when that town was a flourishing seaport, the most frequent visitors on its quays were merchants from Ypres, which was then a great manufacturing city of perhaps 200,000 inhabitants. There still stands, at the south-east corner of the ramparts of Rye, a fine, squat, red-brick tower gate, through which the traffic of the port ebbed and flowed. The guidebooks duly describe it as "Ypres Tower," for such the inhabitants of Rye called it, after those merchants from over seas whom they knew best, but, from time out of memory, it has always been known locally as "Wi[illegible]

Reports Read.

The following reports were read:

The Prisoners of War Department of the Canadian Red Cross Society was started in London, England, in the month of May 1915, under the capable and enthusiastic direction of Mrs. Rivers-Bulkeley, so favorably known in Canada, and whose husband made the supreme sacrifice in the early days of the war. With a heart attuned by personal sorrow to sympathy with others who suffer by reason of this tragic struggle, Mrs. Bulkeley has thrown all her energies and powers of organization into the endeavor to render the lot of Canadians taken prisoners by our powerful and unscrupulous foe a little more bearable than it would otherwise have been. It is with deep gratitude in our hearts for the work she has accomplished that we pay her this humble tribute.

The majority of our local men were taken prisoners in June, 1915 and very soon after that our own Prisoners' Department was formed and a resolution passed that the sending of sufficient money each month to pay for all parcels for our own men be a first charge upon our funds.

Pledge Has Been Kept.

This pledge has been faithfully kept, and during the year the sum of $5,970.48 has been forwarded to London for this purpose alone. In the year now commencing, the cost will be greater, as the six parcels weighing in all 60 pounds, the maximum amount permitted to be sent to each prisoner every month, now costs $15 per month, and this is exclusive of the 8 pounds of bread sent weekly and the box of rusks sent montinly from Berne, Switzerland.

When the Department was started the cost per prisoner was only $7.50; but as the price of food commodities advanced, the price of the parcels increased accordingly. Latterly we have been paying, for 41 prisoners, at the rate of $585 a month; but we have been notified from headquarters that four of the men for whom we have been paying have been fully paid up for by their friends and various societies and lodges to which they belonged, therefore further donations on their behalf are no longer required from us.

The executive decided that in view of the probability that more local men may be taken prisoners, that it would be unwise to adopt four non-local men, as requested by headquarters, preferring to reserve the ability to respond to the needs of any other local men who may be unfortunate enough to be taken captive. The packing of these parcels is done at the Civil Service stores, London, under the strictest supevision and censored, and thus, if all regulations were honorably carried on by the Germans, should reach the men unopened. The contents of the six parcels are most carefully chosen and the contents varied as much as is possible in accordance with the desire to send food containing as much nourishment and as great a proportion of fats as can be managed.

Every six months the Department sends to each prisoner a complete outfit of clothes, underwear, socks, boots, shoes, gloves, and toilet articles. Books, games, gramophones are also sent at intervals, and are most highly appreciated by the men, as many of the letters and cards received from them testify.

Many Acknowledgments.

We receive on an average about 23 acknowledgments a month. This, we think, is fairly satisfactory, taking into consideration the great restrictions placed upon their mail, and to which the boys frequently refer when expressing regret that they are unable to acknowledge all the parcels received.

Books of an educational nature are sent entirely free of charge to any prisoner requesting them, if the application is made in writing to A. T. Davies, Esq., Board of Education, Whitehall, London. This should be made as widely known as possible to the prisoners, as the monotony of the daily round would thus be greatly relieved for a man of studious habits. Music and other books may be ordered by private persons through the authorized firm of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son, Strand, London. A proportion of the parcels do go astray and often much is stolen, especially tin goods, but Ambassador Gerard bears testimony to the truth of the statement made by all escaped and returned prisoners, that they could not exist if it was not for the Red Cross parcels.

Ambassador Gerard says Canadian and British prisoners give their camp food to the Russians, who are literally starving.

Conditions Are Bad.

Some of the German camp commanders are a little more humane than others, but in some of the camps the conditions are truly terrible. Gerard says the indignities, the filth, the want of space and air and of cleanliness make not only the lot of the men but of the officers well-nigh unbearable. The Allies are under a deep debt of gratitude to the former U.S. Ambassador to Germany for the inextinguishable zeal with which he worked in order to alleviate the hard life of the prisoners.

We tender sincere thanks to all the generous individuals and societies who by their gifts and by the kindly interest they have manifested in this most important department of our many activities have helped to make the lot of our men and boys, captives in a far-off and unfriendly land a little less lonely and sad.

All through the long, weary, and stretched-out weeks, months, and years these parcels have gone forth carrying their unspoken message of remembrance and cheer from friends in the home town to those who are enduring the "hardship and the toil" in order that we at home may go free.

We feel this department owes very special thanks to both the Examiner and the Review for the ever kindly and generous manner in which they have granted us the use of their columns in our endeavour to keep the citizens in touch with this department of our work.

We do not intend to plead for continued aid in this humane work, for we feel confident that it will be forthcoming. In spite of all the ugly and cruel facts of the present times, and in spite of the fact that man is slaying his brother-man, humanity never had so great a love for humanity. Genuine sorrow and distress will ever continue to find and strike a responsive chord in the human heart.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Annie Forbes Allan, Convener.
E. Morrow, Treasurer.

Packing Committee.

In presenting the second annual report of your Packing Committee, before I give you the actual figures I should like to draw your attention to the fact that we have almost doubled the number of cases shipped this year. In November of last year we started to send our supplies via St. John's and Montreal. It has been most satisfactory in every way, as a receipt with the name of the ship is mailed the day the vessel sails, and we have never lost a case as yet. One society sending through us to the C.W.C.A. had an acknowledgment from Quartermaster-Sergt. Jordon, 2nd Battalion, in France, who received the case of 126 pairs socks sent. As convener of the committee, I should like to thank all the faithful packers who have assisted during the year, also Mrs. Greaves, who has so carefully mailed the cases for shipment, and the following auxiliaries and societies sending in supplies.

St. Andrew's Patriotic League, Ashburnham Patriotic League, Berean Bible Class, Buckhorn and Hall's Bridge, Fifty-seventh Chap. I.O.D.E. Fairview Ladies' Aid, George Street Methodist Church, St. John's Woman's Auxiliary, King Edward School, Lilly Lake Red Cross, Lakehurst Auxiliary, Murray Street Baptist, Otonabee Chap. I.O.D.E., St. Paul's Red Cross Auxiliary, Progressive Club, South-End Auxiliary, Trinity Methodist Church, St. Peter's C.A., Young's Point Thursday Club.

There have been 316 cases sent from 1st October, 1916, to 1st October, 1917, containing the following:

Australia Now Spanned by New Line of Railroad Binding the Federation

THE Australian continent is at last about to be spanned by rail. Completion of the event is timed for this autumn. The ceremonies which will mark it will signalize these facts:

Australia's transcontinental railroad system will be the second British system of its kind. The first historically is the Canadian Pacific System. The Cape-to-Cairo road in Africa, Cecil Rhodes' great project, has yet to be finished.

Allowing for differences in guage there will be through transportation in the Commonwealth from the Pacific to the Indian Ocean. The greatest distance ordinarily involved will be 3,467 miles, from Brisbane, Queensland, to Perth, Western Australia.

The completion of the federally owned 1,052 miles of rail in Southern Australia between Port Augusta, South Australia, and Kalgoorlie, Western Australia, will bring the States of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia into direct contact with the at present quasi-isolated State of Western Australia.

This federal Port Augusta-Kalgoorlie line, commonly called the "East-West" Railway, will link the State owned railway system of Western Australia with the successive State owned systems of South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales, and Queensland.

The "East-West" railway eventually will virtually revolutionise Australian traffic, particularly that to and from England and Europe via the Suez-Colombo route. It will obviate the previously indispensable sea carriage of passengers, mails, and cargo (other than for Western Australia) from Freemantle, Western Australia, around Cape Leeuwin to Adelaide, South Australia, in order to obtain their transportation by rail to Melbourne, Sydney, Newcastle, and Brisbane. The effect will be the same westward from Pacific ports involving American imports for Western Australia. The saving in distance thereby will be 1,350 nautical miles and in time from four to five days.

The road will furnish the famous Kalgoorlie-Coolgardie gold fields in Western Australia with an outlet other than Freemantle.

The "East-West" railroad not only will "represent the first attempt to provide a Commonwealth procedure and policy of railway management," to quote the Minister for Works and Railways, William A. Watt, but it will represent one of the last steps in Australian federation. Sir John Forrest, now Commonwealth Treasurer, refused when Premier of Western Australia in the late 90s, to permit the then colony to federate with the other colonies unless a railroad be built binding the proposed union together. This condition the Commonwealth will have fulfilled when the railroad is finished.

The road was intended to cost $20,228,000. When completed it will have cost $33,336,000. The first sod for it was officially turned in September, 1912. Its building is regarded as an extraordinary railroad performance.

One thousand miles of it traverses a vast stretch of country which, until it was begun, virtually was trackless and waterless; had been without human habitation at least 140 to 150 years, and contained little animal life. The difficulties of construction have been enormous. Nor will maintenance be easy. Incidentally, American rails and American locomotives entered considerably into the road's construction.

The King's Health.

King George's recent visit to the Grand Fleet recalls to one's mind a custom, reminiscent of bygone days, which still holds good in the navy. [illegible] the vast changes in the type of ships, numerous old rules still obtain, and none of them is more surprising to a landsman than that which forbids the health of the King to be drunk aboard ship upstanding. Members of the senior service alway sit whilst drinking the King's health, and it is remarkable how proud they are of the difference between them and their comrades of the land service.

The explanation is simple. In the old days of wooden vessels the deck above was perilously near the head of a man even of average height, and in many cases, if an officer rose with any alacrity, he bumped his head against the ceiling of the cabin. So now, in ward-rooms and gun-rooms, the president of the mess gives the toast of "The King," and it is honored without anyone rising.

John o' Groat's House.

The house of John o' Groat was situated on Duncansby Head, the most northerly point in Great Britain. It received its name from John o' Groat and his brothers, who came from Holland in 1489. The house was octagon in shape, being one room with eight windows and eight doors, to admit eight members of the family, the heads of different branches of it, to prevent their quarrels for precedence at table, which on one occasion nearly proved fatal. By this contrivance each came in at his own door and sat at an octagon table, at which of course their places were all alike.

Used for Steel.

The principal value of molybdenite is in the manufacture of steel, to which it gives a hardness and toughness that make the steel suitable for use in propeller shafts, guns, and boilers. Most of the molybdenite produced in Tasmania is shipped to England.

SHIFTING THE POPULATION.

Laborers From India Moved to West Indies.

A plan for encouraging the emigration of native laborers from India to British Guiana, Trinidad, Jamaica, and Fiji, announced by the British Government, is expected to result in the permanent settlement of many thousand East Indians in each of these four colonies. The object is to provide a fair substitue for the abolished system of indentured or contract East Indian labor. In some countries to which Indians use to go under the indenture system, their coming led, as it was bound to lead in the end, to serious trouble. They were white communities, which wanted the labor of the East Indian but did not want him as a settler.

It is claimed that there was and is no question of that kind in the case of the four Crown colonies selected as areas for the new settlement scheme. They each possess already large and prosperous Indian communities. Their industry is tropical and depends on Asiatic labor, which they have been accustomed to obtain from India without any sense of grievance on either side.

Laborers who enlist under the new plan will serve a probationary period of three years' employment in their new homeland, before being invited to become landholders. During this probationary period of employment under government supervision, they will be trained and fitted for the new conditions of life, at the same time affording the colony the benefit of their labor.

On first arrival the immigrant will undertake work for a period of six months under selected employers. He will then be free to move from one employer to another at a month's notice, being encouraged to work for the ensuing two and a half years in agricultural industries by the offer of numerous benefits subsequently as a colonist. At no time will he be under any indenture or contract, the relation between him and his employer being exactly the same as that prevailing in the colony between any employer and employe.

For the protection of the immigrants, the government will decide who may or may not employ them.

A fair minimum wage will be fixed and will be revised every five years on the heels of changes in the cost of living.

As soon as the worker has completed three years' employment, he will have the choice of returning to India or becoming a permanent settler. If he chooses the latter, the land will be put at his disposal by the colonial government.

The emigration from India of whole families will be encouraged as far as possible, particularly of families containing young unmarried girls who may become in the colonies the wives of other immigrants. Women unaccompanied by their families will not be assisted.

Discipline is Limited.

There are limits to discipline even before the enemy. Not long ago the pilot of a British aeroplane, which had fallen an incredible number of thousands of feet, landed amidst the branches of three poplar trees, with the nose of his machine pointing to the ground, and its fan to the sky. Having extricated himself from his seat, and climbed to a point of vantage, he was beginning calmly to survey the scene, when he was hailed from the ground by an indignant squadron commander, dissatisfied with the crudeness of the tumultuous descent. To a man, however, who has fallen from the skies, and who, like Mrs. Brown at Ramsgate, owes his safety to the interposition of a few sticks, the sermon from the stones appeared a little overdoing things. Looking down at his irate commander, from the tree tops, the pilot gave satirical rein to his disgust. "Look here, old man," he remarked, irritably and menacingly, "it's no good your attempting to come the comic policeman over me." What the squadron commander said is not reported.

IS YOUR HEALTH WORTH $5.00?

Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."—Mrs. JENNIE MOYER, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacements, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, backache or bearing-down pains, need the tonic-strengthening properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Jersey Potatoes.

The island of Jersey is up in arms over the aspersions which have recently been cast on its famous potato traffic. Some ill-informed people, it appears, have been spreading abroad the report that the great bulk of "Jersey potatoes" come from Holland. There is not, so a Jersey champion declares, a word of truth in the statement. The average output of potatoes from Jersey, he says, is no less than 60,000 tons a year. They arrive at a time when the English main crop is becoming exhausted, and are an important addition to the national potato supply until the early English varieties are ready. Imports from Holland, he adds, are a negligible quantity. However this may be, the Jersey potato traffic is certainly flourishing. A trip to Jersey on a potato boat returning empty, in the early summer, is a grateful experience, to those who appreciate such adventures.

Language of Initials.

One of the minor tasks of the British soldier is to learn the language of initials. All departments, offices, and sub-offices are, of course, known by their initials, and as those departments and offices are added to, and necessarily call for more precise definition, the mystic titles steadily increase in number and complexity. One of the latest achievements is the A. D., I. M. D. S., F. P. D., B. A. F., or in other words, the Assistant Director, Implements and Machinery Department Section, Food Production Department, Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

"Camouflage."

To deceive the eye of the enemy is no new thing in warfare, but in the present conflict it has become for the first time an important and even vital element of tactics. The new war word, "camouflage," covers a wide range, from optical illusions to expedients for obtaining invisibility.

Molybdenum in Quebec.

Molybdenum, which is largely used in the manufacture of guns and projectiles, was produced by the Province of Quebec last year to an amount which is claimed to be, perhaps, the largest output in the world at the present time. Used in hardening the steel employed in the rifling of big guns, it is reported to have increased their "life" twenty times. Many projectiles are also hardened with molybdenum, as well as a great deal of armor-plate, which was formerly hardened with tungsten or vanadium. It is estimated that the amount of molybdenum required to harden steel is only about one-half to one-third that of tungsten necessary to give the same result.

English Women Honored.

Two English women who have been decorated with the French Legion of Honor are Mrs. Borders-Turner and Lady Michelham. The latter manages a war hospital in the Hotel Astoria in Paris, which it is interesting to note is the hotel in which the Kaiser had ordered his dejeuner for September the 23rd, 1914. The former manager, a naturalized German named Geissler, is now doing two years "travaux forces" for swindling. The elaborate menu he had prepared the French Government is keeping as a souvenir.

All Contestants Express Pleasure

Assert Contest Was Squarely Conducted and Best Candidate Won---Other Fine Prizes Mean Much to Many Winners.

Contestants, their sisters, brothers, sweethearts and friends, judges, votes, subscriptions (mostly new, some old), adding machines, figures, cheques, money—all helped to make the grand finale of The Review contest the most successful, interesting and exciting ever held in this section of the Province of Ontario.

Excitement ran high all day Saturday, and the climax was a fitting one for a contest that had been waged with such spirit. Shortly after ten o'clock the judges opened the ballot box, and they were busy with the count till after midnight. The business office was filled with an audience which awaited the news with alternating hopes and fears, such as no election returns were ever awaited in this office.

Millions of votes were cast in the great contest and thousands of new subscriptions were received. The Review has met with kind words of praise for the straightforward business manner in which the contest was conducted, and all of the candidates seem perfectly satisfied with the result.

MISS EMILY HORSFEILD

MISS MELISSA ALFORD

Mount Julian—the well-known little summer resort town of the Kawartha Lakes, the population of which is about eight or more—is the home of the winner of the $1235 touring car. Miss Bessie Thompson, well known and very popular throughout the entire district, captured the top honors. Miss Thompson accomplished remarkable work, and the hundreds of friends who helped her will be glad to know that she won the big car. Ever since the opening of the campaign, Miss Thompson has been busy early and late, again proving the old statement that work will win in any race life has to offer.

Miss Lillian Routly was second in the great campaign and winner of the $475 Heintzman & Co. piano. This popular little lady passed the two million mark, and her friends will be glad of her great success.

Miss Melissa Alford of Lakefield came third, winning the Columbia Grafonola. Lakefield made a splendid fight for this poular lady, and the results accomplished were splendid. Miss Alford was almost two weeks late in starting, which was a big handicap, and the success she achieved goes to show her popularity and the esteem in which she is held by her many friends in Lakefield.

MISS LILLIAN ROUTLY

Miss Emily Horsfield, winner of the bedroom suite, proved a consistent and earnest contestant and brought in hundreds of subscriptions.

Mr. Cecil McCliggot was next in line, and ran very close to Miss Horsfield.

A very friendly spirit marked the work of all the contestants. Most of the contestants have congratulated Miss Thompson on her remarkable victory, and all are completely satisfied with the result. All expressed themselves as pleased with the clever manner in which the contest was conducted by the Contest Manager, J. D. MacAlpine.

"I didn't come down to the office at the close Saturday evening," said one of the contestants, "because I knew Mr. MacAlpine would see that my interests were treated fairly."

As soon as several more of the contestants call and receive their awards, the greatest contest ever held in this part of the province will be a thing of the past.

The contestants expressed the wish that their thanks be conveyed to the hundreds of friends who so nobly stood by them and aided them in their work.

The Peterborough Review wishes to add its appreciation and thanks to the people of Peterborough city and county who so loyally engaged in the struggle for the contestants. The management of The Review is more than pleased at the excellent showing made, and is overwhelmed with the mark of confidence bestowed on the paper by the hundreds of new and old subscribers.

All are assured that the standard of The Review will be maintained and with the aid of the countless new subscriptions efforts will be put forth to strengthen the paper wherever it may be weak.

"GOSH, BESSIE, HOW DID YOU DO IT?"

Publisher,
Daily Review:
Kind Sir:

The contest for the big Chevrolet Car is over, and I take this opportunity to thank you and the contest manager, also the judges, for the straightforward and honest manner in which this contest was conducted.

I congratulate Miss Thompson upon her success, and will say that she has been a most pleasant and ladylike opponent throughout the entire contest, and I do not wish my friends and supporters to hold any ill-will against her.

My anticipations, of course, were given quite a set back, and I must admit that I was disappointed, but I have won a $475 piano, for which I am truly thankful. And now, in conclusion, may I express my appreciation to all who aided me in this campaign?

Most respectfully,
LILLIAN ROUTLY.

MISS ALFORD SAYS "THANKS."

Extend my kindest regards and best wishes to all my friends who so generously supported me in the big contest. I am pleased with the prize I have won, and wish to state that I appreciate fully the straightforward and honest manner in which the contest was conducted, and am glad to know that the campaign was such a big success.

Very truly yours,
MELISSA ALFORD.

THANKS AND BEST WISHES.

Kindly extend my best wishes and thanks to the many friends who helped me in the great contest. May the time come when I shall be able to reciprocate in the same way.

MISS EMILY HORSFIELD.

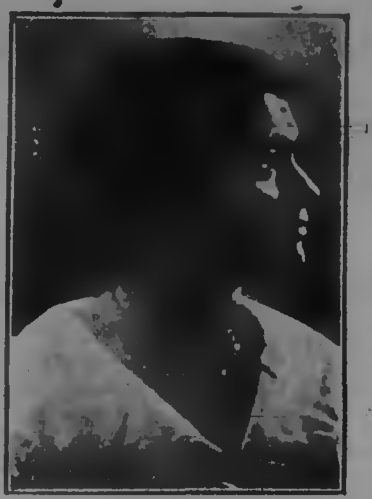
How I Won the Big Chevrolet

(By Bessie Thompson.)

"There is an old saying that to the early bird belongs the worm. I was the early bird. No sooner had the announcement of the contest appeared in The Daily Review than I decided that I wanted to own the big Chevrolet Car. It looked good to me.



"As soon as I had read the announcement I dropped the paper and started out. I saw all my friends, and within several hours had more than fifty subscriptions pledged. I kept this up, and never lost an opportunity to get subscriptions.

"Shortly after the contest started I sent out five hundred letters to friends asking them to save their vote coupons and subscriptions for me. In this manner I secured almost half a million votes, and I consider that his won the contest for me.

"I continued working until the close of the race, and was successful in obtaining a large number of new subscriptions. I want to sincerely thank my many friends, who so loyally supported me."

To the Contestants and Their Friends

To you, winning candidates, and to your most loyal friends, who helped you win one of the valuable prizes offered by THE PETERBOROUGH DAILY REVIEW, I wish to extend my heartiest congratulations on your success and the excellent work you did. You winners may well feel proud of your achievements, for you won a worthy fight. You who did not win a prize may also feel proud of your efforts, for you fought a fair and well fought battle.

Even though you were unsuccessful in placing your names upon the roll of winners you have gained the best wishes of your friends and the public and you have been benefited in many ways which will help you in the battle which lasts long after the battle of ballots has been forgotten—the battle of life.

Thanking you all for the consistent good will and fairness displayed at all times throughout the contest, I am,

Very sincerely,
THE MAC ALPINE CIRCULATION CO.
J. D. MAC ALPINE,
Campaign Manager.

HUNDREDS OF NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS

To the Candidates and Public:

I take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation of the splendid fashion in which the big contest was received by the loyal people of Peterborough and district. The object of the contest, of course, was to increase the circulation of the paper—to give the advertisers better service and results and to make the paper bigger and better in every way. And the campaign has been a splendid success, hundreds of new subscribers being received and the advertising columns of the paper greatly enlarged. The success of the contest and the value of the campaign from an advertising viewpoint make it possible for us to give much more efficient service to our patrons.

I thank you all for the loyal way you have stood by the candidates and the paper and hope that we will always merit the good will and friendship you have so admirably shown.

THE PETERBOROUGH REVIEW CO.
A. H. STRATTON, Manager.

THE CASH COMMISSIONS.

TORONTO PEOPLE SLACK IN CHURCH ATTENDANCE

Estimated that Forty per cent. Attend No Place of Worship—Church Census to be Taken.

Toronto, Oct. 29.—A large and most representative gathering of the various pastors, priests, rabbis, etc., attended the special meeting of the Toronto Home Visitation, promoted by the International Sunday School Association. Mr. John G. Kent presided and introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mr. J. Sheve Durham, international superintendent of Home Visitation, who gave an outline of the work to be undertaken on November 9th, when it is anticipated that the City of Toronto will be covered by the 12,000 workers in less than two hours, in the hope of interesting every citizen in Toronto in this great church movement.

All pastors, Sunday school leaders and all others, regardless of denomination, who are interested in such a general betterment work for the religious, the social, educational, commercial, industrial and civic life of our city are invited to be members of the committee.

Mr. Kent explained that the aims and objects of the endeavour was to get a complete census of Toronto and the outlying suburbs and ascertain the religious belief of every man, woman and child. "Toronto is a large city of churches, but a great many never see inside a church. Wonderful results have been attained in other cities, and I feel it will be most successful in this city, and will result in bringing many into the churches that have never seen inside one, which will mean a great deal for the country, as the religious element is of greater value to the country than any other elements," said the speaker.

GIRLS ADOPT MEN'S ATTIRE

FIFTY OF THOSE IN BONNER-WORTH FACTORY DECIDE TO WEAR OVERALLS.

Styles in overalls change from year to year, both in pattern and design, just as do other articles of masculine attire, but the very latest thing in them now is fifty girls employed in the Bonner-Worth factory. The new dress reformers adopted the fashion only this morning, after a consultation among themselves and receiving permission from the members of the firm to introduce the innovation. They are to be allowed five minutes every morning in which to change from their street attire into their working garments. It is believed that they will be more efficient workers than ever and that they will be in less danger of becoming wound up in some revolving machinery.

The girls will probably call their new work togs bloomers, but after all the name is immaterial.

MAY FIX PRICES.

But Food Controller Hanna Says He Must Be Careful.

Kingston, Oct. 29. — Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, addressed a public meeting called by the Women's Canadian Club, in the city hall here Friday night. He said that if the call to save wheat, beef and bacon issued by the housekeepers of Canada when he took office, three months ago, was insistent then, it was now louder by far.

It may be only a matter of months, he declared, until we in this country are in a very awkward position, and to prevent this a campaign for increased production of foodstuffs in Canada has now been organized to meet this situation, with particular emphasis upon an increased production of hogs.

"If it is necessary," Mr. Hanna declared, "I am prepared to fix prices. But I am not prepared to fix freak prices, despite the advice of certain well-meaning newspapers. I regard it as my primary duty to see that the men at the frnt fighting our battles are not allowed to go hungry. In fixing prices we have got to be careful that we do not dry up the sources of supply."

BRITAIN'S DEBT GROWS.

$15,000,000 Has Been Added—$3,750,000 More Every Six Months.

London, Oct. 29.—A report of the select committee of the House of Commons on national expenditures, just issued, says that, excluding £1,321,000,000 owned by Great Britain's allies and dominions, the national debt up to September 30 had been added to by approximately £3,000,000,000. Very roughly speaking each six months of the war will necessitate a gross addition of £1,000,000,000, or, excluding loans, a net addition of £750, 000,000.

MAUD MULLER UP TO DATE

MAUD MULLER on a summer's day
Raked the meadows sweet with hay

And as she raked in the early morn
She heard the honk of an auto horn

Anon there drifted on the scene
A car propelled by gasoline.

The judge rode up in his motorcar
And said to Maud, "Ah, there you are!"

He chilled his engine in the shade
Of the apple tree to chin the maid.

He spoke of the mileage on his tires,
As is the way of all good liars.

He said his car was quite the best
And had the edge on all the rest.

He invited Maud to take a ride,
And, nothing loath, she jumped inside.

The judge from a purling brooklet drank
And forthwith started in to crank.

He cranked and cranked till his arm was sore,
Then started in and cranked some more.

He cranked and cranked till he reeked with sweat
And cranked till after the sun had set.

He cranked away with a right good will,
And the chances are he is cranking still.

And of all devices with which we're cursed
The auto crank is about the worst.

The Way of the Stairs.

In a suit in court a lawyer was cross examining Jerome Gerlach, a German, the point in question being the relative position of the doors, windows and so forth in a house in which a certain transaction was alleged to have taken place.

"And now," the lawyer said, "will you be good enough to tell the court how the stairs run in your house?"

Gerlach looked dazed for a moment. The lawyer repeated the question, but still the German did not understand.

"How do the stairs run?" he repeated.

"Yes," said the lawyer, "how do the stairs run?"

"Vell," said Gerlach slowly, "ven I am oopstairs dey run down, and ven I am downstairs dey run oop."—New York Times.

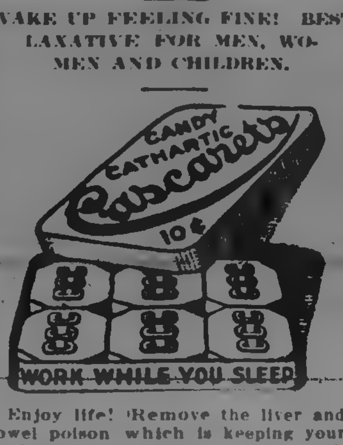
DON'T STAY HEADACHY, SICK OR HAVE BAD BREATH AND SOUR STOMACH.

WAKE UP FEELING FINE! BEST LAXATIVE FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.



Enjoy life! Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, breath offensive and stomach sour. Don't stay bilious, sick, headachy, constipated and full of cold. Why don't you get a box of Cascarets from the drug store and eat one or two tonight and enjoy the nicest gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced? You will wake up feeling fit and fine. Cascarets never gripe or sicken like salts, pills and calomel. They act so gently that you hardly realize you have taken a cathartic. Mothers should give cross, sick, bilious or feverish children a whole Cascaret any time—they act thoroughly and are harmless.

" Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them "

In connection with the above quotation, we are going to deal with it only from what should be the viewpoint of those in this city who will not be in the firing line.

Daily Sacrifices Necessary

We believe there is hardly a family in Peterborough who has not a relative, friend or neighbor making daily sacrifices for them overseas, to whom their heart goes out in love and sympathy and genuine good wishes for the boys' safe return. This is as it ought to be, but it must be supplemented by something practical. No doubt you are doing something practical in an individual way, but there is another way by which you can help through organized eoffrts.

Canadian Red Cross Society

The Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society is the safest, most economical and best medium by which you can feel certain that your efforts are getting the utmost results. Through its effective organization, the Peterborough boys who are prisoners in Germany are fed and nourished enabling them to return in good time to their relatives. The sick are carefully looked after, and who knows but that it may be the boy you are most interested in!

From His Own Home Town

The wounded are tenderly cared for, and if it is not your boy in this case, don't you think you could apply the principle of the quotation heading this notice? Other lines of work are courageously undertaken, busy hands are making up in this city all the year round thousands of necessary articles for use in case of sickness and wounds, and thousands of other articles to supply comforts for the boy who is neither sick nor wounded, but who greatly appreciates a package from his old home town.

But to do this it requires money—money that is well spent, and if we could get double it would still be well spent. Our request is a very modest one for the demands on the fund, and we are looking to you to make it possible that next year sufficient funds will be on hand to show even a greater appreciation of the efforts of every Peterborough boy at the front.

$20,000

Canvassers will see you on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Next

You are not giving to them, but for your own Boy's Care and Comfort, or, which is just as noble, for some other parent's boy's care and comfort.

Make up your mind to GIVE. If you have not been canvassed, call at the headquarters of the

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH
CANADAIN RED CROSS SOCIETY.

All Saints Day at St. John's Church

Thursday next is All Saints Day. There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion in St. John's Church at 10 a.m. The special intention of this service will be memorial of those who have fallen in the war and intercession for our men on active service. The members of St. John's congregation who have members of their families who have given their lives, and those who have men on active service, are earnestly invited to be present at this special service.

The Wee Old Bird?
Few People Know This
Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.
The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.
The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.
Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

MILLIONS OF POUNDS OF SUGAR FOUND IN BUFFALO WAREHOUSE

Secret Service Officers Found It Stored Away and Marked as Flour

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 26.—Federal secret service agents reported to Washington the discovery in a Buffalo warehouse of millions of pounds of sugar in bags and barrels labelled "top crust flour."

Notations on the packages, it was said, indicated that the sugar had been coming into the warehouse over a period of several months. Federal agent who made a survey of the contents of the building estimated the amount of sugar at 150 carloads, or about 10,000,000 pounds.

Around immense piles of sacks containing the sugar, the Federal agent said, he found a screen of other articles, while some of the containers marked "top crust flour" actually had flour sprinkled over the outside.

Richard M. Richardson, superintendent of the Keystone Warehouse in which the sugar was stored, did not know of the presence of the secret service agent and a newspaper man in the warehouse until the survey of the contents had been practically completed. He ordered the newspaper man out of the building and demanded that the secret service agent come to the warehouse office for his data. The sugar, Richardson said, belonged to a condensed milk company.

George S. Duck, city comptroller, this afternoon sent a message to John Mitchell, chairman of the food commission, stating that a sugar famine existed here, and asking Mr. Mitchell to take action to bring about the release of some of the sugar in storage.

Retail prices of sugar today varied from 10 to 20 cents a pound.

MORE HOGS FOR CANADA.

Greater Production Undertaken to Help the Allies.

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—A Dominion-wide campaign for increased production of hogs is to be undertaken at once as the result of representation made by the Allies to the Food Controller. Representatives of the Agricultural Departments of Eastern Canada, and swine breeders met recently, and the initial steps were taken towards an organized effort, under the auspices of the Federal Department of Agriculture, working in co-operation with the Food Controller.

PARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Some Gems Secured from British Commons.

In an interesting article on "Calling Names in Parliament," Mr. Spencer Leigh Hughes, M.P., points out that parliamentary language was not always so correct and dignified as it is at the present time. He tells the story of a member of the Irish Parliament, known as Mr. Martin, of Galway, who made use of what in its way was the greatest Parliamentary utterance ever heard in any Senate. "Mr. George Ponsonby (later on a distinguished legal luminary) was in his place, and his sister, Miss Ponsonby, was in the open and unconcealed gallery. It appears that the lady was laughing at Mr. Martin's oratorical efforts, and he avenged himself by declaring:

"These Ponsonbys are the curse of my country, from that toothless old hag who is now grinning in the gallery to the white-livered scoundrel who is now shivering on the floor."

Commenting on this, Mr. Hughes says that it always appeared to him to be a gem of Parliamentary oratory, "brief and bright, without being brotherly."

It was some years later that the incorrigible Dr. Tanner described the Home Secretary of that day as "one of the basest and meanest skunks that ever sat on the Treasury Bench"—a breezy phrase which had to be withdrawn.

"I suppose," says Mr. Hughes, "Lord North was the most somnolent leader the House ever knew, but he was not always asleep when members thought he was. Thus, when a member was assailing him one day and said, with indignation, 'Even now, when this country is in so grave a crisis, the noble lord is asleep,' Lord North managed to open one eye as he said, 'I wish to God I was.'"

As an example of the retort subtle and courteous, the answer given by Mr. Balfour on one occasion would be hard to beat. When he was Chief Secretary for Ireland an Irish member once asked him why a large number of police had been sent to a certain place in Ireland on the previous Sunday, imposing unnecessary expenses on the parish or district, Mr. Balfour replied that one reason why the police were sent was the honorable member's presence there, which had a disturbing influence. The member retorted, "But I wasn't there at all," and to this Mr. Balfour replied, in perfectly correct Parliamentary form, "I think the honorable gentleman is misinformed."

A Lady Judge.

It is on record that a lady has officiated as a judge in England. She was Lady Anne Berkeley, of Yate, in Gloucestershire. She had appealed to Henry the Eighth to punish a party of rioters who had broken into her park, killed the deer, and burned the hayricks; and his Majesty granted to her and others a special commission to try the offenders, armed with which she opened the commission, empanelled the jury, heard the charge, and on a verdict of guilty being returned pronounced sentence.

"The Eye, Ear and Nose" of a Suit

Doctors who specialize in their practice become expert in their particular specialty, and men and women seek them out when they are afflicted with the malady to which the doctor has devoted his study and experience.

Thirty tailors contribute to the making of each individual suit; and each tailor is a specialist, having become expert in the making of his specialty.

One man makes collars.
Another makes pockets.
A third makes linings.
A fourth fits the lining.
A fifth shapes the shoulders.
A sixth sews in sleeves—so on.

And thus the thirty specialists produce a Semi-ready Coat, and the Chief Examiner pronounces it good before there is sewn in the pocket the "Shield that Shields."

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

COL. ROOSEVELT HANDY WITH FISTS

The boxing game, decently conducted, has few firmer friends than Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Although he will celebrate his fifty-ninth birthday tomorrow, the former president is still handy with his fists. As a youth Col. Roosevelt was delicate, and at Harvard took up boxing under competent direction and was transformed into an athlete. His attainments as a boxer are largely due to the instruction he has received in the "manly art" from the late Prof. Mike Donovan, for many years instructor in boxing at the New York Athletic club, and long a professional pugilist in the bare knuckle era of the game. Col. Roosevelt is also a good wrestler, having taken lessons in the mat game from Billy Muldoon and others. If the colonel should be forced to defend himself against an attack, however, he wouldn't have to depend on boxing and wrestling. He knows the Japanese art of jui jitsu from A to Z, having been the pupil of John O'Brien, at one time a police official in Nagasaki, Japan. He is also an expert in the ancient exercise of single stick, thanks to the instructions of General Leonard Wood. Boxing, fencing, wrestling and tennis have all played a part in the colonel's training for his political campaigns. Even at the present time he is at a health farm trying to reduce weight, for he knows that the good athlete has no use for a "tummy."

THE FIRST TIE GAME.

The first tie game in baseball history was played in New York sixty-three years ago October 26, 1854. It was called on account of darkness at the end of the twelfth inning, with the score 12 to 12. The contesting clubs were the Gothams and the Knickerbockers, rival clubs for New York's baseball honors, the Knicks being the first regular baseball club ever organized. The Knicks were in the lead by a score of 11 to 9 at the end of the ninth inning, and under modern rules would have won the game, but in those days the winning team had to score twenty-one runs, or "aces."

WHAT HUGGINS TURNED DOWN.

St. Louis, Oct. 29.—Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Nationals, said that he offered Miller Huggins, who signed a contract to manage the New York Americans, a salary of $10,000 a year, and 10 per cent. of all profits over $25,000, if he would remain with the St. Louis club next season. "We have not signed anyone to take Huggins' place," Rickey said. "I do not expect to make any announcement as to the managership for some time."

Hourless to Be Retired.

The possible chance of another meeting between Hourless and Omar Khayyam this year went aglimmering on Wednesday when Trainer Sam Hildreth announced that August Belmont's crack three-year-old has been retired for the season. Hourless' recent victory over Wilfred Viau's colt seems to have convinced Hildreth that the Belmont French-bred had earned enough glory for this year.

Horsemen were of the opinion that the colts might hook up in a race at the Maryland Jockey club's coming meeting at Pimlico. Both were nominated in the Pimlico Autumn handicap, at a mile and a quarter, and the Bowie cup at a mile and a half.

With Hourless out of the two big events, it is not known whether Mr. Viau will start his English bred colt in the Pimlico fixtures.

The retirement of Hourless has caused keen disappointment to racing folk in Maryland and elsewhere, who were awaiting the announcement of the weights for the Pimlico Autumn handicap and Bowie cup. They were anxious to learn just how much better the Maryland Jockey club's handicapper would rate Hourless over the Viau colt because of the former's recent victory in the special race. Trainer Richard F. Carman, too, was disappointed when he learned of Hourless' retirement for the year, as he was keen for another race either at the mile and a quarter or over the mile and a half route.

HOCKEY IN WINNIPEG.

Senior Amateur Game Confined to Soldier Teams.

Winnipeg, Oct. 29.—There has been little hockey talk in this city so far, but the prospects for good amateur hockey are exceedingly bright. With the draft coming into effect, November 10, it is probable that senior hockey will be confined to soldier teams, as the majority of last year's players will undoubtedly be in khaki. Two of the teams are intact, with the exception of Jack Chambers of the Vics, and Goodmanson of the Monarchs. They are already in the army.

UNITED STATES MAKES NEW LOAN TO GREAT BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Oct. 29. — Another advance of $25,000,000 was made today by the United States Government to Great Britain, bringing the total loaned to that country thus far up to $1,400,000,000.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost

EDITOR'S MAIL

A QUESTION OF FIGURES.

Editor Review: You will notice by Saturday's Examiner, Mr. Hughson Johnston, president of the Protestant Federation, stated at a meeting in Victoria Hall that the number of Protestants in Peterborough is 18,000. Well, if so, the other 4,000 have made a very creditable showing indeed. If I were Mr. Johnston, I would take a day off and study statistics, or better still, "Cobbler, stick to your last."

FAIR PLAY.

A PAIR OF PATRIOTS.

Editor Review: I am glad to see that Mr. Burnham wants "no monopoly of good intentions," the good intentions in this case being intentions to support the Union Government. But evidently Mr. Burnham has no desire for union here. Why is this? Does he not think there is the same need of cooperative singleness of purpose in Peterborough that there is in Canada as a whole. Surely it cannot be that Mr. Burnham has any selfish motive in his desire for a Donnybrook Fair election here where to use his words, the different parties "all go to it" at a time when the national demand is for unity of effort to beat a common foe. A joint convention of both parties to choose a candidate representative of the whole community would avoid the expense and discord of an election at a time when all our money and efforts are needed to successfully oppose our enemies.

I have been sorry to see some criticism of Mr. R. B. Rogers and Mr. J. A. Aylmer which I consider very unfair. Both of these men have been at the very forefront of all patriotic work in this community since the war began and instead of unfriendly criticism we should have nothing but praise for the efforts of these gentlemen to bring us all together with the one purpose of winning the war. I am not connected with the Win-the-War League in any way whatever but I have seen enough of the patriotic work of Messrs. Rogers and Aylmer to satisfy me that in their efforts they have only their country's welfare at heart.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

South Seas Romance Done.

Another chapter in the romance of the South Seas and the Hawaiian islands, Fanning, Washington, and Christmas Islands to the south, has just been closed by the death of Mrs. William Greig, who died on Washington Island and was buried on Fanning Island, having lived on each of these little pin dots in the Pacific for an entire lifetime of eighty-two years.

A native of Manahiki, an island two hundred miles south of Fanning, she became the wife of William Greig, an Englishman, who was owner of Washington and Fanning, and who established copra plantations and trading stations thereon. Trading ships made infrequent voyages between Honolulu and these small islands, as a result of which her sons were all educated in Honolulu schools.

One by one the islands were sold by the Greig family and all remained under the British flag. Fanning became important in the development of British Empire interests in the Pacific through the establishment there of a cable station for the All Red Route between Vancouver and Sydney. It is now owned by Mann, Gregory & Co., one of the largest British coal firms not only of New South Wales, Australia, but of the world. Fanning, which is almost two hundred miles south of Honolulu, recently was purchased by the Armstrong interests of London, owing to its geographical situation, its huge harbor with a depth of water sufficient for the largest vessel afloat and its cable station, and it is proposed that the island become the British bunkering station for both coal and liquid fuel on the Pacific.

France Faces Big Scandal

It is said that the "Sacred Union" of all political parties in France, which was established at the beginning of the war, is being severely strained. Since the war began there have been no elections in France, but there have been four premiers, Briand, Viviani, Ribot, and Painleve, and Ministerial changes that have affected fifty Ministers. Each change, however, is a fresh indication of France's determination to prosecute the war with greater vigor. The scandal that brought about the latest change of Ministry concerns the relations of M. Malvy, Minister of the Interior, with the manager of the Bonnet Rouge newspaper, M. Duval, and with the editor of the paper, who died in prison when awaiting trial for conspiracy with Duval to give the enemy information. In other words, is Malvy a partner of German spies?

M. Malvy was said to be the representative of Joseph Cailleaux in the Ribot Government. He was also in previous Governments, for it was impossible for Briand, Viviani, or Ribot to command a majority in the Deputies without the support of the powerful Radical group whose leader is Cailleaux. This politician will be remembered as the husband of the woman who murdered M. Calmette, editor of the Figaro, some time before the beginning of the war. He has been suspected of being either a sympathizer with Germany or at least hostile to the war. Nevertheless, he commands a considerable number of followers, and though he is not now in the Deputies his influence is that of an important "boss." M. Malvy represents him. Now the Bonnet Rouge, a Socialist newspaper that always seems to be prosperous, though carrying few advertisements, has been lukewarm toward the war from the beginning. How the sheet has managed to finance is something of a mystery. It is hinted that Cailleaux provided the funds, and that M. Malvy handled them. At any rate, Malvy and the editor and manager of the Bonnet Rouge have been on terms that impressed the observer as intimate.

There can be no doubt that Manager Duval will have considerable explaining to do before the court that will try him. He was found with a cheque or cheques for $30,000 in his possession after a visit to Switzerland. He had been to Switzerland fifteen times in a year, and the theory of the prosecution is that he went for the purpose of giving information to German agents. If Duval is a German spy it is obvious that he had unexcelled opportunities for getting and transmitting information. His editor who died recently was Vigo-Almeryda, an Anarchist writer and orator, who spent time in prison for theft and for the making of bombs earlier in his career. Not his death but the manner of his death is what is keenly interesting the people of Paris, or at least the few of them whom the censorship permits to know what is going on. There have been three official explanations of his death. The prison authorities say he died of natural causes; the doctors who performed an autopsy say that he was strangled with a shoe lace; M. Viviani says he committed suicide, but would have died anyway, because he was a morphine fiend, and had half a dozen other maladies, each one of them mortal. The question is, was his death assisted, or as one might say, stimulated?

That important political considerations are involved in the charges against Duval and the dead man is proved by the action of the censorship in allowing no mention of them until they had been referred to in the Chamber of Deputies. For a couple of weeks before the general public knew anything of the sensation, the Figaro appeared daily with the heading "An Important Affair" over a blank space, the latter being the censor's idea of a proper story of Duval's activities. The Figaro remembers the murder of M. Calmette, and loses no opportunity to attack Cailleaux and those whom it believes to be his friends or associates. The matter was kept from the public, as remarked, until a member hurled a taunt at M. Malvy, which could not be suppressed, the proceedings of the Deputies being public, except when there is a special secret session.

In the present war we see some of the disadvantages of the French alignment of parties, as opposed to that in Canada or the United States or Great Britain. English-speaking countries, as a rule, have two chief parties. In France the Parliament is made up of more than half a dozen groups, and while public opinion may thus be more nicely represented, in war time the Ministry is likelier to change overnight. A Cabinet Minister offends this group or that; his head is demanded, and because the Government needs the support of the group, there is a change which may or may not be in the national interest. In France the Chamber was elected before the war, and naturally there are in it some members who could never be elected on a war issue. These members, nevertheless, are sometimes able to force their will on the Government. It is, in effect, a Government by compromises.

The Crescent.

The crescent was not originally the emblem of the Turk. It was first used by the primitive Christians of Constantinople and the Eastern Provinces of the old Roman Empire as an emblem of the growing influence of Christianity. It was not until about the year 1453, after the Turks had overrun Asia Minor and part of Southern Europe, and had captured Constantinople, that the Turks adopted the crescent as their national emblem.

Lithium a Soft Metal.

Lithium is a silver-white, very soft metal, which forms the oxide or some other salt on exposure to the air and which decomposes in water, forming the hydroxide of lithium; for these reasons metallic lithium does not occur in nature. Compounds are called lithium carbonate, lithium phosphate, lithium silicate, etc. The chemical products derived from lithium mineral have found application in military affairs.

Scraps of Butter.

There are about sixty-four individual helpings of butter in a pound, each helping equaling about one-fourth of an ounce. If the accumulated "scrapings" from the butter-plates after the meal were estimated there would probably be about one "pat" collected each day, in the average household. But if everyone of our 20,000,000 households should waste one-fourth of an ounce of butter daily, it would mean 312,500 pounds a day, or 114,462,500 pounds a year.—Popular Science Monthly.

Wheat Crops.

Manchurian and Siberian wheat probably will be exported to America to replace American wheat shipped to the Entente Allies in Europe. Because of the lack of locomotives and cars, it is impossible to send the wheat surplus from Eastern Asia into European Russia. At scores of railway stations in Siberia and Manchuria, sacks of wheat, only slightly protected by temporary sheds, are rapidly deteriorating.

Benzine is Scarce.

The growing scarcity of benzine and rubber has necessitated a drastic reduction of automobile traffic in Stockholm. No taxicabs whatever may be operated after 9 p.m. or before 7 a.m., and they may not go out of a very restricted district. Private automobiles may not be used at all. All private motor boats are also prohibited from running. The supply of kerosene as well is nearing exhaustion.

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The girl who is going away to school or college needs a good, serviceable dress for general wear in the classroom and outside of it. The one shown in No. 8170 is just the thing for the purpose, because it is rather simple and yet it has the latest fashion features. The front is in one piece from shoulder to hem, but the back is semi-fitted and the skirt is gathered to it at the slightly raised waistline. A narrow sash comes from each side of the back, crosses at the front and ties at the back. The large collar has the new pointed effect, which is so good. Deep cuffs, with points, match the collar. Two unusual looking pockets are stitched to the sides.

The dress pattern, No. 8170, is cut in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Width at lower edge of skirt is 2½ yards. The 16 year size requires 4⅞ yards 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Vacation Song.

Vacation time has come hey-ho.
Skeeters and sunburns and sprains,
And many a man
With a frying pan
Beats it up from the plains.
Into the mountains, up by the snow,
Where the biggest skeeters and wood ticks grow.
Hey-ho,
Where the biggest wood ticks grow!

Vacation time has come, hey-ho,
Board walks and flunkeys and bills,
And many a man
Hocks what he can
And beats it down from the hills
To the salted sands where the tangoes go
And a square meal costs ten dollars or so,
Hey-ho,
Yes, costs ten dollars or so!

Vacation time has come, hey-ho,
Scatter and chatter and roam
Let every man
Do what he can
To beat it away from home.
He will wear off his tummy and scatter his dough.
But what is the difference? He's been on the go.
Hey-ho,
You bet, he's been on the go!

EVENING 15c TO ALL MATINEE 10c TO ALL

WARM WELCOME FOR FORMER PASTOR ON HIS RETURN VISIT

Large congregations, morning and evening, were present at Knox Church yesterday to welcome a former pastor, Rev. H. J. Keith, now of Westminster Church Edmonton. The reverend visitor preached at both sevices. He is on his way to Toronto on a business trip.

It was during Rev. Mr. Keith's energetic charge that the present beautiful Presbyterian structure known as Knox Church was erected. The original church adjoins the present edifice and is used as a school room. The reverend gentleman accepted his present charge in the West two years ago.

Tribute of Sincerity.

At the service last night Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, present pastor of Knox Church, said the large congregations morning and evening gave testimony to the warmth of welcome to the visitor offered by his former charge; and, in the congregation's behalf, he invited Mr. Keith to accept the assembly before him as a tribute to, and generous expression of appreciation of his past ministrations in Knox Church.

Peterborough His Home.

Rev. H. J. Keith said he was guilty of no intentional dishonor to the town in which he was born in declaring that Peterborough was home to him. In looking back upon the happy years spent as pastor of Knox Church, the host of friends made and warm-hearted associations experienced, he could not but realize that Peterborough was his home. Then he meant no dishonor to the good people who composed his congregation in Edmonton, when he said that one of the gladdest sights to him in that far off city was to look down upon his congregation in Westminster Church and see before him members of Knox Church, Peterborough. He extended his hearty welcome of the morning to the congregation before him to visit him ed they would not all come at once.

Making Himself Known.

Rev. Mr. Keith's sermon was really a heart-to-heart talk to his congregation on the subject of "Christ making Himself Known." He preached the Gospel of Christ in all its simplicity, and urged acceptance of the standard of life set by the Redeemer. When a man dies, he said, the real question is what kind of a man he was, how much he was like unto Christ. It will not be a consideration of how much money or ease he earned, but how much of the standard of Christ he had appropriated unto himself. Like the woman of Samaria, he continued, we should pay tribute to Christ as the greatest of all Jews, some of whom set high standards of life and action the world over, and even in the war. Of all the world's geniuses, man must pay tribute to Jesus as the greatest of all.

Prophecies Come True.

Then as a prophet Christ must be accepted. He foretold in detail the destruction of Jerusalem, which was fulfilled seventy years after His resurrection. He also prophesied that the time would come when religion should be separated from place, and not confined to Jerusalem, Rome, nor Knox Church, Peterborough, but observed wherever and whenever men may assemble. He predicted the downfall of paganism and the worship of idols; and of all the world's teachers, we raise our eyes to Christ as the great teacher of men. He has reverted to us a God who is not a tyrant but a wonderful father of love, and the vital question with us today is, "what think ye of Christ?"

In conclusion, the reverend gentleman exhorted his hearers to investigate their lives and learn if their religion is of such a standard as will recommend itself to others, and induce attraction to them and to the Church of Christ.

Proved a Humbug.

St. Swithin's Day turned out in London this year with thunderstorms in the morning and afternoon, and the fall of a tenth of an inch of rain. For the comfort of those who still keep in mind the old saying one London newspaper went back to the record, as follows:

Experience is as dead against the prophecy as against the similar sayings connected with St. Vitus' Day (June 15) or St. Medard's Day (June 8) in France. Rainfall statistics disclose the fact that out of ten summers when St. Swithin's Day was dry, rain fell on an average of 19.4 days out of the forty following, and in nine summers when the fateful day was wet rain fell on an average of nineteen days out of the forty following. So that it does not seem to matter much either way. In fact, never has a wet St. Swithin's been followed by forty days' rain, the nearest being in 1848, when thirty-one wet days succeeded.

The fact is that our ancestors away back were very clever in making rhymed weather rules and very careless in seeing how the rules worked. They remembered the rules and forgot the exceptions, and that habit has come down to this day.

What a crowd there would be in heaven if people could go on Sunday excursions.

PATRIOTIC FUND ASSOCIATION DECIDE TO ASK COUNCIL TO RAISE $60,000 NEEDED FOR THE WORK NEXT YEAR BY ONE TAX LEVY

Debenture and Subscription Plan Find no Favor With Any But Three of the Members—Only Way Possible to Get Money—Allowances Have Increased.

The Patriotic Fund Association at their postponed quarterly meeting last night decided to ask the City Council to raise the $60,000 requested by the Fund for 1918 by a tax levy, raising the whole amount in one year instead of by the issue of debentures. This will mean an addition of about five mills to the usual tax rate. Only three members, Mayor Duffus and Messrs. V. Eastwood and E. A. Peck, voted against the motion. The two former were for the voluntary subscription system, while Mr. Peck favored raising $30,000 by taxation and the remainder by subscription.

Those present at the meeting last night, besides Mr. J. A. Aylmer, in the chair, and Secretary F. H. Dobbin, were: Messrs. Jas. Kendry, E. A. Peck, V. Eastwood, Mayor Duffus, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., H. P. Rush, Walter Stocker, W. R. Morris, Ald. Worth, F. D. Kerr, John Crane, B. D. Hall, H. B. Rye, F. Adams, W. H. Dunsford, F. W. Doan, H. B. Cowan and Chas. Rishor.

The Mayor Leads Off.

Mayor Duffus led off in the discussion, taking the position that it was not good business policy to saddle any more financial responsibility upon the taxpayers, and standing for the subscription system. The city has plenty to do as it is, and the end of the war is not in sight. The city should be thoroughly organized, even if it took two months to do it, and the citizens given an opportunity to contribute what they could. In another year, said the Mayor, the city will require two new schools, and $125,000 must be provided for a sewage disposal plant.

Mr. Kendry—"Can you raise the $60,000 by subscription?"

Mayor Duffus—"Other cities are doing it."

Mr. Kendry—"Yes, and other cities are putting it on the rate. I think that is the only way."

Mr. Morris called attention to the fact that the men who had in the past contributed generously will next year be called upon to pay a heavy war tax. A Federal income tax will also be imposed. "Experts tell us, too, that the war is likely to last from two to five years longer."

Mr. Aylmer ventured the opinion that the Board of Education would not ask for a new school building next year. This assertion seemed likely for a time to divert the discussion to the educational affairs of the city, Mr. Eastwood contending the Board had no alternative but to provide school accommodation.

Mr. F. D. Kerr said he was prepared to give his subscription if called upon, but he would defer to the opinion of the majority. Last year he had thought that for 1918 the raising of the Fund should be taken over by the Government, but he was ready to yield his personal views.

Mr. H. B. Cowan said that he had helped to get the sentiments of the people last year on the taxation idea, and had found them almost unanimous for it.

Mr. Eastwood insisted on the subscription plan, his chief argument being that there is more money in circulation now than ever was known.

"Ask the citizens for donations," he said, "and threaten them with taxation if they do not respond."

"Do you suppose you could help get the $20,000 asked by the Red Cross?" questioned Mr. Aylmer.

Mr. Kendry then moved, and Mr. Rishor seconded, a motion calling upon the City Council to raise the $60,000 required.

Mr. Eastwood moved in amendment that the money be raised by subscription, and this was seconded by the Mayor.

Mr. Peck moved another amendment calling for $30,000 by subscription and an equal amount by taxation, but lacked a seconder. His contention was that the taxation system is unfair. The man paying for his home will be taxed, while another much better off but living in rented premises will escape altogether.

Mr. Eastwood thought that there should be a larger expression of opinion than that given by the meeting, but was reminded that last year a thorough canvass had been made to obtain the views of the ratepayers and they were found to be practically unanimous for taxation.

Mr. Peck voted with Mr. Eastwood and Mayor Duffus for the amendment. All the rest of those present supported the motion, which was accordingly carried.

During the past two months a slight increase has been granted to the beneficiaries of the Fund to meet the increased cost of living. So many, however, have been placed on the pension roll and have ceased to draw Patriotic allowance that the strain on the Fund will be no greater than it was formerly. Practically the same amount will be required next year. As only men without dependents are likely to be drafted, no extra expense is looked for on this score.

The Government has abandoned the idea, spoken of at a former meeting, of taking over the raising of the Fund or making any grant to it. It will be handled in 1918 as it always has been.

ABSENTEES TO ANSWER CALL

MEN IN UNITED STATES MUST REPORT IN PERSON OR THROUGH FRIENDS.

Numerous enquiries are made by class one Canadians in the United States as to their position in regard to the military service act, and asking just what course they should pursue to protect themselves against future punishment should they not return to Canada within the time specified by proclamation. Such inquiries are referred to the Military Service Council, Ottawa, 139 Sparks Street, Ottawa, for decision.

It is also advised that, as any class 1 Canadian who has resided in Canada for any period since the beginning of the war is liable to the present draft, all such men should write personally to the above address, stating their cases and getting a ruling on the point, or should have some of their relatives in Canada take up their case for them. Otherwise their future is apt to be a troublesome one if they ever wish to return to Canada. The authorities recognize that there are many class 1 Canadians now in the States for bona-fide reasons, and they are willing to do their best to help them out, but they also recognize that there are others who, during the past three years, have deliberately left the country with the intention of avoiding military service with the Canadian army.

Must Report in Canada.

No matter for what reason—business or otherwise—a Canadian in the United States finds it inconvenient to comply with proclamation to the letter, he has until November 10th to report for service or claim exemption in Canada, or have a relative or friend do so for him. If he fails to do this he makes himself liable to the extreme penalties of the Act for not complying with the regulations, if he ever returns to Canada and is found here, the penalties being immediate military service or anything up to five years' imprisonment.

The Red Cross workers will have a luncheon at Hooper's at 5.30 this evening, when their plans will be talked over and further details arranged.

MAYOR DUFFUS WELCOMES OVER TWO HUNDRED SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS TO THE CITY FOR THREE DAYS' CONVENTION OPENED TO-DAY

Presents Them With a Huge Key as Emblem of Welcome—Convention Organizes for Business.

The fifty-second annual convention of the Ontario Sunday School Association opened in the George Street Methodist Church at 10 o'clock this morning, with 200 delegates in attendance. With the close of today it is confidently expected that at least 400 visitors will be in the city.

In the prayer and song service the music was led by Prof. E. O. Excell of Chicago, with Prof. C. C. Laugher at the piano. Mr. Renwick officiated at the organ in his customary efficient manner.

President's Message.

In the unavoidable absence of the association's distinguished president, vice-president Rev. George Stafford of Spencerville presided. In the course of a revealing and inspiring message to the convention assembled he said in part: This is the 52nd annual meeting of the Association, which passed its half century mark at the Jubilee Convention in Toronto two years ago. We are not here as an association of members of any denominational body, but as Christian workers in the moral education of children. In Sunday school work from time to time we have, he said, new visions presenting larger ideals to work up to for larger good and greater efficiency in our labors among the little ones. However, wisdom may in some cases suggest that we proceed slowly and only adopt such new methods of Sunday school education as local conditions will permit.

Referring to the liquor traffic now abolished in Ontario, the reverend gentleman declared that the Sunday schools' influence in regard to that great problem had in no small measure contributed to the high moral type of manhood and womanhood today characterizing our generation, as a result of these grand principles of temperance instilled in the minds of children in Sabbath schools twenty-five years ago.

City's Welcome.

His worship, Mayor Duffus, rejoiced in the honor and privilege vested in him to extend the city's welcome to so very representative a gathering of delegates from all parts of Ontario in the good city of Peterborough. He had no doubt but that the convention would result in a maximum amount of benefit to the good cause in which it was engaged. To the ladies he extended a special welcome, and felt assured that their presence in so large a proportion must prove of eminent satisfaction to all concerned. It has, he said, long been recognized that the hand which rocks the cradle rules the world, which these days was being exemplified in the indispensable work of the ladies for war needs and all patriotic calls.

In presenting the city's freedom to all convention delegates, Mayor Duffus produced a large key, some five feet long and proportionally broad, of which he urged vice-President Stafford's acceptance as symbolic of the scope of Peterborough's welcome. This key, he assured his visitors would unlock any door of the city's freedom the lock of which it would fit, but he hoped no attempt on the city's finances, of which he was guardian, would be made. "The generosity of the civic welcome, concluded the mayor, is just as large as the key I have the honor of presenting your vice-president and I hope that all will carry away with them such cherished memories of their visit as will make for another convention in Peterborough.

MASS MEETING TO-NIGHT

A mass meeting of citizens will be held in Victoria Hall tonight under the auspices of the Win-the-War League. The object of the gathering is to discuss the local parliamentary situation. Good speakers are expected. They will include Col. C. R. McCullough, of Hamilton, founder of the Canadian Club; Mr. Ben Gould, of Toronto, and Mrs. Hamilton, the well-known suffragist of the same city. Ladies who have the right to vote at the coming election are especially invited. Mr. J. M. Godfrey, president of the Provincial League, may be present to address the meeting.

SEPARATE DEAL WITH GERMANY BEYOND REASON

Russian Foreign Minister Rejects Idea of Separate Peace Terms.

WILL REMAIN WITH THE ALLIES

Germany's Plan Is to Leave Russia Intact if Possible.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Oct. 30.—Foreign Minister Terestchenko in addressing the preliminary parliament today said a separate peace was impossible and that the defence of Russian territory was one of the fundamental needs.

The foreign minister said the absolute independence of Courland and perhaps of Poland and Lithuania was impossible as it would mean that Russia would return to the days before Peter. He also asserted that complete demobilization and disarmament and the neutralization of the canals and straits were impossible. Russia's foreign policy had not changed, the minister continued, since the first statement ennunciating the principle of no indemnities, no annexations, and the right of nations to self definition.

M. Terestchenko declared that the offers for a separate peace and the settlement in favor of them were strongest last May, when they were followed by the Russian offensive.

"There is a rumor that the Allies wished to leave Russia to her fate," the foreign minister continued, "but I state officially that it is untrue. Germany's aim is to separate Russia from the Allies, and if possible to do this by peaceful means in order to use Russia economically afterward."

ALLIES DRIVE GERMANS BACK NEARLY A MILE

Gen. Haig Resumes Offensive on the Ypres Front This Morning.

TROOPS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS

French Easily Repulse Counter-Attacks and Retake Lost Ground.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 30.—The Germans have been driven back in places to a depth of nearly 1,000 yards in today's British drive on the Ypres front, Reuter's correspondent at the British headquarters reports.

Making Good Progress.

New York, Oct. 30.—The battle in Flanders was resumed by the infantry this morning when the British moved forward to the attack north of the Ypres-Roulers railway. Field Marshal Haig announced the renewal of the offensive in his usual laconic style, adding merely that the troops were reported to be making good progress. The line of attack takes in the Passchendaele region, where the remainder of the ridge of that name and the town itself are nearby British objectives. The thrust here is also carrying the Entente forces on a direct line toward the railway junction point at Roulers, approximately five miles distant.

More Italian Reverses.

Berlin (via London), October 30. — Udine, the former Italian headquarters, has been occupied by Austro-German forces, army headquarters announced today.

On the French Front.

Paris, October 30. — A German attack on the Aisne front near Cerny was repulsed last night by the French the war office announces.

On the Aisne front, in northern France, where the French in their recent advance southwest of Laon have jeopardized the safety of a considerable section of the German lines, the Germans delivered an attack last night in an effort to push back the French in the region of Cerny. The French easily repulsed this assault.

An artillery battle is continuing in the sector in which the French made their advance, where hostile forces are now lined up on the opposite sides of the Oise-Aisne canal.

In the Verdun region Gen. Petain's troops last night regained more of the small strip of ground lost in a recent German assault in the Caurieres wood sector east of the Meuse.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1917

THE DOOR IS WIDE OPEN.

PETERBOROUGH'S hospitable door is thrown wide open to the visiting delegates to the Sunday School Convention, and the key is relieved of duty until the close of the three days' gathering. Everything is free, and the strangers will confer a favor if they proceed to make themselves perfectly at home. They are valuable additions to the population, and the only regret in connection with their sojourn is that their stay is to be of so short duration.

OUR CARD OF THANKS.

ONCE AGAIN The Review wishes to thank the hundreds of loyal friends who so generously supported the candidates in the recent contest. This paper now has a standing in the local field which it never held before, and its value as an advertising medium has been increased by over fifty per cent.

To all the busy workers and their generous friends our thanks are due, and the claims of Mr. J. D. MacAlpine, who managed the contest, must not be overlooked. His handling of a delicate situation was perfection itself, and it is a matter for congratulation that now the struggle is over, while some may be disappointed at their failure to carry off the capital prize, all those who fell short of that objective are ready to admit that they were fairly beaten.

The Review has under consideration improvements in its service both in the city and county, and these will be announced later.

MEN WHO HAVE DEFAULTED.

ONE OF THE BEST arguments that can be used in favor of raising the Patriotic Fund by taxation is the dreary fact that here is at present over $4000 in pledged subscriptions that the Association is unable to collect. Some of these amounts have been due from the first year the money was raised. They are not owing from citizens who are unable to pay, but by men who are regarded as well able to do so.

There have been a number who subscribed to the Fund and, owing to a change in their circumstances, they were unable to carry out their agreement. The members of the Association, however, have had consideration for such cases, and have eliminated them from the reckoning.

It will surprise many to learn that some men who subscribed as much as $500, whose generosity was featured in the press at the time, and who were acclaimed as the most liberal supporters of the Fund, have not yet paid one cent of their subscriptions. They have had the crown of public appreciation without the cross of sacrifice.

The members of the Association have done everything in their power to collect this money, as they see no reason why it should not be paid, just as any other honest debt. The man who signed a card practically affixed his signature to a note. The document was carefully drawn up by a skilled lawyer and there are no loopholes. The signer is bound hard and fast.

It has been suggested that a list of these delinquents be published in the newspapers. Naturally there is some hesitation in adopting so harsh a course. There are, however, members of the Association who take a practical view of the matter and who are disposed to insist upon payment, even if it be necessary to summon those who are in arrears to the Division Court.

THE LANDLORD GETS HIS.

ONE OBJECTION that is frequently urged against the Patriotic Fund by taxation is that the tenant escapes a burden which is then fastened upon the shoulders of the landlord.

There is little reason in such an argument. The experience of the past year has shown that the landlord can be trusted to look after his own interests. He has made this special tax one of a set of reasons that he urges for increasing the rent. Many a landlord whose only extra tax this year was a matter of forty or fifty cents has boosted his rents to a figure that yields him a return over and above the old rate of one hundred times the amount of the tax per year.

The landlord will continue to get his and the tenant to take his chances.

"THE REMNANT THAT SURVIVE."

OF THE FIRST contingent that left Canada for the theatre of war, only one of the original twenty is left alive in Europe. Their graves are everywhere in the military cemeteries, and those who have returned home carry the scars of the conflict with them and will do so to the end of their days.

The first contingent contained the flower of Canada's manhood. They required no urging, but promptly responded to the first call. Those who are left, war-worn heroes as they are, have fairly earned a furlough. The request for a leave of absence comes not from them, but their friends. There will soon be others ready to take their places, and the men who have borne the burden of battle for three strenuous years are certainly entitled to at least a short respite from their duties.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND FOR 1918.

THE MEMBERS of the Patriotic Fund Association at their meeting last night, with only three dissenting, decided to ask the City Council to raise the $60,000 required for the Fund next year by one tax levy. No debentures are to be issued, as was done this year. The whole amount will be raised by one levy, and this will mean an extra rate of about five mills on the dollar. The man who owns a house assessed for $2000 will accordingly be required to pay $10 to the Patriotic Fund.

In taking this step there is not the slightest doubt that the members of the Association are in accord with the sentiments of the public. A thorough canvass of the city was made last year, and it was found that the ratepayers of the city were practically unanimous in favor of the taxation plan. There are even more reasons to plead on its behalf at this time. When the subscription plan is relied on it has been found that not more than fifteen hundred of the population will contribute anthing. The raising of the money is made possible only by the generous donations of residents who will this year be under new financial strain due to the income and war tax that will be collected by the Federal Government. It would be unreasonable as well as hopeless to expect from these the generous contributions that they have made in the past.

The raising of the Patriotic Fund is a solemn obligation which the citizens have assumed. They have pledged themselves to take care of the dependents of the men who have gone overseas, and this faith must be kept. The most rational way of raising the money is the one that appeals to the majority. It would be vastly better for the city to defer some public improvement if it is found necessary to keep down the tax rate, than to carry on its own work and break faith with the men in khaki.

Mr. V. Eastwood looked at the matter last night as a trained financier. Mayor Duffus was true to his record as a careful administrator of the trust which the public have reposed in him, and Mr. E. A. Peck, when he argued that half the money should be raised by subscription and half by taxation, had for his object the equalization of the burden, as far as possible, among all classes. The other members of the Association grasped the problem by both horns, and if the Council of 1918 fall in with their ideas there will be no trouble encountered in raising the money Peterborough is in honor obligated to produce.

THE THREAT THAT FAILED.

AT THE MEETING of the Patriotic Fund Association last night, Mr. Vincent Eastwood, who was in favor of raising the money required for 1918 by subscription, suggested that an appeal be made to the citizens for donations, with the threat that if they did not respond they would be taxed. "That will bring them to time," added Mr. Eastwood confidently.

The people of Peterborough have demonstrated that they can remain immovable even in the face of a dire threat. For over a year, at every recruiting meeting held in the Armories, the young men of the city were told that if they did not enlist they might expect nothing short of conscription. Still they hesitated, and valuable time was lost. Time would be lost, too, if the people were left to decide upon contribution as an alternative to taxation. Many would not give, either regarding the impending threat of a levy as a bluff and resolve to put off the evil day as long as possible.

HALLOWE'EN IS COMING THEN LET THE CHILDREN HAVE A GOOD TIME

In planning the youngsters' Hallowe'en party for next Wednesday night, make it as merry as possible. Use red and yellow rather than black for the decorations in the house. Have witches, cats, owls, bats and goblins rather than ghosts and skulls as motives for the designs of the various decorations.

Another thing that has to be borne in mind in planning the children's Hallowe'en party is this: Much of the amusement that grown-ups derive from fortune telling and the various schemes for devining the name and nature of one's true love that are so characteristic of Hallowe'en are not interesting to small folk simply because they have not begun to worry their little heads on the subject of true love as yet. Remember, then, that your children's party must be neither gruesome nor too sentimental.

The time for the party ought to be after dark—and, as youngsters are properly put to bed early, the best time for the party is between 5 and 7 or 8. Send out your invitations written on cards of yellow cardboard. After you have made a correct copy in printed character of the invitation place it before a mirror and make another copy of what you see in the mirror.

Copy this reflected invitation on your cards and you will have something that looks very much like what one might suppose witches would write. After a little puzzling on the part of the recipient of the invitation it will occur to him that the words can be read with the aid of a mirror.

A woman who has given many children's Hallowe'en parties informs me that the best possible place to give it is in the barn. "If you haven't a barn," said she, "give it in the attic, that is the second best place. And if you haven't an attic, the third best place is the cellar, and the fourth best place is in the kitchen."

Cranberries and Autumn Leaves.

Wherever you give it, be sure to have your decorations bright and cheerful. Have many owls, bats, cats, goblins and witches cut from black cardboards hanging and posted around the room. Have festoons of cranberries and autumn leaves, goldenrod and odd lanterns and as much bright red and yellow paper decoration as you can.

Begin the party with a witches' dance. To carry this out, you will need the services of six or more young women dressed as witches. This costume consists of tall steeple hats with narrow rims, black girdles laced with black lacings over white blouses, short full skirts with short panniers, narrow ragged aprons and pointed slippers with large buckles. These witches should each be provided with a broom, preferably an old one with a short handle, and when the youngsters have all been assembled and seated, the witches should come riding on their broomsticks into the room and, hissing like cats as they go, they should ride to one end of the room or to an improvised stage, if possible.

Weird Dance With Colored Lights.

The dance that follows can be worked out by clever young girls with a couple of rehearsals. It should be accompanied by some weird but quick march, played on the piano, and there should be a succession of red, white and green lights burning in front of them to add to the weird effect. The various figures of the dance should consist of marching and prancing forward and backward, with various hissing and meowing sounds on the part of the witches. At times they should whirl their brooms in the air or swing them back and forth. Then they should rap the floor with the handles of the brooms, drop the ends and drag them. For one figure, they might hold their broomsticks on the floor and dance around them. With a few rehearsals an effective dance of this sort can easily be worked up by a clever leader, and no one knows, who has not tried it, what enjoyment it brings to the youngsters.

As soon as the dance is over, the witches, still in their fantastic attire, should break ranks and proceed to carry on the evening's frolic. The old time-honored Hallowe'en pranks are too well-known to repeat, but here are a few suggestions for variations on the old ideas: Have a tissue paper bag filled with bonbons and favors suspended from the portiere rail, and in turn blindfold each child and, with a cane to strike with, let him have three chances to break the bag. When the bag is finally broken the good things will fall down to the floor and the children will scramble in playful rivalry to get the biggest share of the booty.

Telling Fortunes With Melted Lead.

Place three funnels on the floor a few feet apart and on these funnels place three saucers, carefully balanced. The children then try their skill in jumping over the funnels without knocking the saucers to the ground.

It is an old idea to have melted lead to pour into water, but it never loses its appeal to children. Have a little lead—which can be got from the plumber at a small cost — and melt this in a small saucepan. One of the witches can take charge of a chafing dish over which this lead is melted, and as each child comes to her in turn she should pour a little of the lead into a basin of cold water. The lead takes various forms, and from these forms she can tell of coming events.

Be sure to have a "funny pumpkin" on the table for supper. A "funny pumpkin" is a large flat pumpkin carefully scooped out and lined with silver paper. In the cavity are placed as many small prizes — funny little jumping jacks, tumbling dolls and other trifles that can be bought for five cents apiece —as there are children. A ribbon should be attached to each prize and the ribbons should hang loosely on the outside of the pumpkin. After the supper is over each child should take a ribbon and draw a prize.

EDITOR'S MAIL

OUR FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Editor Review: The recent appeal of Mr. Delafosse for our Public Library is worthy of extended consideration. There is probably no greater asset than a first class Free Public Library and administrative staff, for building up an intelligent and vigorous citizenship. There is no better way of educating a people than by giving opportunities for extending the knowledge its individual units possess.

If it can be truly said that opportunity makes the thief, the drunkard, the youthful pool room and cigarette habitue, the social and political moral degenerates and their necessarily attendant associated evils, then it is equally true to say that opportunities for extended education, make for better citizens and the reduction of those evils.

Readers of our Public Library cannot have failed to notice the marked improvement in the class of literature and books on general subjects which have been added to the library shelves of late, and our thanks are due to those responsible for this. The demand for inferior works will diminish as the opportunities for seeing, reading, and understanding better material arises.

The writer would personally make an appeal to our city fathers for a grant, or portion of the annual grant on behalf of our musical students and citizens, and takes this occasion to make the suggestion that musical scores be added to our library, both in the lending and reference departments. We possess a rich heritage of musical compositions, the accumulated legacies of centuries, and beyond the dreams of those devotees who have, in the past, literally given their lives in the service of the art of song and musical writings generally and which we do not sufficiently appreciate when building up the stores of our Public Libraries. There must be many in our midst who can reap pleasure and intellectual profit from the perusal of the musical scores of favorite themes. Thomas Carlyle's advice, that "The University of today is a library of books," applies equally to music and its kindred arts.

Yours very truly,
W. H. PRETTY.

WHAT IS THE REAL REASON?

Editor Review: It is reported that two members of contractors' companies which have done government work whenever their tenders were accepted are the promoters of a so-called win-the-war agitation here at a time when there is no evidence of any division of opinion, locally, on that point. What is the reason behind this ill-timed agitation? Is anyone fishing for a nomination and forcing an issue in order to furnish a pretext? Is it to force the hand of the Government? Such an agitation may do a great deal of harm in a community that, if left alone, will do, as it has done in the past, its full duty by the great cause. The speciousness of the whole local agitation may well be exposed. It is asserted by the little clique that makes the bluff of claiming a monopoly of political and patriotic virtue that the members of the Labor, Liberal and Conservative parties are wicked partisans and unfit to be trusted with the reins of government. If so, then Sir Robert Borden and his whole Cabinet are in the same box. They one and all have stated time and again that they have not left their parties or abandoned their political principles at all, but have simply united till the end of the war, when a new election on the old party lines would again take place. The local self-constituted "win-the-war" pretense condemns this action on the part of the members of the Government and of the local political parties. They are the most stupid bunch I have ever seen, and as a consequence of their silly action they have excited the strongest possible condemnation of themselves by all fairminded supporters of the Union Government.

By condemning the members of the Union Government, who have all kept their party allegiance, they have shown themselves to be disloyal to that government and to what Canada is doing through that government for the war. When they see their conduct in its true light they will no longer try to sow discord where none now exists, if they are wise. This is a free country, and people resent being dictated to by the three tailors of Tooley street or any other similar body. The official ballot recognizes the party by name, Liberal, Conservative, Labor, and Independent, but the clique refuses to do so. Wonderful! Wonderful! What is it after? Are they afraid there won't be a fight? Leave it to the Government - it is well able to look after its own affaris.

TODAY'S STORY

Weary Waldron, the hard-luck college bred hobo, was tightening his belt at the corner of Main street and the postoffice, when a worried looking man accosted him.

"Would you like to make twenty-five dollars?" he asked.

"Perhaps there are some other things that I should prefer," replied Weary Waldron, "but at the moment I am unable to think of them."

"It's very easy," explained the worried-looking man. "All you gotta do is run out on the stage, all tarred and feathered, during the last act of 'His Sweetheart's Home.' At the conclusion of the performance you get the twenty-five."

"Well, twenty-five bones of the realm are a goodly stipend," mused Weary Waldron, and accompanied the theatrical man to the Grand Opera House, where waited two men with a bucket of hot tar and a tub of feathers. "O[illegible]!" yelled Weary Waldron at the first application. "Cannot the [illegible] be applied at a more moderate temperature?"

"Certainly not; cold tar won't stick," said the manager and the work went on. Ten minutes later, with Weary Waldron tarred and feathered to the waist, a telegram was delivered to the manager.

"The show's off for tonight," he announced. "The leading lady's sick and can't show up till tomorrow night. Stick around till then and we'll finish the job."

At various points along the countryside that night a strange figure, seemingly half-man and half-ostrich, was seen running for dear life, in a direction opposite to the Grand Opera House.

EXECUTIVE REPORT.

In presenting the third annual report of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, the executive again takes the opportunity of expressing its grateful appreciation of the loyalty and generous financial support rendered by the citizens of Peterborough. It is a matter of great satisfaction to the executive to be able to show through the different reports which will be presented this afternoon that their splendid contributions have done so much for the relief of the sick and wounded, and our Peterborough Prisoners of War, who have set such a standard of loyalty to our Empire in her hour of need.

While appreciating to the fullest extent all that has been accomplished up to the present time, it is a matter for regret that owing to the continuance of the war the need both for money and supplies is just as urgent as ever, but the members of the Peterborough Branch will go forward with the work already undetaken with the confident assurance that the generous financial support will be as efficient in the future as it has been in the past.

New Auxiliaries.

Since the annual meeting held in October 1916, there have been few changes in the policy of the Society. Four new auxiliaries are heartily welcomed into our ranks—Ashburnham Patriotic League, St. Andrew's Church, George Street Church, and All Saints' Church. A better understanding of the work and aims of the Red Cross is spreading, and it is pleasing to note that wherever a properly organized centre for work has been established it has continued and generally increased its activities.

Twenty-two meetings for the transaction of business have been held—three open meetings, fifteen executive, and four joint meetings of the Advisory Board and the executive. These meetings have all been well attended, and the committees have worked conscientiously to further the work to the best of their ability.

143 Life Members.

There are at the present time 143 life members, 87 annual members, and 7 associate members, 350 members of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

An innovation in the form of an open meeting held recently proved interesting and helpful. It had been felt for some time that it would be a pleasure as well as an advantage to the members of the executive to meet the auxiliary workers and discuss the work of their societies. A much better understanding of conditions has been the result.

On 30th October, the local society was visited by Mrs. Plumptre. An interesting feature of the meeting was that any person present was permitted to ask questions relating to any branch of the work.

Early in December, in response to an urgent appeal for supplies from Major Blaylock, Canadian Red Cross Commissioner in France, it was decided to open the work room the first of January for six weeks. On the opening day of the sewing campaign the workers were addressed by the President, Mrs. Matthews, who, having returned from England, told of her visit to Canadian Headquarters, and to various Red Cross hospitals. The result of this special effort was that almost as many garments were shipped the first three months of 1917 as had been sent overseas during the year 1916.

A request from Major J. C. Davidson for blinds and quilts for No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital, France, met with a generous response. In acknowledging these gifts Major Davidson spoke of the joy and comfort they brought to the lonely and wounded in the hospital.

Field Comforts Provided.

During the year the executive felt that a regular legitimate outlet through the society should be available for the ever increasing number of field comforts being sent forward to our men in the trenches, and although, according to the terms of the Geneva Charter, this work is not strictly Red Cross, through the efforts of the Women's National Service Committee arrangements were made with the Canadian Red Cross Society for this work to be carried on through their channels, we have therefore taken advantage of this organiation, so well known under the name of the Canadian War Contingent Association, who, working in conjunction with the Red Cross have helped to distribute many cases of comforts and socks.

It was with deep regret that the executive parted with the services of Miss Marion Rush, but when circumstances arise that cannot be set aside, it becomes us to bow in submission and place on record deeds done. Miss Rush's place has been ably filled by Miss Effie Munro.

In April the society had the pleasure of meeting and hearing one of our Prisoners of War, Sergt. E. Edwads, speak of his experiences and escape from one of the German Prison camps.

Owing to the great increase in the cost of materials and providing for the Prisoners of War, large sums of money have been required to carry on the wok.

The campaign for monthly subscribers so successfully carried on by the Advisory Board, the Motor Show, French Red Cross, and Peterborough Prisoners of War Tag Day added materially to our funds.

To the old friends who have helped us so faithfully since the beginning of the war, also to those of more recent date who have come forward as special needs arose to help bear their share in the support of this great cause which it is our duty and privilege to serve. Among the former we would especially mention the Advisory Board, the Board and officers of the Public Library, the Press for their great kindness and generosity in inserting notices and all information dealing with the work of the society free of charge, to the Express Companies for free transportation, and to the Fanning Laundry for continued help.

To enumerate all those who by their services and gifts have helped the society during the year would be almost impossible, as it would practically mean mentioning almost every organization in the city and surrounding district. The thanks of the executive are especially due those who generously adopted Prisoners of War, thus lessening the strain on the society's finances.

Sympathy Extended.

The executive would extend to all its members who have been called upon to suffer the loss of loved ones at the Front their deepest sympathy. With hearts full of sympathy we also look upon the brave men who have returned from the battle front, many of them deprived of their former physical fitness, and we would ask that the greatest consideration and help in our power be shown them in their affliction.

The great call which has been responded to so nobly by our gallant troops at the Front should surely strike an answering chord in the hearts of all who stay at home. No sacrifice, no self-denial can be too great for us to offer that their suffering may be made more bearable, and their dark hours brightened by the thought that we who remain in safety in the home country that they are giving their lives and limbs to protect, are daily doing our utmost to stand behind them.

As the society enters upon the work of the new year, may each member get a clear vision of the great problems facing us, and each one find their place in the activities and responsibilities that are involved.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

L. J. DAVIDSON, Hon. Secy.
Peterborough, 26th Oct., 1917.

Wool Committee.

Your Wool Committee reports that during the year ending 1st October, 1917, 5,638 pairs of socks passed through their hands, were duly examined, measured, tied into bundles—six pairs in each package—marked according to size, and taken to the basement ready for the packers. Of these, 3,411 pairs were knitted by hand, 1,912 pairs being made by individual knitters to whom wool was given out and socks received from them on Wednesday afternoons during the year. Right here I would like to say that we have plenty of wool for more knitters, and the need for socks is just as urgent as at any time during the war. One thousand four hundred and ninety-nine pairs of these hand-knit socks were donations, among the largest contributions being those coming from St. Paul's Auxiliary, the South-End Auxiliary, and Lakehurst. We have also had generous donations from Young's Point, Murray Street Auxiliary, Lily Lake Auxiliary, St. Andrew's Auxiliary, and others, as well as a few from individual knitters. Two thousand two hundred and twenty-two pairs of socks were made on the machines.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I. R. BURNETT,
Convener Wool Committee.

2,252 Pairs of Socks.

Mrs. Roland Denne's report showed 2,252 pairs of socks have been knitted by the knitting machine during the past year.

Closing Address.

Mrs. Matthews, the re-elected president, closed the meeting, saying, in part, that it is the individual that is indispensable to the society's success. The splendid reports could not have been compiled but for the individual. She said she was proud of the Peterborough workers' and societies, and hoped for their co-operation in the coming year, for the individual is as important as the president. If the co-operation is assured, success is likewise so. All the officers have done splendid work in the society, whose work is different to any other organization. The president concluded with the hope that conditions would be such that the society's activities will be able to abate before long.

Edward Earle Has Gained 14 Pounds

GETS COMPLETE RELIEF FROM SUFFERING OF FIVE YEARS' STANDING.

"When I tell you I have gotten complete relief from five years of suffering and have actually gained fourteen pounds in weight, besides, you can readily see why I think so highly of Tanlac," said Edward Earle, of 17 McGregor avenue, Toronto. Mr. Earle is a well-known union carpenter employed in the Canadian Pacific shops, and has lived in Toronto for the past eight years.

"My stomach was all upset," he continued, "and so out of order that I couldn't digest anything. I had no desire for food of any kind, and what little I did eat would lay in my stomach like lead. I would bloat up terribly with gas and had sharp pains in my sides and all around my heart. My tongue was always coated, I had a bad taste in my mouth, and would have dizzy spells when it seemed like a film or skin would form on my eyes and my vision would fail me. My sleep was poor, I was out of sorts all the time, felt tired and sluggish and had no energy. I really dreaded to eat anything because I know how I would suffer afterwards.

"This is just the condition I had been in for five years, and while I tried all kinds of medicines I kept getting gradually worse until I read about Tanlac and began taking it. It's the only medicine I have found in all these years that I could conscientiously recommend to my friends. My stomach trouble has disappeared entirely with all the gas, pain and other bad feelings, and I'm feeling well and strong in every way. My appetite is fine, and I know I am getting nourishment from my food or I could never have gained so much in weight. I sleep good every night now, all my weak, dizzy feelings and bad taste are gone, and all this good has come from two bottles of Tanlac, for I have just started on my third. Tanlac is my medicine from now on, and I believe anybody suffering like I did will do well to try it."

Wit and Wisdom

The Real Difference.

"I can't see why that man is boss over me. I do mo[illegible]he work around here."

"I guess that is so."

"It is. I know more about the business than he does. Whenever he wants to know anything about what's going on he comes to me to find out."

"That's usually the way."

"I'm the fellow that ought to be the boss."

"A lot of men think that way, and yet here's one big difference. He knows something that you don't know."

"What is it?"

"He knows enough to hire good men like you to do the work. If you knew that you'd be the boss and he'd be in your place."

What He Said.

A school girl was required to write an essay of 250 words about a motor car. She submitted the following:

"My uncle bought a motor car. He was riding in the country when it busted up a hill. I think this is about twenty words. The other 230 are what my uncle said when he was walking back to town, but they are not fit for publication."

Some Mistake.

"You are not the one who was here when I called last year," said the business visitor, looking down at the fussy little man seated at his desk.

"I am sure I am. I have been here ten years."

"I wouldn't have recognized you."

"There may be a reason for that."

"Yes?"

"Looking you over, I don't believe you are the one who called."

Surprised Justice.

In a New England town a local celebrity was brought up before the justice for stealing chickens. The prisoner was noted for never telling the truth when he could help it, and consequently there was general surprise when he pleaded guilty. It evidently staggered the justice. He rubbed his glasses and then scratched his head.

"I guess — I'm afraid — well, Hiram," said he, after a thoughtful pause, "I guess I'll have to have more evidence before I sentence you."

Description Fitted.

"I see from the newspapers this morning," said a portly woman, walking into the police station house, "that you arrested a man whose mind is blank."

"Yes, ma'am," returned the sergeant, "we did."

"All right," said the woman. "Will you bring the man out so that I can have a look at him? Mr. Henry didn't come home last night, and that description about fits him."

Steaks at a Premium.

The diner had finished his first course and lay back frowning at the vanquished steak before him. Twice in one minute the new waiter had made an attempt to clear away and received a sullen dismissal each time.

"Beg pardon, sir," he said at last. "There's a big demand for steaks today. We have only three of them in stock, and the other two being in use, we'd be glad if you've finished with this one."

County Clerk William Davidson and his wife, of Stratford, celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding.

All Canada Is Your Security

THE essential feature of any investment is the security offered, that is, the ability of the borrower to repay the principal and to pay the interest promptly as it falls due.

The security behind Canada's Victory Loan consists of all the resources, developed and undeveloped and all the assets of all the people of Canada, supporting Canada's promise to pay.

Can you imagine any security more rock-ribbed in its soundness than the signed pledge of the Dominion of Canada, backed by all its boundless resources?

There is no security so secure; for in it are embraced all other securities. Every farm, every forest, mine, factory, bank, business, every conceivable kind of wealth that exists within the borders of this great Dominion—all this is the security behind Canada's Victory Bonds.

Canada's Victory Bonds are the promise by the Dominion of Canada to pay a specified sum of principal money at a given date, and to pay promptly the Interest every six months.

Canada's Victory Bonds are always as good, and at most times better, than cash. For this reason: if, for example, you put $100 in a safe, at the end of fourteen years you would still have your $100, but only that, and nothing more. But if you put a $100 Canada Victory Bond in the safe, and then put the interest on the Bond in the Savings Bank, each six months, and let this interest accumulate, you will have at the end of fourteen years at least $200.

And Canada's Victory Bonds are readily convertible into cash. You can sell them at any time. Any bank will lend you money upon their security.

Also their ownership is proof that you have responded to the call to Save, so that you might Serve in this the vital day of your country's need—that you have been willing to dedicate your savings to the noblest purpose to which money was ever applied—the winning of Victory and the preservation of Freedom.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES INDIGESTION, GAS

"PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN" RELIEVES STOMACH DISTERSS IN FIVE MINUTES.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated — just take a little Pape's Diapepsin to help neutralise acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have dyspepsia. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach sweetened and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it stops fermentation and acidity and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

MAYOR DUFFUS

Local Association's Welcome.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, president of the Peterborough Sunday School Association, in a brief but fitting address, presented the heartiest welcome of his organization to visiting delegates. Mayor Duffus, he contended, in naming the innumerable advantages of Peterborough as a convention city, forgot to mention that its chief magistrate is the best Mayor by all odds. "A member of the Roman faith," he declared, "he is too big a man to be swayed by narrow sectarian views, but recognizes the right of all to civic and religious freedom." "On behalf of the Sunday school," he said, "I extend to you all the greatest measure of hospitality. I am a lawyer myself, and you are cordially welcome to any advice or help within my power. Not that I look for any of you getting into trouble, you know—being a lawyer might possibly induce a wrong interpretation of my offer; but occasion might arise during your visit in which assistance or information would be appreciated."

"We are all united," concluded Mr. Wearing, "in a work to foster the growth of children in that knowledge of the love of God for men and women such as we ourselves learned when young. And it is a God-given task."

Welcome Appreciated.

Dr. Elmer J. Lake of Kingston replied for the delegates to the above addresses in a short but appropriate speech fully appreciative of the cordial civic and local Sunday school welcomes so acceptably extended.

THE QUESTION

Do you ever recall the place of your birth,
Where they kept you as still as a mouse,

And the creek in the front of the house?

Of the creek in the front I am not quite sure,
But the crick in my back I recall.

REV. H. A. FISH TALKS ON NEED FOR PROTESTANT FEDERATION

Object of Association is Equal Rights For all and Special Privileges for None—Freedom of Press and Speech.

A fair audience gathered in Victoria Hall last night to hear Rev. H. A. Fish lecture on the need for Protestant Federation.

Mr. Fish had been slated to address last Friday night's meeting, but did not fill the engagement owing to a mix up in his mind as to dates, consequent upon unusual pressure of business and miscarriage in the mails of two letters he had not even yet received.

Erroneous Conception.

Mr. Hughson Johnstone was chairman, and in his preliminary address wished to correct the feeling gone abroad that an organization was forming to antagonize any church or creed. Nothing, he said, is further from the truth. "We of the Protestant Federation look upon all other creeds as brothers and sisters. Of course there are black sheep in every family, but usually they are loved the best of all. We are organizing only to protect our mutual interests."

The Salvation Army Band rendered several well discoursed numbers and Master Johnstone told in promising elocutionary style the "Tale of a Lone Man's Deed," and a story of "The Goblins."

Proud of Canada.

Mr. Fish was proud of Canada and urged a realization by Protestants of their duty to the foundations for its future are constructed deep, and wide and strong enough to carry the superstructure of its glorious national destiny.

In the course of an hour and a half's talk he said in part, Protestants have as much right to federate as those of dissimilar views. This is a time of combination of forces in business in war, of nations and fleets and armies to achieve the best results in protection of mighty mutual interests at stake. And this principle applies to the movement for Protestant Federation.

Federation Needed.

There never was a time, he continued when federation was more urgently needed than now, and he considered it one of the great catastrophies of this country that church union had not been consumated. It is time to get together, he declared, and unify resources in maintenance of equal rights for all and special privileges for none. That is a principle none should take offence at, for when all recognize the common fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, all cause for denominational friction will have been removed.

Equal Rights For All.

Whilst the speaker dissented from other doctrines, he was quite willing that all church members should practice their faith, worship God in their own way, and had always maintained that all sects had equal cause for celebrating the twelfth of July in declaration of their freedom and equal rights in common with all Britishers, handed down to posterity by William of Orange.

Free Speech.

Mr. Fish here went on to say that Protestant unity was needed in defence of freedom of speech, which he declared many attempts had been made to deny him. He also regretted that in many towns and cities—some even in Ontario—the press trammelled by advertising and circulation pressure.

For Flag and Country.

The speaker grew eloquent on the need for Protestant Federation to uphold the old flag and Britain's glorious heritage.

In conclusion he pleaded for a united stand by all classes and creeds in protection of the good old Flag, for God will never ask men of any faith to dishonor either their church, flag or country.

England's Diet Narrow Because of Prejudices Very Hard to Overcome

THE narrow diet of the Englishman who has little tolerance for myriads of foods upon which other nations subsist is commented upon by The Spectator (London), but both the indictment and the suggestions are applicable as well to the Canadian who has too many prejudices against the foods that nature so liberally supplies. The Spectator makes this timely study of the bill of fare:

"England's narrow range of daily food has always amazed people from other countries, especially in view of a family expenditure averaging rather higher than anywhere else, unless in Canada. Bread really is the British staff of life—an idealized white loaf, artificially blanched and innutritive, deprived of the elements for muscle toughening and making sound teeth and the bones which make old bones. The variety of cereals used for breadstuffs elsewhere is shortsightedly despised.

"Fruit at breakfast is deemed either a luxury or a fad, even where meat dishes are superabundant on the table. And the vegetables in average weekly use are relatively few and all too often badly cooked, potatoes in particular being spoiled and wasted by being peeled before boiling. An investigator in the eighteen-sixties found out that at least twenty millions' worth of food was then being wasted annually in England by unconscientious and incompetent housewifery. Cornmeal is the best flour for bread and is the most nutritious. And it is the staple of a palatable pudding, an American national dish.

"Yellow Indian meal makes that excellent porridge, polenta, or yellow meal stirabout, as it is called in Ireland. Some people acquire a taste for it with thick sour milk. Most people prefer it with sweet milk and sugar, or syrup, when these are to be had, and the more people fall back upon what sweet stiff their bees will manufacture and yield up to them the better now.

"As for the binding mediums in cookery, a tablespoonful of sage will save two eggs in a pudding otherwise needing three; one duck egg will go as far as two hen eggs: Oat scones and tea cakes are best made with the flour like Scotch oatmeal. All the brown meals—wheat meal, barley meal, rye, buckwheat, even oatmeal—are excellent for puddings with or without some mixture of bread crumbs, but with some baking powder, a little finely chopped beef suet, a few stoned dates or chopped cooking figs, which are most wholesome. Syrup is the proper accompaniment to these puddings, or honey. Dates cooked with rhubarb are a valuable food."

Two Psalms and the Germans.

"The Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea."—Psalms 93, 7. Such was the text on which the Court chaplain preached an edifying discourse in the Berlin cathedral in the presence of the imperial family, and of Hindenburg and Ludendorff, the two lightnings of war. The service "is said to have been one of the most impressive held in the cathedral during the war." The Kaiser, Hindenburg, and Dr. Michaelis were blessed in the most affecting manner by the courtly chaplain.

Not the ninety-third, but the ninety-fourth, Psalm furnishes the right text for a sermon on Germany, the sweet German humanities in this war:

"O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth; O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself.

"Lift up thyself, thou Judge of the earth; render a regard to the proud.

"Lord, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

"How long shall they utter and speak hard things? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

"They break in pieces thy people, O Lord, and afflict thine heritage.

"They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless.

"Yet they say, The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it."

That is the Psalm of the Allies.

A Good Garden Hint.

If before working and planting in the garden you will rub the fingers, especially around the nails, very thoroughly with a good soft soap you can very easily wash off the dirt afterward thus avoiding the annoyance of a grimy looking pair of hands.

Phosphatic Wealth.

Ocean and Pleasant Islands, situated in the equatorial regions off the north-east coast of Australia, contain masses of phosphatic rock. The former island is six miles in circuit and the centre of the island is 265 feet high. Pleasant Island, or as it was named by the Germans, Nauru, is still larger, being 12 miles in circumference, but is only 100 feet high. The island of Nauru in the early days of the war was captured by H.M.A.S. Melbourne, and it was then found that the island was defended by a very strong fort and modern guns. The outfit included an almost completed long-distance wireless station. The island of Nauru is now being administered by the British High Commissioner in the Pacific, and, on account of its extraordinary value and close proximity, it is an object of intense interest on the part of Australians.

A valuation of the deposit was recently made and the value of it, on a very conservative basis, is stated to be at least $150,000,000. So far, the surface has merely been scratched and the immense importance of these phosphatic deposits in regard to the future production of wheat is obvious.

WANTS VOTE FOR HIS WIFE, TOO.

GUNNER GOULD RAISES AN INTERESTING POLITICAL QUESTION.

"Does my wife have a vote here? If so Jack White and the rest of the bunch will all get married. Too bad all of our battalions had not a Capt. Burnham. I did not vote for him but the boys I have met say he was every inch a soldier and a gentleman and did Herculean work. Everybody here is supporting him."

Gunner Gould is with the 4th Battery, C.F.A., France, and has been married since he left Canada some three years ago.

HUN AIRPLANES FAIL IN RAID

ALL THE BRITISH AIRSHIPS ATTACKING THEM RETURN SAFELY.

London, Oct. 30.—Lord French, commander of the British home forces, today announced that German airplanes, which last night attempted to carry out a raid on the southeast counties of England did no damage and caused no casualties. All the British machines which went up to engage the raiders landed safely.

Chinese Views.

From Tsingtau come two sidelights on the Chinese situation. This is what a "one-eyed, browsy-queued, horny-handed, ill-smelling peasant" said: "China has ten fingers, let us say. Now if the western powers had been content to lop off one only, we could have said, 'Bu yao kn' (It's of little consequence). If they want land so badly as to go to the other side of the globe to steal it, we could say, 'Let them have a piece;' but there is every indication that they want ten fingers. What can a man do with ten fingers gone? 'La Dao bal' (He must quit; that is the end of him). But China will get back what has been taken." An old Christian convert put it this way: "The world today seems like a bin of sweet potatoes that have started to rot. When they start, they rot very fast. The great powers are comparable to mad dogs, snapping at everything and everybody that gets in the way. The world to-day reminds me of the big firecrackers that we shoot off at the New Year festival. The fuse has been lighted and is fast burning toward the heart, when the fizz will become a boom!"

Farmers in the Army.

The Canadian farmers have done their share in defending the cause of the Empire. Sir Edward Kemp recently stated that up to June 30 last 45,797 farmers had enlisted, of which number 24,592 came from the western provinces.

ALL MILLS ARE REPORTED BUSY

LABOR REPORT SHOWS ACTIVITY IN THIS CITY DURING OCTOBER.

The latest issue of the Labor Gazette speaking of industrial conditions in Peterborough for the past month says:

Peterborough reported the Canadian General Electric Company working overtime and making additions to plant; other branches of metal manufacturing were active, except some machine shops, one of which was closed down and another expecting to do so when a few orders on hand were finished. Flour and cereal mills were working day and night, but meat packing houses were only fairly active. Woollen mills were working day and night and carpet mills were busy. Sash and door factories were very active, and brickyards were steadily employed. Lumber camps were taking on all available labour and sawmills were working to capacity, but finding it difficult to secure hands. Building was active, day and night gangs being employed on the plant of the Quaker Oats Company.

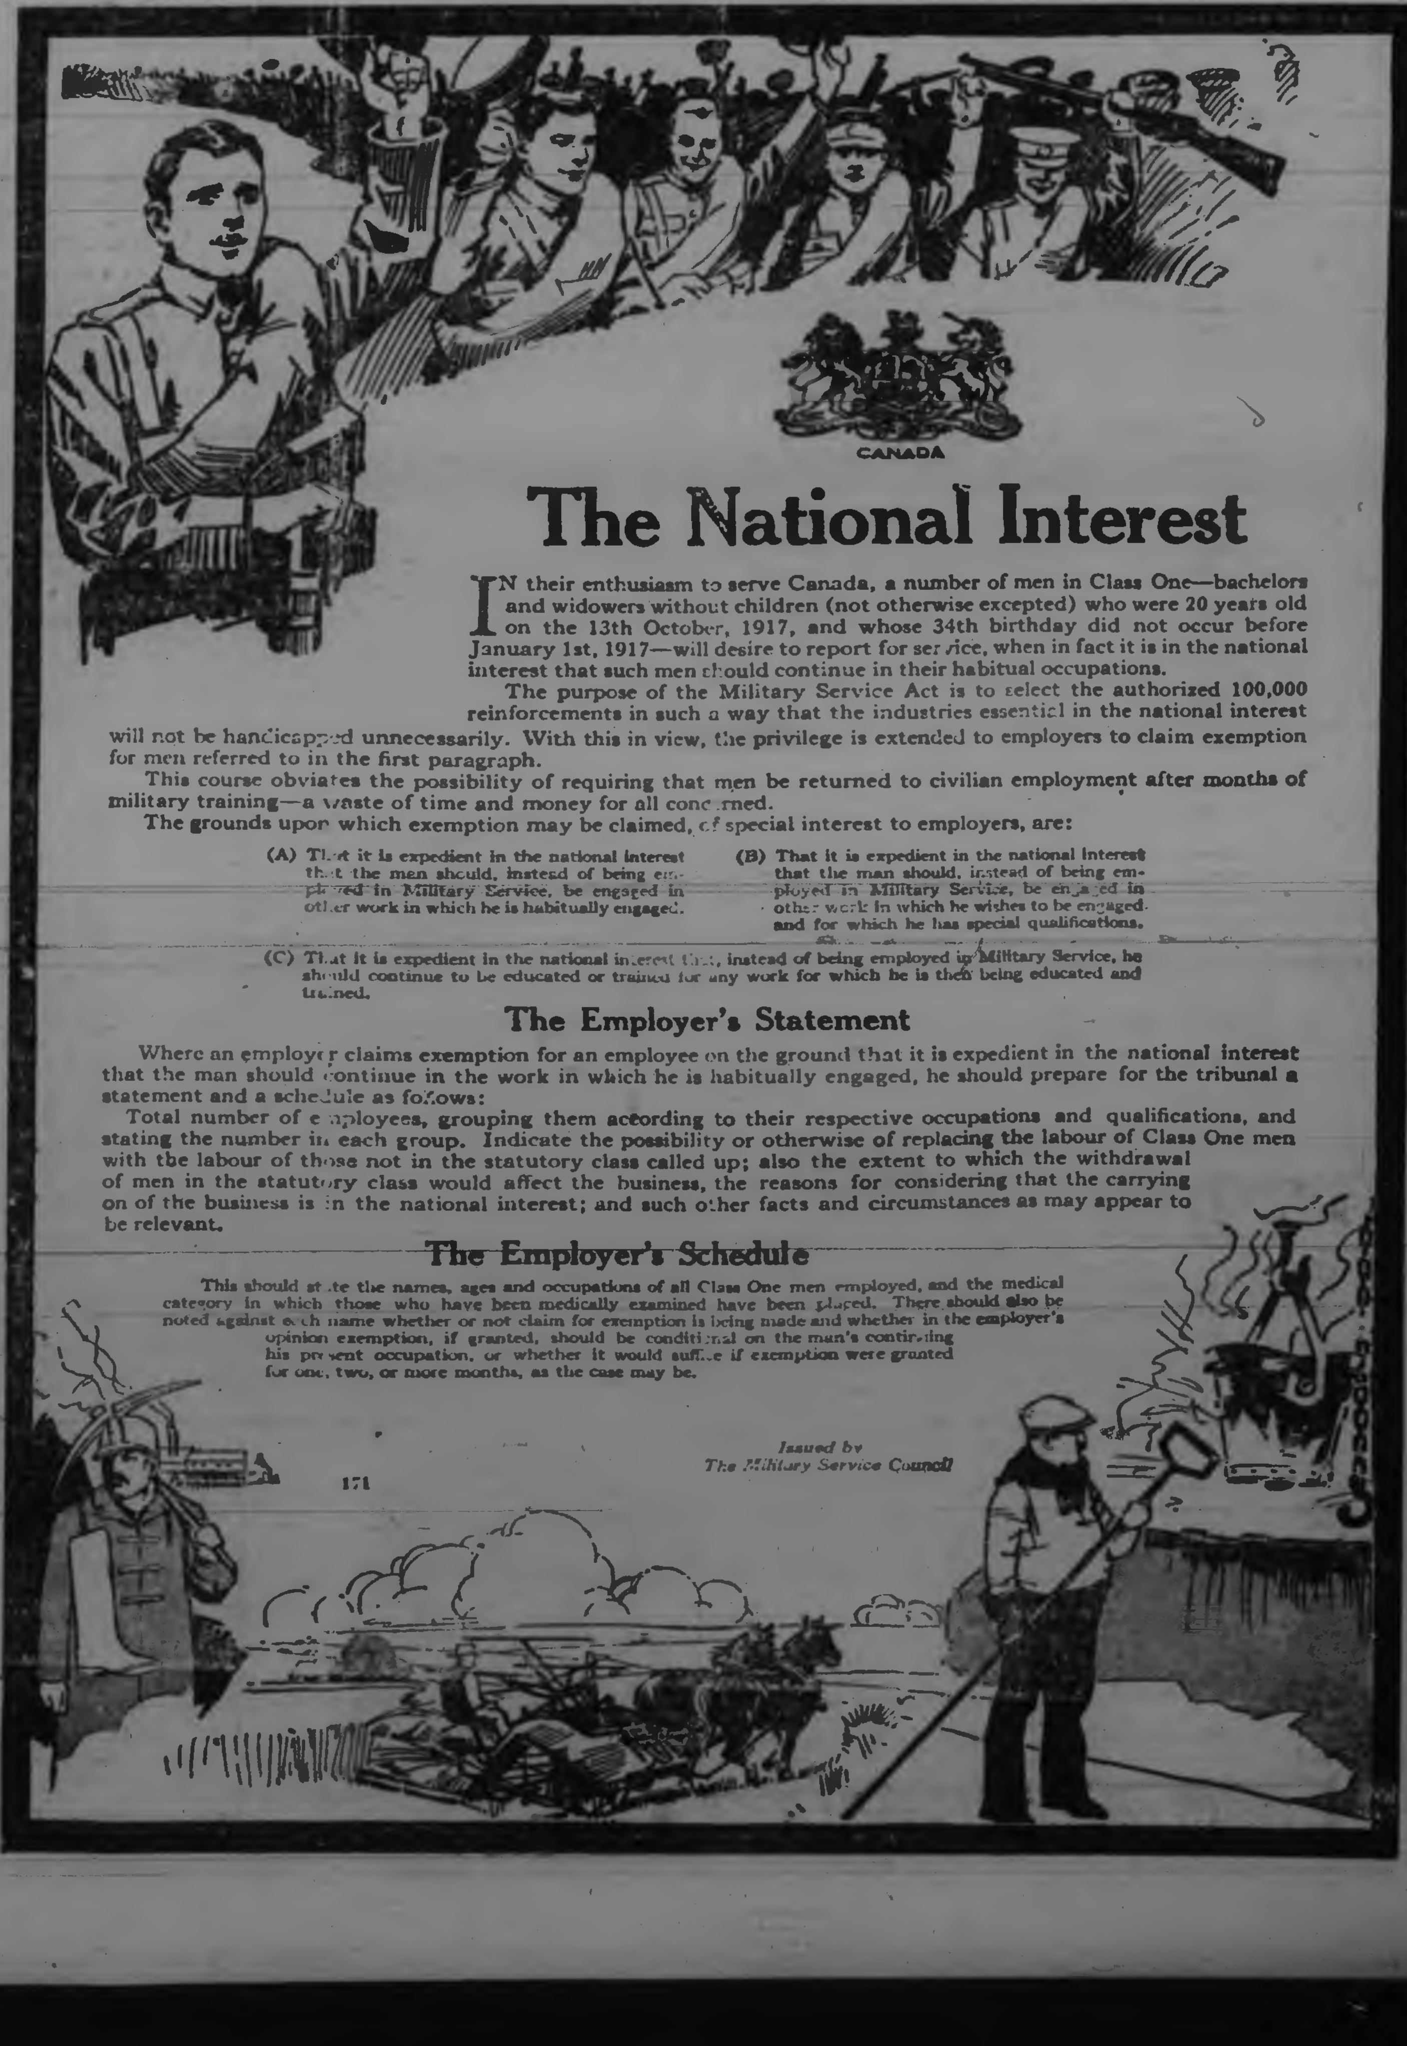
Signaller Harper Gets Military Medal

FORMER WELL-KNOWN YOUNG MAN WINS HONORS IN BATTLE.

Mr. David Harper, 164 Charlotte street, has received word that his son, Signaller Roy Harper, has been awarded the Military Medal for distinguished gallantry at the battle of Lens, Aug. 15. Signaller Harper went overseas with the 33rd Battery and has been fifteen months on the firing line. When he enlisted he was barely 20 years old and at the time was employed as a clerk in the store of H. LeBrun and Co.



The National Interest

IN their enthusiasm to serve Canada, a number of men in Class One—bachelors and widowers without children (not otherwise excepted) who were 20 years old on the 13th October, 1917, and whose 34th birthday did not occur before January 1st, 1917—will desire to report for service, when in fact it is in the national interest that such men should continue in their habitual occupations.

The purpose of the Military Service Act is to select the authorized 100,000 reinforcements in such a way that the industries essential in the national interest will not be handicapped unnecessarily. With this in view, the privilege is extended to employers to claim exemption for men referred to in the first paragraph.

This course obviates the possibility of requiring that men be returned to civilian employment after months of military training—a waste of time and money for all concerned.

The grounds upon which exemption may be claimed, of special interest to employers, are:

(A) That it is expedient in the national interest that the men should, instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged.

(B) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should, instead of being employed in Military Service, be engaged in other work in which he wishes to be engaged and for which he has special qualifications.

(C) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in Military Service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated and trained.

The Employer's Statement

Where an employer claims exemption for an employee on the ground that it is expedient in the national interest that the man should continue in the work in which he is habitually engaged, he should prepare for the tribunal a statement and a schedule as follows:

Total number of employees, grouping them according to their respective occupations and qualifications, and stating the number in each group. Indicate the possibility or otherwise of replacing the labour of Class One men with the labour of those not in the statutory class called up; also the extent to which the withdrawal of men in the statutory class would affect the business, the reasons for considering that the carrying on of the business is in the national interest; and such other facts and circumstances as may appear to be relevant.

The Employer's Schedule

This should state the names, ages and occupations of all Class One men employed, and the medical category in which those who have been medically examined have been placed. There should also be noted against each name whether or not claim for exemption is being made and whether in the employer's opinion exemption, if granted, should be conditional on the man's continuing his present occupation, or whether it would suffice if exemption were granted for one, two, or more months, as the case may be.

THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

He Scores a Triumph Over the Tango Tea Husband.

"SIR," said the great detective, "you may as well confess. I always find out everything I go after. If deduction won't work, I use force."

"But confound it, I tell you," spluttered the banker, mopping his perspiring brow, "I say I have nothing to confess! I have been at my desk every afternoon for the past three months and I can prove it."

"Well, why don't you prove it?" demanded the great detective.

"Because, no matter how hard the wind blows, she is still his mother," retorted the banker sarcastically.

"Is that a species of the epidermus bunkydory on your wrist?" cried the great detective suddenly.

"Where?" said the banker, and flung up his wrist. Quick as a flash of buttered lightning the great detective seized it, stabbed it sharply with a small stiletto which he had concealed in his hand, and as quickly whipped off his hat to catch the resultant six drops of blood.

In the silence of his laboratory that night he examined them.

"Tannic acid! Just full of it," he exulted. "He could never get himself in that condition without attending tango teas every afternoon for months. Now to identify the brand of tea by the acid, thus locate the hotel that uses it, and in that way discover the woman—and presto, his wife gets her divorce and I get a $10,000 fee. See!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

Not Her Fault.

An old gentleman, always polite to women, was asserting one day that he had never seen a really ugly woman. A woman with a flat nose, overhearing him, said:

"Sir, look at me and confess that I'm truly ugly."

"Madam," he replied, "like the rest of your sex you are an angel fallen from the skies, but it was your misfortune, rather than your fault that you happened to alight on your nose."—Chicago Journal.

Willie's Tact.

There was company to dinner and father was carving his prettiest on a fine roast when suddenly the knife struck a skewer, made a sliding motion and came out on top. Father attempted to cover his real feelings with jests, but there was an embarrassing silence. Willie took advantage of it.

"Cook has burned her nose orful," he said.

"Too bad," muttered father, still wrestling with the roast. "How did she do it?"

"Trying to pull those skewers out with her teeth."—People's Home Journal.

Concrete Ships Endure.

Peculiar Type of Vessel Has Withstood the Test of Time

MUCH skepticism has been evinced on the subject of concrete hips, but such is their actual practicability that the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Department of the Government of the United States has seen fit to collect and distribute a booklet containing considerable data regarding their history and construction.

It has been assumed by the uninitiated that the use of reinforced concerte for the construction of ships and other floating structures is a novelty. As a matter of fact the first application of the material in this way dates from a period when the building of steel ships had not even been begun.

The first reinforced vessel was in the form of a small boat built in 1849 by a Frenchman named Lambot, at Miravel, and the boat is still in service after a practical test of 68 years. Toward the end of last century the possibilities of reinforced concrete for all kinds of structural work began to be more widely recognised and the material was applied to the construction of vessels of various classes in different parts of the world.

One of the first examples was a floating chalet supported by a reinforced concrete pontoon, measuring 67 feet long by 21 feet wide, built in Rome in 1897. Other barges, lighters and pontoons followed in fairly rapid succession, a Roman firm being most enterprising in the new branch of work. By the end of 1912 they had constructed at least 20 vessels of the lighter class and over 60 pontoons for floating bridges. In Germany reinforced concrete vessels of the motor launch and barge types have been constructed. In North and South America, a good many barges and pontoons have been made in reinforced concrete during the last ten years. Typical examples are furnished by a barge in Ontario, 81 feet long by 24 feet beam by 7 feet deep; a fleet of lighters, 100 feet long by 30 feet beam, built at San Francisco for the coasting trade; several lighters and pontoons on the Panama Canal; and some scows 112 feet long by 28 feet beam built at Fairfield.

From the examples cited it is evident that reinforced concrete has earned a definite claim to be regarded as a real shipbuilding material, particularly for vessels of moderate size. The material possesses obvious advantages for the building of many useful types of craft. Apart from ships, barges and pontoons, there are other types of floating structures in which reinforced concrete can be employed with advantage. The most interesting example of the caisson class is furnished by the "Batterie des Maures," a torpedo-testing station which at present forms a kind of artificial island in the Mediterranean. The structure was built partly in a dry dock, and completed at moorings outside the dock. The battery was then towed by a couple of steam tugs for a distance of some 30 miles through the sea and sunk upon a prepared bed in deep water. When in readiness for its voyage across the sea the battery had a displacement of 3,600 tons and drew 26 feet of water.

While of less striking character than this structure reinforced concrete caissons for pier and jetty construction are of practical interest.

It is frequently contended that saline substances in solution damage the concrete. Authorities state, however, that while badly made concrete has suffered deterioration in a few cases, there is ample evidence of the fact that correctly proportioned and carefully prepared concrete is not injured by prolonged immersion in sea water.

This doesn't look like an interesting picture, yet behind those barred windows is where Canada's millions upon millions of dollars are stored. This is where the enormous deposits of the insurance companies and banks are kept by the Government, and this is where Canada's Victory War Loan bonds are stored, pending the issue. This is the richest acre of ground in Canada.

TO PRESERVE SILK GARMENTS

Get the Habit of Washing Your Stockings Nightly.

Perspiration and dust do a lot to wear out silk stockings; therefore if you wish to prolong the life of this very expensive item of your wardrobe you will remove your stockings after a dusty walk and wash them at once. Never throw them in the laundry basket, there to remain several days or a week perhaps in their dusty condition. This treatment is death to the delicate fiber. Wash them out at once in plenty of soapy water, rinse thoroughly and when dry do not iron. Ironing is not good for fine silk and not necessary anyway, because as soon as the stocking is put on all the creases are drawn out.

This may seem like a lot of trouble, but as a matter of fact if made a part of the nightly preparation for retiring it soon becomes second nature.

Silk underwear should also be washed frequently and not allowed to stand in its soiled condition. It is attention to little details like this that give some women of moderate means the reputation of being well dressed. They know how to care for the costly items of their wardrobe.

FALL FROCKS.

Points About the New Lines of One Gown.

The new frocks are delightful. They are more pleasing—just because they are new—than last season's frocks, and they are attractive enough in themselves to merit the favor of women who are insistent about lines and chic, those two mysterious qualities that are so much more important than mere material or color interest.

The fall frocks approach the once familiar princess lines very closely. In fact, they are princess frocks minus the sheath effect always associated with princess ideals. All the new lines are straight, and the silhouette most desirable now suggests straightness and slenderness—the boyish, undeveloped figure rather than the much curved feminine figure which was supposed to "set off" a princess model to advantage. The modern frock eliminates curves at bust and hip, and its straight lines are interfered with very little by the inevitable sash or girdle which draws in the soft material above or below the natural waist line just enough to relieve the silhouette of any suggestion of clumsiness or angularity. Sometimes the skirt is attached to the bodice two inches or so below the waist line, and a narrow sash is drawn around the unfitted bodice at the waist, never snugly, but just enough to show that the figure is really trim and shapely and not "straight up and down." A frock of this type is of black satin with a panel running from the neck opening to the edge of the skirt. The bodice, fastening at either side over the panel with covered buttons, is attached without gathers to a rather deep yoke and falls in unfitted lines to the hip. Here the tunic is shirred on, and the tunic also buttons to the front panel, giving a long line from neck to ankle. A narrow sash of the material passes around the waist, crosses at the back and comes around to tie loosely at the front over the panel. This frock has coat sleeves with turned back cuffs of white wash satin and a turnover collar of the white satin finishing a V neck opening. At the edge of the tunic is one of the new, very deep hems, turned up twelve inches on the outer side and then stitched in rows and rows with black silk.

The Boy Scouts.

The Boy Scouts of America performed a notable service to the country in their campaign for the sale of the liberty loan bonds. Through their efforts more than $25,000,000 of the bonds were sold directly. How many sales were due indirectly to their activity cannot be known. The boy scouts worked systematically and thoroughly and with an earnestness that was inspiring. They covered fields that could not have been well covered by other agencies and effected sales that would not have been made without their efforts.

A Real Friend.

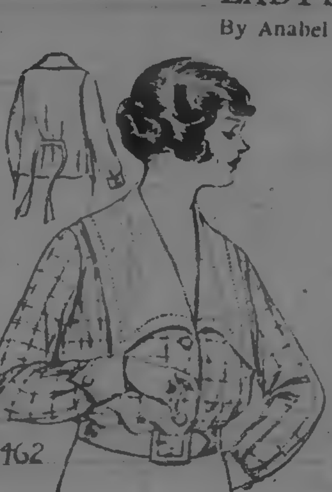
She—Oh, but I hope not.—Boston Transcript.

LADY'S WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.



The important points about this shirt waist are those on the good looking large collar and the deep cuffs. It is just the sort of plain blouse that is always so convenient for business, shopping or travelling. The hemstitched collar is so long at the front that it gives the effect of revers. The sleeves are set in without fulness and gathered into straight bands at the wrists. The pointed, turned back sections are attractive, but they may be omitted if preferred. Washable satin, crêpe de Chine, handkerchief linen or madras may be used for this shirt waist.

The waist pattern, No. 8462, is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Canadian Railways Co-operate For National Defence

As a result of suggestions made by the Government that during the period of the war, there should be closer co-operation between the railways in Canada an association has been formed by these railways corresponding to the Railways War Board in the United States, with the object of securing greater co-operation not only between the railways themselves but also between the railways and the public. Although Canada need fear no comparison with other countries as to the speed and efficiency with which munitions, equipment, foodstuffs and men have been moved to the front, it was realized that a still more intensive effort might help to speed up such movements and no private interest has been allowed to stand in the way of public benefit. It is expected that through heavier loading of cars elimination of unnecessary train service, the co-operative use of all facilities, etc., to the best advantage, the country's needs may best be served. Much can be done to achieve these results through closer co-operation between the public and the railways.

Very shortly after Great Britain became involved in the war, the British Government sent for the General Managers of all the railways and made arrangements by which the railways would be guaranteed the same dividends and a proper depreciation for the period of the war as they were before, and advised the General Managers to form a council amongst themselves to conduct the railways as one: in other words, to eliminate competition and devote the railways to essential transportation solely.

When the United States came into the great war, the executives of the various railroads met and arranged amongst themselves to form a committee to operate the railroads as one, so as to get the full value of their transportation facilities and eliminate competition. The Canadian Government, having on several occasions expressed a wish that there should be closer co-operation between the railways of Canada an Executive Committee was formed, consisting of the presidents of the following roads:

Canadian Pacific, Lord Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O.

Grand Trunk, Howard G. Kelley.

Canadian Northern, Sir Wm. Mackenzie.

American Lines in Canada, Alfred Smith.

By their direction, a subsequent meeting was held in Montreal, on 23rd October, at which the private and government roads operating in Canada were represented, and an Administrative Committee was formed consisting of:

U. E. Gillen, Grand Trunk, Chairman.

C. A. Hayes, Canadian Government Railways.

D. B. Hanna, Canadian Northern.

K. D. Brenner, Michigan Central.

F. P. Backus, Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo.

J. H. Walsh, Quebec Central.

Sir George Bury, Canadian Pacific.

A resolution has been adopted by all the railways in Canada that, realising the national need of co-ordinating all industrial activities toward the prosecution of the war, and desiring further co-operation with each other to render the most efficient possible service to the national cause, do hereby agree to establish for the period of the war an organization to be known as the Canadian Railway Association for National Defence, which shall have general authority to formulate in detail, and from time to time, a policy of operation of all or any of the railways, which policy when it is announced by such organization shall be accepted and made effective by the several managements of the individual railway companies.

The Canadian Railway Association for National Defence determined to open an office in Montreal at once, and appointed a Secretary.

A Car Service Committee, consisting of the following, has been named:

W. A. Kingsland, Canadian Northern.

W. N. Rippey, Canadian Government Railways.

A. E. Locke, T., H. & B. Railway.

J. E. Duval, Grand Trunk.

A. Hatton, Canadian Pacific.

W. A. Griffin, T. & N. O. Railway.

Sub-committees reporting to the Administrative Committee, will be established in each province, and these will be added to from time to time.

PRISONERS GET PARCELS.

Soldier Who Escaped From Germany Tells Experience.

The following statement regarding parcels dispatched to prisoners was made to a representative of Reuter's Agency by a Canadian soldier who has been for twelve months a prisoner in Germany but recently made his escape:

"After being two months in Germany, I received my first parcel, and since then they have arrived regularly, except that at the beginning of last January they were held up for about six weeks. They came in excellent condition, and the contents were just such things as we wanted and could appreciate. Altogether I think the new system very good. Before it came into force some men were getting much more food than they required, and were even then not satisfied, and were continually grumbling. Now every man gets the same amount. There is, therefore, no discontent, and things run more smoothly.

"With regard to the bread coming from Switzerland, I think that during the summer time this is a great waste. For three years the British people have been told about the bread going bad, and yet it still keeps coming out, and in consequence thousands of pounds of bread have been wasted. The bread is, of course, sent to the main camps, and in the case of men who are actually there when it arrives they get it in good condition. For the men in working camps, however, things are different, as the bread has to be sent on, and takes perhaps another three weeks to get there, by which time it is quite uneatable.

"I would recommend that instead of this bread being sent to the prisoners, rusks or biscuits should be substituted. The biscuits sent to the French prisoners are excellent, and if dipped in a little water and heated, rise and take the form of bread; moreover, these biscuits will keep an almost indefinite time. The French prisoners have their biscuits sent out in bulk to the various main camps, and they are distributed from there to the small working camps.

"To my knowledge the parcels were never stopped for any reason, except during the six weeks I have mentioned, but I have heard rumors of the Germans threatening to stop them. I do not think they will do so in the case of the British prisoners at any rate; if they did they would not get a single stroke of work out of them."

Promoting Cheer.

"Did you ever get any encouragement from the eminent official on whom you called?" "Yes, sir," replied the spokesman of the delegation; "he was right encouraging. He called attention to the fact that it's a pleasant day today, and he said he wouldn't be surprised if it was just as pleasant tomorrow."—Washington Star.

ECHOES OF THE SERIES.

When Ray Schalk, star catcher of the victorious White Sox, arrived at his home in a small Illinois town shortly after the recent world's series, he told an amusing story.

Schalk's description of a vitally important play that occurred in the fifth game, played at Comiskey park two weeks ago today, seems to be entirely new and doesn't sustain the assertion of western baseball critics that the Sox behaved like real sportsmen. The Giants have been unjustly panned in the west for unfair tactics, so that Schalk's surprising tale is worth repeating.

It will be remembered that, with Gandil on third base in the seventh inning of that memorable combat and one run needed to tie the score, Schalk was passed by Slim Sallee. Schalk started to steal the middle bag, with two men out, and Rariden made a quick throw to the Giants' southpaw. The latter, after holding Gandil at third, suddenly wheeled and pegged the ball to Herzog to cut Schalk down. Herzog allowed the ball to slip out of his grasp and Gandil promptly tied the score.

Herzog and Schalk evidently disagree as to the reason for this fatal error. Herzog still insists that he muffled the ball squarely and was wholly to blame for the tied score. Schalk, however, freely admits that he purposely jumped into the Giants' second baseman and kicked the ball out of his hands. The Chicago catcher excuses this act by stating that he expected trickery on the part of Herzog, and for that reason he decided to "beat him to it."

"I had the base stolen," Schalk is quoted as saying, "and when I saw the New York pitcher throw the ball to Herzog I quickly planned to get Gandil home with the tieing run. I took good care not to injure Herzog with my spikes, but I deliberately jumped into him at the same time kicking his gloved hand. Of course Herzog let the ball go through him and Gandil ran home."

If Schalk tells the truth, the umpire who was stationed at second base should have declared him out for flagrant interference, in which event Gandil's run would not have been recorded. But, according to recollections of the play, Schalk had nothing to do with the error, which was just a plain, everyday muff. Perhaps Schalk, like other players when they return to the folks at home, enjoy talking through his hat. It also is possible that he doesn't realize that he is reflecting discredit on the inside tactics of the new world's champions.

PELKEY'S CAREER.

Arthur Pelkey was born at Chatham, Ont., October 27, 1884, just thirty-three years ago Saturday. He started his ring career, after changing his name from Andrew Arthur Peltier, in the vicinity of Boston in 1910, and, although knocked out in one of his early bouts, he soon developed into a classy heavyweight. He developed a punch that put many of his opponents to sleep, and was breezing along like a coming champion when he was matched to fight Luther McCarthy in Calgary on May 24, 1913. McCarthy died in the ring after collapsing, and, although Pelkey was in no way to blame for the tragedy, he took it very much to heart. For months he refused to fight, and when he did get back into the game he was knocked out by Gunboat Smith. That defeat, coupled with the Calgary tragedy, put the finishing touch on Pelkey's pugilistic career. He became a contender for honors for the high diving championship of pugilism. He came down like a punctured balloon. Kid Kenneth, Carl Morris, Fred Fulton, Sam McVey, and most of the other heavyweights, took a whack at Pelkey and they all sent him down for the count.

"PUG" HISTORY.

1905 — Philadelphia Jack O'Brien knocked out Al Kaufmann in the 17th round at San Francisco. This match was a great mistake on the part of Kaufmann's backers, and Al who was then only 19 years old and one of the most promising heavyweights, never fully recovered from the beating he received at the hands of the clever veteran. At the time he fought O'Brien, Al had been in the ring less than a year. He won his next six bouts with knockouts, his victims including Dave Barry, George Gardner and Mike Schreck. He then outpointed Jack "Twin" Sullivan and Joe Grimm and in 1908 he knocked out Jim Flynn and Jim Barry. After that Al began to hit the down grade, and in 1911 and the following year he fell an easy victim to Flynn, Al Palzer and Luther McCarthy.

James Williams, C.P.R. agent for many years, died at Orangeville.

NOTES OF SPORT.

The third major league plan, that bids fair to materialize, should be a life saver for the leading minors.

Matty believes that he has landed a star infielder in Rath of the Salt Lake club. Rath is a third baseman, which possibly means that when he joins the Reds Heine Groh will return to the middle bag.

During the recent city series in St. Louis, American League fans successfully backed Sisler to outbat Hornsby. The former in seven games averaged .300, while the latter's percentage was .222.

Only five players stole 50 or more bases in the major leagues this year, as follows: Chapman, 56; Cobb, 53; Carey, 52; Roth, 51, and Eddie Collins, 50.

Miller Huggins is said to be playing both ends against the middle. He is reported to be using a flattering American League offer to make the Cardinals come across with a $15,000 salary. At present Branch Rickey can't see it from Hug's point of view.

Eddie Collins said he received permission from President Jackson of the Baseball Writers' Association to report the recent world's series. Jackson has "repudiated" Collins, and Ban Johnson doesn't like it a bit.

Roger Hornsby has notified Branch Rickey, president of the Cardinals, that he'll quit baseball next year if he cannot have a $10,000 contract. Hornsby is the first hold-out.

After losing more than $50,000 during 1914, 1915 and 1916, the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League will make a substantial profit on the past season.

Cincinnati's stove league already has claimed the pennant for the Reds next year. Porkville men predict that Matty's team will beat out the Giants. Same old story!

Latest figures indicate that the White Sox, Clevelands, Detroits and Red Sox all made money this year. The Giants, of course, did the biggest business in the National League, with the Reds, Cardinals and Phillies also showing balances on the right side of the ledger.

The following is a letter which appeared in the "Port Hope Guide," of Monday, October 26th. It is from a Canadian Soldier who was a Prisoner in Germany but had Escaped.

How Oshawa Man Escaped From a German Prison

Spent Seven Days in Bush, Travelling at Night — His Fourth Attempt To Get Away.

Mrs. Smith, Oshawa, received a letter from her son, Pte. Jack Evans, telling how he escaped from his German prison after four unsuccessful attempts. It is dated from Holland, September 26th.

He says: I am a little tired, but otherwise O.K. I have succeeded in escaping from Germany after four unsuccessful attempts. I am now in an internment camp in Holland, where I will have to remain for fourteen days before returning to England. I expect to be home for either Christmas of New Year's, as prisoners that escape are not allowed to return to the front. I really believe that I have aged five years during my sixteen months' stay in Germany. I was thinking all the time of how to get away. I had a few narrow escapes, as the Germans have plenty of soldiers on the border. Let me see, now, I have been starved, more or less, for the last nine months, so we must have a big feed for Christmas dinner—about three turkeys, three geese and twenty puddings. I have not tasted an egg in sixteen months. I am certainly a lucky man to get away from that God-forsaken country. If it had not been for parcels I would have been dead at Christmas. The Russian prisoners there are dying every day from starvation. It took me six days and nights to get from my camp to the border. I had to stay in the bush through the day and travel by night. Gosh! but it was cold lying out there in the open, but I made up my mind to escape in 1917, so I just gritted my teeth until I got across. I will ring off for this time, hoping to see you soon. Love to all. JACK.

HIS ARM IN A SLING.

Mr. Walter Stocker Meets With a Painful Injury.

It is hard to think of the energetic and active Walter Stocker as under the weather but fate has been cruel to him at last and he is now going around with his left arm in a sling. Yesterday morning his horse crowded him in the stall and his arm was badly sprained. The injury is painful and will likely keep Mr. Stocker off the list of active workers for some time.

The burglar also has his get-rich-quick schemes.

SWAGGER EFFECT.

A Gallant Youth.

Here is a story of heroism and resourcefulness that is not often paralleled. A battery of Canadian field artillery was under a concentrated fire from enemy guns. Gunner William MacLean was in an old German gun pit during the bombardment when a direct hit caused twelve casualties. Wounded in the chest and hand MacLean turned at once to the duty of rescuing those who were in worse case than himself. One of the victims was pinned down beneath heavy debris and there was a danger that if left in the position in which he was he could not survive long. A medical officer who could not reach the spot because of the needs of other wounded, was consulted and he advised amputation of the shattered leg so that the victim might be released. With great nerve, in the smoke-filled gun pit, MacLean performed the amputation, thus showing what the official report records as a splendid example of bravery, determination, and devotion to duty, for which the military medal has been awarded.

CANADIANS IN DEATH GRAPPLE

ELECTORS WEST PETERBOROUGH URGED TO STAND TOGETHER FOR NEW UNION GOVERNMENT

Eloquent Address Made at Victoria Hall Last Night by Win-the-War Speakers—Mrs. Hamilton Appeals to Women to Use the Franchise.

The attendance at the mass meeting in Victoria Hall last night, under the auspices of the Win-the-War League was small, no doubt due to so many counter-attractions.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer opened the proceedings and called on the meeting to nominate a chairman. Messrs. Jas. Kendry, Ex-M.P., and Mr. Frank Adams nominated Mr. W. R. Morris, and the meeting unanimously approved.

Mr. Morris on assuming office, announced that the meeting was entirely non-political and called in the interest of a movement all have at heart as one for winning the war. He called on Mr. Ben. Gould of Toronto for the first address.

Nothing Else Matters.

Mr. Gould in his preliminary remarks said that until the war is won nothing else matters, and we have got to cast aside many things which interested us before the war and unite in a determination to prosecute every available means in support of those gallant men at the front. "We know," he said, "what Canada has done and is doing, and believe me, we know what she intends doing until the war is won."

Magnitude of Sacrifice.

Referring to the magnitude of and demand for sacrifice made upon Canada, he did not believe that even had Canadians at first realized that they would be called upon by the Mother Country to give so much of their strength and resources, many would have refused the call. The country to the south tried to escape the pain and suffering involved in this great war, but the time came when they could no longer stand aside, they found it necessary to come into the fray and share with their brethren of the Entente Allies the tremendous burden of war in defense of civilization, liberty, justice and free institutions. They saw with us that the war is really in protection of their own homes, and that those at the front are fighting for everything we hold sacred. If we lose, he declared, life would not be worth living, as we should be trodden under the brutal heel of Prussian autocracy. Like Belgium, we should be robbed of our homes and property, looted, and heavy ransoms forced upon us. The Hun would be no easier on America than on Belgium and Serbia, and I say again nothing else matters until the war is won.

Must Back Them Up.

We sent 350,000 men to the front, continued the speaker, and we must back them up with all our resources. They must not be left to look across the ocean for help in vain. If I know anything, this country will continue in the war until the end, and that end is not so far away but what we can see the light of victory shining through the clouds. The war cannot be won in Italy, in Serbia, in Roumania, nor in Russia, for so long as the British lion, the French cock and the American eagle work together the Germans cannot and shall not win. But we have got to do our part at home in furnishing supplies, and to shape our political life in support of a union government pledged to see to it that Canada does all in her power to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion.

Must Be Conscription.

Mr. Gould strongly endorses conscription as the only effective way for maintaining our forces at the front, without injury to industrial, agricultural and other needs at home. Conscription has come, he thundered, and it must be enforced as the only right, just and democratic manner by which to achieve our glorious ends. But there must also be conscription of activities and of finances. We must work forward to an organization of all resources at this time of distress. The country's finances must be devoted to the war and to succoring those men who have in our defence risked their lives, many returning with limbs shattered and some crippled for life—we must see that those men suffer not through our failure to provide for them and their dependants generously.

We must submit to taxation of wealth and increased cost of living. "I believe," he said, "in direct taxation, which means that the poor pay in comparatively small and the rich in comparatively large measure."

Turning to the financial aid to the Mother Country expected from Canada, the speaker said for the exigencies of war we were loaning the British Government per month in June, July and August $35,000,000, and during the fall and winter months we have to raise and loan the Imperial Government each month $25,000,000. England pays the costs of our troops' maintenance overseas. Up to last June money was available from the States, but that market is closed to us now by reason of their own war requirements. He here went on to eulogize the United States for the whole hearted manner in which she had entered the war. Her annual wealth from all resources is 240 million dollars, out of which she had in seven months appropriated for the great cause 21 billion dollars one tenth America's annual revenue. The States had also loaned to Great Britain and her allies seven million dollars.

Support Union Government.

In conclusion Mr. Gould urged a united support of that government which is determined that Canada shall stay in the war with credit to all concerned. The Prime Minister, he said, is of that policy. "I am as sure as I am standing here that he is not today a Conservative or a Liberal, but a Canadian and nothing else; and that his government is neither Conservative nor Liberal, but Union in the truest sense of the term. At Ottawa there is a government for the war until the war is won. There is only one issue today—shall Canada quit the war or stay with it until it is won? And since there has evolved unionism why not the electorate unite for the one great purpose of carrying on the war and assuring reinforcement of our brave boys in the trenches. I ask you to follow Sir

CANADIANS WIN VICTORY AFTER VICTORY FROM BEST HUN TROOPS

Send Foe Reeling Back at Point of the Bayonet—Four Enemy Counter Attacks Completely Repulsed With Heavy Casualties.

(By W. A. Willson.)

Canadian Army Headquarters, October 31.—Opposed by troops as formidable as any in the whole forces of the Central Empires, our Canadian infantry is meeting them hand to hand and has gained one victory after another, sending them reeling back towards Passchendaele with heavy casualties. No fewer than four counter-attacks have been repulsed—one against our right on the Ypres-Roulers railway, where our troops were opposed by the famous guards; another against our positions at Crost Farms, where the Prussian infantry fought stubbornly to regain lost positions, and two against Meetcheele spur, when the Bavarians proved no match for our men on the left flank.

Enemy Could Not Resist.

Wounded men give dramatic indications of the nature of the fighting, in their detailed stories. Held up for the moment on the right by heavy enemy shell and machine gun fire, our troops plunged forward and attacked Crost Farms at the point of the bayonet, killed, wounded or captured the occupants of a concrete stronghold, rooted out enemy machine guns and turned their fire on counter attacking forces hastily thrown forward from an enemy reserved line behind the pass of Chendale Ridge. The German positions on Meetcheele spur, which were carried at the point of the bayonet under heavy machine gun fire, were the scenes of bitter conflict, but the enemy could not long resist the determined onslaught of our men, who, however, pay tribute to the clean fighting qualities of the Bavarians. So it was all along the line. The enemy pill boxes, that is those that were still active after our artillery barrage, were overcome by our victorious men, who swept forward irresistibly.

Guns and Prisoners.

No estimate can be made of the number of prisoners and machine guns captured is not yet available, but wounded Huns were travelling back all day. The total will not be small. Two human touches in the desperate day were seen in one of the clearing stations when German prisoners arrived, supporting one of our men who had been shot through the thigh. Just behind them one of our men appeared lending assistance to a wounded enemy.

METAL PRODUCTS COMPANY ARE MOVING TO MONTREAL

Loading Outfit on Cars Today—Better Inducements in Metropolis.

The Metal Products Company are loading up on cars, and have been for the past few days, their ammunition plant for shipment to Montreal.

So far as can be learned the reasons assigned for removal are improved labor conditions in Montreal and closer connection with the seaboard, which means considerable saving in transportation. Then, Senator Forget of the Metropolis has the controlling interest in the plant, which fact no doubt has some bearing on the removal from Peterborough.

On locating here this company were rated a fixed assessment on their property.

It is understood that their lease of the buildings, which were erected by the defrnct Canadian Cordage Company has expired, and that their complete removal from this city is only a matter of a few days now.

ANOTHER PROUD DAY IN ANNALS OF CANADIANS

Heap Another Stinging Defeat Upon the Pick of the Enemy Troops.

NEAR CENTRE OF OBJECTIVE

Men Made Their Way Over Ground Waist Deep in Mud.

(By Associated Press.)

British front in Belgium, Oct. 31. —The forces of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria yesterday suffered another stinging defeat when the British reached out across a sea of mud and wrenched away still more of the few remaining defences in enemy's Passchendaele system.

It has been announced a proud day for Canada. Her troops this afternoon were sitting almost at the gates of Passchendaele and from their positions astride the Broodescinde-Passchendaele highway along the ridge they could see only four hundred yards away a great church which stands in the centre of the village.

Meanwhile the British home troops on the left of the Canadians had undertaken the task of crossing Paddebeck River and morasses in order to birng their line forward to protect the Canadian flank. The men from the British Isles knew this must be done and they did it. How they accomplished this drive through the clinging mud probably they themselves could not tell.

One heavy counter-attack delivered by the Bavarians as early as 8:30 o'clock from Masselmarkt against the Canadians was caught by artillery and machine gun fire and smashed. The gain on the Canadian front averaged eight hundred and a thousand yards along most of it.

The Canadians frontiered a stiff position early in advance at Friesland Copse, a machine gun defence lying in the valley of Ravebeek which runs down the slopes at the Junction of Meetcheele and the Passchendaele ridge. The enemy turned a heavy machine gun fire on the advancing troops and when they closed in fought bitterly to retain hold on their concrete defences. But the Friesland Copse fell and the Canadians pushed on up the slopes.

At the Left the Canadians and English pushed rapidly across Paddebeek River and assaulted numerous defences on the eastern bank. The ground was in very poor condition.

Such strongholds as Sourd Farm and Cource Farm maintained heavy gunfire against them from the moment the advance began. In spite of those difficulties they pushed their line forward and established contact with the Canadians on the right.

PRESIDENT FAILS TO FORM A CABINET

$10,792 WAS COLLECTED FOR THE RED CROSS YESTERDAY

Workers Gratified at Raising More Than Half the Amount Aimed at—Splendid Lecture by Capt. Julia Henshaw.

Workers in the Canadian Red Cross campaign took lunch together in Hooper's parlors last evening when progress was reported prospects discussed.

Yesterday $10,792 of the $20,000 objective was realized and workers are gratified at a general ready response to their canvass, and at the warm-hearted reception accorded them everywhere. It is interesting to note that one litle news boy voluntarily contributed $1 in ten cent pieces.

At a Salvation Army meeting in the Temple tonight special addresses on the needs of the Red Cross will be delivered with a view to encouraging contributions from Salvation Army members which is worth while. The Army band played in front of the Red Cross headquarters last night.

The ladies on duty at headquarters are busy knitting socks on a knitting machine for the boys overseas.

Capt. Henshaw's Lecture.

Murray St. Baptist Church was crowded last night, when Capt. Julia W. Henshaw, C.E.F., gave her illustrated lecture on "The Fields of France," accompanied with splendid stereoptican views. Capt. Henshaw held the undivided interest of her large audience as she clearly and concisely told the story of dressing stations, hospitals and wounded, red cross operations behind the lines of British and French Armies in the field; also of thrilling visits to the famous Verdun fortress and French fronts. Especially attractive and illuminating were her stories grave and gay of Allied soldiers in France.

The collection taken up resulted in an offering of $71.15 in aid of the Red Cross.

The campaign will continue all day tomorrow.

QUEBEC CARRIES MILITARY SERVICE ACT INTO COURT

Montreal, Oct. 31.—A petition has been entered in the Superior Court here to have the Military Service Act declared unconstitutional.

The petition was filed on behalf of Paul Emile Mongeau, one of the Anti-Conscription orators now being held for trial on a charge of making alleged seditious utterances. It will be considered by Judge Bruneau. The parties named in the petition are Judge Steyr who committed Mongeau for trial and Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice.

Says Its Illegal.

"The petition claims that military service act is unconstitutional, illegal and vexatious because royal authority vested only in the King has been superseded. It argues that according to the British North American Act of 1867 in which are contained the clauses relating to Quebec, military service as supplied to Canada is for defence of the country only.

The petition further alleges that the Imperial Parliament never granted Canada any extra territorial powers outside of the limits or the borders of Canada and that Legislation otherwise by Parliament is therefore illegal and unconstitutional.

Fighting Continues on Italian Front

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 31, 1917.

THE MASS MEETING LAST NIGHT.

IT IS HARD TO SEE how any fair-minded person can take exception to the platform or the methods employed by the Win-the-War League in this Province. They are out to win the war. Their message to the voters is one of peace. They preach the unity of forces, the blending of interests, the suppression of party strife. Give them their way, and the members of the League would spare every riding in the Province the turmoil of an election. If this cannot be avoided in all cases, then the League is out to work for the man who will support the new Union Government.

What possible exception can be taken to such a course or to such an organization, including, as it does, some of the leading citizens in every community, citizens whose patriotism is above suspicion, citizens who have not only spoken, but have made sacrifices, on behalf of their country, many, too, having seen their relatives lay down their lives for the cause?

It is almost unthinkable that such a body of citizens as staged the meeting at Victoria Hall last night should have any ulterior object in view or that they were out to get the head of any particular individual. It is not fair to impugn the motives of such members of the community. There was certainly nothing said by the speakers last night to which the most sensitive could object. Mr. Ben Gould made a ringing patriotic address. No fault could have been found with anything he said, even if he had held forth in a church society. His utterances were those of a man who has but one purpose in mind, and that the salvation of his country.

Col. McCullough has been long enough in the eye of the public to be above suspicion. He certainly would not lend himself to any scheme the real object of which was below the surface, but anyone who knows the colonel will be ready to testify that he is open and above board in everything.

Mrs. Hamilton addressed her remarks directly to the women in the audience, many of whom have been given the right to vote at the coming election. Does any living man who professes to be a supporter of the Union Government fear anything from the votes of the newly-enfranchised women? Should he not welcome them to the standard and approve of everything that may be done to encourage them to use the privilege that has been given them?

The Win-the-War League counsels harmony, a getting together in an agreement that will render an election unnecessary. Surely in this there is nothing likely to prejudice the chances of any candidate of whom the majority of the people approve.

Watching the work of the League in other places where they have already operated should convince the skeptical of their good intentions.

THE WOMEN WILL VOTE.

MRS. L. A. HAMILTON, the well-known suffragist and social worker of Toronto, at the mass meeting last night urged the women of this city who have been given the Federal franchise to use it at the coming election and support the Union Government.

The new voters are not likely to require more than this reminder of their duty. The vote to them will mean something more sacred than casting a ballot for a mere political candidate. It will mean a helping hand to the husband, brother or son in the trenches. If that son, husband or brother is in the military cemetery across the seas, then the vote the mourner casts in Canada will help save that grave from ruthless desecration.

WAITING FOR THE WORD.

THERE IS NO SIGN of activity in the local Liberal camp. Everything is shrouded in the mystery of silence that can be felt, with the exception of an occasional harmless shot at a venture, in the form of a letter to the press. The official organ remains like a sphinx, refusing to disclose its countenace.

But the faithful are waiting a word from their leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, from whom a manifesto is expected within the next few days. What more the chieftain can say to the point than he already has said it would be hard to divine. He has openly declared his opposition to conscription. He has hinted that Canada has already done in the war all that she should be expected to do.

The marvel is not that Sir Wilfrid Laurier should hold such opinions as these, but that in West Peterborough he is still able to find men who share in his views and who are ready to be guided by his mandate.

THE MODERN CAVALIERS.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, in a burst of gallantry and patriotism, threw his cloak into a pool of water so that his lady sovereign could make the crossing without detriment to her footgear. The Queen graciously appreciated and acknowledged the courtesy and rewarded the courtly young cavalier by substantial favors.

Today would-be cavaliers are not lacking. They commiserate the women of Canada because all of them have not been given the franchise. Mr. Joseph Wearing, figuratively speaking, for one flings down his outer garments at the feet of the women of Peterborough, and a local paper is carried away by the same frenzy of gallantry.

But the ladies ignore the sacrifice and reject the offer of sympathy. They go their own way, sidestepping the improvised footpath. Their present status has been of their own making. When the matter of the franchise was referred to them, they themselves agreed to the vote only for the relatives of the soldiers. They asked for nothing more than was given them, and are not to be wheedled into discontent by misguided sympathizers.

Sir Walter Raleigh scored with England's Queen. Imagine his discomfiture if no notice had been taken of his act, and the sovereign had crossed the pool on a bridge of her own devising.

"NOTHING ELSE MATTERS."

"UNLESS WE WIN this war, nothing else matters," was the prologue and the epilogue of the address of Mr. Ben Gould at the win-the-war meeting last night.

Nothing else matters now but preparations for the winning of the war. The personal ambitions of political candidates are not entitled to consideration. The wire-puller should find no place on earth today. Politics should be abandoned. The gum-shoe seeker for votes, the man who is wooing first this and then that faction for his own personal aggrandizement, should forsake his evil ways. The one duty of the hour is to help win the war.

"Nothing else matters."

NO DIFFICULT TASK.

"SEND A MAN to Parliament who will support the Union Government," was the burden of the counsel offered the voters by the speakers at the mass meeting last night.

A fair consideration of local conditions will convince any person that this should be no difficult task.

SHALL CANADA QUIT?

"SHALL CANADA quit the war or stay with it?" asked one of the speakers at last night's meeting.

Canada will stay with the war until the end, be that end one or five years hence, if the Union Government is returned to power.

Canada will quit the war if the people of Canada, now struggling against a calamity that they were unable to avert, bring upon their own heads another misfortune by their own acts and vote the Union Government out of power. The choice as between dishonorable retreat and renewed and determined effort rests with the Canadian people themselves.

Which is it to be? Surrender or victory?

War is a Great Teacher.

(Scotsman.)

War is a great teacher. One of the lessons which it has forcibly driven home is the need for the application of science to industry if a nation is to hold its own in the modern world. A transformation has come over the attitude of all classes in the community, and not least the men of business, towards the claims of education.

SECRETS OF THE COAL BUSINESS

A few days ago at one of the committee of council meetings it was submitted that several loads of coal, from both dealers and from the city supply differed in the stated weight from the yard when the weight was verified on the city scales. Loads from the city supply were stated to have been over weight, one as much as 90 lbs. Possibly, but that load was weighed by a policeman, and not by the weighmaster. That is the reason we have a city clerk of scales. The bet is offered that if you pick out ten citizens, off the street at random, and ask each to weigh a load of coal, nine out of ten will make a mess of it. Nearly every man who tries the function gets wrong, for he proceeds to weigh in his own weight and forgets to deduct his averdupois from the gross total.

Just How It Happened.

Now it is not to be taken that we have policemen weighing only ninety pounds. That would be libel on the force, one of the finest. But if we hadn't a weighmaster weights would not be accepted as authentic. And as, further, we are spending the people's money, their very own money that they have supplied, for coal, possibly there are those who wish to know how the matter is adjusted at the yard in an endeavor to give fair weight.

Coal is mainly delivered in bags. Hence the consumer does not propose to pay for the weight of the bags. This dates back to the days when the grocer weighed in the paper he put in the scales. Each morning the wagon, as it comes to the yard, takes on, say, forty bags, for two tons of coal), the shovel, the shute and a good healthy driver for the team, and the outfit is placed on the scales and weighed. Tally is kept of the weight. Then when two tons of coal are to be delivered in one load the gross weight should show four thousand pounds over the working weight.

Should the day turn out wet, the outfit, bags and all, is re-weighed before starting in on afternoon deliveries. A wet day will fasten twenty-five pounds of mud on the wheels, easily. The bags will take up sufficient moisture to make a very perceptible difference in the gross weight, when one wishes to be careful. Well wetted a bag will pick up nearly a pound and a half of moisture. A perfectly dry bag weighs, on an average, about three pounds.

The weights of the running gear are taken as above and posted up beside the scales, and unless altered by the foreman, are taken as the standard weight for the day. Here are a few of the standards as taken from the records.

Wagon No. 1—Weight of wagon, 40 bags, shute, shovel and man, 1590 lbs. With two tons of coal registered as at 5590 lbs. With no bags and one and one-half tons, 4560 lbs.

Wagon No. 3—40 bags, shovel, shute and man, 1780 lbs. With two tons, 5780 lbs. With one and one-half tons, 4750 lbs.

This system is followed practically by all coal years, unless it can contrive a better one. When the wagon rolls on to the scale to be weighed with the coal on board, any variation of weight is adjusted by adding or deducting what is requisite from a quantity kept in a box alongside the scales. Any small variation may be ascribed to the idea of "let 'er go, its pretty near right."

To Verify Further.

To verify further, loads, at random, are sent by the foreman for the city yard, to be checked up on the city scale. And he will not designate that the load is to be sent to the city scale until after it is out on the street. So that it will be average weighing, and not a load prepared for sacrifice. Below are the records of four loads so verified. Two are found short. Two are exactly the same on both sets of scales. All from the city yard.

Weigh ticket 2793. Yard scales 4000 lbs. City scales, 3980 lbs. Verified by clerk, load 20 lbs. short.

Very many of the loads agree, exactly. So they agree when weighed for local coal men. Where the difference comes in it is hard to determine. Why the weight should vary between the yard and the city scale is one of those things no fellow can understand. But it comes so, occasionally. If it were heavy winter weather one could understand it if the teamster cast off his overcoat and boots preparatory to weighing. But he does not. And on the other hand a few loads are a trifle over weight. But on the whole the men are honestly trying to give the people, as all coal men do, in fairness, the weight for their money. Any coal man who is attending to business has something else to do than to stand and swipe twenty or thirty pounds of coal off a load. If he did, his men would give him away, and so far we have not heard of such a case within the memory of man.

TODAY'S STORY

Adolph Dumkopff had made a killing at poker.

"Oh, Adolph, how lovely!" giggled his wife. "You must have held wonderful hands, Adolph. What did you have—Jacks down, or a full kind, or something?"

"How about a little celebration?" said Mr. Dumkopff, jovially. "How about a little theatre party, and then a little something to eat afterward?"

"Now, Adolph," remonstrated Mrs. Dumkopff, "what's the good of squandering it right away? Now that you've got it, you may as well keep it for a rainy day. We'll celebrate reasonably, that's what we'll do."

And after supper they went to the movies to see the picture "Looping the Loop" in five parts, after which they each had a pickle sandwich in the restaurant.

"Now, wasn't that a reasonable celebration?" said Mrs. Dumkopff, when they had returned home. "Only 85 cents altogether."

"Cheap at half the price," agreed her husband, as he dropped off to sleep. Half an hour later Mrs. Dumkopff carefully removed his trousers from the chair by his head, extracted his roll from the right hand pocket, divided it with scrupulous fairness into two equal parts, kept the six tens and replaced the six fives in her husband's trousers.

"I'll buy something for the house with this, such as the prizes for my card party next week," thought Mrs. Dumkopff, as she tucked the bills into her back hair and slipped into bed to sleep the sleep of the foxy.

Wit and Wisdom

Colored Testimony.

The First Tommy—Oh, I say, Jim, here's a red blackberry.

The Testing Times.

"Yes," said the retired army officer, "I can recall two occasions when I was terribly nervous."

"Oh," exclaimed the romantic young lady, "do tell me about them. I suppose it happened when you were fighting the Germans?"

"No," he replied; "one time was when I was married, and the other was when we had our baby christened."

Heroic Remedy.

She was a fair-haired lady, an actress by profession, and dainty withall. Her headgear consisted of a bowlike foundation, from which protruded plumes mounted on slender wires. She sauntered into a theatre and took her seat to witness the great play, "Ashamed of Her Brother."

There was a touch on her hat. Loftily and haughtily she turned. "Does my hat annoy you?" she asked.

"Not at all," replied the person behind her.

The footlight favorite thought for a time. She feared she had been ungracious, and, like Dick Whittington, she turned again.

"Perhaps my plumes interfere with your view?" she suggested more amiably.

"Oh, no, thank you," replied the self-possessed young woman; "I've bent 'em back."

The Wrong Kind.

"Don't wait for your opportunity, make it." So read Mr. Kalestalk, who had recently started in business as a greengrocer.

He was still pondering this excellent dogma, when his eye caught an item in the sporting columns of the local paper; "Splohton Wanderers Football Club require dates for ensuing season."

Here was a chance for Mr. Kalestalk, so he wrote to the secretary of the club:

"Dear Sir: I presume you require dates for use at half-time. Shall be glad to supply quotation for same either by the stone or hundredweight."

WATCH OUT FOR CANCER.

Heredity Plays Role in Producing Disease, Says M.O.H.

"Of all the diseases that flesh is heir to," says the Toronto Health Bulletin, "probably cancer is the most dreaded of mankind."

It says that there are between 8,000 and 9,000 deaths from cancer in Canada every year, and probably between 80 and 90 per cent. of these are of persons over 40 years of age.

Experiments on mice have proven that heredity plays an important role, yet in no case has it been found possible to produce cancer by the closest contact with any of these mice, diseased and undiseased.

It is known, however, that constant irritation of a part, especially the mucous membrane, of those predisposed, frequently results in the development of a cancer.

"There are many examples of constant irritation bringing about this change in the cells of the body; for instance, cancer of the lip or tongue irritated by the heat from a cigar, a clay or a short-stemmed pipe, or the jagged edge of a tooth," says the Bulletin.

Cancer, in its early and curable stages, gives rise to no pain or symptoms of ill-health whatever.

In cases of any swelling occurring in the breast of a woman after 40 years of age medical advice should at once be sought.

"Any wart or sore," says the Bulletin, "occurring on the lower lip in a man after forty years of age is almost certainly cancerous."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

She bought the frock at what she considered about ten per cent. more than its value because she was tired [illegible] out of the many she had looked at and tried on, seemed at last about what she wanted.

The frock had to be altered. A fitter spent fifteen minutes pinning and ripping to suit the woman's figure and her fancy. In the alteration room a sewing woman took three hours making the alterations. Then the garment was carefully stuffed with tissue paper to prevent mussing, wrapped by the wrapper in five sheets of tissue, tied in a box and sent on the motor delivery to the woman.

She tried on the dress and walked round in it half an hour before the mirror. She telephoned a friend, who came and discussed the dress with her. At last the woman decided she didn't want the dress. So next day she returned it to the store and insisted on having back her money on the garment that had been altered for her.

Looks for Another Dress.

Because she was a fairly good customer of the shop the merchant took the dress and gave her what she had paid. So she went on her way looking for another dress.

The merchant put the returned dress back into the case to await the trying on of the next customer, who could rightly claim a reduction in price because of the alteration.

The saleswoman who had spent an hour selling the dress, and so missed other sales, lost the bonus the establishment allowed on that sale.

Is it any wonder this woman felt that for some strange reason she was overcharged. When the merchant bought that dress from the manufacturer and put his price on it he took into account what had to be considered in the price marked on every article in his shop, what he had learned through fifty years of experience as a merchant, that women are fickle shoppers, that they can't make up their minds and keep them made up.

Time Wasted.

Women had abused the privilege he had given them of returning goods that weren't satisfactory. They had needlessly taken up the time of saleswomen, aislemen, cash girls, ac[illegible] men the merchant employed. They had caused the waste of mountains of purchase slips, wrapping paper, string, boxes, tissue paper that he bought.

This waste of his resources meant a yearly loss to the merchant on from 15 to 30 per cent. of his sales—the number of return purchases. To cover this loss he had to increase the normal selling price of every article he sold.

This particular woman, after she had returned the dress, comforted herself with the trite and flippant remark, "That's what the store is for!" thereby revealing a loose moral fibre that made her throw away hours of her own time, made her as inconsiderate of the merchant's employes as of his goods.

Besides, she was selfishly inconsiderate of the public who must pay extra for much that they buy because merchants have long been forced for self-protection to charge extra on goods because of women shoppers' abuse of the return goods privilege.

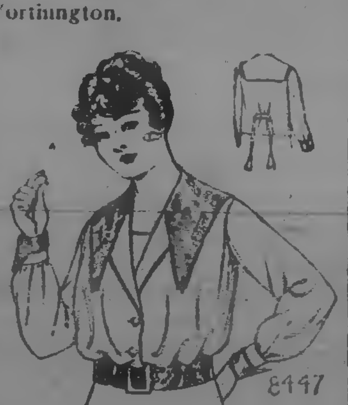
LADY'S SHIRTWAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.



A constant source of satisfaction to the woman who likes to look business like and efficient is a supply of smart shirt waists ready to wear at an instant's notice. The one illustrated in No. 8447 shows one of the latest effects in collars—square at the back and with deep points at the front. The whole collar is of darker material than the waist, and it is joined to revers, which are formed by turning the fronts of the waist back. As the crossing of the waist is quite low, a tiny shield of the material is a feature. The long sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs, and the turnovers to match the collar are attractive but not necessary.

The waist pattern, No. 8447, is cut in sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 2 yards of 36 inch material, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

REDUCE FOOD COST

The Value of Cereals Is Hardly Well Understood Yet.

JUST WHAT THEY CONTAIN.

Government Experts Tell Us How They May Be Bought, Cracked, Ground and Combined to Lessen the Meat Bill During This Wartime.

The most practical means of reducing table expenses without decreasing the wholesomeness and adequacy of the diet lies in increased use of cereal foods, especially boiled grains, mushes and breads made of cornmeal and cereals other than wheat.

Cereals contain most of the important food elements which the body needs and yet are comparatively inexpensive. They are primarily a source of starch needed by the body to yield energy. They furnish also considerable quantities of protein, one of the most important and usually one of the most expensive food elements needed to build the body and keep it in repair. In addition, cereals furnish mineral matter, fats, fiber and, especially if part of the bran is left in, little-known substances which regulate bodily activities.

If cereals are to be made a more important feature of the diet, mushes and boiled grains, as well as baked doughs, should be eaten in greater quantity. Practically any of the cereals may be used in making some type of bread. Wheat has been most used because its gluten makes possible the raising of the dough with yeast. Flours and meals of the other grains, however, may be made into baking powder breads, and many of them can be substituted for part of the wheat flour in making yeast breads.

HOW RICE PLUMPS OUT.

Breakfast foods should be chosen carefully if economy is desired, since the form in which the food is purchased largely determines the cost. Meals from which mushes may be made may be obtained for a few cents a pound, while specially prepared grains may cost up to 48 cents or even more per pound.

One way to lessen the cost of breakfast foods is to buy whole grains from a feed store and grind them coarsely in a coffee or other hand mill. The cracked grains when salted properly, boiled thoroughly and served with butter or sugar and cream or milk make wholesome and palatable foods. Boiled grains, such as rice, barley, cornmeal or hominy, may be used in the same way, or any of these may be combined into dishes with cheese, eggs or meat, which add both flavor and nitrogenous food elements.

Married an Heiress.

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Langtry, adopted daughter of Frederick W. Vanderbilt, of New York, and Lance-Corporal Locquell, of the Canadian army, son of a professor in Oporto University, is announced in the London Daily Mirror. The bride said her parents had not yet heard of the wedding, which took place at Seaford, and which was extremely quiet, only a few witnesses being present. The bride gave the name of Vanderbilt, which she said she was authorized to use. The girl said she became acquainted with Corporal Locquell while riding along the seashore. Becoming ill, she was obliged to dismount. Locquell happened to come along, assisted her with the utmost kindness, and the acquaintance ripened into mutual love.

Empress Zita of Austria Searched Out Officials Who Were Not Competent

Swiss newspapers reprint the following story, which has been going the rounds of the Austrian and German press:

"On one of the recent fat days in Vienna the Empress Zita, disguised as the wife of a Vienna workingman, mixed among the purchasers of fats in order to see for herself how much truth there was in the complaints in the press about the bureaucracy prevailing at the selling of fats. Soon she was engaged in conversation with the other women, and Frau X was telling about her family and her children that she had been compelled to leave behind without anyone to watch them because she frequently had to wait hours to get a little fat, and Frau Y sang the same song in a little different key.

"An hour passed, and then two and finally three, while the Empress was talking with her new acquaintances about their household joys and woes and they were vainly trying to get to the fat counter. There were far too few officials on hand, and those who were there were so indifferent and indolent that no progress was being made. Dozens who had not yet been served after having waited for hours were still standing in front of the shop when the clock struck five and down rolled the shop shutter with a crash, and despite all the pleas of the women for service the officials said: 'It is now closing time and time to quit work. To-morrow the performance will begin again. You will have to come again to-morrow.'

EMPRESS ZITA

"Then the women were filled with natural indignation and they were not at all backward in voicing their complaints, while their new colleague carefully noted what was going on and then disappeared unobserved into a side street, whence she quickly made her way home in a court automobile. There the Emperor at once received an exact report of the state of affairs, and a few minutes later the question as to how things had gone that day in selling fat was put to the officials at the salesroom from the highest authority. 'Remarkably well,' was the report. 'The work of distribution was already ended at six o'clock and everybody was satisfied.' 'Then why didn't the Empress get any fat, although she waited for hours?' was the next question, and the interrogator rang off. It must have rung unpleasantly in the officials' ears all night and still more so the next morning when the order came: 'Transferred to field service at the front because of incompetency in the supply service.'

"This incident, like many another since the ascendancy of the royal young pair to the throne, has found a very joyful echo among the people, and the hope is again springing up that at last someone has been found who has the courage to wring the neck of the Austrian bureaucracy and that Emperor Charles and his noble companion, Empress Zita, are the ones to do it."

ONE "FIRST LADY"

Wife of M. Poincare, President of the French Republic.

SHE WAS BORN AN ITALIAN.

Her Position as the President's Wife Was Subject to Criticism at First Because of Her Foreign Birth and First Marriage, but Tact Has Allayed It.

Like the wives of many other statesmen of France, Mme. Poincare has not occupied a conspicuous place in the public eye. She is known to be a brilliant woman, who prefers the seclusion of her own home to the glare of publicity. Her brilliant husband has always found her a source of inspiration, for she is a deep student of public questions, takes a keen interest in his career and has often proved herself a wise counselor, in whom he places much reliance. He gives her due credit for the part she has played in the advancement of his ambitions.

MME. RAYMOND POINCARE.

Brilliancy, luxury and elegance passed completely from the Elysees palace with Empress Eugenie. The wives of presidents have sought, for political purposes and largely also from personal preference, to give life at the Elysees a bourgeois character; have been snubbed by European royalty and have surrendered abjectly the social reign to the Bourbons and the families of the first empire.

The difficulty is an inheritance from the Empress Eugenie. She mixed up in affairs of state with such disastrous results that when the republic was established the government determined to make it impossible for the president's wife to have enough influence to become dangerous.

During M. Poincare's early political ambitions his wife's name was brought up by his enemies unpleasantly. Not only was Mme. Poincare's Italian birth held up against her, but also the fact that her first marriage was to a German, an attache of the kaiser's embassy in Paris. She married M. Poincare after he had acted as her lawyer in securing a divorce from her first husband. The charming Italian woman—her maiden name was Henrietta Benucci—having cause for divorcing her husband, appealed to M. Poincare then one of the leading lawyers in Paris, to represent her before the courts. Her excellent character and noble qualities of mind, as brought out during the conduct of the case, so appealed to the noted bachelor lawyer that he was later led to pay court to his former client and marry her.

HUNS AS LUMBERMEN

A CANADIAN TELLS OF VISIT TO FRENCH FOREST.

Prisoners Are Employed to Handle the Timber, but They Are Not Very Efficient, and Men From Our Own Dominion Are Doing the Bulk of This Important Work.

"EYES leftd!!" "Eyes frondt!!" Uttered in guttural German, these commands sound strangely on a Canadian ear. Stranger still is the mis-en-scene whence they arise. For the non-com. who shouts the order is a bulking Hun in field grey, wearing the Iron Cross, and by his side marches a column of German soldiers. But no Mausers are in their hands, no bayonets at their sides, and the headgear is not that of one regiment.

Blue, red, yellow, white border [illegible] diverse are the designs of their shoulder-straps. Tall and short, fat and thin, many be-spectacled, mingle in this conglomeration of Prussians, Bavarians, Saxons, Wurtemburgers—no longer soldiers, but woodmen marching to dinner. They salute a group of Canadian officers as they pass, and the burly German non-com. in charge is quite evidently glad of a chance to air his authority a bit in public and do a bit of a swanking he was wont to do in the barrack square of Deutschland.

It is in a pine forest of France that Douglas Robertson, the Canadian correspondent, saw these Boches working for the Canadians engaged in forestry work. Working, did I say? Well, imagine thirty-two husky Huns pretending to haul on a rope, leisurely pulling down a tiny jack pine, scarcely more than a sapling, and you can visualize their efforts. How an Ontario farmer would laugh at such "work." However, the Germans do accomplish a little. They quite evidently like this "job," and it confers an appetite and an appreciation of the comfortable huts in which they are housed.

By the roadside stands their own German "koch," and facing him a row of burnished kettles. Brimming with some savory stew, the steam ascends in fragrant clouds. To him in batches of twenty at a time come the prisoners, to fill their dixies and receive each one a generous chunk of bread. Squatting under the trees in this fine weather, they partake of their mid-day meal. Would that Canadians in Bocheland fared half so well. After feeding, several of the Huns produce long-stemmed pipes, with china bowls, which they puff contentedly, their enjoyment unimpaired by any thought of the sentries who stand back among the trees in case some forgetful Hun might wander through the sylvan dells.

And what a pine forest is this! Its like does not exist throughout the length and breadth of Canada. A regular fairy-tale wood, this vast plantation of clean trunks, rising almost limbless to an average of fifty feet, green-topped, springing from an underbrushless carpet of moss and needles. They grow in yellow sand, these trees. The larger ones measure from 10 to 14 inches through at the base, and give some 40 feet of log.

Hark, Canadian lumbermen. In this country a stern Government allows no timber-limit vandalism on the part of loggers. No brush nor slashing may be scattered about, as in Canada, to start fires. Everything here is piled, swept clean. In the adjoining French section of this wood I actually saw windrows made of branches carefully tied together. Thus they are shipped off to Paris for firewood.

In marked contrast to the Huns the Canadian bushmen, who, overalled, stand in military formation ere they dismiss to lunch. A little group, they have charge of the more technical jobs. Soon a mill will hum in this vicinity, as others are doing elsewhere, turning out its full quota each day. These Canadian mills are not only supplying [illegible] troops, but Imperial and French troops as well.

Canadians are hard at work in forests of beech, hornbeam, ash, oak, birch, cherry, and chestnut trees, which are falling before them, and, oddest sight of all, are being pulled down by block and tackle. Such is the French fashion. Limbs chopped off and a rope attached to its top, many a tree is torn out by the roots, which are afterwards sawn off.

Saw dust roads, slab piles, noon-day whistles among such surroundings. Sacrilege! Mais c'est la guerre! Alas, modern war is an ogre for timber. But then the trees will grow again; many are ripe for the saw; many more will be left standing. All is being done systematically under Governmental supervision.

"Builders in Canada would be glad to pay $60 and $70 a thousand feet for this," remarked an Ottawa Valley lumberman, now an officer in charge of one of these mills. He referred to the beautiful, clear beech, which, alas, was being sawn into common planks for roads. "Does seem a shame to see such stuff being wasted when pine or spruce would do just as well. But the army simply has to have it, so we are turning it into lumber as fast as we know how. I sent planks like these, hot from the saw, to build the roads over which our guns were hauled up to Vimy Ridge."

Out of the hardwood Canadian millmen are sawing besides lumber, beams, trench timbers, railway sleepers, firing beams for 9.5 howitzers, etc. Fuel was scarce in the trenches last winter. If the Hun manages to defer his final thrashing until next year, the boys in the trenches won't freeze for lack of waste wood. One mill commandant told me he had 1,000 tons of such stuff ready for them.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

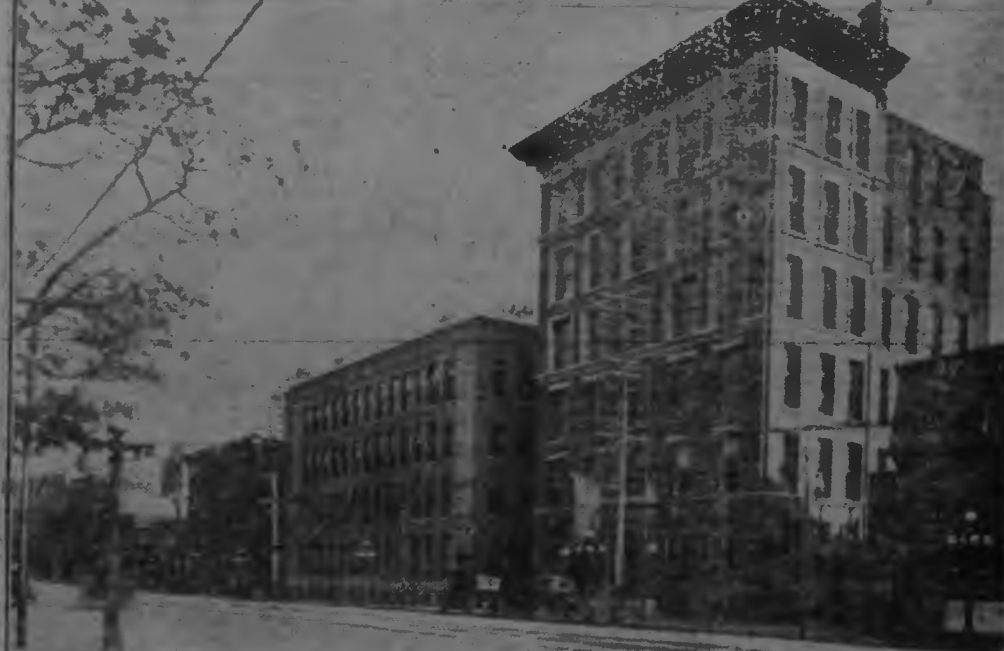
Englewood, Ill.—"While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and [illegible] I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. Sheldon, 5657 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Temperance in Peru.

A law passed by the national congress of Peru at its last session and approved by the president of the republic on February 10, 1917, provides for a prize of £100 (nearly $500) to be awarded for the best text from which to teach temperance in the public schools of Peru. Intemperance, especially in the mining regions, is said to be a serious problem in Peru and Bolivia. The introduction of this subject as one prescribed in the public school curriculum is expected to have important effects.



In this commonplace building on Wellington Street in Ottawa more money is "made" than anywhere else in Canada. Last year the American Bank Note Company printed $300,000,000 worth of bonds and $150,000,000 of paper money (Dominion notes and chartered bank notes). Its latest undertaking was the printing of the Victory War Loan Bonds—$150,000,000 worth. After the loan opens in November, there will probably not be a house in Canada without one or more of these bonds — plus the signature that make them binding.

HOW FUEL MAY BE SAVED IF COAL SUPPLY RUNS SHORT

During the last few days there has come an incessant call to the City Coal Supply for fuel. Very many aver that in the house is nothing of fuel. Very many of these applications are true in fact. Some are not. But the end is that fuel is scarce, so far as a public supply is concerned. In the early days of September, now two months ago, and when coal was promised to the Supply in fair and regular quantity, orders of coal to the extent of three tons were served to citizens. But for the last six weeks none but ton orders have been served except in cases of a very long haul. The city now has registered as many as over five hundred orders, all paid for. Coal is again promised early. It is on the track. The railroad has been urged again and again to hurry forward. If it can do this we shall have coal in the city, outside of what the local dealers have and get for supply.

FUEL CONTROLLER'S WORK.

On the 30th (Tuesday) the selling agent from whom the civic supply is procured was brought to the city to consult with as to the situation. Little was learned beyond the fact that now the function of the Dominion Fuel Controller is coming into prominence. For, and remember, the whole duty of the Controller is to determine where fuel shall go, to what part of the Province or Dominion, as well as to try and ensure a supply. The demand is insistent from all over. Presently it will take the shape that a city or town or village will have to prove up that it needs coal—not wants it. But that it is in stringent need, before it may gain a further supply.

Coal has been held back from the border on a claim by the American interests interested, that Canada has already had more than 600,000 tons of hard coal over its average supply at this time of the year. This contention has been disproved, after some time and controversy, and the anticipation is that coal may now be released in larger bulk. But over 2,000 points are clamoring for fuel—all making claims equally insistent and verified.

Now it is a truism that in the face of some difficulties and troubles, we are able to meet with larger efficiency if we can have time in which to prepare, to look about, to consider what we may do and have to do under a given set of circumstances. Rather than to have to act in an emergency. If we take thought how we should meet the emergency should it arise, then we are that much further ahead in course of preparation. So we might just as well consider right now what we shall have to do if we have to do it.

WHAT CAN BE DONE.

It will be best to anticipate a fuel shortage. If it does not intervene, then we shall be agreeably disappointed. But if it does come about, then we shall as a city have to act. What is there we can do? Just this—help ourselves.

The powers of the Dominion Fuel Controller are pretty wide and thorough. The published excerpts from the Order-in-Council show that if he deem the emergency a valid one, he can order a coal census to be taken of the municipality, in order to determine where the fuel is housed. Customs returns show infallibly how much fuel has come into this city. If not now in sight, it is stored somewhere, for winter burning has not as yet commenced in earnest. And, if stored, either in private houses or in public places, it may be available to fend off the hardship of cold and inclemency—as it surely will be used if the pinch comes.

TAKING A COAL CENSUS.

The Fuel Controller can, if he be requested, have the coal dealers ennumerate and supply lists of those to whom coal has been delivered. This to determine how much any individual or individuals have laid in stock for the winter. We hear it darkly hinted that here are those who have laid in a two years' supply. Quite a proper thing to do in the course of ordinary trade. No censure is due those who have been thoughtful and who are able to anticipate. It is done every day in business and trade. But if the pinch comes, and it is much nearer than anticipated, those stores of coal may be available for the use of those who are coalless and cold. It would be a drastic thing to do to impound a man's supply, but no his over-supply.

MORE MONEY THAN COAL IN SIGHT.

But that is not all. We could not, as a city, take any such impressive and radical step unless we first prove that we, as a city, are willing to make sacrifices—that we are willing to deprive ourselves of this or that to which we have been accustomed, in order to lessen the demand for fuel that may be transported to the bins and outhouses of those who really are in need. The old statement that "money counts," as was quoted by an inspired party at a late public meeting, has been shot to pieces. Money is of little avail, for there is heaps more money in sight than coal on the track.

What, then, can be done? To what may we look forward to giving up? During this cold winter that is coming on? If we assume that the emergency will come, as it may arise about the opening of the year, we can plan now to meet it. Every ton that can be released is a ton for someone to burn in the household.

PROVE FAITH BY WORKS.

Beginning about January 1st, we must prove our faith by our works, and hit on a program about as follows, for charity begins at home:

Close up the city offices and house the clerk, engineer, tax collector, plumbing inspector, and, if you will, the treasurer, in one room, the city engineer's office. Pretty close quarters, but all these people are agreeable to work with and have common sense.

Send the charity officer and sanitary inspector up to the Patriotic Fund office and all will be serene. The end is, release twenty tons of coal. For a couple of good stoves will warm the bunch.

Put a stove in the police station and another in the police court, and save twenty tons of stove coal. It can be made hot enough for those frequenting the police court, at any rate.

Close up the public schools for January and February. Let the teachers and pupils take a winter holiday, and even up by keeping the schools open in July and August, for one year only, when no coal is needed. Save, let's see, about two hundred tons of coal.

Close up the Public Library. Could save there, at a guess, about twenty tons, possibly more. A substantial saving at any rate.

The Isolation Hospital asked for forty-seven tons of coal to do it for the winter. If the cases are very few—and such may be, as has been, the case—arrange to have them taken care of at one of the other hospitals. Some rules may have to be bent (not broken), and the rules can be straightened out afterwards. We could release, say, twenty tons or so, and not feel it.

Close up the T. A. S. It is a local convenience, but local conveniences will not keep the home fires burning when the home fires are short of fuel. Close up the Y. M. C. A. to even things up from a useful standpoint, and a guess is hazarded that by the time the robins come in the spring no one will be much the worse for it. Inconvenienced, that's all.

Let George Street Church go over and worship in St. Paul's. The two are pretty close together now, and the winter's association may close up the gap. Close down the Church of the Sacred Heart and have the people attend the Cathedral. This is to even the matter up in a denominational way. From these churches coal can be had that will warm many a household.

Carry the same spirit of economy and helpfulness into other public gathering places, and the combined saving would make such as would relieve the strain and provide fuel. For if the pinch comes, and it may, we shall have to rely on ourselves much more than on outside assistance.

What has been suggested is no romance. It may come to pass. The fuel situation was to mend at the end of October. So far as mending—it is nearly the reverse. Some difference may appear as soon as navigation on the lakes closes down. But with cargoes to be had and wheat to come over the lake, traffic will keep up to the last day. If you want to get a bird's-eye view of the local situation, just go and see Mr. Adams, who can tell you, if he gets time from the phone, just what the public think, say and beg for. Just this—Coal.

England Once Supreme in Music

In the British Museum Theatre is a scrap of vellum about double the size of a postcard. In bulk it is probably the smallest, and in interest is certainly the greatest of all musical manuscripts, and its eighty-eight notes have puzzled the Sons of Jubal in many countries more than all those of Wagner's Ring—the world's longest score, for these notes form a fourpart canon on a two-part ground bass, "infinitely more ingenious," a great historian points out, "than the common canon." And microscopic examination reveals the two dates, 1226 and 1236, proving the "canon," "Round," or "rota," as it has been called, to have been written centuries before it was imagined that such a work could have been composed. Moreover, this enigmatical piece of music combines technical science with melodious sponteneity in a way rare in any age. It was copied out by John Fornsete, Cartulary at the Abbey of Reading, but who composed it is unknown, says Clement Antrobus Harris, in his article on "When Britain Was the Most Musical Nation," which appeared in The Contemporary Review.

The condition of music at the period centering around 1226 was therefore much more advanced than has been generally supposed, and much higher in Great Britain than there is evidence of its being anywheer else.

Cumulative evidence supports this view. Oxford was the first university to have a professor of music. Irish folk-songs, on the whole the finest that exist, were probably the first to acquire a European fame; it was to the Irish monks of St. Gall that musical education throughout Europe is largely due; they educated St. Dunstan, to whom some writers attribute more than one of the so-called "Gregorian" chants. More important still, the first-known instance of secular harmony in the world is British. For Giraldus tells us that "the Welsh do not sing their tunes in unison as other nations do, but in harmony, so that there are as many different parts as there are singers, while the inhabitants of northern England sing in two parts, even the children falling into this practice." The first known example of ecclesiastical harmony was the work of a Flemish monk now known as Pseudo-Hucbald, though Fosbroke gives an account of the singing of the Anglo-Saxon monks, which can only be interperted as a description not merely of parts singing, but of imitative polyphony. The precise period to which he refers is not easy to determine, but according to other writers who refer to the same style, it would probably be about 1100-66.

The supreme art of the musician, composition, has not been evolved wholly by one man or one nation. But John Dunstable, born about [illegible] gave so new a meaning to the term that he has been called the inventor of composition, not by English writers only but also by foreign. England in Dunstable's day was undoubtedly the most musical country in the world.

England, too, produced the first secular composer—the first who had no official connection with the church—Thomas Campion, 1575-1619, whose works became popular all over Europe.

But with the last breath of Henry Purcell there passed away unfulfilled the greatest promise England has had since Elizabethian days of a national school of composition.

The invention in Rome and Florence in 1600 of the two greatest forms in which music is cast, Oratorio and opera, gave an immense impetus to Italianism in music, which no English composer after Purcell was strong enough to counterbalance. And this despite the fact that in England opera had an independent origin of its own—it was a development of the older out-door "masque."

Only three Italian operas of the eighteenth century, however, have survived: Pergolese's "La Serva Padrona"; Paisiello's opera of the same name, and Cimarosa's "La Matrimonio Sebreto." Against these we may place Shield's "Rosina," a work of genius, which kept the stage for fifty years; Arne's "Artaxerxes"; Dibdin's "Waterman" and "The Quaker" and Storaces' "No Song, No Supper," which were occasionally heard a hundred years after their original notes first broke the silence. English operagoers heard vastly in the eighteenth century more works by native composers than they do nowadays.

The piano invented in Italy in 1710 was perfected and first used at concerts in London eighty years later.

If Britain produced none of music's greatest prophets at this time, neither did she stone them. British composers have never occupied the servile position in some magnate's retinue usual on the continent, and which so galled Haydn. It was an Englishman, Samuel Wesley, who first recognized the stupendous genius of John Sebastian Bach, and declared it to the world. His own countrymen had no idea of it until thirty years afterwards, and eighty years after Bach's death Mendelssohn gave emphasis to Wesley's propaganda.

Whether it be in the near or distant future, it is not only possible but probable that the country which "invented the art of composition" laid the foundation of the instrumental school; has always been famous for its choral singing; and has the longest musical history of any European nation, will, once again, lead the world in the Divine art.

Although Washington's saloons all close tomorrow, the "wets" anticipate no difficulty in procuring a flood of "stimulant" in from nearby towns, notably Baltimore.

TRENCHES ARE RENTED.

Peculiar Item of Expense in the Fighting.

A brief summary of Australia's share in the war by the Hon. William Arthur Holman, Premier of New South Wales, who recently visited Canada, mentions two war loans of $200,000,000 each, or about $40 for each man, woman, and child in Australia.

The Australians bear the expenses of the transportation of their troops—they have furnished 350,000 men—and pay their soldiers $1.50 a day, perhaps the highest pay received by men of any country in the war. Australia cannot make and ship the munitions used by her troops, but she meets the cost of their manufacture. "And finally," says Mr. Holman, "we pay land rent to the British Government for the trenches in France and Belgium occupied by Australian troops. So we not only lose lives, but pay the bills for the foothold where the men fall." He goes on:

"This method of settling land rent is one of the most foolish practices of the war. The Belgian and French farmers and landowners, instead of going to their own governments and making claims which would be settled with the British Government, personally come to the British adjutants or other officers on the ground and begin to haggle about the trench rents and rent for other occupied territory. So we pay our share to the British Government.

"The Belgian and French peasants are sometimes grasping, and show themselves in their worst lights in any such arrangement. It is a poor business method, and ought to be regularly transacted between governments. I hope the American business instinct will put an end to it."

At first the idea of paying rent for trenches used to drive the Boches out of France and Belgium seems preposterous. And yet the peasant, his home destroyed and his property ruined, can hardly be blamed for seeking compensation, though the time and maner of his doing so may be the worst in the world. He should, of course, look to his government for just recompense.

And to whom will France and Belgium look for the final assessment of the damage done? How much rent ought Germany to pay for her occupancy of Belgium and northern France these three years gone?

First Maritime Regiment.

The first body of soldiers destined specially for service on board ships of war was organized in England in 1664, when by an order-in-Council a regiment of one thousand two hundred land soldiers, who were to be always held in readiness for distribution in his Majesty's fleets, was raised. This regiment was placed under the orders of the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral, and, under the name of the Admiral's Maritime Regiment, was considered as the 3rd Regiment of the Infantry of the Line. The uniform of the Admiral's Maritime Regiment consisted of a yellow coat lined with red, and its colors [illegible] emblazoned with a red cross with solar rays issuing from each of its angles. The raising of this regiment was due to the difficulty experienced in obtaining men enough to man the numerous fleets which England was compelled to commission during the long struggle with Holland in the latter half of the seventeenth century. The twelve hundred men were not sufficient; and four years after the creation of the force another order-in-Council was issued, authorizing the drafting of such numbers of soldiers from his Majesty's Foot Guards for service at sea during summer as the Lord High Admiral might require.

Pearls in Cocoanuts.

In 1911 the then Governor of Queensland, Sir William MacGregor, obtained from Sabai Island, Torres Strait, information on the subject of the diameter of space to which root cords spread out from the base of cocoanut-trees, and handed the report to the "Agricultural Journal" for publication. While discussing the root question, his Excellency stated that in Hawaii he had been handed a cocoanut for refreshment and that he found inside it a valuable pearl. He saw the cocoanut opened, and was quite sure the pearl was not dropped into it. He gave the pearl to a lady, who afterwards wore it at a court function in London. Singularly enough, says the Journal, we find in a book on "Tropical Agriculture, by H. A. Alford Nicholls, M.D., the following remarkable confirmation of the existence of pearls in cocoanuts. The author says, when describing the various parts of the nut, "Finally a very singular and highly-prized pearl is found, in very rare circumstances, in cocoanuts, and a specimen was added to the museum of the Royal Gardens at Kew in 1892."

Preparing a Terrible Surprise.

A company of British Tommies were awaiting the signal to attack, when a seasoned old sergeant happened to notice a young soldier fresh from home showing signs of being somewhat badly affected by the nerve-racking period of waiting for the coming fight. The lad's teeth were chattering, his face was pale, and his knees were knocking together. "Jinkinson," the sergeant whispered, "is it trembling ye are for your skin?" "No, no, sergeant!" came the reply, as the lad made a brave effort to control his shaking limbs. "I'm trembling for the Germans; they don't know I'm here!"

Highest Woman Official.

The highest woman officer in the British army is Mrs. A. M. Chalmers Watson, M. D., who has just been appointed chief controller of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, which has over 4,000 members on duty behind the lines in France. Mrs. Watson is a sister of Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty. She was the first woman physician graduated from Edinburgh University.

Chemically Rich Lakes.

There are several lakes in the United States which contain sodium carbonate, borax, potash, and common table salt. The longer the war continues the more valuable these chemical bodies become. Perhaps the best known of these is Great Salt Lake, Utah's ocean of salt. Others are Searles Lake, Owens Lake, and Mono Lake, all in California. The origin of these lakes is doubtful. In some cases they are probably due to an arm of the ocean becoming landlocked. The most remarkable feature about them is the fact that they seem to be continuously fed from subterranean sources, since they maintain a uniform amount of salt.—Popular Science Monthly.

Beards Now Fashionable.

This war may revive the beard and also the habit of wearing the hair long simply through a dearth of barbers; but in our last great war the beard became fashionable from another cause. Officers and men alike remained unshaven in the trenches before Sebastopol owing to the severe cold. When they returned to England many of them still retained their beards, which were so admired by the opposite sex that civilians abjured their razors and waited impatiently for the hair to grow on their faces which would make them resemble the heroes of the battlefield.—London Chronicle.

French Stamps Stolen.

The law prohibiting the importation into France of foreign postage stamps has now been extended to apply to the stamps of France itself. The reason for this is that some 3,000,000 unused French stamps have been stolen by the Germans from postoffices in the invaded part of France, and it is desired to destroy their value to their present holders.

CARDINAL GIBBONS URGES SUBMISSION TO THE LAW

Tells Soldiers in Training That They Owe Implicit Obedience to Those in Authority Over Them.

"Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's."

The Cardinal's address was a stirring appeal for loyal support and obedience to the Government in the present crisis. He concluded with a fervent prayer for an honorable, speedy and permanent peace.

During the address and prayer 25,000 enlisted men stood with bared heads.

"The paramount duty of American citizens in the present crisis," said the Cardinal, "is a hearty and loyal obedience to the constituted authorities. Be slow to criticise. Remember that you view the situation from one angle, your rulers contemplate it from various angles. They have lights and sources of information that are closed to you."

"Your judgment of the Administration and your criticism of their official acts should be always subordinated to a generous and whole-souled submission to their rulings. It is theirs to command as it is yours to obey.

"And in manifesting your loyalty to your country, you will be pursuing a sacred and honorable course and you will be following the invariable traditions of your fathers from the foundation of the republic.

"I thank God that we live in a country where liberty is granted without license and authority is exercised without despotism, where the Government holds over us the aegis of its protection without interfering with the God-given rights of conscience.

"The United States has succeeded in solving the difficult problem of reconciling legitimate authority with individual freedom. We have no union between church and state. But this does not imply any antagonism between the two powers. Church and state amicably move in parallel lines, helping each other in their respective fields of labor.

The Republic Will Endure.

"The question is often asked, 'Will the republic endure?' I have a firm and an abiding faith in the perpetuity of the nation. She has successfully weathered many a tumultuous tempest in the past, and with God's help she will triumphantly ride over the storms that now assail her.

"But if our country, with her glorious institutions, is to survive, her survival must rest on a stronger basis than on the genius of our statesmen, the wisdom of our laws and the patriotism of our people. If she is to endure she must stand on the eternal principles of truth and justice and righteousness. She must rest on a devout recognition of an overruling Providence who has created all things by His power, governs all things by His wisdom, whose guiding hand directs the affairs of nations and of men, without whom not even a bird can fall to the ground.

"Our hope for the future welfare of the country must rest on downright honesty in our dealings with other nations."

HOW TO GROW SEED FOR ROOTS

If you set aside a few choice roots at harvest time this autumn and then make up your mind to grow a supply of mangel, turnip and carrot seed, at least sufficient for your needs, you will save yourself a number of disappointments in 1919 and future years. All signs point to a serious root seed shortage, a shortage that can only be remedied by the growing of these seeds on the home farm. Select two dozen smooth well-shaped mangels, turnips or carrots of your own favorite variety. Put these carefully away in cellar or pit to await the coming spring. In April, when the soil is in condition to plow, bring the stock seed roots out of storage and set them in position that they may produce a seed crop.

In soil well prepared by plowing or cultivating, plow a deep furrow or dig holes sufficiently deep to plant the seed root, so that the crown will be the only part exposed at the level of the ground surface. Cultivate the soil about these plants as you would cultivate potatoes. The seed bearing stalks will appear very soon after the roots are set; these will continue to develop during the season and in July will blossom and set seed. The ripening process will continue through August and in September the seed will be ripened and ready to harvest. With mangels, beets or turnips when ripe the entire plant may be cut at base of the stalks; these may be threshed with the aid of a flail or a rubbing board or a threshing machine as soon as dry or the crop may be put away in a dry place to await a convenient time. After threshing, the seed may be cleaned with the ordinary sieves or fanning mill used for grain. With carrots the seed heads are gathered as they ripen and stored until ready to thresh and clean. Where small quantities of seed are grown the seeds may be threshed and freed from the stalks by simply rubbing the seed heads on a wire sieve of suitable size. With a sieve 24 x 30 inches, a large box and a stout pair of leather gloves a capable person can thresh and clean in a few hours more field root seeds than the average farm will require in two years.

The home grown seed will give you a better crop than anything you can buy, it will save you money, it will save you disappointment, one kind of turnip and but one kind of carrot. If you grow more than you require and aid in preventing the evils of a seed shortage in your district, you will then be performing a National Service.

Easily Arranged.

"But why are you so agitated and distressed? Surely you have been kissed before."

"Yes," replied the beautiful girl, with tears in her eyes, "but it was done by some member of my family."

"Oh, well, I'm quite willing to become a member of your family."

CRUELTY OF AUSTRIANS.

Soup From Human Bones Fed to Roumanian Prisoners.

A Roumanian soldier, Toma Haralam, taken prisoner by the Austrians last September during the Roumanian invasion of Transylvania, after success in escaping to the Italian lines on the Carso, pens the following story in all its simplicity and horror:—

"As soon as I was taken prisoner in a wood near Basso I was brought before a German officer, who examined me. I refused to answer his questions and betray my country, so he handed me over to an Austrian sergeant, who kicked me without mercy. I was left absolutely without any food, not a piece of bread or a drink of water, for three days, and then taken with many other prisoners to a concentration camp in Hungary on the river Laytha, where 20,000 prisoners of war, Russians, Italians, and Roumanians, were confined.

"We were literally starved. Our rations consisted of five ounces of bad bread and a handful of boiled beans daily, with a small piece of meat every week. The men died like flies, both from insufficient nourishment and from cold, as the Austrians took away our uniforms and warm underwear, as well as our boots, and gave us in exchange the castoff uniforms and torn boots of their first-line troops.

"We all had to work, generally in the fields, and as we ate the seed given us to sow or the raw turnips and potatoes we had to plant, often we were punished by being tied to a pole with our arms raised for hours or else chained to the ground. The Italian prisoners were treated worst of all and systematically beaten by the Austrians.

"Orders reached our camp in January that 1,000 Roumanian prisoners were to be sent to work on the Italian front. I was among the thousand picked men. We were all young and strong, comparatively speaking of course, as the starvation diet had weakened us. We were divided into four sections of 250 men each and sent to different localities. My section was sent to Komen under the command of an Austrian sub-lieutenant and thirty territorials. We worked at building a railway together with 2,000 Russian prisoners.

"Our food was worse and less than that we had in camp, as we got 4 cents a day pay and were supposed to spend it on food, although bread cost a dollar a loaf. As we were ravenously hungry because we had to work hard we were compelled to rummage among the garbage for food and even ate rats and mice.

"We also got bones, human bones they were sometimes, which we boiled to make soup. In twenty-five days sixty men out of the 250 men in my section died from hunger, exhaustion, and exposure. Five men committed suicide; three attempted to escape and were shot.

"On Jan. 23 my comrade, Uiku Cratia, and I decided to escape. Our flight was favored by an Austrian soldier, a native of Bukowina, who gave us a knife and a box of matches. We hoped to catch some animal, kill it, and cook it. We walked for three days in the direction of the Italian lines with nothing to eat, but we finally reached the ruins of a village, where we found a pigsty. We took shelter here and found some potato peelings and turnips, which we ate."

The narrator reached safety two days later, but his companion died.

ELECTORS WEST PETERBOROUGH

Robert Borden's principle of union; get together, discard all petty and selfish partyism and political ambition, and send to Parliament some man who will back up the government's policy to uphold the honor and glory of Canada as worthy of place on the written pages of future history.

Woman's Opportunity.

Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, President of the Equal Suffragist League, Toronto spoke directly to women. She is an eloquent and forceful speaker, and in part said:

Women are willing to work, strive and be patient in long suffering, and are doing their part in prosecuting the war. But a new responsibility has been thrust upon the women of this country, and they have one other act to do for a great patriotic purpose. There is still more to be done than knitting, quilting, canvassing for this, that and the other war end in order to win the war. And if we don't win what does it mean to the women of Canada? The atrocities, dishonor and degradation inflicted upon the women of Belgium and Flanders (the half of which is not made known publicly) are too well known for us women not to realize what we shall have to face if the war is lost and the Huns get into Canada, which has always been an objective of Germany, and always will be until we defeat her absolutely and bring her to her knees.

"I hold in my hands, Mrs. Hamilton went on to say, "a scrap of paper (the War Time Elections Act), which gives to half a million Canadian women their franchise by which they can exercise no mean influence upon the government of this country, and on winning the war. They will be called on to exercise that franchise, and I appeal to them to recognize that it gives them the responsibility of making our country safe or not. The future of this Canada of ours and of generations to come is in the hands of women, who have the chance of making or marring Canada everlasting. And this War Time Election Act is a privilege they must not neglect."

The only party worthy to stand, she declared, is the Win-the-War party, which is the Union Government. The great tragedy of the party system lies in the fact that it is a fixed thing which does not allow of the changes called for by the evolution of conditions. With this Union Government we shall have co-operatin of interests instead of finding fault and controversy, to say nothing of "bad names." The women of Canada want the Union Government returned to power so that each one shall do his and her share in the stupendous struggle in which we are engaged.

States Womanship.

A new order of things has been created for women, continued the speaker. They are to come out into the realm of Stateswomanship and uphold those principles of equality for which unionism stands. Woman must exercise her franchise and vote. Why be afraid to vote like men when there are so many Hun horrors to be afraid of? She urged women to organize election machinery, line up behind the Union Government and vote in support of their men at the front. They should inform themselves on matters politic and not be influenced by partizan workers seeking to take advantage of their ignorance. Women should read the newspapers and form independent conclusions for themselves.

War Not Yet Won.

The war is yet a long way from being won. Mrs. Hamilton opined, we have conscription, the only fair way of utilizing Canada's manhood, and women must see that all Canada's resources are conscripted in aid of the boys at the front, to successfully prosecute the war and to discount the operations of German secret service agents yet in the country.

She closed with an eloquent peraration, in which she called on women to look up to the thought of winning the war, and never let that thought be absent from their minds.

Sir John A.'s Policy.

Col. McCullough of Hamilton gave a brilliant and earnest address, qualifying his earnest conviction that the Win-the-War non-party policy would make for a return of the Union Administration. He characterized Hon. N. W. Rowell, president of the Union Government's Council as a striking sign of the growth and development of a Union spirit in the country, which after all, he declared, is only a recurrence of the late Sir John A. McDonald's policy of Union when confederation was consummated. He wished to God that the leaders of all parties would get together in the same spirit as did Sir John A., George Brown and others at the time of confederation.

A Grave Danger.

Continuing, he saw a grave danger today to civilization, freedom and the Empire in Canada refusing to send reinforcements overseas in support of our expeditionary forces at the front. This is why he pleaded for support of the new Union Government, which was pledged to overcome that menace, and to make possible the return of men of the first contingent on a well-earned, but long-delayed leave. Men composing the Union Government he eulogized as representative of the best interests in Canada, and it is the duty of all to support them and assure the successful carrying out of their win-the-war policy.

Can't Buy Women's Votes.

The Colonel heartily agreed with Mrs. Hamilton's views regarding women and contended that they could make no better first use of the ballot than by voting for conscription in aid of the men overseas. He was sure that women's vote could never be taken advantage of by unscrupulous partizans, for one cannot buy a woman's vote any more than one can buy a woman's soul, for woman is going to vote for a child she bore long ago, now either fighting the enemy or lying cold beneath the soil in a foreign land.

Unity of Elements.

"I am here," said Colonel McCullough," to encourage the idea of unity of the best elements of all parties, by getting together and avoiding a contest of political strife in your community. You should not fight amongst yourselves in the face of such a foe as was never seen before. Are we going to call one another names and wrangle while the women unite in a common cause? Our League wants all people to feel that we do not arrogate to ourselves a little which should these days be common to all—'Win the War.' It is the earnest desire of the Prime Minister and the Union Government that each community shall send to the support of the Government a man, the choice of Liberals, Conservatives, Labor men and Independents alike, in the best interests of that community. I don't believe it is the wish of Sir Robert Borden, his Government or the Council to impose anything upon a community which is contrary to its welfare. And it is the dearest wish of my heart to see all work together in a spirit of unity, strong in might and determination to hold firm our sacred confederation, and stay in the war a people united to carry on the struggle to a successful and triumphant conclusion. Therefore, let us all stick together, bury party differences, and send down to Ottawa in support of Sir Robert Borden he who represents the best thought of the community, whoever he may be, to give the Premier that active support he now needs."

Policy Accepted.

On motion of Mr. J. A. Aylmer the meeting unanimously accepted the Win-the-War policy.

No Matter Who the Man!

Mr. Jas. Kendry here said he had great pleasure in moving a hearty vote of thanks to the lady and two gentlemen who had delivered such eloquent and forceful addresses on a subject of interest to all. He was prepared to support a Union man, let him be Liberal or Conservative.

Mr. J. W. Worth seconded this resolution, which carried without opposition.

The meeting closed with singing the National Anthem.

BILLY SUNDAY LED THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES IN PRAYER

President Wilson proclaimed last Sunday as a day of fasting and prayer in the United States. Billy Sunday, the well-known evangelist, led the entire nation in supplication for victory. He prepared the special form of petition, which was repeated everywhere. It was as follows:

"Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, we pray Thee that the war may continue until Prussian militarism is swept off the face of the earth, until the snake of autocracy is crushed forever, until democracy is unshackled, until justice has a fair show, until the virtue of woman is sure of protection, until little children no longer go hungry, until the kaiser and his cohorts have unpacked their trunks on St. Helena's barren rocks.

And in the meantime give each one of us the fighting spirit that led the crusaders to victory. If we do not fight with our hands in the trenches, help us to fight with sacrificing hearts at home.

Thou knowest, Lord, we have not entered this bloody war because of avarice or greed and we do not covet Germany's gold or land. We have drawn the sword to defend our country against the most infamous, bloodthirsty horde of human harpies that ever disgraced the earth. They respect neither law nor religion; nothing is sacred if it stands in their path.

"Lord bless the President; give wisdom; bless all the councils of state and war. Keep us a united nation in fact and spirit. Bless the army and navy.

Many of our brave boys already sleep somewhere in France or beneath the sea. Bring victory to our cause because we know it is Your cause. We have joined hands and hopes and hearts with our noble allies that this world may be a safe place in which to live.

Thou knowest, Lord, that the tidal wave of sneering unbelief that has blighted the faith of millions and denied that Jesus is Thine only begotten son, came from the beer mugs of that pretzel crowd across the sea. All this, together with the deluge of blood, is enough to make Hell laugh and Heaven weep.

Lord, Thou hast never forsaken our flag. It waves without a stain. May it lead every step of the way until the iron cross is sunk fathoms in Hell and the world rests once more bathed in the radiance of the Cross of Christ.

All this we ask in the name of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Saviour. Amen."

DON'T KISS ANYBODY

Medical Advice to People With Colds.

1. Keep away from places where people congregate.

2. Do not use the same drinking cup as other people—you shouldn't do so at any time.

3. Do not kiss people, and shun too close contact with them.

4. Destroy your mouth and nose secretions by boiling or by fire.

5. If you have fever or aches go to bed and stay there until you feel better.

6. Always remember that you have no more right to give anyone else a cold than you have to give them diphtheria or smallpox, and that you are very foolish to "take a cold" from anybody else if you can help it.

GADSBY'S LETTER

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—The five hundred thousand women enfranchised under the War Time Election Act are no doubt taking a great interest in the Flavelle investigation now in progress in Toronto. In spite of a corps of highly paid lawyers and a Royal Commission whose object is to paint the lily and gild refined gold, Sir Joseph is being more and more discovered by his fellow citizens.

The evidence will bite despite the efforts of the best counsel to draw its teeth. Perhaps this is due to the presence of Mr. Gordon Waldron, a good Liberal, a lover of the people, and the legal representative at this trial of "Saturday Night," the one Toronto paper that was fearless enough to come to grips with a big advertiser like Sir Joseph Flavelle.

Of course the evidence would be more revealing if the Royal Commission included one expert cost accountant instead of two auditors, with Flavelle affiliations in Big Business which they must take care of. These two auditors do not go behind the figures presented to them by Sir Joseph's crack mathmetician, General Manager Fox.

Naturally, Mr. Fox does not make out a bad case for his employer, and just as naturally two auditors looking for future commissions, do not disagree with him. They say, "These figures check, therefore they must be all right." An expert cost accountant on the other hand would say, "Figures cannot lie, but some liars can figure. How do you make up this item? Then he would enter into a searching analysis of the cost elements.

However, murder is coming out in spite of handicaps, and the five hundred thousand women who have been given the vote by the Borden Government would do well to keep a sharp eye on the evidence from day to day and see what it means. It is not too much to say that of the five hundred thousand soldiers' women folk who have been enfranchised, four hundred thousand belong to the working class which feels the high cost of living most acutely. They are on short commons most of the time and very little would push them over the dead-line into actual starvation Their separation allowances have not been able to keep pace, with the price of Sir Joseph Flavelle's bacon

Sir Joseph is more responsible than any other man in Canada for the high cost of living. It is his calculating brain that has built up the pork trust and perfected the system by which the fourteen cent. hog became the fifty-seven cent. bacon. The high cost of butter, eggs, and other staple products can also be traced to his pernicious activities. Sir Joseph is not only the guide,philosopher and friend of the Borden Government, but he is said to own Finance Minister White, who runs chores for him. Sir Joseph has such a hold on the Borden Government, that he hasn't even offered to resign from the chairmanship of the Munitions Board while he is being investigated. Sam Hughes did it, and Bob Rogers did it, but the pious Sir Joseph, who deplore's everybody's profits but his own, refuses to do it.

He makes the excuse that he doesn't do it because his is an imperial appointment, but the general opinion is that if the man had any delicacy he wouldn't let a little thing like that stand in his way. The fact seems to be that Sir Joseph has associated with hogs so long that he caught some of their manners. Anybody but Sir Joseph would have taken it as a hint to quit his chairmanship of the Imperial Munitions Board, when the British Government stopped buying his bacon, but his hide is thick and he didn't feel it.

So far as Big Business goes Sir Joseph has long been known as one who had all his feet in the trough at once, but since the war started he has done even better. Rumor has it that his beef stew contract will net him thirty million dollars and that, what with other enterprises, shells, fuses, munitions, carried on under various aliases, he will be in the Rockefeller class when the war is over.

Unluckily all the Royal Commission is authorized to do is to look into his bacon. All his other grafts escape inspection. A Royal Commission that would thoroughly investigate Sir Joseph Flavelle would need to investigate every spot where a dollar shows its head in Canada, not to mention choice spots in the United States and England. A Royal Commission with these plenary powers would also find him and his Toronto group of looters up to the neck in the C. N. R. deal, by which they hope to fleece this country of $135,000,000—$75,000,000 for the bonds they bought up in England, and $60,000,000 for the watered stock. They would also find Sir Clifford Sifton somewhere in ambush. This is why Sir Clifford is so anxious to continue the Borden-Flavelle Government in office. Where the treasure is there shall the heart be also. One hundred and thirty-five million dollars is worth gambling for. You see now why Flavelle and the other big fellows are all playing the same game. As long as there are so many dollars in sight the Borden Government can't lose Sir Joseph. What he gave to the campaign fund in 1911—rumor says it was a cool million—he wants back a hundred fold.

The Borden Government has given five hundred thousand more or less poor women the vote. They asked for cheaper food and they got the vote instead. The Borden Government said, "Here are your pretty little votes. Use them to keep Sir Joseph and us in power and you'll feel better."

This is the old story of the bread and the stone over again. You can't eat votes. They won't keep the children from starving. Food Controller Hanna issues an inspiring manifesto ever and anon, but soft as his words are they don't fill an empty stomach. Votes from the Borden Government and kind words from Mr. Hanna—these are pretty thin diet. It will be interesting to see how many of the five hundred thousand women vote for Borden and fifty-seven cent bacon.

Meanwhile housewives all over the country who have been trying to make a dollar do fifty cents' work will be interested to learn that Sir Joseph Flavelle's company made two million dollars this year on the bacon it sold to England. As the William Davies Company, it made a million on the bacon on this side of the ocean, and as Sheed-Thompson & Co.—another disguise of Sir Joseph—it made a million on the other side of the ocean.

This is what you might call working both ends for the middle. The process of collecting twice for the same article is very simple according to Sir Joseph. As the William Davies Company he puts on a profit on this side of the water and then sells to himself as Sheed-Thompson & Co. on the other side of the water, which company puts on another profit, adds a commission and hands the bacon over to the British Government. It is well that the bacon has only one ocean to cross. Apparently the number of profits increase in geometrical progression. That is to say, if one ocean means two profits, four would mean sixteen.

This probably explains how the Davies Company made two hundred and fifty per cent. profit during one year of the Boer war. The bacon had a number of oceans to cross and doubtless Sir Joseph, in some disguise or other, was waiting at all the strategic spots where another profit might be expected to happen.

THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS WHEN THE BASEBALL WRITERS SPOKE OUT

They Told the Plain Truth and Then Some About the Various Players.

What a difference in baseball writing now and 30 years ago! Nowadays the players are gently kidded. Thirty years ago they were pounded from pillar to post by the zealous scribes. They say the athletes 30 years ago were a rough and wild-eyed set. Perhaps they were. If they were not they surely had enough newspaper provocation to make them wild. Here are sundry extracts—names altered out of respect for the glorious dead:

"Why does the Cincinnati club persist in standing by the listless and dissipated Leon Geux. Surely, his ridiculous attempts at pitching, coupled with his attempt to consume all the beer north of the Rhine, should by this time have been dealt with as they deserve."

"Frog Jamsay, our great left-hander, has invented a new drink, which he consumes with enormous gusto both before and after every game. It is composed of equal parts of beer and whiskey, and Frog's capacity seems to be simply unlimited."

"Chaymes, the famous college pitcher, was either helplessly intoxicated or else threw the game. After the fourth inning he was replaced by Honsky Skitt, who is at least sober and honest, and Honsky stopped the run getting."

"A disgraceful row took place in Paddy Whack's infamous saloon last night, involving several members of the Brooklyn and Cincinnati clubs. Con Kayley, the Brooklyn catcher, was attacked by Eddie Ginspeed, another catcher of the same club, and seizing Ginspeed by the ankles, threw him to the floor with such force that the unfortunate player's neck was almost broken. Ten minutes later Whacko Gilligan of the Reds assaulted little Bub Clicker of Brooklyn, and striking him a cowardly blow while his back was turned, laid him unconscious on the floor. Whacko then attacked Elledon Champerdon, one of the pitchers of his own team, but Champerdon smashed him on the head with a beer mallet and Whacko will be out of the game for several days."

"Eddie Skirk and Jack Molle, two of the fastest players of the New York club, settled old grievances last night in front of the Acme saloon. Both were raving drunk at the time. Skirk was fearfully beaten and was taken to the Irish hospital."

"What is the matter with Rick Booley? The answer is: Booley will not do. Why retain this disorganizer on the club?"

"The Chicago team was hopelessly handicapped during the past season by the presence of the notorious pipe-fiend and lusher, Jack Conton, on the club."

"There is one man on the club who has a heart, and a generous heart—George Van Goggin. As to Captain Jautzen and the rest of his men, their souls would rattle round inside a mustard seed like a peanut in a wash boiler."

And there are plenty more such clippings in the scrap-book.

"PUG" HISTORY.

1904.—Stanley Ketchel knocked out Jimmy Kelly in the first round at Miles City, Mont. This was the bout in which the future middleweight champion made his professional debut.

1909—Lew Powell defeated Johnny Frayne in eight rounds at San Francisco.

THE OLD COUNTRY.

With few exceptions, the games in all the sections of the English Football League on Saturday were closely contested. In the London Combination, particularly, this was noted, as in five games played only nine goals were scored. The positions of the teams in this section remain unchanged.

In the Midland section, Birmingham has the honor of being the first team to score against the hitherto invincible Sheffield United. Up to Saturday, the latter had not had a score against it this season, and has still to be beaten. Lincoln sprang something of a surprise when it defeated Notts Forest by the only goal scored, while Hull trimmed Bradford City to the tune of 5 goals to 0.

Stoke, which heads the Lancashire section, is the only team in this or any other division that has not lost a point this season and has won every game played. Its nearest opponent, Liverpool, has not yet lost a game, but has drawn three. Preston succumbed to the lowly Southport team after a hard game, the final score reading 1-0.

With several of the Scottish teams otherwise engaged, a complete schedule of league games was not played, consequently several of the clubs who were playing took a big jump in the league table, notably Clydebank and Hearts. Celtic easily disposed of Queen's Park, 3-0 being the final tally, while Patrick Thistle, which is showing great form just now, beat Hamilton Academicals by five goals to nil. Kilmarnock holds its position at the head of the table.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

One life was lost and twenty were injured when a special train backed over the bumper posts at Camp Upton, L.I.

Nearly fifteen hundred drafted men in New York City are classed as deserters and a $50 reward offered for their apprehension.

Mrs. John J. O'Brien, mayoress of Moorhaven, Fla., yesterday fined herself ten dollars for allowing one of her horses to stray.

Fright killed one woman at Baltimore during an electrical storm Sunday. Over a score of narrow escapes were reported.

Governor John G. Townsend of Delaware was slightly injured in an automobile collision at Wilmington. His wife, who was with him, died of shock.

Sir Charles Was a Dreamer

A LADY in Toronto who knew Sir Charles Tupper well tells how deeply interested he was in dreams and apparitions, in all the absorbing questions of psychical research. Once in crossing the Atlantic with him she and a friend received a nervous shock one evening, when Sir Charles came into the cabin where they were seated and told them that he had seen a strange face at the porthole. Unlike John Greenleaf Whittier, who longed to see some dear ghost walk in and sit down beside him, when he was alone, they had no hankering after such an experience. Although Sir Charles' bitterest political opponents claimed that, when he was playing the fascinating game of politics, he was of imagination all compact, and could give to airy nothing a local habitation and a name, very few suspected that he was a sympathetic student of the engrossing questions which were being investigated in a scientific way by societies of psychical research.

After completing his medical studies in Scotland Dr. Tupper and a friend made an excursion into England before returning to Canada. In passing a gipsy encampment they decided to have their fortunes told. As the gipsy girl looked into the hand of the young Canadian doctor she told him that he had come from a long way across the waters. She then proceeded to read his past life as if from a book; but she could not tell him much about the future.

The impression which this fortune-telling gipsy made upon him is one of the first hints which we get in the life of Sir Charles that he was susceptible to anything of this kind. If she could have told the future as easily as she read the past what an improbable story of marvellous achievements in the consolidation and development of a great country he would have heard that day, for as Sir Wilfrid Laurier testified long afterwards there was no one who gave more of his heart and soul to the work of Confederation than Dr. Tupper.

One of the remarkable dreams which Sir Charles could never forget came to him when crossing to Britain a good many years after the incident at the gipsy encampment. He deramed that a Halifax lady came to him and told him that his wife was dangerously ill. "The dream was so real," he says, "that I wrote it down with the date. When I reached Liverpool I wrote to my wife telling her the dream and the date, and saying I was ashamed of being so disturbed by a dream, as she had never had any serious illness, but that I should feel uneasy till I heard from her. She wrote to me the same day from Halifax, and our letters crossed in mid-ocean, telling me that on the night in question she had taken dangerously ill and that the lady who appeared to me in my dream had stayed with her all night."

At another time much later in life Sir Charles went to Paris, leaving Lady Tupper in England. He dreamed one night that she was very ill. So sure was he that there was something in his dream that he returned to England the next day and found that his fears were too well-grounded.

Another of Sir Charles' dreams which he often referred to relates to the unveiling of Nicholas Flood Davin's monument at Ottawa, July 1st, 1903. "I dreamed the night before that when I unveiled Mr. Davin's statue he was a black man who put out his hand to shake hands with me, and that I fell down in a fit." When Sir Charles unveiled the statue he was so surprised to find that it was bronze instead of white marble that he forgot a quotation from Bulwer Lytton which he intended to make. His dream of the night before must have flashed through his mind and led him to fear that the bronze statue might make an effort to shake hands with him. It must have been a great shock which led Sir Charles to forget anything, for he had a marvellously retentive memory. When he was 84 years old he and his granddaughter began the study of Italian together at Rome, and in an almost incredibly short period of time he spoke the language well enough to respond in that tongue to the Pope when his Holiness blessed him. The Pope blessed Sir Charles, and, as is the case of old Father Taylor, the sailor preacher of Boston, no doubt Sir Charles blessed the Pope.

Sir Charles inherited his susceptibility to such things from his distinguished father, Rev. Charles Tupper, who lived so near to the border land of the better life that he could see many things that were hidden from grosser natures.

Many think that dreams are entirely fanciful, and meaningless, inspired more by the dinner eaten, or the nervous excitement of the waking hours, than by anything psychical or spiritual. Instead of saying that we are such stuff as dreams are made of, they think that it is wiser to say that dreams are such stuff as we are made of. Many dreams are no doubt of this kind, and are not worthy of any serious thought; but since the grey dawn of history wise people in every land, like Joseph amongst the Hebrews, and Pilate's wife amongst the Romans, and John Wesley amongst the English, and Robert Louis Stevenson amongst the Scotch, and Sir Charles Tupper amongst the Canadians, have believed that some dreams are not all a dream, that some have a message in them for us which comes to us in some way which we may not fully understand, but which we cannot altogether disregard.

Joffre Used German Formula.

The Kaiser's general staff had in mind the old formula. Act. 1, lightning mobilization; Act 11, lightning concentration and the preliminary blow for the enemy's wind; Act III, and climax, the famous flanking pinchers around the enemy and his capture and destruction; all this was carried out by the time table. That this was the scheme was shown by the simple fact that the delay of a few days brought frustration. Belgium had not been foreseen. The Russians were in East Prussia sooner than expected.

Now the wonderful and dramatic thing is that in this war for which Germany had prepared and which, in spite of a certain hitch in the schedule, was still a short war fought on the Prussian model, Germany was defeated. She was beaten, in the last result by her own methods. It is beside the purpose to enter into the subtle argument as to whether Manoury's flank attack on the Ourcq would have succeeded if Foch had not held firm in the center, or whether Foch could have driven through the Prussian Guard if Manoury had given way. The fact remains that the battle of the Marne began with a threat against the German right flank, a manoeuvre for which Joffre had made his try earlier in the course of the retreat from Belgium; and the battle thus begun ended in victory. To be beaten after six weks of war in an encircling battle was for Germany to be defeated with her own weapons. Joffre sprung no surprises on the enemy comparable to the heavy howitzers with which Germany began her rush. His was the old-fashioned surprise of bringing up an army in an unexpected quarter. The battle of the Marne was an old-style battle; of decisive battles probably the last in the classic mode. Heroism, genius, good luck may have entered into the result. The astonishing fact remains that in a contest fought on established strategic principles, of which superior preparation was supposed to be the essence, the less prepared antagonist won.—Yale Review.

A Necessary Evil.

The artful boy applied for a job

"Do you want a boy?" he asked of the manager of the offices, standing before him, cap in hand.

"Nobody wants a boy," replied the manager with unpleasant emphasis on the "wants."

"Do you need a boy?" asked the applicant, nowise abashed.

"Nobody needs a boy," came the discouraging reply.

The boy stuck his cap on the back of his head.

"Well, then, mister," he inquired, "do you have to have a boy?"

The manager collapsed.

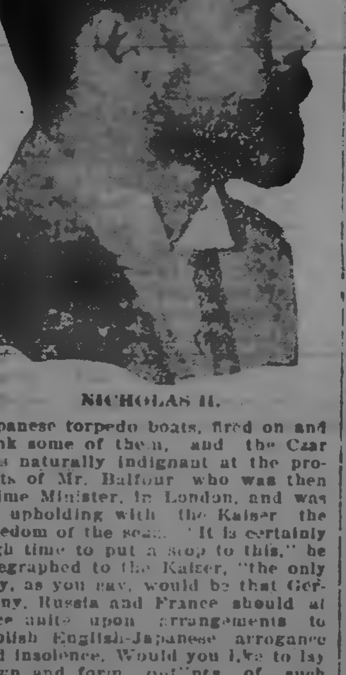
"I am sorry to say that we do," he replied, "and I think you're about what we have to have."—New York Times.

"Willy" and "Nicky" Wanted To Attack Great Britain And Smash Great Empire

FROM the moment that Frederick the Great signed that remarkable will, in which he disposed of the Kingdom of Prussia as if it had been one of his horses, no more remarkable transaction surely has been recorded than that between his descendant, the Kaiser, and the Czar of all the Russias for the "belgiuming," if we may be allowed to coin the word, of Denmark and the destruction of the British Empire as a great power. The world has been staggered by the remarkable telegrams, which have just been unearthed amongst the Czar's papers, and which afford evidence of the plans discussed and agreed upon by "Nicky" and "Willy" for fomenting trouble in the year 1905.

The Triple Alliance of that day was planned to attack the British Empire. The jumping-off ground was, for naval reasons, to have been Denmark; and the powers engaged, if only everything had worked for the best, were to have been Germany, Russia, and France. France, it is true, was not eventually asked, but the French Republic was to have been dragged into the war, attached to the tail of the Russian comet.

On October 29th, 1904, the Russian Admiral, taking an English fishing fleet off the Dogger Bank for



NICHOLAS II.

Japanese torpedo boats, fired on and sunk some of them, and the Czar was naturally indignant at the protests of Mr. Balfour who was then Prime Minister, in London, and was for upholding with the Kaiser the freedom of the seas. "It is certainly high time to put a stop to this," he telegraphed to the Kaiser, "the only way, as you say, would be that Germany, Russia and France should at once unite upon arrangements to abolish English-Japanese arrogance and insolence. Would you like to lay down and form outlines of such treaty? As soon as accepted by us France is bound to join her ally."

It need hardly be said that the Kaiser was delighted with the commission, and a draft-treaty was duly forwarded to the Czar, who was so sufficiently overcome by the loyal friendship which he trusted beyond everything, as to indicate to the Kaiser that he had changed his mind about showing the treaty to France. To which the Kaiser immediately replied, "You have given me new proof of your perfect loyalty by decision not to inform France without my agreement. It is my firm conviction that it would be absolutely dangerous to inform France of treaty."

The immediate result of these negotiations was an agreement between the Kaiser and the Czar to declare the Baltic a closed sea. But finding that Denmark, which was vitally interested in this proposal, was as disinclined to be a party to it as Belgium proved disinclined to permit the German armies to cross its territory in 1914 to attack France, the decision was taken to treat Denmark as Belgium was subsequently treated. The morality of the whole proceeding stands in its naked barbarity, and it is the most perfect commentary, written in advance, on the subsequent fate of Belgium.

In the end France was never told at all. Monsieur Delcasse proved so outrageously "Anglophile enrage" that he actually made an agreement with the United Kingdom at a moment when that country and Germany were at loggerheads, and when Willy was "doing his best" for Nicky, France's own ally. "This is an experiment," Willy telegraphed, in consequence of this, to the Czar on the 29th of September, 1905, "which she must not repeat, and against repetition of which I must expect you to guard me." And again, "Our treaty is a very good base to build upon. We joined hands and signed before God, who heard our vows. I, therefore, think the treaty can well come into existence. What is signed is signed. God is our testator."

This then is the testament of Willy and Nicky, the great twin brothers of the world's autocracy. And Nicky is a prisoner in his own Siberia, whilst the Allies are talking of the elimination of Willy.

German Airmen Improve.

Impartially speaking, the entente aviators on the western front were beyond doubt in control of the air during the numerous battles on the Somme; but it appears to be equally evident that this marked superiority no longer exists. The German air service has greatly improved.

Has No Skeleton.

The sturgeon has no skeleton; it has bony tubercles fixed in the skin along the back and sides. If these are boiled with a little soda it will be seen that they are beautifully ornamented, somewhat resembling very fine Chinese carving.

Footwear.

Footwear has resolved itself into low black patent slippers with steel buckles. With these are worn neutral gray or black silk stockings. Drop stitch stockings also are worn but it takes a remarkably well turned ankle to look well in them.

The long, slender, slipper-like pump seems to be the accepted shoe to wear with the new dresses, which come nearly or to the ankle. Just enough stocking is revealed to show that it matches the low shoe, is the gown's color or contrasts prettily in a dull, quiet shade of steel gray silk. While the majority seen worn by smart women seem to be pumps of black patent leather with cut steel buckles, there are many other individual styles for the woman whose dress or suit is of a color that does not look well contrasted with black.

Newest Fall Hats

There are no between season hats. One does not trim one's spring sailor with a bunch of bittersweet berries or a scarlet ribbon, as was the custom of the nineties when autumn came around. A new hat it must be, of a sort that could face February gales unabashed and shine at the Labor day festivity.

In the four shapes which share favor for early autumn exploitation—namely, sailors, mushrooms, tams and turbans—analysis will reveal military influences in some form or other. Sometimes there is found the high, indented crown. Again, the military note is sounded by a visor, and there are dozens of picturesque adaptations of soldierly headgear made of velvet, of silk, of ribbon, of leather and of feathers. Pasted coq is a favored feather trimming, the tiny, downy feather sprays applied like small flowers all over a hat crown reminding one of little Easter chicks.

It is almost impossible to resist the impulse to stroke these hat crowns and find out if they are as soft as they look. Most of the new hats have very high crowns—high, that is, in proportion to the brim.

These tall crowns are dignified rather than dashing, and the new headgear sith straight instead of aslant or askew on the head, another element of dignity. Very often the dash of a millinery model is due entirely to the sweep of a brim. Were the same brim an inch narrower at one side or its slope a very little more moderate the hat would be quite ordinary and unworthy of note. There is a great deal of art in the placing of a hat brim, its "movement" and its size in proportion to the crown it accompanies.

It is quite surprising how many of the new French hats are of felt, and chamois colored felt is a particular favorite. A smart little turban, tremendously high of crown and with a tiny, upturned brim, is of chamois felt. A rich curled ostrich feather in navy blue is held against the front of the hat by a twisted blue and tan cord.

Some of these felt turbans are lovely in coloring. Besides chamois one notes olive drab, puritan gray and rust gold. Very often the trimming is merely a band of grosgrain ribbon with a tailored bow. There is infinite art in the making of these French tailored bows, rosettes and cockades.

"PIGS IS PIGS."

And West End Women Regard Them All as Liars.

Two West End women aired their troubles in the police court this morning. The dispute arose over their boys throwing stones, resulting in a wordy war during which one is alleged to have said to the other, "You are an Irish pig and Jimmy as big a liar as his mother." This, it was alleged, brought the reply, "All the English pigs are liars," and one woman laid a charge of using insulting language against the other.

His worship lectured the defendant and dismissed the case without costs.

AT THE THEATRE

Miss May A. Bell Marks' offering at the Grand Opera House last night was that old favorite "The White Slave Trader," a story of modern life with an interesting plot and a satisfactory climax. The company with Miss Marks this year is the best she has ever brought to Peterborough and the house is filled to capacity at evey performance.

Miss Marks will be at the Grand for the rest of the week, giving the usual matinees. The bill for tonight is "Lena Rivers," a play which when put on by Miss Marks never fails to fill the house.

One Thousand Are Reported Drowned

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oc. 31.—One thousand British Indian natives are believed to have been drowned at Durban Natal, according to a Central News despatch from Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, today.

Fifteen hundred cattle cars have been requisitioned and rushed to New Mexico to bring the cattle that are dying of drought there to more favored grounds.

It Seems a Pity to Let These Babies Starve!

TRUE, this is another Belgian appeal, and you are a little tired of Belgium's trouble. But, remember, while it is your problem how to plan variety in three meals a day, most of the Belgian population is standing in line hours every day for a bowl of soup and a slice of bread!

No child can thrive on this ration. Tens of thousands of Belgian children (under 12) are becoming victims of tuberculosis, rickets and other ailments due to the pitifully inadequate food.

The Belgian Children's Health Fund enables the Dutch authorities to take some of the starving little ones to Holland for care and treatment for six weeks. Then what? They must go back to Belgium to make way for other of the 18,000 odd in the waiting list. More could be done if you will listen to the appeal of these babies.

The Belgian Orphan's Fund takes care of fatherless, motherless, friendless waifs. Think how they lost their fathers. $[illegible].70 of your money feeds, clothes and educates an orphan for a whole month. Can you hear the call?

Whatever you contribute goes entire to the Dutch authorities, through the Belgian Minister of the Interior (at Le Havre, France). Not a penny is deducted for administrative expenses, even for this advertising. It is absolutely guaranteed, too, that the Germans receive no benefit whatsoever.

When you are planning your own comfort and luxuries, think of these little tots!

EVERY DEPARTMENT OF S.S. WORKERS HAD BUSY DAY

Prof. Excell Arranges for Men's Chorus to Sing at the Entertainments in the Evenings While Convention Lasts.

Prof. E. O. Excell of Chicago, the world's famous convention music leader, opened yesterday afternoon's session of the Sunday Schools Convention with an inspiring song service. The book used is "The New Praiseworthy" song book for Church and Sunday Schools. The convention keynote was given by Rev. T. Anson Halpenny of Bell St. Methodist Church, Ottawa, the subject "Deep Calling, Unto Deep." The speaker very clearly showed that the need of the hour was a deepening in spiritual life, and showed that it is character that counts; that shallowness and shadows were of no avail, but a strong Christian character to influence the boy life and girl life of Canada.

Splendid Progress.

Here followed a report from the General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, Rev. E. W. Halpenny, in which he clearly pointed out that the work of the Association made splendid progress during the past year. In the Elementary Division 55 fresh county and city reports were received for this year, indicating that 33 out of 55 reporting had attended their annual county or city convention. One city and three counties have attained "front line" standard. 15 counties report over 75 per cent of their schools having Cradle Rolls. 13 township organizations report 100 per cent Cradle Rolls. The total number of Cradle Rolls in Ontario is 2433 with an enrollment of 65,660.

Secondary Division.

In the Secondary Division, Boys' and Girls' Conferences have been held in several of the large cities in the Province of Ontario, with approximately 4000 in attendance reaching 250 to 300 places. The enrollment of Registered classes is rapidly on the increase. The "Canadian Standard Efficiency Tests for Boys" and "Canadian Girls in Training" are gaining ground, and are being used by many Sunday School classes throughout the Province of Ontario. These programmes of work will assist very largely in building up a fine type of boy life and girls life in this Province.

It is gratifying to notice the registration of the adult classes from both rural and city Sunday Schools, and it is very evident that the Adult Division is becoming recognized as a mighty force in community and church life. The second bi-annual Adult Conference was held in Hamilton last February. There were 482 registered delegates from 43 cities and counties.

Very satisfactory results were reached in the following departments, Teacher Training, superintended by Mr. H. W. Brown; the Missionary Department by Miss. V. M. Thomas, and the Temperance Department by Miss Alice D. Adam.

During the year the field force attended 74 County conventions, 140 Township conventions, 62 special meetings, in all reaching 234 places, and attending over 700 sessions, giving over 627 addresses. Besides there were 161 conferences conducted, 52 Sunday pulpits supplied, 265 committee meetings held, and a mileage reached of over 30,000, a record of which any organization may justly be proud, and compares very favorably with previous years.

Three very important departmental conferences were held, each commencing at 3.15, the Elementary Division in Murray St. Baptist Church, with Mrs. J. J. Eaton of Toronto presiding; the Secondary Division in Bethany Tabernacle, at which addresses were given by R. A. Waite and D. H. Wing; also the Adult Division in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church where Mr. J. C. Coveney of Toronto presided, and addresses given by Revs. Dyer and Halpenny, on Home Department work and Parents' classes.

At the close of the afternoon session, Prof. Excell arranged for a men's chorus that will participate in the evenings throughout the convention.

Evening Sessions.

In St. Paul's Presbyterian Church a session for women only was held. Miss Florence Maddock presiding. Miss Mabel Taggart gave an excellent address on "A message from the Times," and Mrs. Bryner spoke helpful words to mothers and daughters.

A meeting for men only was conducted in George St. Church, when Rev. F. A. Halpenny delivered a forceful address on "The Type of Manhood Needed Today." Prof. Excell gave his conception of "How to Make God's Praise Glorious," and keen intreest was evident in a talk by R. A. Waite.

The Auto's Lure Ruin of Manv

At yesterday's session of the Supreme Court of Ontario, held in the council chamber afternoon and evening, Judge Latchford sentenced Leo. Phelan to 21 months in the Central Prison with hard labor for indecently assaulting Katherine O'Neill last summer.

The offence took place in a swamp near Downer's Corners last August, when prisoner took the girl, who is about 18 years of age, for an auto drive, and forced her to his wishes. Complainant was waitress in a Peterborough restaurant at the time.

Judge Latchford, in passing sentence, characterised prisoner's offence as brutal in the extreme, and declared his intention of imposing a severe punishment—21 months with hard labor—prisoner's detention of 3 months in jail awaiting trial not to apply on the sentence. He also deplored that cities and towns are full of foolish girls fascinated by autos and joy rides, of which too many men are prone to take advantage, to the ruin of ignorant girls.

NO REFLECTION ON DETECTIVE.

In regard to the case of Frank Londo, dismissed by Magistrate Dumble Tuesday morning, the impression was conveyed that his worship declined to accept a statement submited in evidence by Detective Newhall. This was not intended. The statement in question was one volunteered by the prisoner when he reached the police station following his apprehension in Blackstock. The Magistrate contended that the prisoner's statement made to he detective was not admissable as evidence, and a ruling on that particular point was deferred, the case being eventually dismissed and the point in question not again taken up.

The action of the court did not in any way reflect upon the police officer.

SUBJECT MILK.

The advance in the price of milk is unavoidable for the reason that other dairy products, butter and cheese, are high. The season has been so unfavorable for the past two months not a green blade of grass is to be seen for pasture. Feed has been so high the farmer did not feed to produce milk, believing it to be wiser to save feed for the winter feeding, consequently there is a very small supply of milk in the country at the present time. The farmer can ship 150 miles for the same cost as 10 miles, this brings us in competition with Toronto firms, who are buying all the milk in sight, at a price that will not warrant retailing at 12 cents per quart. The question is—do the citizens of Peterborough want milk or do they wish to do without and let the citizens of Toronto have all our milk. This is the question they must decided and decide at once, otherwise it will be too late.

A "Thrift" Rhyme.

The National Food Commission of the United States, like Silas Wegg, has "dropped into poetry," to express its sense of the need for the preservation of food, and its effort has produced the following:

From our constant daily reading we can see the thing we're needing is the stuff for fully feeding folks at home and folks afar. For the daily papers tell us facts and figures that compel us to be wide-awake and jealous of the waste we should debar. Bread and butter, beans and berries, kraut and cabbage, cheese and cherries, and the eggs of Tom and Jerries should be saved throughout the land, so that ours, the fruitful nation, may prevent the quick starvation of the balance of creation in the troublous times at hand. Though it seems inconsequential, each small slice of bread's essential to keep famine pestilential from ourselves and our allies; waste of food is unpropitious, unpatriotic, pernicious, and has consequence as vicious as a swarm of German spies. All our logic and our reason prove it's nothing short of treason if we let the growing season find us idly looking on, not considering nor caring for the famine which is staring in our faces, not preparing for the days when summer's gone. Let us then do what we ought to by devoting all our thought to saving foodstuffs as we're taught to by the manuals complete which the National Commission has prepared in large edition for improving the condition of our stock of things to eat. This is something worth your trying, for by canning and by drying all the things that you've been buying you'll not merely feed yourselves, but you'll find, from the beginning that you've helped our troops in winning by the drying and the tinning which have stocked your pantry shelves.

The Swagger Stick.

The use of the "swagger stick" has been misunderstood by many of the American soldiers coming from across the line to be trained here. In Canada, recruits, at any time during the last three years, have, in certain stages of their training, almost invariably carried these little canes when off duty, not through affectation or vanity, but simply because the use of them prevented the young soldiers from slipping their right hands into their trousers pockets. The finished soldier would not think of putting his hand in his pocket, but the soldier in the making is likely, unless constantly on his guard, to be guilty of this breach of the rules. The youths who jauntily and gayly swung swagger sticks at Valcartier, Quebec, and Aldershot, Nova Scotia, even one short year ago, have since become the heroes of Vimy Ridge and Hill No. 70.

RED CROSS WORKERS HOPEFUL OF REACHING DESIRED TOTAL

Let Everybody Give as Much as Possible in Order That The Works May Not Be Hampered.

The committee in charge of the campaign to raise the $20,000 asked for from the citizens of Peterborough for the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross met last night and, while the districts were not altogether covered, it was felt that the amount aimed at would be raised. While $20,000 is the objective, more than this amount of money was required last year, and if as much work was done by the ladies during the next twelve months as was done in the past twelve months, it will take close to $35,000 to accomplish it.

Let everybody give as much as it is possible in order that the work will not be hampered. Remember, the boys in the trenches, in the hospitals, or prisoners in Germany are entitled to as much consideration next year as this, and if it costs more, as is the case, we should be prepared to make the sacrifice.

While three days have been set aside for the canvass, the city cannot all be covered in this time, and it is possible that some sections of the city may see a canvasser any day this week up to Saturday. If you have not been called upon, just drop into the Red Cross campaign headquarters, next to the Examiner office, with your subscription, as others have done already, and receive the thanks of the committee.

If you prefer, cut out the coupon that is appearing in the city papers, fill it in and mail to Mr. G. H. Thompson, and it will serve the same purpose.

234 MEMBERS IN NEXT HOUSE

The British North America Act, passed by the Imperial Parliament in the spring of 1867, does not fix the representation of the several provinces in the House of Commons, but it prescribes the manner in which that representation is to be determined by the Parliament of Canada. Quebec is the pivot province, it always having the fixed number of 65 members. "There shall be assigned to each of the other provinces such number of members as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population as the number 65 bears to the number of the population of Quebec."

The following tabulated statement gives the provincial representation in the late House of Commons, and in the next House, whose members will be chosen at the next general Federal election:

	House Last	House Next
Ontario	86	82
Quebec	65	65
Nova Scotia	18	16
New Brunswick	13	11
Manitoba	10	15
British Columbia ..	7	13

Saskatchewan	10	16
Alberta	7	12
Yukon	1	1

NAVAL AFFAIRS ARE BEFORE THE BRITISH HOUSE

Retired Officers and Other Critics Trying To Oust Sir John Jellicoe.

SIR ERIC GEDDES TO SPEAK

Will Tell Parliament Today Just What the Naval Situation Is.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 1.—Unusual interest within and without Parliament attaches to the statement in regard to the navy which is to be made in the House of Commons this afternoon by Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty. It will be Sir Eric's first statement in regard to his department and also his first address in parliament and never has a maiden speech been awaited with keener anticipation.

Naval affairs have been to the fore in the last few weeks. There has been much outspoken criticism of the conduct of the Admiralty especially since the successful German attack on a convoy in the North Sea. A section of the press supported by certain retired naval officers of high standing, is carrying on a campaign with the object of ousting Admiral Sir John Jellicoe as first Sea Lord. The Admiral has been the subject of attacks for his allege lack of strategic ability and insufficiently forward policy.

The Admiral's defenders in other sections of the press as well as among his colleagues in parliament have been equally emphatic in his support.

PTE. BERT JONES.

Mr. Jones, 650 Concession street, has received a letter from the Canadian Red Cross Society, telling of the condition of his son, Pte. A. W. Jones, who went overseas with the 59th Battalion, and who was wounded in France while fighting with the 46th Battalion. While in hospital after being wounded, Pte. Jones sacrificed a quart of his blood to save the life of a wounded comrade.

The letter is as follows:

Dear Sir,—

I beg to inform you that Pte. A. W. Jones, 455916, 46th Battalion, is now at Royal Berkshire Hospital, Reading, Berks, England. Our authorized Red Cross visitor has twice recently seen him there. She tells us that he is suffering from weakness as the result of a most splendid action of his. He volunteered to give a quart of his blood to a comrade who would otherwise have died. This was successfully performed.

I am glad to be able to tell you that she says that Pte. Jones is doing well, although progress is rather slow. You may rest assured that he is receiving every attention.

He will be visited regularly, and should he be in need of any comforts other than those supplied by the hospital, we will gladly send them to him from our parcels office. Should you be anxious as to his progress at any time, we will be pleased to make inquiries on your behalf.

Yours very truly,
CONSTANCE SCOTT.

Mr. Jones has since received a letter from his son telling of how the hospital in which he was convalescing was bombed by the Germans and eleven patients in his ward were wounded.

AIR SERVICE TO BERLIN.

Premier Morris, of Newfoundland, Tells of Preparations.

London, Nov. 1.—Sir Edward Morris, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, has arrived in England with news of the vast preparations now going on in America for "kanning the Kaiser," which the Daily Mail describes as "most heartening news." In an interview he said: "This time next year at the outside, probably long before that. Americans, as they put it to me, are going to run by day and night an air service to Berlin."

"Do people in these islands realize that the money America is spending on aircraft and air preparations alone exceeds the sum total of our imperial budget for military, naval and civil service combined?"

TRAIN WRECKER GETS LIFE TERM

FRANK McDONALD HAD CAUSED DEATH OF TWO ENGINEMEN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chatham, Nov. 1.—Life imprisonment in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed this morning on Frank McDonald who was convicted of manslaughter for removing rail on the Michigan Central Railway near Ridgetown on the night of May 31st, 1911, causing a wreck which resulted in the death of Engineer Stephen Quinlan, and Fieman Russel Oakes.

McDonald was convicted largely on a confession which he made to the Detroit police, under duress he stated in the witness box. The Detroit and Ontario Police, however, denied that any pressure was used to develop the confession.

Harry McDonald, a brother of Frank, is also under arrest awaiting trial on the same charge.

ORIGINAL OF "THE SKY PILOT" WAS THE LATE REV. A. J. McLEOD

His Sister Mrs. (Rev.) Rowand Resides Here—All Evidence Points to Him as Ralph Connor's Famous Preacher.

When the dramatized version of Ralph Connor's inimitable novel, "The Sky Pilot," presented in the Opera House here on Thanksgiving Day, was being shown in Toronto, a discussion was started in The Globe as to who was the original of the hero of the story. All the names mentioned in The Globe, however, were mere guesses. The original "Sky Pilot," the model missionary to the West, as described in either the novel of that name or in "Black Rock," was the late Rev. A. J. McLeod, B.A., who for ten years before his death in 1900 had been principal of the Indian school at Regina. Peterborough's interest in the late principal arises from the fact that he was a brother of Mrs. W. L. H. Rowand, whose husband is now pastor of St. Andrew's Church in this city. Mrs. R. Pogue, of St. Paul's manse, was a teacher on the staff of the Regina school for a number of years, and as such knew Mr. McLeod intimately.

Like every other noted novelist, Ralph Connor, it is well known, drew all his character sketches from life, although there always appears a disinclination on the part of members of the profession to identify their creations. Dickens, for example, never went beyond admitting that he Micawbers, husband and wife, were really his own parents, or that the story of the life of David Copperfield was autobiographical. When Ralph Connor wrote "The Man From Glengarry," he kept on his desk the portrait of his mother as an inspiration for the drawing of the character of Mrs. Murray, one of the finest creations that has ever appeared in fiction. Mrs. Manor in "Black Rock" is Mrs. Murray again in a different setting, and the aggressive husband of this gentle woman was none other than the author's own father with all his peculiarities laid bare.

All the evidence goes to show that when Ralph Connor drew the picture of "The Sky Pilot" he had Mr. McLeod in his mind. He knew him as one college man gets to know another. They were at Toronto University and Knox College together, and worked in the great wide mission field of the West. Mr. McLeod was first stationed at Banff, where it was he earned for himself a place in the finest literature that has ever yet been produced by a Canadian writer. He represented in his own person all the qualities delineated by the novelist, chief among which was his faculty to overcome opposition and a gift for adapting himself to any circumstances.

When Mr. McLeod died in 1900 Ralph Connor in a church publication wrote an appreciation of his late friend, in which the virtues of "The Sky Pilot," as later drawn in the book were clearly emphasized.

The late Mr. McLeod was born in Kincardine about 1860. He was a school teacher in early life, but graduated from Toronto University and Knox College. Besides Ralph Connor, one of his closest college chums was Rev. J. A. Macdonald, now of the Toronto Globe. Mr. McLeod went as a missionary to the West, and could never be induced to give up that work, although he was at different times called to the Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, and to a church in Lindsay. The Calgary Presbytery, too, nominated him for the position of secretary of home missions.

Mr. McLeod is survived by a widow who still resides in Regina, and one son, Morris, a youth of about 19, whose proudest heritage is the reputation which his father left behind him.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1917

HOW THE SOLDIERS WILL VOTE.

AT THE OPEN convention held the other day at Dutton, in West Elgin, and at which Hon. T. W. Crothers, the present Minister of Labor, was re-nominated as a Union candidate, one of the speakers was Miss Margaret Coyne, daughter of the registrar of deeds in St. Thomas. She has brothers at the front, and on that account will have a vote at the coming election.

Miss Coyne was asked to state how her brothers, in her opinion would have her vote, and her answer is certainly entitled to go on the record. She said that one of her brothers in his last letter had evidently been under the impression that the women relatives given the vote were to act as the proxies of the soldiers, and he had written: "Be sure and remember when voting for me that there are two things I insist upon. Support the candidate who is for conscription and support a Union Government."

That is the situation. The soldier overseas was instructing the person who was, he thought, to take his place in the polling booth. The one to whom he preffered his request will vote as he asked. He will himself have an opportunity to declare himself. That should setle it. There are at least half a million newly-enfranchised women voters in Canada who, if they could be interviewed, would talk as Miss Coyne did at the Dutton convention.

THE HIGH COST OF DELIVERY.

THE PRESENT delivery system is one of the factors that have added to the cost of living. Every retail dealer is a victim. Many a middleman loses all his profit on a small sale owing to the expense entailed in getting it to the customer's house in a distant part of the city. The smallest sale these days must be handed in at the back door.

An exchange calls attention to this latter day evil—for such it is—just as The Review has so often done. Very often the thoughtlessness of the customer alone is to blame. If all such, before asking a merchant to send goods on approbation, to make a delivery or incur other expense, would pause to ask themselves, "Is it necessary?" the trouble might be avoided.

The fallacy of the delivery system is that in the end the customer must pay for it. If the service is not necessary, you are not only wasting your own money, but the resources of Canada as well, and this country today is in urgent need of economy. Think of the army of men and horses that are engaged in the Dominion carrying to your home the parcels you could certainly take yourself without inconvenience. If you did this, men and horses could be released for some line of duty where they are really needed and could be made to render an important part in the economic plan.

There is an old engraving hanging in many homes depicting a young and ragged urchin stepping up to a lady and asking if he may carry her parcel. Times have changed. Today that same little chap might have difficulty finding a parcel to carry; and why? Because fashion has decreed that we may carry almost anything but a parcel. The result has been heavy delivery expense, which must be paid by the customer, together with the same percentage of profit as is carried by the goods themselves. Because it does not show separately in the bill, it is not recognized as an additional cost. To a large extent merchants are to blame for this. If they were to adopt the "cash and carry" system, giving a price advantage to those who paid cash and carried their parcels, requests for delivery would soon show a decrease.

A POLITICAL PARADOX.

FREQUENTLY these days we hear the term Conscriptionist-Liberal applied to some public man. Assuming that a "Liberal" retains all of its old meaning and that a member of that cult still owes allegiance to the chieftain, there is no such specimen of humanity extant as a Conscriptionist-Liberal. He is either a Unionist or a political derelict. If he is a Laurier Liberal he cannot be a conscriptionist, and if he is the latter he cannot be the former. The Conscriptionist-Liberal, so-called, is merely a man sitting on the fence watching the feline. If the Union Government is sustained, he will retain his neutral position. If the Laurierites are returned to power he will be among the first to scurry for the shelter of that camp.

TAKING A COAL CENSUS.

THE FIGURES in the customs houses are all that is required to prove that there is more than the normal amount of coal in this city, considering the season. Still there are plenty of householders who are short of fuel and who are unable to get a supply either from the dealers or the civic yards. It follows, then, that some firms and householders have more than their share and that one section of the community may suffer while others riot in black diamonds. There must be a remedy for these conditions. It is easy to ascertain from the customs house receipts just how much coal has been shipped into any given place and by what dealers it has been received. The dealers' books will show to whom and in what quantities it has been sold. Everything is on the record. How is the dealer to be forced to disclose his private business and to furnish the information required to clear up the coal situation?

The Fuel Controller, it seems, has the power to call for the dealers' books. The Act, it appears, confers upon that official almost unlimited authority to see that one class is not unduly favored over another. Once he has found out where the coal is stored in excessive quantities, he can, it seems, requisition the excess for the common good. This may savor of autocracy, but these are war times, and it is no longer the fashion to stand on fine ethical points or be swayed by legal quibbles.

There is, as before stated, a greater amount of coal in this city than has been imported up to November 1 in any previous year. This, however, does not mean that there is enough to see the city through the winter. All depends on subsequent shipments. If these fall below the average, Peterborough may yet have a coal famine.

This can be averted to a great extent by adopting the course outlined in The Review yesterday, by closing public buildings, schools and churches as far as practicable until the danger is past. It is all up to Fuel Controller McGrath. He has the authority; all he lacks is the official nerve. Even the controller's magic wand of office is not required to close the doors of churches and other public places. The people themselves can do that, but the Fuel Controller can see that there is something like a fair distribution of coal.

In the event of a food famine, one family would not be allowed to perish of hunger while a neighbor's larder was replete to the bursting point. The reason is just as good why, under parallel conditions, he should be saved from perishing of cold.

IS THE ACT CONSTITUTIONAL!

A PETITION has been filed in the Superior Court at Montreal praying that the Military Service Act be declared unconstitutional. The main reason pleaded in support of this contention is that under the Act of Confederation authority is lacking to compel men to enter the military service for other than home defence.

It is likely that a long lawsuit will arise out of this petition, and one thing is certain—no matter how the case is decided in the Canadian courts, the matter will be carried for a final review to the Privy Council in England.

In this connection it is interesting to recall the history of the draft law in the United States, where men today are being forced into the service for duty abroad and where the constitutionality of the law has been upheld by the higher courts. Men were drafted across the border for the war with Canada in 1812. They insisted that their service was for home defence only and that they could not be compelled to fight on foreign soil. Company after company threw down their arms and refused to cross the boundary line to make war on the Canadian side.

There was no time to argue the constitutional question involved, and there was nothing for it but for the authorities to give in to the privates. The law has since then been amended, and it is now held in the United States that a man can be drafted for a war of defence, no matter whether the theatre of the conflict is at home or in a foreign country, which is being used as a highway to reach the land in which the defending and drafted soldier has his home.

THE ACT STILL OPERATIVE.

NOW THAT a petition has been filed in a Montreal court asking that the Military Service Act be declared unconstitutional, the point has already been raised locally that the operation of the Act will be suspended pending the disposition of the case by the judges.

Any person who entertains such an idea is laboring under a delusion. The Military Service Act is a law of the land, and remains as such until it has been declared unconstitutional by the courts. If such a procedure as that referred to by those who look for the suspension of the Act were followed, any law on the statute books could be rendered, temporarily at least, of no effect by simply attacking it in the courts.

SOME WOES OF THE WEALTHY

(By H. Bruce Addington.)

The rich have their troubles, like the rest of us. And, while poverty brings with it many ills, so does wealth.

The ills of wealth, to be sure, are different from the ills of poverty. But they are very real and they make themselves keenly felt.

Take the case of Hetty Green, who died leaving an estate whose value was estimated at some $100,000,000.

At court proceedings in connection with the inheritance tax on this enormous sum it developed that Mrs. Green had been in constant fear of being murdered for her money.

She frequently changed her residence and at different times had lived under assumed names. It was brought out that she had been known under at least six names, "and probably many others."

In this way she sought to elude possible murderers and to dodge schemers with plans to separate her from part of her great wealth.

Also Mrs. Green was literally a slave to her wealth. She had little, if any, time for recreation. According to evidence presented to the court.

"Her interests were largely centered in the conservation and enlargement of her fortune, and practically her entire time was given to business matters, investments and reinvestments of principal and income."

Living thus in perpetual dread, chained day in and day out to her desk, could this rich woman have been truly happy?

Again, riches in many cases are as direct a cause of bodily ill health as poverty could be. This is something to which few people have given sufficient thought.

The poor, for example, often suffer greatly in health because of underfeeding. The rich are likely to suffer because of overeating, and because of eating food too highly spiced and seasoned to be readily digestible.

When a man is rich he is almost certain to own several automobiles. These tempt him to ride when he should walk. From lack of exercise many rich people become physically degenerate and die long before their time.

Their doctors would be true friends to them if, instead of advising travel and change of scene, they would tactfully suggest to their rich patients the wisdom of dispensing with their chefs and chauffeurs, and of getting back to simpler modes of life.

Wealth, finally, tends to affect adversely the character of the rich, and to cause them much suffering by affecting adversely their children's character.

When a child is brought up in a wealthy home, it really is difficult for that child to escape being spoiled.

Having servants to do everything, the child is late in learning to do anything for himself.

This makes him deficient in initiative and self-reliance.

And, if only because servants jump around to wait on him, he is apt to grow up conceited, selfish, abnormally self-centered, indifferent to the interests and feelings of anybody else.

Wherefore it is difficult for him to get along with other people. As he becomes older he may find it impossible to get along even with the parents who have spoiled him.

Unable and unwilling to work, he may acquire dissolute, perhaps positively criminal, habits. Our jails and asylums hold many persons who would never have been there had they not been children of wealthy parents.

EDITOR'S MAIL

The Price of Milk.

Editor Review: The people of Peterborough can thank Mr. Gillespie for the increased cost of milk, he has taken the lead and all the other dairymen have followed. It is idle to talk about the increased cost of production, for surely they have not been selling at a loss through October, and it costs no more to produce milk in November, for the pasture during October is of no feeding value. Cows have to be stall fed.

The corn and root crops were never better, and these are the chief fodder for milk production. Grain is fed only in small quantities, and there is no reason to increase the price of milk from ten to twelve cents per quart. It costs the farmer no more to feed cows now than it did ten years ago when milk was seven cents per quart.

While it is true labor is high, the average dairy farmer does not depend on outside labor, except in summer. Eight cents per quart gives a fair profit for the local dairy farmer. This increase of price is prompter by pure greed. Let the babies go short of milk these local profiters will make a lot more money, and that's the only thing that counts.

A PRACTICAL FARMER.

The writer of the above seems to have overlooked the point made in Mr. Gillespie's statement given to the public yesterday. That was that unless the price of milk is raised to the local producer the latter will send his milk to Toronto or some other outside point where the higher price prevails. Ed. Review. In that case Peterborough would have a milk famine for fair.

SHAVING WITH A BUZZ SAW.

A most radical departure from the usual type of safety razor has been designed by an Iowa inventor. It is a compact little contrivance of the press button variety, with the blade fully protected by a safety guard so that there is no danger of cutting the fingers or of scratching the face. The blade operates with continuous rotary motion like that of a circular saw.

First you wind up the mechanism, just as you would a watch or a clock; then you apply it to your well-lathered face and press the button at the side. According to the inventor, you should have a perfect shave without a scratch or the slightest abrasion of the skin, in almost less time than it takes to tell it, and without a particle of annoyance from dull blades.

"What are you kids doin' here?" asked the policeman.

"We're Russian women soldiers," exclaimed the four, "an' Viola down there is Germany. She don't want t' be Germany. It's her that's makin' all the noise."

MUSIC A LANGUAGE.

Each Note of the Scale Conveys Its Own Impression.

How can music be expressive of mental moods? The question is asked often enough, particularly by persons whose knowledge of the art is rudimentary, though sometimes by persons who have had some training. It cannot be denied that some tunes have a joyous sound, and others a sad or pensive effect. Why is that the case? There are many reasons. The chief one and perhaps the one most easily understood is that every note of the scale, even when taken alone, has its own effect upon the ordinary human mind. Bugles play only the notes of the common chord, for example, in the Natural Key, they play C. E. G. and C., the four ribs of the diatonic scale. It will be found that those "calls" which have to do with activity and ardor, such as Boots and Saddles, dwell mostly upon the key note and the Fifth, tones which give the notion of decision and enthusiasm. One call, "Taps" is always considered as mournful and even sad. Yet the average person does not know the cause for its effect upon his mind. If the "Taps" Call is examined, we shall find that it dwells insistently upon the third of the scale. No one can explain the psychological cause for the impression that the third tone makes. It is one of the mysteries—like the souring of milk in a thunderstorm. Perhaps there is no more lugubrious Gospel Song than "Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight." It has come to be considered as the last word in religious "sob-stuff," and many people have been afflicted with the shudders by its performance. Look at the first line, as expressed by the convenient Tonic-sol-fa symbols:

Mi, Mi, Mi Fa, Mi Mi, Ra Do.

Out of eight notes, five are the Third of the Scale.

To a truly musical ear, not only does each note of the scale convey its own impression, but all the varied almost infinite chords and discords are specifically expressional in their sound. Add to this the variations of time and rhythm as expressional agents, and it should appear immediately to the non-musical intelligence that Music is a language, a universal means of stimulating the mind to thought.

EXPELL WORRY WITH MUSIC.

Relief Will Come by Filling Your Home With Gladsome Music.

War is a grim teacher. One thing it teaches both soldier and civilian is discipline. The one must obey orders; the other must curb and alter his mode of living and thinking to square with the peculiar conditions he is called upon to face.

Gladstone said music is one of the most forcible instruments for training, for arousing, for governing the mind and spirit of man. If that be so—and it cannot be refuted—music should be used in the home to train and govern the mind and spirit. A successful teacher does not keep children out of mischief by continually saying "Don't do this" and "Don't do that." He fills the children's minds with thoughts about the subject being studied that appeal to their interest, and the mind, so pre-occupied, has no time for mischief-making.

Are you tempted to worry during the evening at home about your work down town? Then relief will not come by attempting to train your mind by saying "I will quit worrying." Fill your hours with gladsome music. Sit down at the piano, or take your fiddle, or get out a talking machine record or a player roll of "Barcarolle" from "Tales of Hoffman" and as you proceed with the music there opens up a scene of the canals in Venice viewed from a palace window. Silvery moonlight tinges the whole scene and lovers sing to the rhythm of the rocking gondola.

Then worry goes from the mind, because the charm of music enters. That is only one way, but a very practical way of making music govern the mind.

A BLUNT MAN'S PROTEST.

"Now I'm just a plain blunt man," said a gentleman to the writer on the street car the other day, "and maybe I wouldn't be considered a fit subject to express any views on musical subjects. But just the same, I enjoy good music, have lots of it in my home, and there's one thing I am a crank on, that is clear enunciation.

"My wife toted me off to a recital one evening. It was given by the pupils of X——, the vocal teacher. The technique, rhythm, and accentuation and all the rest of it were I suppose hunky-dory, but out of the ten singers there was only one whose enunciation was worth the snap of your finger. Perhaps I expect too much but if I cannot follow the words reasonably well, a song only analyses about fifty per cent. pure to me.

"Perhaps you had a poorly located seat, or again your hearing may not be as acute as it once was" suggested the writer.

"Oh," he replied, "you cannot fasten the blame on me that way. I had as good a seat as there was in the hall and my hearing is as good as anybody's. If you don't believe me just whisper something you don't want me to hear and see. No Siree, it was no fault of my ear drums, it was the singer's fault. Say, if you are not willing to take my word for it, what does Clara Butt say? She said: 'Singers should study the art of clear enunciation. English is not a difficult language to sing, but it is neglected because it is our own. And singers who take pains in their pronunciation of the words of a song in a foreign language, are too often apt to slur English words, so that as a friend of mine once put it, his chief entertainment at a concert was trying to guess what language the singer was singing'."

Now, how could you answer an argument like that?

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

There is a church in a western Ontario town that pays its minister $1,500 a year and its organist and choir $100 a year. Despite the fact it has reasonably good music. The organist is a young girl of some talent and the choristers like her. When the sum of appreciation in a congregation is measured by two dollars a week there is something decadent in the State of Canada. Churches and church people are too enthusiastic about securing something for nothing. The young woman above mentioned has spent much money and some of the best years of her life to become a competent musician. She has capabilities which, with proper encouragement, would make her an art leader in her community. Yet the people she serves do not realize that she is helping to civilize their children.

We in Canada do not yet understand that religion and music are co-workers, both designed to elevate the standard of living. They know it in England. Take, for example, the Cathedral schools. Boys from eight to twelve years of age are admitted as pupils. Not only do they receive a thorough grounding in the ordinary educational branches of learning, but they are given a musical education. They get a singing lesson and, perhaps, a piano lesson every day. They rehearse for choir work every day. And they get a monthly salary for what they do. The City Churches in Canada provide annual appropriations from their music, but large salaries are exceptional.

FUTURE OF MUSICAL.

Depends Upon the Child's Education To Large Extent.

It seems that last year after Melba's return to Australia from America, she made some statements on the musical stagnation of Melbourne that set some people thinking. These remarks made certain interested parties determine to study the musical situation to get at the root of the trouble. "While this sifting has been in progress," says the Australian Musical News, "the question has arisen as to whether the school children of the country are being trained correctly from a musical standpoint. That they receive certain tuition has been well known; but whether this is the best tuition possible remains to be seen. The people who go into this matter thoroughly are at a loss to understand why these children are not heard in public more frequently, why they are not used to aid in the musical education of the general public, and why they are not made to realize that they are the material from which the different musical societies and choirs of the future are to be built up.

While this question is receiving the attention of our Australian brethren, a Mr. Stetson Humphrey has been writing a series of articles in the United States on the musical training of children, especially the teaching of singing to school children.

After studying the work done in more than seventy American schools, this gentleman came to the conclusion that only a fractional proportion were teaching any fundamentals whatsoever of voice production. As a result of his investigations, he considers, "that nothing of practical value is given to the child, either in simplified tone production or breath control." Whilst realizing the impossibility of expecting grade teachers to be voice specialists, Mr. Humphrey insists "that they could impart a few elementary principles, which not only would be applicable to study, but would develop better tone qualities, pronunciation and enunciation in the American speech."

Another thing which comes in for a share of criticism from Mr. Humphrey is the lack of the sense of rhythm in the school music. "Children," he says, "are taught to count, rather than to feel the pulse and swing, which should be the source of stimulation for the counting."

Against the use of the old Italian system of do, re, mi, etc., instead of the correct staff names of the notes, Mr Humphrey wages war. He says: "This method brings the result that the written note on the staff bears no mental relation whatsoever to the syllable sung, and the note on the pianoforte keyboard. If from the beginning the child learns that C below the staff always sounds the same and never any other sound, the brain accepts these sounds, becomes acquainted with them, and in due time recognizes the sounded note when the eye appreciates the printed note on the page."

THE GERMAN SPIRIT.

Their Own Writers Have Betrayed Nation's Infamy.

Probably no book written by authors unfriendly to Germany makes so strong a case against that country as a little volume entitled, "Out of Their Own Mouths," made up of the utterances of Germans themselves, glorying in their country and its purposes. These extracts, presented without comment in the body of the book, are not gathered from hidden or exceptional sources, and are not the sayings of a comparatively few nonrepresentative extremists, but must be recognized as a fair presentation of typical views of Germans—German rulers, statesmen, savants, publicists, journalists, poets, business men, party leaders and soldiers—expressed before and since the war. Many of the quotations given are already famous, such as the Bethmann Hollweg remarks about Belgium and ideas of war by Treitschke and others, but the gathering of these and other extracts in a systematic way, with headings, the black-facing of the most striking sentences and the identification of the extracts by giving the original source, dates, etc., makes the book a handy anthology of German war opinion.

Evidence of this kind has been plentiful for years in German books, periodicals, and public documents, and it is astonishing that the world did not take more heed of the menace of such opinions. The explanation is that they seemed so incredible, so incompatible with the genuine and sane purposes of a civilized nation, that they were regarded lightly. The war has demonstrated that they were to be taken seriously, and not with the traditional grain of salt. Here are shown colossal self-assurance, an insane belief in Germany's divine mission, a genuine conviction that the state—that is to say the German state—can do no wrong, and therefore that the grossest cruelties as practiced in the interest of that state's quick success are beneficent to the world. Views of this sort come from so many classes of leaders that there can be no just charge that the picture is a distorted one. A few pages at the close of the book, making a chapter headed "Reactions and Protests," are given over to utterances from the minority of Germans to whom these prevailing views of the war have become abhorrent. An excellent brief description of the character of the predominant German war spirit is available in this extract from a quotation of one of the protesting Germans.

"And what has caused us to be completely detested by civilized nations is this insufferable attitude of the pan-Germanists. 'Pan-Germanists is their name in politics; in science they are called 'Race Theorists.' Do you wish to know what Race Theory is? It is a so-called science, of which the purpose is to prove that the Germans stand first among all nations of the world, that all achievements of civilization since the beginning of history have proceeded from them, and that the rule of the world fitly and rightly belongs to them."

JOHN L. ARNOLDI.
Lieut., C. F. C. C.

To Our Friends:

In August last we issued a statement of monies received and disbursed up to June 30, 1916. A statement is now submitted for the year ending June 30, 1917. The disbursemnts include the expenses connected with the handling of the comforts sent us from Canada and the United States.

Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. have again most kindly audited our accounts, and are again sending to each subscriber whose name appears on our books a copy of the audited statement.

Our Christmas appeal met with a generous response. Many of the gifts were available also for the purchase of comforts generally, and, as will be seen from the statement, a considerable sum was used for that purpose. The amount collected for expenses has exceeded our needs in that direction; the surplus is used for the general objects of the Commission. The balance on hand was largely held to pay for supplies to be distributed during the summer months when less comes from Canada.

In thankfully and gratefully acknowledging the contributions we have received in money, we desire to add our no less grateful thanks for the large amount of supplies sent us for distribution. Our records show all packages received and sent out, and these records are open to any of our friends or their English correspondents.

The "Leaflets" issued from time to time by the Commission give such details as are possible of both departments of our work—the purchase of comforts for which money is sent and the distribution of those sent in kind—and we are glad to send copies of the leaflets to any who are interested in our work. They are sent regularly to all our known helpers, whose services to Canadian soldiers we hope some day to make known in a full report.

MOUNT JULIAN

(Special Correspondence.)

Mt. Julian, Oct. 30.—The summer Sunday School of Eden Methodist Church closed on October 21st with a very interesting rally service after which the children marched into the church singing "Sound the Battle Cry."

A very instructive sermon was given by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Carr, especially for their benefit but it could be listened to with profit by all. He laid emphasis on the truth that it was much easier to begin to live right in childhood than to wait until the end of an ill-spent life.

The number on the S. S. roll although not large showed a good average attendance and there was an earnest staff of teachers. The children were well supplied with cards and papers paid for by their collections and they also have a good library.

The teachers were Mrs. Charles Lauder, Supt.; Miss Emma Reid, Sec. and Treasurer, also teacher of Bible Class, and Mrs. J. Northey, Mrs. W. T. Northey, Mrs. Bruce Reid and Mrs. W. Mathews, teachers of intermediate and infant classes.

The church was tastefully decorated with flowers, fruit and vegetables for the Thanksgiving service in October and also for the Sunday School rally.

She Thought Sure Her Time Had Come

Mrs. Baker Confined in Bed For Weeks—Her Recovery With Tanlac Wonderful.

"Honestly, I have gained fifteen pounds and my neighbors, as well as myself, are amazed at the change Tanlac has made in me," said Mrs. Emma Baker of 39 Mariposa avenue, Toronto. Mrs. Baker is the wife of Fred Baker, a valued employe of the Steel Radiator Company. Continuing her statement, Mrs. Baker said:

"I had been going down in health for more than a year, losing weight and steadily getting weaker all the time. My troubles were mainly stomach disorders and nervousness and about six weeks ago I took a very sudden turn for the worse. At least I got down in bed and thought sure my time had come. I was so sick I couldn't retain anything on my stomach and was so weak I could hardly raise my hand. I was so nervous the least noise would startle me and I couldn't get any sleep or rest at all scarcely. Many a night I would lie awake and toss and roll until day. I fell off until I weighed only one hundred and twelve pounds and when I began taking Tanlac I had been confined to my bed for three weeks.

"Mr. Baker has taken Tanlac with wonderful results but I never thought much about it being good for me until I tried other things and kept getting worse. Then I bought a bottle of Tanlac and pretty soon I began to feel better. So it wasn't long until I was able to get out of bed and realized that I was gaining in weight. My appetite is fine now and my stomach never troubles me at all. My nerves are calm and steady and I sleep all night long every night. I now weigh one hundred and twenty-seven pounds, have gained fifteen pounds, and have hardly finished my second bottle of Tanlac yet. I am now feeling stronger and better than I have since my troubles began—can do all my work without the least inconvenience — and consider it wonderful the way Tanlac has built me up. Mr. Baker and I both think Tanlac the grandest medicine in the world and we certainly have good reasons for thinking so."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

SLEUTH SENT FOR TRIAL.

Charged With Conspiring to Commit Criminal Acts.

Montreal, Nov. 1. — Charles Desjardins, the detective employed by the Dominion Police to assist in the investigation of dynamite plots here, was this morning committed for trial by Judge Lanctot on a charge of conspiring to commit criminal acts and to rob banks. The judge said that this was the first case in his experience where a police officer was charged with conspiring with criminals.

Inspector Giroux, of the Dominion Police, said that he gave Desjardins $25 to pay his entrance fee into such organizations as the Constitutionals and the Sons of Liberty because he had trouble in connection with conscription, which was being fomented by some members of these organizations.

In regard to the conspiracy to rob a bank at Three Rivers in which Desjardins is alleged to have figured he (Giroux) telephoned the Chief of Police there and warned him about it.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of [illegible] I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

"To the Last Dollar"

Is there a man or woman in all Canada who does not agree with the declaration of Lloyd George, President Wilson and other Allied Statesmen that we are in this war "to the last man and the last dollar?"

We must agree with this or else invite defeat at the hands of a merciless enemy who has set out to enslave the world.

But do we—do you—fully realize that it is actually our duty to lend our money—to make our money fight?

It is our duty; it is your duty.

Never mind the "other fellow." Think of your duty; your privilege.

Remember that Canada wants you to buy Canada's Victory Bonds.

Canada expects you—whether you are an employer or an employee, whether you have much or little, to do your part towards assuring Victory.

You, personally, are faced with the duty and the privilege of buying Canada's Victory Bonds to the utmost limit of your ability.

And remember, you don't give your money. You merely lend it.

You'll get it all back and you will be paid the interest promptly every six months.

Can you afford to hesitate?

Can you conceive of a duty more imperative than the winning of the war?

Can you imagine a more practical way to help—when you are not fighting—than to dedicate your savings to meet the needs of the men who are fighting for you?

NOTABLE FAMILY REUNION.

Port Perry, Nov. 1.—The home of Chas. A. Honey of this town harbored an unusual family gathering on Tuesday, Oct. 30th. Mr. Honey, nine brothers and one sister, with the wives of eight of the brothers, were all together for the first time in 36 years. Still more noteworthy is the fact that no death has occurred in this generation.

SUGAR PRICES DROP!

Atlantic Sugar Refineries Lead in Reduction of Price of Sugar

OFFICIAL announcement issued today reads as follows: It is our opinion that the price of sugar in the United States and Canada will be gradually reduced during the next three months and, in accordance with this view, this Company has today marked down all grades of "LANTIC" 10c per 100 pounds.

In following the markets through the year 1917 this Company has been consistently correct in its advice.

No Sugar Famine Threatens

Our refinery has been operated steadily throughout the year, and, while we have not a large stock of sugar to distribute at the moment, we intend to keep the refinery running continuously, and we are doing everything possible to meet the demands of the purchasing public.

We believe there has been sufficient raw sugar contracted for to fill the normal Canadian requirements, if hoarding and speculating are eliminated, until the new sugar crop is available.
Further reductions in price will be made by us from time to time as conditions warrant.

BORDEN CALLS ON VOTERS TO IGNORE PARTY LINES

And to Unite in Supporting Candidates Who Will Uphold the New Union Government.

Ottawa, Nov. 1.—The following official statement was issued Wednesday:

"On behalf of the Government the Prime Minister desires to emphasize the considerations set forth in his public announcement of October 25.

"Men prominent in public life, in both political parties, have unselfishly stood aside in order that union might be achieved. The members of the present Administration have sunk their party differences, disregarded all minor considerations, and united in an earnest effort for a supreme national purpose. They feel that it is not too much to ask the people of Canada, of whatever party allegiance, to pursue the same course, to unite in the same spirit, and thus to aid in the same purpose.

No Desire to Interfere.

"The Government have no desire or intention of interfering with the right of the people in each riding to select the candidate of their choice, but they desire united endeavor in making the selection. It is hoped that the women in each riding will be invited to co-operate for that purpose.

"Those who are prepared to support Union Government naturally expect that they shall have a voice in the selection of Union candidates. Any course which prevents this is liable to provoke discord and undermine unity of effort when it is most needed."

A Case in Point.

In Ottawa a newspaper and public controversy has been raging for the past few days regarding the straight party convention which renominated Messrs. Fripp and Chabot as Union candidates. Attendance at this convention was deliberately confined to members of the former Conservative association.

CARDINAL GIBBONS' GOOD WORK

Referring to the address of Cardinal Gibbons to the American soldiers, as printed in the Review yesterday, the New York Sun says editorally:

The address delivered by Cardinal Gibbons on the occasion of the dedication of the Knights of Columbus building at Camp Meade, Maryland, constitutes one of the most powerful and stirring messages uttered to the people of any belligerent nation since the war began, and in the elevation of its tone, the practicableness of its wise counsel and the clarity of its form it certainly has been outdone by none.

From the depths of his understanding, the fruit of wide experience, great learning and unprejudiced observation, the Cardinal spoke not only of the large and obvious problems that must be solved by our statesmen and our soldiers, but of the immediate, continuing and homely duties that rest upon all of us, conspicuous, powerful and weak; and his words should be read by every American, no matter what his prepossession or religious faith. In them were expressed the hopes and aspirations of a mighty patriotism that is prepared and eager to endure all for the welfare and the glory of the country; [illegible] wisdom and based in disinterested devotion to the common weal.

The Government could engage in no enterprise more appropriate and helpful to the cause of national unity and worldwide democracy than to print and circulate in every city, town and hamlet this great oration, for in it the paramount obligation of the citizen to the United States and the worthiness of the United States to demand the fulfilment of that obligation are set forth with a simplicity, a directness and a convincing force that are seldom combined in the outgivings of any man.

VITAL STATÓSTOCS

For the month of October the vital statistics for Peterborough were as follows: Births 38, deaths 30, marriages 22. For the same month in 1916 there were 24 births, 30 deaths and 16 marriages.

SIMULTANEOUS ESSSIONS OF CONVENTION YESTERDAY

"The Hall of Fame," an Outstanding Feature Highly Appreciated---Names of Those Ataining "Banner" Standing This Year---Closing Session Tonight.

The second day of Section B of the Provincial Convention of the Ontario Sunday School Association started out with four very successful and largely attended simultaneous sessions, the Elementary Division, Secondary Division, Adult, and Administration. A new feature added to the sessions this year was that of the Administration Division. It was a gathering of the officers of the Sunday Schools to make a study of their own work in their local Sunday Schools.

The Hall of Fame

In the afternoon one of the outstanding features was the Hall of Fame, in which four counties received beautiful "Front Line" silk banners for the resultful work done during the year as follows: York North, Guelph City, Huron South and Grenville. Those attaining "Banner" standing this year were: The City of Stratford, Haldimand, Brant, Welland, Norfolk, Elgin East. This part of the program was of a spectacular nature in that there were ten Primary girls all dressed in white, each carrying a very beautiful silk banner prepared by the Association and a gift to the Counties attaining "Front Line" and "Banner" standing. It was very thoroughly appreciated by the very large audience in the afternoon session.

Three Forceful Addresses

Added to the foregoing was three impressive and forceful addresses delivered on the following subjects "Setting my school at Work to Win" by Rev. C. D. Draper, Milton; "Religious Education, Its Scope", by Dr. J. C. Robertson, who is editing the new Teacher Training book on Administration, and the last address was that by Mr. R. A. Waite on the subject "The Annual Glimpse of the International field. In this Mr. Waite pointed out the personnel and the program of the Sunday School Association. Mr. Waite gave us a quotation from W. R. Birks, who is now at the front as supervisor of the Canadian troops. "The real constructive work of the kingdom is being done at home by the Sunday School, the Y.M.C.A. and kindred organizations." Mr. Waite urged that in view of the fact that this war may be drawn out for years, that everyone [illegible] who are now being called to the colors.

Officers' Luncheon

A very large and successful County and Township Officers' luncheon was held in the Murray St. Baptist church, at which reports were given from the Executive Committee of the Chatham session, in which Mr. Halpenny reported that Mr. G. K. Quarrington of Toronto was elected as President of the Ontario Sunday School Association for the ensuing year.

Twin Meetings at Night

Twin meetings were held in the evening, one in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church for Women only, and one in the Convention church for men only. The speakers at the Women's meeting were Miss Mable Taggart of Toronto, and Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner of Chicago. At the Men's gathering, Rev. T. A. Halpenny of Ottawa, and Mr. R. A. Waite of Chicago, were the speakers.

Closing Session Tonight

Tonight, commencing at 7.30 the convention's proceedings will be brought to a close with the following program in George Street Methodist Church:

MARKED ABSENCE OF CRIME IN BOTH CITY AND COUNTY

Report of Grand Jury to Justiee Satchford is No Female Prisoners---Public Institutions All That Can Be Desired.

The Supreme Court of Ontario concluded its brief sitting in the city council chamber yesterday morning, when the grand jury presented the report of their visit to county institutions as follows:

Peterborough, Oct. 31, 1917

To His Lordship
Mr. Justice Latchford.

In accordance with your explicit instructions and illuminating advice we, the Grand Jurors, have endeavored to carry out the duties imposed upon us with expedition, having in mind due measure of our responsibility, both as to the expenditure of public monies as well as the all-important present necessity of the utmost regard for the spirit of public institutions.

No Females in Gaol.

We have, therefore, inspected the County Gaol, and are pleased to report favorably on conditions generally.

We found therein two unfortunate persons mentally unbalanced, but who have been only a short time so detained preparatory to some better arrangement for their proper care. We found also two aged men, who had been inmates of suitable institutions but who were so quarrelsome that, for the sake of and the comfort of other inmates, it was considered better to have these men placed in the County Gaol failing further better arrangement. We were gratified to note that there were no female prisoners.

The County Buildings.

We were pleased to observe that the reconstruction of that portion of the County Buildings destroyed by fire in December last were rapidly approaching completion.

The plans decided upon by the County Council in this way, appear to have been well thought out having regard to the value and usefulness of the undestroyed portion and also in the matter of public economy, which is of great moment at this time, and the building when completed promises efficiency and ample accommodation.

The Hospitals.

We inspected the Nicholls and St. Joseph Hospitals, and were impressed with the wholesome and attractive appearance of every detail. We also visited the House of Providence. This institution is evidently all that could be desired in every respect.

In order to economise in time and expense, we did not continue our investigations further, inasmuch as we were given to understand that all other public institutions in the County not referred to herein had been inspected once during the current year by the Grand Jury.

Absence of Crime.

Permit us to offer our appreciation of your opening remarks regarding the absence of crime in our midst, as shown by the docket presented to you.

In conclusion, may we express our hope that health and strength may be long continued to you in the discharge of your important task and duty to the State.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

FRAZEE GETTING CHESTY.

Harry Frazee, president and principal owner of the Boston club, is said to be on the war path again, with newspaper men the game that he is stalking. He got in wrong in New York, during the world series, for bawling out a writer who had printed, several months previous, a few paragraphs of criticism of the gambling that flourished at the Red Sox field. This occurrence, which has been mentioned before, was in a theatrical club at which the newspaper man was a guest and of which Frazee is a member. It was impossible, of course, for the assailed one to demonstrate resentment.

It would appear that new conditions that he has met has spoiled Frazee. He knows newspapers from the theatrical producers' standpoint and knows that advance men approach the dramatic editor treading very lightly, and offer up paeans of praise when they get into print a story of any length. The idea of being pursued by a lot of baseball reporters, who solicit, rather than refuse, matter that boosts an amusement attraction, is something entirely new, and has magnified his idea of the importance of a magnate. The number of club owners who know how to deal with the agency that makes their game seems to get smaller each year.

WILL KEEP THE BRAVES.

There will be no change in the ownership of the Boston Braves, at least for the present and immediate future. Percy D. Haughton and his baseball associates have met all of their obligations, including extraordinary overhead charges on the Boston park, and have decided to go on. From a reliable source it is learned that James E. Gaffney and others have been paid for the Braves' franchise. Haughton was much encouraged by the sudden improvement of the Braves in September, and it is said that he believes the team, with a trifle more strengthening, will be a factor in next year's race. If the Braves should develop winning caliber in 1918 there isn't a doubt that Haughton & Co. would make some money. The failure of the Red Sox to get into the recent world's series was a hard blow for the American league in Boston. For that reason Haughton and his friends feel that they have a chance to win popular favor if the Braves are able to make a successful gift for one of the leading positions in the National league race.

SPORT NOTES

Principal G. L. Sprague, of the Hamilton Technical school, is smarting under what he terms poor sportsmanship on the part of Tigers. Speaking of this he said:

"Tigers have certainly not been acting fairly with us. They have already taken Stowe and Caffery away from us, and have weakened our team considerably. I spoke to Bob Isbister, of Tigers, about the matter, but he told me it was none of his affair. But some person is to blame, and whoever is in control at the H.A.A.A. field should see that the practice of tampering is stopped. I would not tolerate any of our officials going after Tiger players, and I expect the same treatment from Tiger officers.

"We are out to place Hamilton Technical school on the sporting map, and I don't think it does Tigers credit to hinder us in our efforts. Stowe and Caffery are also to blame in the matter. Both gave us their word that they would turn out, and we were surprised when we found that they had listened to Tiger appeals."

Tom Wren, "Go" Fickley, Hourigan of Dundas and Ross Craig are being sought by the Hamilton Technical school. Jack McAllister, who is assisting in the managing of the team, believes that the famous line-plunger can be coaxed into uniform.

It was Clarence Fickley, "Tech" quarter-back, who made Sheppard, the husky Cap wing, pull the star bone play of the recent game in Hamilton. Sheppard was running with the ball when Fickley called out, "Right here, old man!" Sheppard fell for the trick, and Fickley almost got away for a try. Had he possessed more speed he would have scored.

Tigers and Parkdale wore the same colored stockings in a recent game, and the result was both teams became mixed up in their play several times. The players were tackling their own men part of the time.

Bobbie Hewitson, secretary of the O.R.F.U., is making an effort to secure Varsity Stadium for the Tiger Parkdale game next Saturday.

Mike Rodden, former Queen's and Ottawa college player, has joined Parkdale. He is a fine tackler, and will, no doubt, add strength to the Toronto team.

"Jim" Reynolds, Noted Pedestrian Is Dead

PASSED AWAY AT PORT HOPE HOSPITAL—AGED 67 YEARS

James Reynolds, the noted pedestrian of Port Hope, upon whose heel-and-toe exploits no inconsiderable amount of money has in past years changed hands, passed away at the Port Hope hospital Tuesday night. He was 67 years of age.

Deceased for many years engaged in the barbering business on John street, Port Hope. One son, Howard Reynolds of Rochester, N.Y., survives him.

The late Mr. Reynolds made his first walk from Port Hope to Toronto on June 1st, 1906, and made the trip in a little over eighteen hours. On June 24th, 1907, he started to walk from Port Hope to Toronto and return in 38 hours, but on the return trip he had only reached Newcastle when he succumbed to the heat. On this occasion he had 5 1-2 hours to walk the remaining 17 1-2 miles. In September, 1908, he made the round trip in 36 hours and 18 minutes, notwithstanding an accident to his shin at the Woodbine. On June 13th, 1910, Mr. Reynolds endeavored to make the round trip in 36 hours, but when near Newcastle he had to give up.

His last great walking exploit was on June 12th, 1911, when he attempted to make a trip from Port Hope to Toronto and return in 25 hours. He abandoned the undertaking when a mile west of Newcastle, eighteen miles from Port Hope, having been seized with cramps. However, considering that he was 60 years of age, he had made good time.

PRINCE BISMARCK AND THE JUNKERS

Famous German Leader Disliked by Militants.

JEALOUS OF HIS POWER

The "Iron Chancellor" Found Himself Snubbed and Thwarted by the Aristocrats of His Own Country, and Had Even to Obtain News From British Newspaperman.

A STRIKING illustration of the supremacy of militarism in the German Government is furnished by the Frankfurter Zeitung. This Liberal organ prints extracts from Bismarck's "Thoughts and Reminiscences" which prove that even the "Iron Chancellor," who is generally reputed to be the father of German imperialism, was barred from Prussian military circles and unacquainted with the plans and schemes of the Junkers.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says:

"It is in accordance with the towering greatness of Prince Bismarck, and, at the same time with the influence he exerted on world politics, to regard him to-day as the centre of any event. He enjoyed, to an exceptional degree, the confidence of the old King William; he was with him continually at headquarters, and gave him advice. Would not anybody be willing to say on his oath that this man must have exerted the greatest influence on the military authorities? Does it not seem to be one of the characteristics of the 'good old time' that war was really nothing but an instrument of Bismarck's policy of 'blood and [illegible]' [illegible] to draw such conclusions from these considerations should be advised to read in the second volume of 'Gedanken and Erinnerungen' what Bismarck himself thought of the demeanor of the 'military demigods' toward him.

"During the Austrian-Prussian war of 1866 Bismarck was always taken as a participator in the military councils, and, occasionally, he was able to employ his influence in the interests of his policy, and had the Prussian army march in the direction of Pressburg, instead of Vienna. Although Bismarck was an intimate friend of Roon, the Prussian Minister of War, and kept good relations with Moltke, he was, from the outset, excluded from the military councils in 1870; even the intervention of Count Eberhard Stolberg with the King did not result in the revocation of the military 'boycot' as Bismarck used to say.

"Already at the time of the departure (from Berlin to the theatre of war) Bismarck overheard by chance a conversation of Roon and General Podbielski, when the last-named said: 'This time arrangements have been made so that such things as happened during the Bohemian (Prussian-Austrian) War will not occur again to us (the military commanders).'

"Bismarck said with much anger that the unfriendliness of the military demi-gods (as the higher officers of the General Staff used to be called) had shown itself against him and his staff even in reference to food and quarters. . . . A striking insight into the situation is contained in the following statements which are made by Bismarck in his "Gedanken and Erinnerungen':

"'At that time I attempted to get, as far as possible, the news about the military situation, which I needed to form a judgment on the political situation, by entertaining confidential relations with the gentlemen who constituted the second staff of the headquarters, for these royal gentlemen heard considerably more concerning the military events and intentions than the responsible Minister of Foreign Affairs (Bismarck), and gave me much information which was valuable to me, and which, they believed, was no secret to me.'

'The whole of Bismarck's anger may be seen from the further statement that the British newspaper correspondent at headquarters, Russell, was, as a rule, better informed than Bismarck himself: 'He was a profitable source of information about the intentions of the [illegible]

ALL SOULS' DAY.

O Lord, to whom the spirits live
Of all the faithful passed away,
Unto their path that brightness give
Which shineth to the perfect day.
Refrain—
Light eternal, Jesus blest,
Shine on them and grant them rest.

Bless Thou the dead who die in Thee.
And make their painful labors cease.
O purge them from impurity,
And give them everlasting peace.

In Thy green, pleasant pastures feed
The sheep which Thou hast summoned hence,
And by the still cool waters lead
Thy flock in loving providence.

Heal Thou the wounds of earthly strife,
Pouring upon the faint Thy balm.
The wearied with the toils of life
Place in the breast of Abraham.

How long, O Holy Lord, how long
Must we and they expectant wait
To hear the gladsome bridal song,
To see Thee in Thy royal state?

O hearken, Saviour, to their cry,
O rend the heavens and come down.
Make up Thy jewels speedily
And set them in Thy golden crown.

Direct us with Thine arm of might
And bring us, perfected with them,
To dwell within Thy city bright,

SUGAR DROPS

BIG MONTREAL CONCERN LEADS OFF ON PRICE TREND DOWNWARDS.

Montreal, Oct. 31.—Welcome announcement of a drop in the price of sugar was made here today by the Atlantic Sugar Refineries, Limited, the price of Lantic Sugar being lowered ten cents per cwt., all grades. The announcement was made as the first step in the downward trend of sugar prices, the Company promising further reductions as conditions permitted.

While the Company has no very large stock of sugar on hand, for the immediate market, it anticipates no trouble in securing sufficient raw sugar to keep the refinery running continuously and is satisfied that sufficient raw sugar is being contracted for to supply the normal Canadian demand, if hoarding and speculating be eliminated.

That no sugar famine threatens will be welcome news to the consumer, if somewhat disconcerting to those who have been boasting of their foresight in laying in substantial quantities of sugar at the higher price.

When you reach your bottom dollar you still have the foundations for a fortune.

THRILLING ESCAPE.

Young Canadian Flyer Ran Into Blinding Storm.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Nov. 1. — Starting out with the sun shining, Ralph Kirkland, aged nineteen, of 402 St. James street, Boston, training with the Canadian Aviation Corps, ran into a blinding snowstorm high over Lake Ontario late today. He circled for hours, finally sighting Brock's monument, near Fort Niagara. Attempting to land, he missed the monument by inches, broke the fence, and wrecked the plane, but escaped with bruises. He will return to Toronto to fly tomorrow undaunted.

Hallowe'en at the Y.W.C.A. Last Night

SPIRIT OF FROLIC AND FUN IN EVIDENCE AT ENJOYABLE PARTY

The Hallowe'en spirit of fun and frolic was very much in evidence at the masquerade party at the Y. W. C. A. last evenig, when nearly three hundred and fifty girls and young women enjoyed an hilarious time.

At 8 o'clock a procession of masked and otherwise disguised figures filed past the ghostly doorkeepers, and in a short time the gymnasium was thronged with all sorts and conditions of characters. Several nationalities were represented; princes rubbed shoulders with peasants and clowns and pierrots chatted with dancing girls, while fairies and ghosts flitted to and fro. Many of the costumes were very cleverly planned, and the whole scene was exceedingly picturesque.

One outstanding feature of the evening was a dance of ghosts and witches, very fantastic and creepy, around a glowing cauldron, while the spectators sat in darkness and shivered with delight at the wierdness.

On the whole it was a most successful Hallowe'en party and will long remain in the memory of those present as a very jolly evening.

HA LLOWE'ENTEA W ASMERRY ONE

That the tea given by the ladies of St. Peter's Patriotic Club yesterday afternoon excelled all previous occasions was the unanimous opinion of the large crowd that visited the club rooms during the afternoon. On entering the tea room one felt as though they were being ushered into Fairyland—a fairyland evolved from charming hostesses, pretty waitresses, pumpkin shaded candles and mirriors in happy combination. The decorations of yellow and black were used extensively throughout the tea room, the hostesses and their assistants being dressed in white with pretty aprons and caps of yellow. The tea table was draped in yellow and black crepe paper, a large Jack-O-Lantern smiled from the centre amid a plentiful supply of sandwiches and cake, the lights above being shrouded in gorgeous orange.

Tall brass candle sticks holding lighted candles were placed on the piano, and smaller candles and fairies on the tea tables. The hostesses, Mrs. M. Tooley, Mrs. Fred Shannon and Mrs. A. A. McGibbon were assisted by Mrs. Angus McPherson who poured tea and the Misses Annie and Lilian Simons, Myrtle Wolff, and Annie Kelly, who waited on the different tables.

Suitable music for the occasion was provided by Miss Hurley and Miss Marion Gorman. The tea was a great success both socially and financially and the ladies wish to thank all who helped to add to their funds, the nice sum of twenty dollars, which will be used to procure comforts for the brave boys overseas who are suffering so much for us all.

EVELYN NESBIT IN REDEMPTION

"REDEMPTION" A POWERFUL DRAMA

(From N. Y. America, by "Zit.")

Probably no girl or woman in the world has received the amount of newspaper publicity given Evelyn Nesbit since the day of her teens, and that sort of publicity which does not always cast the best impressions upon readers, for they form an opinion and are ever ready to condemn or praise, and I think in Miss Nesbit's case she has been condemned, for very few seek to analyze two sides of a story.

"Redemption," as produced at the George Cohan Theatre last night, is a redemption for Evelyn Nesbit. I defy any living souls to see this picture and refrain from getting a lump in their throat and keep the eyes from watering, even if they do not cry. It is unbelievable that a vaudeville dancing artist, as Miss Nesbit has been, with her partner, Jack Clifford, could throw herself into the hands of Julius Steger, the director of motion pictures, and have him turn her out to be one of the greatest dramatic actresses on the screen today.

"Redemption" is based on the life of Evelyn Nesbit, but is worked in so cleverly and so beautifully that one would hardly realize it is her life. The picture brings in her little son, Russell Thaw, and her husband, Jack Clifford, for a moment, and although there is a suggestion of the Standford White-Harry Thaw affair, there is only a passing glance which works into one of the most powerful dramatic stories that has been told on the screen. People who have read and read the life of Evelyn Nesbit, and have formed their opinion, will change it for the benefit of Miss Nesbit after they see this marvellous, gigantic, stupendous production called "Redemption."

Every detail in photography is there, and not a point has been missed. After withessing the performance I shook hands with Miss Nesbit and complimented her, and she modestly said, "Don't compliment me. All the compliments go to Julius Steger." I have shouted Miss Nesbit's praises as a whirlwind dancer in vaudeville, and I am going to shout her praises as an actress in this picture.

Every exhibitor will not only do a big business because of Miss Nesbit's name, but they will do four times the business, for "Redemption" is a picture, beautifully told, beautifully taken and artistically directed by the marter hands of Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden. It is one of those long lingering remembering kind. It is not a picture you see today and forget tomorrow. It is a picture you will remember as long as you live, and Evelyn Nesbit can thank the screen, for she can now tell her true story to the world, and the world will love her, after they have seen her in "Redemption."

P. S.—At the end of the performance Miss Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, were spied, sitting in lower Box C. Midst big applause, she stood up and remarked, "Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you for your kind appreciation. It certainly makes me feel very happy."

"Redemption" will be shown at "The Grand" for three days with daily matinees, commencing Monday, Nov. 5.

Providence, R. The police commission was requested by the council to refuse further permission for concerts here during the war "when conducted by Dr. Muck."

WIN-THE-WAR CONVENTION MEETING IN HAMILTON

Delegates Pledge Support to Union Candidates Who Are Nominated at Fusion Conventions.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Hamilton, Nov. 2.—Men and women delegates from all parts of Ontario gathered here today for the provincial convention of conscriptionist Liberals which opened this morning n the Royal Connaught Hotel. The convention promises to be one of the most important political conferences since the formation of Union Government and there seems to be no doubt that it will endorse that government practically unanimously.

Sir John Gibson called the organization meeting to order and the delegates immediately elected G. G. S. Lindsay, K.C., of Toronto as chairman, and Alexander Stuart of Guelph, Secretary. Mayor Booker welcomed the delegates, pointing out with emphasis that the convention was for Canada as against party and for conscription. He strongly denounced machine rule and slackers and favored the conscription of wealth.

This afternoon the convention passed the following resolutions:

Won Out Over C. J. Darling, His Only Apponent, Several Others Declining The Nomination—Laurier Still the Party's Monitor and Hope—Saw Off With West Riding Talked Of.

WILLIAM H. Johnston, a well-known farmer near Havelock, was nominated yesterday by the Liberals in convention at Norwood to contest the riding of East Peterborough in opposition to Mr. J. E. Sexsmith, M.P., the present member. Mr. Johnston's only competitor for the honor was ex-Warden C. J. Darling.

There were something over one hundred delegates and others present in the Town Hall when Dr. D. Munro, President of the East Peterborough Liberal Association, called the meeting to order. Reeve William Mathison acted as secretary. Among those present from the city were Messrs. R. R. Hall, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., J. J. Hartley and F. D. Kerr. Mr. Sexsmith was in the village, but naturally remained away from the convention hall.

THE NOMINATIONS.

When the nominations were called for, the names of the following were presented:

W. H. Johnston, by Alex. Penrose and W. T. Curtis.
Ex-Warden C. J. Darling, by M. Walsh and T. Leahey.
Dr. Munro, by C. J. Darling and Fred Welsh.
F. D. Kerr, by William Anderson and Joseph Johnston.
R. R. Hall, by Charles O'Reilly and C. J. Darling.

One by one the nominees withdrew until only Messrs. Johnston and Darling were left in the field.

Mr. Johnston's Address.

Before a ballot was taken, Mr. Johnston addressed the meeting briefly. Touching on conscription, he said that as it was now a law of the land the people must abide by it.

"There is," he said, "not a man here who will not go as far as the other side to win the war."

Mr. Johnston promised to make a personal canvass of the riding in the event of the nomination going to him. If nominated and elected, he promised to do everything possible to advance the interests of his constituents.

Mr. Darling spoke briefly. The sum of his remarks was a pledge to support Mr. Johnston if the convention settled upon him as the nominee. He said the nation's first duty was to find out what the Empire needed to win the war. If men are needed, let men be sent. If it is food that is required, then let all the country's resources be devoted to sending food.

A Question on Conscription.

Just after Dr. Munro had announced that a ballot would be taken, Mr. Fred Eason of Otonabee rose in his place and stated that before they voted, some of the delegates wished to hear the views of the candidates on the conscription issue. Mr. Johnston repeated what he had said, that conscription was now a law, and as such must be obeyed.

"Perhaps that does not go far enough," said the chairman. "You may want to know whether, if elected, our candidate would vote for the repeal of conscription."

"We do," replied Mr. Eason, who was still on his feet.

Right here Dr. Munro laid bare the policy of his party. He had been one of a delegation that waited on Sir Wilfrid Laurier recently in order to get his final word on the great issue. The result of the conference will not be given until Sir Wilfrid publishes his long-looked-for statement.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier told us," said Dr. Munro, "that he will not repeal conscription if he is returned to power. He will proceed to ascertain what Canada is expected to do further to win the war, and will leave the Military Service Bill on the statute books in case it be needed later."

This appeared to satisfy the delegates, and a ballot was then taken, the nomination going to Mr. Johnston. The number of votes cast for each candidate was not announced. From the first Mr. Johnston's nomination had been apparently considered as a foregone conclusion.

The Speakers of the Day.

Mr. Gordon Waldron of Toronto and Mr. R. R. Hall of this city were the orators who set out to inspire those at the meeting with hope and comfort. Both gentlemen made forcible and eloquent addresses. Mr. Waldron is a lawyer, and appeared for Saturday Night in the recent bacon investigation. He is one of the proprietors of The Weekly Sun and a campaign speaker of note, but even at that he has nothing on Peterborough's Liberal war-horse, Mr. Hall.

No Submission.

"If union means submission, the Liberals will not have it," said Mr. F. D. Kerr in his speech declining the nomination. He added that the Liberals of Ontario had nothing to be ashamed of in the part they had taken to help win the war.

Mr. Johnston's Record.

It is just about twenty years ago since Mr. J. E. Sexsmith, M.P., made his first appearance in public life as member of the township council. One of his first acts was to help place Mr. W. H. Johnston in the office of clerk of the municipality, a position which he held until a few years ago. This is the sum total of Mr. Johnston's experience in public life.

Expect a Saw-off.

Although the Liberals have put a candidate in the field, they are not yet sure that it is impossible to avoid an election. A plan which they have in mind was spoken of among the unterrified yesterday. Here is the way a prominet member of the party reasoned it out:

"You cannot have union without a fair division. You cannot, for instance, divide one cent between two children, giving the money to one of them, and have them both satisfied. If you have two children and two cents, the task is an easy one. All you have to do is to give one to each.

"Here we have two ridings, both held by Conservatives. Let the Conservatives keep one of them and give the other to the Liberals. The two present members can get together and draw names from a hat or toss a coin to decide which one should retire. In that way there could be an equable division between the two parties, and an election could be avoided in each riding."

That is the proposition. It is almost unnecessary to add that neithe Captain Burnham nor Mr. Sexsmith is likely to listen to such a suggestion for a moment.

All Doubts Cleared Up.

Before adjourning the delegates cleared up all doubts as to their position by adopting a resolution expressing confidence in the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Mr. Johnston stated that he would run as a straight Liberal.

BUSY DAY AT THE ARMORIES

DATES FOR EXAMINATIONS BOOKED AHEAD AS FAR AS MONDAY

The rush of men to the Armories for examination by Drs. Cameron, Eastwood and Greer increases if anything, and appointments for examination are booked ahead as far as Monday.

Yesterday 55 men were examined, their grading being as follows: A 29, B 9, C 6 and E 11.

18 Yesterday Afternoon.

Eighteen men passed through the ordeal yesterday afternoon. Eight of these were classed in A category, 3 in B, 1 in C, and 6 in E. It will be seen that the percentage of men at this session physically unfit for any service was high.

13 Last Night.

Thirteen examinations was the amount of business at last night's session. The number of A men passed was exactly the same as in the afternoon—eight. There were also 2 B's and 3 E's.

LETTER CARRIERS RESOLVE TO WALK OUT ON NOVEMBER 15TH

Unless in the Meantime the Department Consents to Grant Their Demands for More Pay or at Least to Arbitrate Dispute.

The letter carriers of this city, acting with the postal employes throughout the country, asked the Government for a raise of $20 a month. Instead of this they received the promise of an increase of $100 a year, and even this promise has not been implemented.

The letter carriers then requested Minister of Labor Crothers to appoint a board of conciliation to arbitrate their differences with the Government. This request has been refused, the Minister taking the ground that the Industrial Disputes Act cannot be invoked to settle disputes between the civil employes and the various departments.

In the meantime the work of the local carriers is being increased. The straw required to break the camel's back may yet be added to their loads. Tons of literature in connection with the Military Service Act have to be distributed. As one carrier remarked, the postal employes are being called on to do work that properly belongs to the bill-posters.

Thousands of letters having to do with the Victory Loan must be distributed by the carriers, all of it first-class mail, tomorrow and Monday. Rain or shine, this work must be done. The work grows, but the wages remain stationary.

Their Latest Protest.

The loacl carriers in session assembled, have drawn up and unanimously adopted the following resolution, which explains itself:

"Resolved: That we, the letter carriers of the city of Peterborough, in meeting here assembled, regret that Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, has seen fit to refuse the letter carriers of Canada a board of conciliation, as per our former request;

Be it further resolved: That we also regret that Hon. Mr. Doherty (acting P. M. G.) has also seen fit to refuse the increase asked for by the carriers over a year ago.

Be it resolved: That the unanimous opinion of the carriers of Peterborough, Branch No. 22, F.A.L.C., cast our votes with the large majority of carriers throughout the Dominion of Canada in favor of a walk-out by handing in our resignations, to take effect on condition that if a substantial raise is not forthcoming on or before a certain date, ———, or date to be decided by the executive committee of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers.

Considering that the Government, in its own words, stated that the hundred dollars was not intended to compensate a man to the full cost of living, be it

Resolved, that, as the Department has admitted this, they do sincerely know and acknowledge same as per their reply, that we now call upon the said Government for what we consider our just rights, and in consideration of such being refused, that we unanimously endorse a straight walkout not later than Nov. 15th, 1917.

And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to A. McMordie, and if he approves of same that a copy also be sent to Sir R. L. Borden, Premier, Hon. W. T. Crothers, Minister of Labor, and Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P."

WILL SPEAK IN PETERBOROUGH

The Conservative-Union Association has received word through Capt. Burnham that Hon. F. B. Carvell, the noted Liberal member of the new Union Government, and Minister of Public Works, will speak in this city on the 19th or 20th of November. Capt. Burnham received a letter from Mr. Carvell this morning stating that he is very busy, especially in the Maritime Provinces, but that he will be only too pleased to come to this city for a meeting.

Capt. Burnham is also securing Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, for the same occasion, and a great union meeting will be held in the Armories, it being understood between the two parties that the Armories will be used for public meetings in the interest of the State by all parties, and if Labor wishes the Armories for a meeting, they will be welcome to it.

This general meeting will not be in any narrow spirit. Liberals and Conservatives have united to win the war. They have not renounced their principles or party, but have allowed them to stand aside until they get the fire out.

BRITISH PRESS DECLARE NAVAL SITUATION GRAVE

Sir Eric Geddes' Speech in Parliament Draws Frank Comment From London Journals.

London, Nov. 2.—The Maiden effort of Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty in the House of Commons yesterday is not received wholly favorably by the newspapers in their editorial comment. He is praised for his frank and businesslike statement which drew cheers from the commoners and it is admitted that he said much which is satisfactory and reassuring.

The Daily Mail which has been opposed to the present policies of the Admiralty says the speech on the whole dealt fairly and straightforwardly with the criticisms, but it complains that when all is said the fact remains that the Germans are forcing the fighting at sea.

The bulk of comment accepts and endorses Sir Eric's explanation that the British fleet did not try to enter the Baltic and also his statement on the convoy incident. Criticism is directed chiefly against the conduct of the submarine war and ship construction.

The Times regards his statement concerning the submarine warfare as candid and encouraging and says that his report of construction is reasonably satisfactory. On the other hand the Daily Telegraph, Daily News, Daily Chronicle and Daily Express are dissatisfied on these points.

The Telepraph complains that the past ministerial optimistic estimates on production have not been realized and that the shipping situation is becoming graver and graver.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1917

"30" FOR WALTER ENGLISH.

"30," THE NEWSPAPERMAN'S symbol for the end, was imprinted on the earthly career of Walter John English when he passed away at his home here yesterday afternoon. For the past two years Mr. English had been on the reportorial staff of The Review and had for several months, before ill-health compelled his retirement, filled the position of city editor.

In the death of Mr. English The Review has lost a faithful and efficient employe whose place it will be hard to fill. In every way he was well equipped for the profession, especially in the local field. Born and raised as he was in the city, he knew the situation perfectly. He was familiar with the history of Peterborough and his judgment on all public questions was invaluable.

Mr. English's memory will always be cherished by those with whom he was associated in this office, as his relations with the members of every department were ever of the most cordial nature. His capacity for work was nothing short of marvellous, and he was always willing to do more than his share. Late or early, it made no difference to him when the necessity arose. He was a man faithful to the trust The Review reposed in him, devoted to the interests of the paper, and thoroughly reliable in all that he did. His former associates, who so sincerely grieve at his going, realize that it will be many a day — if ever — before they meet with his like again.

To the very end, so long as it was possible, Mr English remained at his post, working away in spite of what he must have realized was a hopeless physical affliction, when a man with a weaker will would have given up in despair.

The members of the editorial staff of The Review, with whom the late Mr. English was most directly associated, the business office and the mechanical force, with all of whom he was popular, join in tendering to the bereaved family their sincere sympathy in their affliction.

—ALEX. McGREGOR.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

AT THE LIBERAL convention at Norwood yesterday, ex-Warden Darling, whose name was put up for the nomination, admitted that the country is not yet clear as to what the Empire wants from Canada to help win the war. Is it men or is it only food? "If," said Mr. Darling, "it is men, let us send them; if it is food, let use produce food."

There should be no doubt on either of these two points. Both ave been settled long ago, for it has been demonstrated that men and food are needed. It is only the drowning politician, who, as he finds the water closing over him, clutches wildly at such straws as those that have got in the line of vision of Mr. Darling and his party.

THE EAST PETERBOROUGH NOMINATION.

MR. WILLIAM H. JOHNSTON, who was yesterday nominated by the Liberals of East Peterborough to contest the riding with Mr. J. E. Sexsmith, M.P., would under normal political conditions be a strong candidate for his party, a foeman worthy of Mr. Sexsmith's steel. He has never been in public life before outside of holding the clerkship in his municipality, and on that account has raised up for himself no factional opposition. He is a popular resident, a successful farmer and a man of the highest reputation. Unfortunately for his political chances, however, he has been placed in the running at an inopportune time and all the chances are against him. Blameless as he is himself, his political associations are not above question.

Liberals in East or West Peterborough have, up to yesterday, carefully concealed their policy. At the gathering in Norwood, however, it was laid bare, and Dr. Munro, the presiding officer, is the man who drew back the curtain. East Peterborough Liberals have one hope left, one leader to whom they owe allegiance, and that hope and leader is Sir Wilfrid Laurier. No candidate in Ontario can attempt to pose as a Unionist so long as he follows the lead of the chieftain.

Mr. Johnston is a conscriptionist. In his address yesterday he made it clear that no man should be permitted to shirk while another fights for him. There were plenty of Liberals in the convention hall who hold the same opinion. But Mr. Johnston's statement did not satisfy all of these. When Mr. Charles Eason of Otonabee asked him for a further declaration, the issue was brought to a climax.

Dr. Munro, fresh from Ottawa, then delivered a message from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, a message that has all the force of an official propaganda. If Sir Wilfrid is made Premier of Canada he will not repeal the Military Service Act. He will make that trip to England and ascertain just what the Imperial war officials desire further in the way of service from this country. In the meantime he will leave the Military Service Act on the statute books in case it is required later.

That is plain as a pikestaff, but what is the difference between a law that is repealed and one that is left in abeyance?

Mr. Johnston's position is clear. He is a Laurier Liberal, no matter what may be said to the contrary. And everyone knows Sir Wilfrid's policy is one of temporizing when conditions call for prompt action. What support can Mr. Johnston expect from the conscriptionists in his riding? How will the war party as represented by Mr. Eason of Otonabee be likely to regard such a policy? How will the new women voters cast their ballots? What possible chance has Mr. Johnston in the coming election?

THE GAMBLER'S CHANCE.

TAKING A GAMBLER'S chance, as they must realize they are, the Liberals in the two local ridings now propose to settle the whole proposition by the toss of a coin, drawing slips from a hat, shaking a dice box, or some other equally exciting method. Roman emperors, according to history, staked provinces on a game of chance, and the Liberals would have the men who have represented the two ridings for the past six years raffle away their futures, the one who loses to retire to private life, leaving his riding to a Liberal nominee. The copper coin that would be necessary for such a shuffle represents more than the value of the proposition.

MR. GADSBY AT HIS OLD TRICKS.

THE EXAMINER devotes considerable space on its front page to a letter written by F. H. Gadsby, in which he scores the Borden Government and Sir Joseph Flavelle, and which was published in The Review. Our contemporary appears to be wonder struck that an effusion by the journalistic adventurer mentioned should find space in the columns of a Conservative paper.

Mr. Gadsby may be regarded as a local celebrity, and as such there is nobody in Peterborough who has as many valid reasons for knowing him well as The Examiner itself. The very mention of his name should arouse painful memories upon the part of our contemporary. It was no other than Mr. Gadsby who, in the election of 1911, was imported into this city and placed in charge of the editorial department of The Examiner, and of the local Liberal campaign. What he did to our esteemed neighbor and to the party is now a matter of painful history. Where he found order he left chaos; where he found a party safe, to all outward appearance, he left rack and ruin. The artillery which he used six years ago against the enemy was the same as he is directing against the new Union Government and Sir Joseph Flavelle today, and is likely to prove a boomerang, just as it did in 1911.

No one who knows Mr Gadsby will take him seriously. He has space to fill in the newspapers and a mission in life to perform. The Examiner should be the last to regard him as an influence. His record is before the people. He seems to have a faculty chiefly remarkable for getting on the wrong side of every public question. Reciprocity, for instance, and all that followed in the trail of the policy that wrecked a party.

Where, again, was Mr. Gadsby to be found when the Borden Naval Aid Bill was before Parliament? Burning up newspaper space as usual, making light of the so-called German menace and deriding the possibility of another war. Once again Mr. Gadsby was wrong, and once again he lost prestige as a prophet.

His letter which was published in The Review is valuable as a terrible example. It shows the tactics that are being employed by the Opposition in their attempt to bring discredit upon the Government.

The Examiner has at various times itself applied harsh terms to Premier Borden. Sometimes we have reproduced these expressions, but simply as a warning, as an illustration of what the enemy is doing. That is journalism as we understand it. To print Mr. Gadsby's diatribe simply goes to show that that versatile but somewhat misguided gentleman is at his old tricks again, and is still pursuing the same reckless career so prone to work ruin and desolation in the house of his own friends. The Examiner's effusion last night is only another proof that when it essays to speak some of its friends should hold its feet.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

BEYOND THE ALPS lies a reinforced and determined Italy.

• • • •

LATE NEWS from the political front carries only one moral to the Unionists — "Get busy."

• • • •

MEATLESS DAYS, wheatless days, but Hallowe'en seems impossible without a few tricks.

• • • •

ARE THE PEOPLE going to be wise on December 17 or are they going to vote for the Laurier candidates?

• • • •

ANY ACTIVITY displayed by the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Ontario will simply solidify the Union forces.

• • • •

DOES THE EXAMINER imagine that harmony can be promoted by lambasting the Administration even with Mr. Gadsby's club?

• • • •

TALKING OF BONDS, there are those bail bonds that the three alleged pickpockets arrested here regarded as so many scraps of paper.

• • • •

SIR ROBERT BORDEN should be returned to power both for his own virtues and because of the nature of the opposition which confronts him.

• • • •

TO SAY THAT there are half a million hungry women in Canada was simply one of Mr. Gadsby's little jokes, but if the statement gets to Berlin it will likely be taken in all seriousness.

• • • •

THE LIBERAL who says he is not clear as to what is expected of Canada in this war is at least no worse than the offender who attempts to excuse himself by pleading ignorance of the law.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Well Put.

Touching Hopes in Windsor.

(Windsor Record.)

By dispensing with the campaign funds, destroying campaign literature, and introducing civil service reform; the Union Government is starting off in great style. Is this the dawn of the Millennium?

Makes for Stronger Papers.

(Newspaperdom, New York.)

The merger in Boston whereby the Boston Herald has absorbed the Boston Journal, coming as it does close upon the heels of the consolidation in Cleveland, but goes to prove that the economic influences which have for months past been so apparent in the field of small dailies and country weeklies are extending with increasing force to the metropolitan dailies. If the spirit of concentration makes for stronger papers, however, the war necessities will not be without compensation.

THE END OF ONE ROMANCE

"I saw a fine thing today while I was shopping," began Mrs. Billers.

"When is it coming and how much will it put me back?" asked Billers in that tone of pleased expectancy that a husband can assume when he discerns the approach of a flank attack on the family budget.

"Not a penny, my dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Billers. "What I did buy today will go on next month's bill, so why worry? What I wished to tell you about was the wonderful innovation that has been introduced in town. It is surely going to revolutionize housekeeping.

"The drudgery of the kitchen will soon be a thing of the bitter past and unfettered housewives will rise to new ideals and higher aspirations. They are going to slough off their hitherto unending round of pots and pans, baking and stewing."

"I get you, my dear," said Billers. "You have been watching a demonstration in some drug store or grocer's window of a new labor saving device that some philanthropist is going to saddle upon 4,000,000 innocent American angels of the home. You will buy it and next week be looking for a junkman who is offering high prices for white elephants."

"No, Henry," said Mrs. Billers. "It was a mechanical restaurant I dined in. Everything done by machinery. And the wonderful idea dawned on me to use the same scheme in feeding a family. It would liberate wives who do their own cooking and eliminate cooks in families who can afford such luxuries.

"We are heading for a nickel-in-the-slot age. We are coming to the time when a man or woman with a pocketful of 5 cent pieces can get anything for them money can buy.

"The home of the future will contain a dining room patterned after the mechanical restaurant. The walls will be lined with machines that will give forth the most lovely foods by the mere dropping of a nickel in the slot and turning handle to left.

"What will it mean to the already over-burdened wife? Freedom! When you come home you can drop a coin in a machine and get a cup of Mocha probably better than I can make. A dish of Boston baked can be had from another machine. Anything else your appetite craves will be found in some of the other machines. When you finish dining you can retire to the living room, drop a nickel in the automatic player-piano and hear music or ragtime as you prefer.

"Henry, I want you to look into this automatic eating machine business and find what it will cost to install a complete outfit in our little home."

"Ah!" sighed Billers. "The last vestige of romance in married life is threatened. No more will I see you standing over the gas range tossing the kind of pancakes I like, or browning a fowl to a turn, because you know I want it that way. Life is becoming too complex for me. I feel like a loose nut in a last year's flivver. When the automatic private dining room comes—I go!"

BE YOUR COUNTRY'S BANKER

(By Hector Charlesworth.)

The banker is a person who is envied by his fellow men. In a measure, sometimes great and sometimes small, he is a power in the community.

The man who needs money for a legitimate enterprise goes to the banker, and places a request for a loan before him. The banker first asks what security he has to offer, and other information looking to his own protection. He wants clear assurances as to the uses to which the money is to be put. He demands a confidential voice in the way his client shall conduct the enterprise. If it looks good to him, and interest and collateral are satisfactory, the loan is negotiated. The applicant is pleased and so is the banker.

It is not every day that the opportunity to be a banker comes to the ordinary man or woman.

This opportunity, Canada's "Victory Loan," places within reach of everyone who has been thrifty enough to lay by a little cash. No matter if the capital is small, the opportunity is the same. Canada becomes your client! You can become Canada's banker!

The enterprise to be staked is the greatest and noblest in the history of mankind. Canada's illimitable resources are your security. As a free elector you have a voice in your client's business. The guaranteed interest assures a generous profit. In other words the "Victory Loan" is a gilt-edged proposition! Subscribe to it and become your country's banker.

Wit and Wisdom

Sympathetic

This story is told by a man who has an old negro working around his place on Long Island. On the day after the United Staes declared war Uncle Ben came bright and early to do his chores.

"Well, Mistah John," he said, "I hope youse gwine ter be kind to pore old Germany now."

"Why, uncle Ben, what are you talking about? Don't you know we are at war with Germany?"

"I knows it; I knows it," the old fellow persisted, shaking his head; "but suttinly dat country'll need a frien' now!"

Oh, Girls!

Ginger—Lee Barrett, our sales representative at Hibbing, says he actually overheard this in the Oliver Cafe:

Kitty—My, but you seem to have oceans of hair!

Myrtle—Why, because there are waves in it?

Why the Bookkeeper Was Sad.

"Why so sad?" asked the stenographer of the bookkeeper.

"It makes me sad," replied the bookkeeper, "every time I make up the payroll nowadays for the men in the factory, to think I elected to follow a gentlemanly calling instead of learnig a trade."

At the Restaurant.

Diner (wrestling with a coarse course, of course) Here, garcon, I say, what bird is this?

Waiter—Bordeaux pigeon, sir.

Diner—More of the board than the dough, I should say. Take it away.

His Occupation.

"May I ask," inquired the melancholy stranger, "what is your pursuit in life?"

"It depends," replied Subbubs, "upon whether I'm going or coming. It's the 7:2 train in the morning and the 6:12 at night."

TODAY'S STORY

"Are you the man who painted that 'ere picture of 'Moses in the Bulrushes'?" asked a countryman of an artist who had recently startled the town by an exhibition of oil paintings.

"Yes," replied the artist.

"All right; then I want you to paint my father."

"Certainly, if he will only give me a few sittings."

"Can't do it; he's dead."

"Let me have a photograph of him."

"Can't do that, neither. He never had his picture taken."

"I am afraid, then, I must decline."

"Decline! What for? Haven't you painted Moses? You didn't have a photograph of him, did you? No, I thought not. Well, my father ain't been dead nearly as long as Moses. If you can paint Moses you ought to know enough to paint my father."

Appreciating the situation, the artist went to work and evolved such a portrait as he thought might satisfy so original a son.

"Crikey!" exclaimed this art glutton on seeing the completed painting. "That almost knocks the stuffin' out of Moses; but, I say, how he has changed!"

EDITOR'S MAIL

HYPOCRISY.

Editor Review:—The hypocrisy of The Examiner is a positive fright in the way it pretends to be in favor of the spirit of Union. On one page is a little weeny paragraph but it is big enough to take a slap at Conservatives who are the party who actually brought about Union Government. But gee! look at page one a double-headed, double-leaded, two column splash larger than the war news, attacking the Borden Union Government as a lot of profiters and grafters. A nice spirit of unity.

The Examiner is getting ready for the Liberal Convention and is working up an excuse for putting a man in the field just as East Peterborough did.

Yours truly,
NORTH END.

WOMAN A PHYSICAL WRECK

Tells in Following Letter How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a physical wreck. I had been going to a doctor for several years but he did me no good. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to give it a fair trial, and it gave me relief from bearing down pains which had been so bad that I would have to lie down. I also used the Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good, and I am not troubled with a weakness any more." — Mrs. P. L. BRILL, 1299 Booth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

The most successful remedy for woman's ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test for forty years, which would be impossible if it did not have genuine merit.

For special advice, free, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

HOW TO SAVE BEEF AND BACON

Save beef and bacon is a slogan we are all learning. To make it effective and continuous we must be provided with a variety of appetizing recipes for other nourishing foods. The following will be found useful, offering a variety of kinds of food.

Fish Dishes

Rice Codfish Cakes.—Combine two and a half cupfuls of boiled brown or uncoated rice with a cupful of scalded, shredded codfish, two tablespoonfuls of flour, a fourth teaspoonful of pepper and an egg if desired. Chill, form into flat cakes, roll in flour and brown in savory drippings.

Scalloped Salmon With Crumbs.—Rub a baking-dish with oleomargarin, and put in a layer of canned salmon, which has been scalded. Then put on a layer of stale (not dry) bread crumbs (white or entire wheat,) continuing in this way until the salmon has been used. Pour on milk to moisten thoroughly—approximately three cupfuls—seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Bake in a moderate oven until puffy and brown, about thirty minutes.

Egg Dishes

Eggs With Onions.— Pare and slice a quart of onions. Barely cover with salted water and let them stew. When tender, there should be about one and a fourth cupful of liquor left. Add an equal quantity of whole milk and thicken with four tablespoonfuls of entire wheat flour mixed with two tablespoonfuls of good oleomargarin. Add salt and pepper to season and lightly stir in two or more hard-cooked eggs, sliced. Serve with boiled brown or uncoated rice, or with mashed potatoes.

Eggs Scalloped with Potatoes. Take four hard-cooked eggs, three cupfuls finely diced, cooked potatoes, two and a half cupfuls white sauce, medium thick. Slice the eggs thin and arrange them in layers with the potatoes and sauce in a baking dish or in good-sized ramekins. Cover with ground, dry bread-crumbs mixed with a little melted oleomargarin, and brown in a moderate oven.

Cheese Dishes

Scalloped Cheese and Hominy. —Prepare three cupfuls of coarse hominy, or use prepared lye-hominy. Rub a baking-dish with butter, or good oleomargarin. Put in a layer of the hominy and sprinkle it with cheese put through the food-chopper, allowing a half pound for the dish. Continue in this way until all is used, and then pour over milk to barely cover, containing two beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Bake in a moderate oven until the dish feels firm when touched with the finger and the top is brown. Or omit the eggs, making a thin white sauce with three cupfuls of milk, three tablespoonfuls of oleomargarine, three of entire wheat flour and seasonings and pour this over the hominy and cheese.

Inexpensive Welsh Rabbit. —Put three-fourths of a pound of American cheese through the food-chopper and transfer it to a double boiler top. Add one-third cupful of flour, a teaspoonful of pepper, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard and a tablespoonful of good oleomargarine. In the meantime scald two and a half cupfuls of milk. Stir together the cheese mixture, add the milk, and cook over hot water till thickened, stirring occasionally. Serve with boiled brown rice, small steamed potatos, boiled coarse hominy, or sliced browned mush.

Mr. Director Grasp

Mr. D. G.—Good morning Sir Joseph.

Sir J. Same to you Mr. G. My word, I've just been reading the paper, what a genius we have for food controller.

Mr. D. G. Yes he's a clean fellow. That was a clever move, the cereals to be sold only in 20 lb packages.

Sir J. Yes that's so. People will be so busy thinking about that, that they will never notice if we make an extra million or two on Bacon or Eggs.

Mr. D. G. Gosh no! And what a chance for the potato speculators. I've got a friend who bought about 100 cars for 90c a bag when the retail price was set at $1.25. And now he's settin' back and waiting for $3.00 or as much more as he can get.

Sir J.—Well that's were our controller is so smart. He draws a red herring across the trail when anybody likely to get on the track of something good for us. If he didn't somebody might suggest that he made these poor fellows sell at an ordinary profit. By the way, I guess, that fellow Paskins is scared off, he didn't advertise last week.

Mr. D. G.—Oh Lor! don't make that mistake. I heard he was so busy selling hams that he didn't have time for adds. Just look at this advertisement of his for this week.

FOOD CONTROL AIMS

The aims of the Food Controller are:

To have available as large a quantity as possible of suitable foods for the Allied armies.

To have available as large a quantity as possible of suitable foods for the civilian populations of Great Britain and the Allies.

To have sufficient and suitable food at reasonable prices for the civilian population of Canada.

Those aims may be achieved by:

Increase in the production of foods; elimination of waste in the handling and use of foods; shifting of the consumption, in part, from foods needed for the armies and civilian populations of Great Britain and the Allies, chiefly wheat and flour, beef and bacon; prevention of unnecessary increase in prices of foods.

New York police yesterday made the first raid in two years on an opium joint.

THAT 'TEEN APPETITE

"I'm glad controllers and the war
Came not within my early 'teens.
At that lean age I hungered for
All forms of food from beef to beans.
I ate whatever I could get,
Where and whenever I could get it.
When any sort of food I met,
I simply set to work and "et" it.

I'd wolf a dozen apples in
As many minutes, and still hanker;
I moohed from cupboard, dairy, bin,
While still my form grew lank and lanker.
At meal times, when I broke my fast,
With speed no human eye could follow,
My mother would exclaim, aghast;
"Good gracious! Are the lad's legs hollow?"

I figured out, the other day,
How much t'would cost me now to eat
The stuff that then I put away—
The spuds, the bread, the eggs, the meat.
'Twas seven dollars for a meal
On week days; Sundays, fifteen flat!
Now what would the Food Controller feel
Were he to catch me doing that?"

COST OF BROWN BREAD

Why does brown bread cost the consumer as much as white bread is the question frequently asked. The answer comes direct from the Food Controller's office:

The demand for graham bread has been so limited that the product has to be made by hand, and, consequently, the labor cost is somewhat greater than that in the case of white bread, which is produced on a large scale by machinery. The materials in the brown bread should cost less, although the saving to the baker is not as large as some people seem to imagine. The Food Controller has now the power to secure returns from wholesale dealers in food products and has announced his intention to see that profits shall not exceed a reasonable amount. Information as to costs of production are being secured and a maximum has already been fixed for the profits of the millers. It is not primarily with a view to economy in cost that the Food Controller has suggested brown bread as a possible substitute for white bread, but because such substitution, if effected on a large scale, would mean an important saving in wheat.

Food retailers in the States are only to be allowed to carry a sixty-day stock.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

PRICES RAISED IN MANY CITIES

COST OF MILK INCREASES AT VARIOUS ONTARIO POINTS

Galt, Nov. 2.—Milk is now selling in Galt at twelve cents per quart. This price was agreed upon by the vendors following the action of producers in raising their price from twenty cents to thirty cents a gallon. The retail price previously was nine cents a quart.

12 Cents in Chatham

Chatham, Nov. 2.—(Special.)—The price of milk was advanced to twelve cents a quart. There is considerable objection to the increase from ten cents. In London milk is being sold for ten cents, and Kent is a better milk section than that around London. Some people are already talking of a boycott.

Ten Cents in Brantford

Brantford, Nov. 2.—(Special.) — Brantford milk dealers raised the price of milk to ten cents a quart, a one-cent jump. As Hamilton is now paying three cents more than before, there is not much chance for complaint locally.

Raised in London

London, Ont., Nov. 2,—(Special)—The retail price of milk was advanced to ten cents a quart in London. This is an advance of one cent per quart.

Future Canadians Will Pay Their Share

WHEN Victory crowns at last the efforts of Canada's fighting forces and their comrades of the allied nations, the freedom of the whole world will rest upon a firm foundation.

Thus will the sacrifice of precious life and the expenditure of billions of dollars be fully justified.

Is it not just, therefore, that future Canadians, who will share in the freedom so dearly purchased, shall undertake a portion of the financial burden?

Canada's Victory Bonds provide the means through which future Canadians will assume their Share of the Cost of the Victory.

For, when Victory Bonds mature—that is, upon the date of settlement when the principal is to be repaid—a new business generation will have arisen.

That new generation, having had its liberties assured by this present one, will provide the money for repayment.

But this does not mean that the money YOU put into Victory Bonds now will be tied up, because you can sell your bonds at any time, and if you want to borrow money, there is no better security for a loan.

So get ready to buy Victory Bonds when they are offered, beginning November 12.

Buy Victory Bonds yourself and urge others to buy them

RED CROSS WORKERS HAVE EXCEEDED SUM AIMED AT

Society Decides To Extend Campaign For Rest of Week And Strive For a Total Of $30,000.

As a result of the campaign to raise funds for the Canadian Red Cross $26,767 had been subscribed up to last night. This has encouraged the committee to extend the campaign till Saturday, with $30,000 as their objective, and they have every confidence in the realization of that amount.

Many subscription cards are out and the committee respectively ask that they be filled in as early as possible, and returned to headquarters on George street.

SOME SIDELIGHTS ON THE CAMPAIGN

Every employee in the Matthews-Blackwell Co.—man, boy, and young lady—contributed to the fund, making the magnificent total of $1,000.00 from the employees alone. Mr. Matthews asked that the plant be shut down for ten minutes, when he addressed the employees, with the above result.

When it is realized that a parcel can only reach a Peterborough prisoner of war when sent through the Red Cross Society there is little wonder that this department of the Society's work appealed to a great many people when making their contributions.

President Roland Denne and the members of the Advisory Bourd lunched at their own expense last night and were all just as pleased as a bunch of school-boys over the success of the campaign. Before the total was given out an estimate was made by each one present as to the probable amount to be reported at the meeting. The number which won the guess was only six dollars away from the total, and the team which the lucky guesser is on, starts off with $3.25 to their credit in the effort to make the total $30,000.00.

Employees of all the factories supported the campaign in a practical and liberal manner, and it is to them that a great deal of the credit of the success of the fund is due.

There never was a more hearty or sympathetic response to the demands of any previous campaign. Nearly everybody appeared to do their best and this, too, in view of the fact that hundreds are sending individual parcels overseas to relatives at the front at no small cost.

Over $300.00 has been collected at the headquarters from people dropping in from $1.00 up to $25.00, and with the exception of five or six cases, none of the people had at the time been asked to contribute.

One of the most unique individual factory campaigns in the whole canvass was put on at the DeLaval Co. plant. Mr. W. R. Wren, sales manager, was given the responsibility of organizing the departments together with the departmental heads.

The principles of salesmanship were injected into this particular campaign, and so enthusiastic did both the organizers and contributors become that they did not stop giving until over $1,700.00 was realized from employees alone. To Mr. Wren, his co-workers and employees generally there is a great deal of satisfaction and pleasure at the results obtained

Messrs. T. F. Matthews and W. G. Morrow, who were the committee to wait on the manufacturers and financial institutions, in one day realized $6,800.00, and exceeded the estimated amount from this source by over $2,000.00.

The Business Girls' Club of the city many members of which are giving as well through the institutions in which they work, gave unsolicited a contribution of $60.00.

By color harmony we mean something that will harmonize with her costume; by fit we mean comfort; by style we mean the latest model. When selecting our footwear, we kept these in mind, with the result that they are the embodiment of all these desirable feaures. We do not wish to appear boastful, but the above is merely an accurate statement of the facts.

Bakers' Situation Most Critical Yet

MARK BREDIN URGES USE OF 10 P.C. OAT FLOUR TO SAVE WHEAT

London, Ont., Nov. 2. At a meeting attended by more than 100 of the leading bakers of Ontario here, ways and means of helping the Food Controller conserve wheat for the allies were discussed. Mark Bredin of Toronto said the situation was the most critical ever experienced by the trade. If oat flour could be substituted for wheat in bread to the extent of 10 per cent. it would mean a saving of millions of bushels of wheat, which could be let loose for allied consumption. He urged bakers to co-operate to the fullest extent in solving the problem. They should, he thought, be content with the same profit per barrel of flour as before the war.

John Turnbull of Toronto said any profits bakers had made the past year came from flour speculation. He objected strongly to English bakers in Montreal having to send in returns to the Government, while French-Canadian bakers were not molested.

A lower demurrage on export freight at Montreal has been arranged by the Railway Board at the request of the board of trade of that city.

DANDRUFF GOES! HAIR GETS THICK, WAVY, BEAUTIFUL

SAVE YOUR HAIR! DOUBLE ITS BEAUTY IN A FEW MOMENTS. TRY THIS!

HAIR STOPS COMING OUT AND EVERY PARTICLE OF DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance, an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

BOYS OVER SEAS APPRECIATE WORK OF BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB

Grateful Letters Acknowledging Receipt Of Comforts—Pleasing Surprises For Many At Contents of Parcels.

The following letters received by Miss Margaret Rae, Secretary Business Girls' Club, in acknowledgment of comforts received by our soldiers at the front, testify to the noble work this commendable organization is accomplishing:

3rd Can. C.C.S., B.E.F., Flanders, 11-10-17.

To Miss Margaret Rae.
Secretary Business Girls Club,
Peterborough.

Dear Friend,—

It is with great pleasure I write to thank you for the lovely parcel I received from Nursing Sister Mowry on behalf of your Club. I take this opportunity to write thanking you for your gift, for I'm sure the knowledge that the good work that your club is doing on behalf of the boys overseas, is so much appreciated by the boys themselves, that they are so over pleased with their parcels, as to be unable to thank you sufficiently. I was greatly surprised when Sister Mowry (who I am pleased to say is doing great work out here) handed me your parcel and asked me to drop you a few lines, and more so when I opened it and found what the contents were.

Believe me it is the best parcel of comforts that I have ever seen, and I can assure you will be put to the greatest use possible.

In closing I wish to propose the health and success of the Peterborough Girls Club and trust that you may long continue your good work.

Yours gratefully.
PTE. J. PARKINSON.

France, Oct. 4th. 1917.

Miss Margaret Rae,
Sec. Business Girls Club.
Peterborough.

Dear Miss Rae.—

Your letter and parcel of August the 21st was received a few days ago and I am taking the first opportunity of expressing my best appreciation and thanks to yourself and the young ladies associated with you for your kindness in sending me this parcel. It certainly is very kind of you for all your trouble and mere words are poor expression of our real thanks, however, we hope that at some time we may have the pleasure of meeting yourself and your friends and showing our appreciation in some more tangible form.

We are enjoying (?) some real mud and rain tonight but up until the present have had beautiful weather so I guess we have no complaints coming.

With best thanks.
Yours sincerely.
O. W. DAVIDSON.

No. 3 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station, Somewhere in Belgium,
Oct. 2nd, 1917.

Dear Miss Rae.—

The splendid box sent by the Business Girls Club reached me safely two days ago in excellent condition.

I just do not know how to express my appreciation. Everything was so beautifully done up and not one thing that will not be of the greatest use to the boys. The selection shows you spent much time and thought on your work. I know it represents hours of hard labour. To me this is a great big work for the Club to do especially after spending hours at business as so many do. I have handled hundreds of property bags since I came to France but none were so well equipped or contained as many excellent articles as yours.

For my own personal parcel when I have said "Thank you" I have said all. The articles are all my favorite brand. Every time I use your gifts it will bring back pleasant memories of home. I am today starting on my third year of army work, sixteen months of which have been spent in France and Belgium. After all these weary months one does appreciate a parcel from "home" more than words can tell.

You know we are all so interested in the wounded, both at home and here, we sometimes forget these splendid fellows who work so hard in the hospitals. Most of them here have been over two years. Numbers of them married men with families. They live under active service conditions, often in great danger. To see them handle the poor war-broken bodies we have to deal with is something I will never forget.

I would like so much to tell you of our work here but time and the censor forbid. We have had a very strenuous summer and will continue to be busy if the weather holds good. We are winning hands over even if the price is terrific. There is no other way out now. We must be patient and to quote the favorite expressions of Tommy Atkins — "Carry on" and "Stick it."

Of course we are very close to the heart of things here. Our patients are admitted straight from the trenches, a few pass through the Field Ambulances, but most of them come direct from the field dressing stations to motor ambulances. The system—I mean the medical part of it—is one of the most marvellous and perfectly organized now. Some day when peace has dawned over this crazy world I will be glad to give your Club a little idea of our work.

I have spent the past four months under canvas. Have spent eight of my sixteen months living in a tent. The greatest event of the summer occurred on Friday. I had a bath in a real tub—with plenty of hot water. Just think of it!!!

These beautiful moonlight nights are just what Fritz wants for his war from the air. We'll know now what Bairnsfather meant when he said, "This bloomin', blinkin' moon will be the death of me yet." We have a big dugout for the sisters. It isn't a matter of pride but speed to get there. Fancy, I hold all records, I always was a good sprinter.

Now I must close. Once more may I express my thanks for your wonderful bale? The person who packed it did the work so well. Everything was dry and as fresh as when it left Peterborough. Wishing the Business Girls Club every success in their magnificent work and once more many, many thanks for my own parcel. Believe me,

Sincerely yours,
BERTHA M. MOWRY.

Two Austrians Quarrel Over a Game of Cards

An Austrian named Frank Penny appeared at the police court this morning in answer to a charge of having assaulted Stanley Wilke, a compatriot. It seems that the men quarreled over a game of cards and more or less violence ensued.

His Worship considered that both men were equally to blame, and discharged the accused.

KEY OF CITY OPENED UP DOORS OF DELIGHTFUL GOODFELLOWSHIP

Closing Session of Sunday School Convention —Inspiring Addresses—Resolutions Appreciating Three Days' Visit in Peterboro.

The fifty-Second Annual Sunday School Convention was brought to a close last night in George street Methodist Church. The sacred building was crowded to the doors, and the session exceedingly interesting and inspiring a fitting climax to a most successful and highly appreciative gathering of instructors of the little folk. The Sunday School teachers will unquestionably return home ladened with useful information for guidance in their God-given labors.

What Children Need.

Mrs. Bryner of Peoria, Ill., gave a timely talk on "Our Wants or Their Needs; in which she contended that the actual needs of Sunday School children are too often subordinated to the wants of their teachers. Too few, she feared, taught little folk the beauty and meaning of Sunday morning bells calling the faithful to prayer and praise, and to appreciate that a church is the tabernacle of the Lord, in which He is to be found. Then children should be given opportunity to sing something that they appreciate, and taught the meaning of the Lord's prayer and expressions used therein. Regarding the Lord's Prayer, Mrs. Bryner regretted that in one class visited by her scarcely a child knew the meaning of the word "Hallowed." For young children she suggested the use of the black-board, as in day schools, to instill into their minds acquaintance with and knowledge of words and phrases and their meanings.

Choice of Hymns.

The speaker did not think the general selection of hymns for children appropriate. There is too much "self" in them, such as "We are little soldiers," "We are little Pilgrims," and so forth, and too little encouraging reflection on Christ, his life and work. More thought as to the needs of the little ones should be given to the selection of their sacred songs.

Children of the Bible.

The prepared Sunday School lessons, Mrs. Bryner, declared to be starved of food for thought applicable to children. In the curriculum covering three years but few lessons about children of the Bible are to be found. The Scriptures are full of such stories. Then why not teach them? A child can more readily assimilate Bible lessons from characters in keeping with their own years than from lessons of deeper study. Such subjects as "Why the wise men followed the star in the East," "Why Joseph was warned to flee with Jesus into Egypt," and "The child life of Samuel or Moses" will hold the interest of young children more readily than the majority of lessons prepared for them. Is it fair, asked the speaker, for grown people to decide what they (adults) may want instead of what the children need? Like an experience of hers, concluded Mrs. Bryner, when food in plenty for adults was found in a home, but no milk for a young baby. We have lessons in abundance, but they may not be what little children need.

Resolutions of Appreciation.

The following resolutions of appreciation were adopted:

To the pastor and officials of the convention church and other churches for the use of their buildings.

To the host of friends in Peterborough for the fullest measure of hospitality and generosity.

To the Mayor and City Council for the city's key which had opened the doors of delightful good fellowship.

To the Street Railway Company for free transportation.

To Prof. Excell for a beautiful musical program.

To participants in the sessions who had offered valued inspiration.

To all Peterborough associations which had contributed to the needs of the convention.

Services Recognized.

Rev. E. W. Halpenny, general secretary, read a message of greeting from Mr. Gordon G. Baker, general secretary of the Quebec Ass'n., who also wired that prospects for the Quebec convention were bright.

The services of the following workers were appreciated by General Secretary Halpenny and by the whole assembly:

Miss Bertha Laine of Toronto, Superintendent Elementary Division and Home Department, Ontario Sunday School Assn.

Mrs. Palmer G. Burgess, Westboro, Superintendent Teacher Training Department, Ottawa Sunday School Assn.

Miss Lewis and Miss Thompson of the office staff.

Rev. D. H. Wing, Toronto, Rural Superintendent, Ontario.

Miss Mabel Taggart, Toronto, Superintendent Girls Section Secondary Division, Ontario Sunday School Assn.

And all members of the General Executive.

The Ninety and Nine.

Rev. R. A. Waite gave an inspiring address on "The Ninety and Nine Lost Sheep," in the course of which he said there is a great tragedy in the meaning of the word "Lost" in the spiritual and Bible sense, and he wondered how many knew the word's proper interpretation. He explained the meaning of "Lost" in four words "Out of Right Relationship." One may pick anything up and not find it in the true sense of the word. It is only found when in right relationship and doing the work for which it was intended. Otherwise it is simply discovered, which is altogether another question. While

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

A HARD RULE TO ENFORCE.

Writing in the Mail and Empire, Eddie Allen says that the rule governing the injecting of substitutes into a rugby game is hard to enforce. The Herald's complaint of the action of the Toronto Capitals in their game last Saturday against Technical school, prompted Allen's comment.

The Toronto writer is quite correct. We have often seen a player helped off the field in apparent agony, only to have him forget his supposed injuries when on the side-lines to have substitute put into the game.

But, surely, there is some way of preventing the constant practice.

lines. He feigned injuries merely. When a team changes its men as often as Capitals did it is no hard matter to realize that injuries are not to blame for the shifts.

In Ottawa a few years ago Tigers took one of their [illegible] men out of the game early. Frank Shaughnessy, who was then coaching the Ottawa club, refused to allow the Tiger to be replaced until he had an Ottawa physician examine his arm, which was claimed to be hurt. The doctor found the injured member swelled considerably and sanctioned the change. An injury to the arm or leg usually causes a swelling, and if a doctor were on the grounds he would be able to detect any attempts at shamming.

TAKES SLAP AT CAPITAL.

Toronto News—"Down in Ottawa two rugby teams are playing games to help out the Patriotic fund, and included on each team are a few players who have received money for their ability at hockey. At the conclusion of their series they would like to meet the Hamilton Tigers in an exhibition game, but when this is proposed, up rises the mighty protectors of amateur sport to declare that such a series would be impossible, as they do not play fast and loose with the amateur law in this part of the country like they do in Ottawa. Apparently these amateur moguls take themselves very seriously, and do not appreciate the fact that the amateurs as well as a few professionals are doing more in Ottawa than a lot of the [illegible] leaders in this section of the woods ever did for sport either [illegible] or otherwise. When a hockey star like Eddie Gerard, just on the eve of the season in which he will draw down a big salary, does his little bit by taking a chance on being injured on a rugby field he is entitled to a lot of credit, and proves that he is a good sportsman. As for the amateurs who are taking a chance on their standing by competing with Gerard, surely they are just as good amateurs to-day as they were a year ago. This constant cry about amateurism may sound all right to a few people, but if it comes to a real show down all the real honest-to-goodness amateurs who could qualify in sport under the strict interpretation of the rule will be found playing on the different school and college teams, both in rugby, hockey and several other sports we could mention."

YOUNG PETER JACKSON.

Peter Jackson, colored welterweight and middleweight boxer, was born in Baltimore on October 31, 1877. When he entered the ring he changed his name from Sim Tompkins, calling himself after the great Australian black who was once the king of the heavyweights, although John L. refused to give him a chance to fight for the title. Young Peter began fighting in 1895, and continued in the ring for a dozen years or more. He was five and a half feet in height, and good enough to whip all but the topnotchers among his opponents. Among his distinguished victims were Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Kid Parker, the "Vegetarian Champ;" Tommy Tracey, the Australian boxer; Jimmy Handler, "Scaldy Bill" Quinn, Tommy West, Dan Creedon, Mike Donovan, and many others. He fought two draws with Joe Walcott, and in 1914 knocked out the Barbados Demon. He also defeated Sam Langford on one occasion, although in several other bouts he was whipped by Sam. Young Peter went 12 rounds with Jack Johnson at Baltimore in 1905, but lost the decision.

TENER RETAINS JOB.

In placing its affairs in the hands of President Tener the National league puts at rest all rumors that the former governor of Pennsylvania would retire from the game when his term expired in December. He was elected four years ago, but served only in an advisory capacity during the first year, while he was still governor. As the Federal league adjustment is the most important affair with which organized ball will have to deal before another season comes around, President Tener's appointment to carry on the work alone is taken as a sure indication that he will be re-elected in December.

INSURED FOR $85,000.

August Belmont, owner of the colt Hourless, evidently values his French-bred three-year-old highly, for he has taken out $85,000 of insurance on Hourless. When Hourless and Omar Khayyam paraded before the stands in their recent race at Laurel, both colts were closely guarded by agents of the insurance companies, as Omar Khayyam was insured for $20,000, and the sum of $105,000 was worth looking after.

Omar Khayyam's insurance will be increased from $20,000 to $100,000 very soon.

The horse that carries the most insurance today is Campfire, R. T. Wilson's speedy son of Olambala. Last year, when Campfire won the Futurity and retired the champion two-year old of the year, Mr. Wilson placed the value on him at $100,000, and insured him for that much.

BETTING LEGALIZED.

New Orleans, Nov. 2. The state supreme court today held legal the individual betting system operated at the fair grounds last season. Under this system layers operated with the assistance of bond stakeholders. The ruling practically legalizes betting this year and means that the officials convicted last year will be freed.

DIBBLE COMING HOME.

Lieut. "Bob" Dibble the champion sculler, is expected home from overseas within the next three weeks. His father, Harry Dibble, 233 Woodbine avenue, Toronto, received a cable stating that his son, who was severely wounded some time ago, would shortly leave for home. Lieut. Dibble is lame from gunshot wounds in the hip and is suffering from partial paralysis brought about by a fracture of the skull.

KEY OF CITY

we are thinking of the prodigal Son there may be ninety and nine lost sheep and an elder brother, and so far as the Bible is concerned the elder brother was never found. The principle of the Sunday School should be the formation when young and growing up rather than the reformation when grown up. To many he who has sown his wild oats and is then reclaimed is beloved; but to me beloved is the boy who never has need of reformation. Let us, he urged, keep our boys and girls from the fire that we may never have to pluck them from the burning. There is a line of approach to the inner soul of every person an unseen path; there is a line of contact with every person, and I do not believe any one person can appeal to every person. But do not say there is no path to an inner soul because you cannot find it. There is a line of approach to every inner citadel, and our boys and girls are waiting for some one to walk along that path into their inner lives.

To Accept Leadership of Ontario Liberals.

Port Arthur, Nov. 2.—Hartley H. Dewart, K.C., M.P.P., of Toronto, in an interview here, expressed himself as not unwilling to accept the leadership of the Ontario Liberal party, in which connection his name has been mentioned since Hon. N. W. Rowell joined the Union Government. He did not agree, however, that he was entitled to it, as there were other members of the party who preceded him in the matter of service. He would make no comment upon Dominion politics before seeing the manifesto from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, which he was expecting daily.

Though the Philadelphia Mint is coining a million and a half pennies daily, it is ten million behind the demand, which is growing stronger daily.

LAKEFIELD

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The annual Hallowe'en party of the Anglican Young People's Association was held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 30th, and was quite a success, all members thoroughly enjoying themselves. The members appeared as ghosts, using sheets and pillow cases, and upon admittance were presented with a numbered card, the corresponding number on which provided them with a partner, with whom they paraded Queen street. Upon their return, games were played such as musical chair, still pond, stage coach, etc., after which refreshments were served. The room was very suitably decorated with corn, pumpkins and hallowe'en favors.

Mrs. Wm. Gillman is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Riebid in Toronto.

Mrs. C. Gordon is spending a few days in Toronto the guest of Mrs. Lowe.

Mr. Walter of Montreal passed through the village Wednesday en route for Stoney Lake.

BAD COLD? TAKE "CASCARETS" FOR BOWELS TONIGHT

THEY'RE FINE! LIVEN YOUR LIVER AND BOWELS AND CLEAR YOUR HEAD

NO HEADACHE, SOUR STOMACH, BAD COLD OR CONSTIPATION BY MORNING

Get a 10-cent box now.

Colds—whether in the head or any part of the body—are quickly overcome by urging the liver to action and keeping the bowels free of poison. Take Cascarets tonight and you will wake up with a clear head and your cold will be gone. Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember the quickest way to get rid of colds is one or two Cascarets at night to cleanse the system. Get a 10-cent box at any drug store. Don't forget the children. They relish this Candy Cathartic and it is often all that is needed to drive a cold from their little systems.

SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT HELD AT THE S.A. TEMPLE LAST NIGHT

A most enjoyable evening was spent last evening at the Salvation Army Temple. Mr. F. D. Kerr gave a very interesting and instructive address and was followed by Mr. Cameron and Mr. Carlilse both of whom were enjoyed very much.

The Salvation Army Band and Songster Brigade did well with their side of the program as did the two Johnston Brothers who were heartily encored. Adjtant McEllincy made the appeal which resulted in a collection that netted $131.00 with more to follow. The Temple Band who are giving away to patriotic purposes all the city grant for playing in the park last summer gave $50.00 to the Red Cross last night.

Plans for taking the votes of Canada's soldiers and sailors are under way.

RE-OPENING OF I.O.D.E. TEA ROOM

MRS. BRUCE, NATIONAL TREASURER OF THE ORDER PRESENT

A Hallowe'en tea marked the re-opening of the tea room of the 57th Regt Chapter I.O.D.E. in the Masonic Dining Hall, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 1.

The officers of the Chapter were the hostesses and were assisted by Mrs. Gillespie and the Misses Robinson, Myer and Austin. Miss Flora Davidson presided at the tea table.

Unexpected Pleasure.

The visit of Mrs. Bruce of Toronto, the National Treasurer of the Order, was an unexpected pleasure. Having only a short time in the city between trains, she was the guest of the Chapter at the tea room. It is interesting to note that Mrs. Bruce organized he 57th Chapter about five years ago.

Good Music.

During the afternoon, Miss Gladman gave several piano selections and Miss Florence Scott delighted the guests with two vocal solos.

The room was artistically decorated in a color scheme of yellow and black with black cats, witches and jack-o-lanterns to give a festive touch.

Proceeds Over $25.

The Chapter is very pleased with the proceeds of the afternoon which amounted to over $25, and desires to thank its many friends who have always done so much to make the tea room successful and popular.

FRONTENAC FOR ROWELL.

In view of the retirement of James Halliday as Liberal candidate in Frontenac, it has been suggested that Dr. J. W. CANADIANS REPORT NEW GAINS

POSTMASTER MUST NOT ACCEPT APPLICATIONS AFTER NOV. 10TH

Those Who are Delaying to Report at Post Office Should Take Warning That Unpleasant Proceedings May be Taken

Four hundred and thirty-eight applications for exemption have been received by Postmaster Edgar up to noon today. The number of reports for military is twenty-two.

Yesterday thirty-three filed their claims for exemption and five "A" men registered for duty. This is the largest number of reports for service yet received in any one day, and of course, that is not saying much. This morning thirteen men filled out exemption blanks.

Take Warning.

Those who are delaying filing their claims for exemption or reporting for duty, should lose no time in doing so, as Postmaster Edgar has received definite instructions from Ottawa not to accept applications after November 10th. This means trouble for all who have not complied with the Military Service proclamation by that date.

At the Armories.

This morning the Medical Board examined 22 applicants, and the grading resulted as folows: Category A 11, B 1, C 1 and E 9.

No Session Tonight.

The doctors have decided to take a rest this evening, when no applicants need apply. Dates for examination are booked ahead as far as Wednesday.

Yesterday's Work.

Fifty-one men learned their fate yesterday, when they were certificated in the following grades: A 34, B 5, C 2, and E 10.

The afternoon's classification was Category A 17, B 1, C 1 and E 1, a total of 20 examinations with but one pronouncement as unfit for any service.

Twelve were examined last night, and sent in the following Categories: A 7, B 2, C 1, E 2. This also was a good session, at which there were present a fine type of physical manhood.

1200 GUESTS AT SOCIETY EVENT

DAUGHTER OF GOVERNOR-GENERAL MARRIED AT THE CAPITAL TODAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—Fully twelve hundred guests, representative of every province in Canada, including Consul Generals from many lands, were present, when Lady Maud Cavendish, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire was married in Christ Church Cathedral today to Captain Angus MacIntosh of the Royal Horse Guards and a veteran of the present war. It was the biggest social event of the season in Ottawa and fully military.

Nep. of Mr. Fred. Roy In London Hospital

Lieut. Maitland Roy of Hamilton, nephew of Mr. Fred. Roy, of Peterborough, is reported to be a patient in a London, England, hospital.

Lieut. Roy's mother, Mrs. R. M. Roy, 143 Markland street, Hamilton, received a letter a few days ago from her son saying he was in India. Yesterday morning, however she, was notified by cable that he was in a London hospital. The message gave no particulars and did not state whether he was wounded or ill, nor did it mention his condition. His relatives and friends are anxiously awaiting further word from Ottawa.

Lieut. Maitland Roy's father, the late Mr. R. M. Roy, was an alderman of Hamilton city.

PLAN PROPOSED TO FORM MILK DISTRIBUTING CO.

Mr. Gillespie Submits Proposition to Men Who Sell Milk to the Citizens—Matter is Taken Under Consideration.

There are about thirty men and rigs engaged in the delivery of milk in the city, and the routes of these overlap each other in a good many cases, as all of the distributers work independently. It has been estimated that ten distributers are sufficient to cover the local territory, provided the field is divided into districts, each of these to be looked after by one milkman. In this way it is figured the cost of milk to the consumer can be reduced by at least one cent a quart, and the distributers themselves would profit by the change.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, head of the Peterborough Creamery, called a meeting of the distributers in his office last night, and this was attended by nearly every man in the business. Mr. Gillespie submitted the following proposition: That a milk distributing company be formed and the territory divided, the men who retire to turn in their outfits, taking stock in the concern in payment, this stock to be redeemable if the owners desired to convert it into money later. Of the twenty or so men who would thus be put out of business, some could devote their time to drawing milk to the city. Others would welcome the chance to engage more extensively in the production of milk.

Mr. Ed. Buller presided at the meeting last night. A suggestion that he offered was that for the duration of the war the consumers consent to dispense with the use of bottles, reverting to the open pitcher of former days, this receptacle to be left at the front instead of the back door. This proposed arrangement, Mr. Buller said, would facilitate the work of the distributer and reduce the cost of the consumer. There is a milk bottle famine in prospect, and owing to the price of pulpwood, trouble is anticipated in getting a supply of paper tops for the bottles.

It was brought out at the meeting last night that some of the distributers do not handle over one hundred quarts a day, at a profit of not more than four cents a quart. Out of this they must keep a horse at a cost of $5 a week, and meet other expenses. It is figured that the cost of the wagon alone means an outlay of $35 a year.

The distributers last night seemed to hesitate at Mr. Gillespie's offer. They are likely to hold a meeting among themselves to consider it in detail. Mr Gillespie made a similar proposition when he went into the milk business, and renewed it a year ago. He says this is the distributers' last chance so far as he is concerned.

Was the Toll Collected — News of Germany's Loss Confirmed.

ONE RA'DER AND FIVE TRAWLERS

Copenhagen, Nov. 3.—A German raider and five armed trawlers have been sunk by British destroyers in Scandinavian waters. Wounded men from the German auxiliary cruiser, sunk in the North Sea, were landed here today.

The sinking of the German raider named the Crocodile and of five German armed trawlers is reported by the men on two Danish steamships. They say they sighted the German vessels in flames and later saw them sink.

The commerce raider which was disguised and the trawlers were sunk yesterday in Skager Rak, an arm of the North Sea between Norway and Denmark. British destroyers thus effected another clean up of German naval forces in Scandinavian waters.

The Crocodile was a new ship of nearly one thousand tons and carried a crew of one hundred men.

An official statement issued by the British Admiralty says that ten patrol craft in addition to the German auxiliary cruiser which was equipped with six-inch guns, were destroyed.

Heavier Tax On Big Incomes

HON. F. B. CARVELL MAKES AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT AT HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Nov. 3.—An audience which filled every available foot of space in the hall of the Connaught Hotel was last evening carried to the highest pitch of enthusiasm for Sir Robert Borden's Union Government by the simple, unvarnished statement of the cause of Union Government by Hon. Frank B. Carvell, minister of public works, at an open meeting of the Conscriptionist Liberals.

Mr. Carvell gave notice of a substantially heavier income tax, which is to be imposed, he hoped, shortly after the new Parliament first meets. He promised that the rich man would under this tax pay a great deal more to the State than ever before, and he declared that the tax will affect men of all incomes, on the principle that all men should contribute to ease the country's tremendous financial burdens.

LONDON PAPERS PLEAD CAUSE OF THE RUSSIANS

That Country Has Already Made Heavy Sacrifices in the War.

NOT OUT FOR SEPARATE PEACE

No Statesman Has Ever Faced the Problem That Confronts Kerensky.

London, Nov. 3.—Most of the morning newspapers print Premier Kerensky's interview conspicuously, but comment is not general. The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, who is now in London, writes "Premier Kerensky's statement seems to have been taken a little too seriously in some qaurters. It even has been construed as a hint that Russia is toying with the idea of a separate peace. This theory should not be allowed to establish itself."

The writer then tells of the immense sacrifices in men that Russia has made and recalls the revelations in the trial of General Soukhowlinoff, former Minister of War, of how Russian heroes stood up with only sticks and stones and fists against the organized German troops. He also emphasizes the privations of the civilian population and the shortage of food since the middle of 1915 and adds: "Already people are dying of hunger in some of the northern provinces and it is not pleasant to think what the situation in such districts may become early in the future.

The Daily Express makes a similar plea and says that no statesman ever faced more appalling difficulties than those that daily confront Premier Kerensky.

COL. T. J. JOHNSTON OF THE OLD 93RD BATT. TO RUN AS INDEPENDENT IN E. PETERBORO

COL. T. F. JOHNSTON
Who will run as a third candidate in East Peterborough.

Refused Nomination as a Partisan Candidate on the Liberal Ticket Offered Him a Year Ago and More Recently.

"Party politics have bedevilled the situation. That is all I can say about it. I have no criticism of either side to offer, because I am determined to keep out of partisan discussion."

The speaker was Col. T. J. Johnston, at the Munro House today. He added that it was highly probable that he would run as a third candidate in East Peterborough on a strictly non-partisan platform.

"I have done my best to help win this war," added the Colonel. "When I took the 93rd to England I had only one request to make to my superior officers, and that was that I be allowed to go with the men into the trenches. I did not want to come back home and have a mother say to me that I took her boy away to a life I was afraid to face myself. But it was no use—I was too old."

This statement was made by the Colonel to show that he was opposed to seeing the winning of the war being interfered with by an unseemly scramble for political office. It is well known that he could have had the nomination for the asking in East Peterborough if he had consented to run on the same ticket as that on which the name of the present nominee will appear. One year ago, while the Colonel was still in Europe and the present political complications had not arisen, Col. Johnston was offered the nomination, as The Review stated at the time. He refused then, and he repeated his refusal more recently when he was approached by the Liberal party workers. Col. Johnston could not be induced to forsake the men he left behind him in Europe and from whom he was separated only by the force of circumstances over which he had no control.

When Col. Johnston refused to be a candidate, the party decided to go ahead without him, and what was done at the Norwood convention was the result. The Colonel was unable to submit to such palpable political play, and has decided to rebuke the politicians by entering the field as an independent.

Ask Col. Johnston today what his politics is, and he will probably tell you he does not keep anything of the kind in stock. He has forgotten all about partisanship in his anxiety to see everything possible done to win the war. Before the war, however, he was a Liberal.

In this war Col. Johnston will always hold a place of honor as the officer commanding one of the finest battalions of Canadian soldiers that ever crossed the ocean to England.

A prominent Unionist in East Peterborough, who was in the city today, said to The Review: "We don't care how many candidates the other side put up. The more they nominate, the worse we will lick them."

MORE UNREST IS FELT IN DUBLIN

MEETINGS TO BE ADDRESSED BY MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT PROHIBITED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 3.—Concerning the political situation in Ireland the Daily Mail in its second edition today says:

"There is reason to believe that a feeling of disquiet has developed in Dublin and some country districts over the Sinn Fein situation. Prof. de Valera's meetings fixed for Sunday at New Bridge and Kildare, have been prohibited."

Prof. de Valera is the member of parliament for East Clare, but has never taken his seat. Many prominent Irish priests have joined in denouncing the threatened violent campaign of Sinn Fein organizations as "Morally unlawful and the de Valera supporters seem extremely apprehensive of ecclesiastical influence.

FURTHER GAINS BY CANADIANS

IMPORTANT PROGRESS IS REPORTED ON THE RIGHT AND LEFT FLANKS.

(By W. A. Willison)

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London) Nov. 3—The Canadians have closed in further toward Paschendaele. Following the great battle on the left wing when our troops on the extreme left proved their marked superiority over the enemy, while our right outposts ventured into Passchenduele itself, the fighting has been intermittent all along the line. Opposite Meetcheele, where the front lines are near together, the Canadians and the Boches, under the Red Cross flag, buried their dead and evacuated their wounded on Wednesday afternoon. Stretcher-bearers of both forces passed and repassed one another in the mud and slime.

The Non-Partisan and Conservative Socialist groups have won sweeping victories over the radical Bolsheviki candidates in the municipal elections in most of the cities of Russia.

$260,000 LOST BY FIRE TODAY

TORONTO FIREMEN HAD DOUBLE DUTY TO PERFORM—600 OUT OF WORK.

Toronto, Nov. 3.—The Toronto fire department successfully fought two large fires simultaneously this morning. Six hundred men and women were temporarily thrown out of work and $200,000 damage done when a fire developing from spontaneous combustion destroyed the forging plant of the Cluff Ammunition Company at 4 a.m. today. Two hundred people, comprising the night shift, were fortunately able to get out without casualties, and the firemen kept the flames away from the explosives.

While this fire was at its height another broke out in Liggett's drug store on Yonge street, where $65,000 damage was incurred before the flames were extinguished.

Belgian communication: There has been intense artillery fighting along the Belgian front; it was particularly violent before Dixmude, especially for trench artillery.

WILL PAY $5,000 TO BRITISH RED CROSS WHEN REQUIRED

City Finance Committee Will So Recommend to Council—Method of Raising Contribution to be Determined as Conditions Warrant.

The City Council's Finance Committee met in business session last night, Finance Minister Ald. Stratton presiding. There were also present Aldermen Dobbin, Saunders, Weir and Relief Officer Miller.

A number of infirmary reports were certified to and adopted.

Red Cross Grant.

Regarding payment of the $5000 to the British Red Cross, the only course the Finance Minister could see to pursue was to pay the sum when required and that if there is a balance at the end of the year apply it to this purpose, if not arrange for payment at beginning of year either out of the taxes or by the issue of debentures. This suggestion was adopted.

Hint For Another $50.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Secretary Peterborough Sunday School Assn., wrote thanking Council for the grant of $100 toward entertaining delegates to the Sunday School, and hinting that another $50, making the total grant $150 as asked for, would be appreciated were the Association's collections from convention meetings found insufficient, with the $100 granted by city, to defray expenses. This was received.

Interest in County Buildings.

It was decided to pay over to the County the amount of fire insurance received on account of the city's interest in the County court house, with accrued interest since insurance was paid. The city had $9000 interest in the buildings before the fire, and handing over this insurance will retain the city's interest in the building as reconstructed. The county will be asked, however, to define exactly the city's interest in the building based on property equity before and after the fire.

Don't Pay For Shirts.

Committee agreed that shirts are not included in clothes purchased by the city for its fire chief, and Chief Grange will be so notified.

A big batch of accounts were initiated O.K., including a few from the hospital for cure of indigent patients.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1917

NO KING BUT CAESAR.

THE LIBERALS of East Peterborough will have no king but Caesar, or, in other words, no political leader but Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They are as open in the proclamation of their choice as were the Jews of old when a parallel proposition was presented to them. As if to leave no doubt, at their convention in Norwood they adopted a resolution declaring their unbounded confidence in Sir Wilfrid.

The Liberals of East Peterborough have subscribed to the "patriotic devotion" of a man who, while he was premier, sent troops from Canada to aid the Empire only when he could no longer resist the pressure that was brought to bear upon him by genuine patriots, and who refused to defray the cost of maintaining those troops once they set foot in England.

The Liberals of East Peterborough have no excuse for the delusion under which they seem to be living. Sir Wilfrid's war record is before them. What he did seventeen years ago he would do again today if the chance were given him.

The Liberals of East Peterborough profess friendship for the soldiers in the trenches. How do they hope to reconcile this profession with their avowed allegiance to a man who would leave those soldiers to work out their own destiny alone?

The Liberals of East Peterborough allege that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, both in victory and defeat, has sought to unite the various races in Canada.

Had Sir Wilfrid any such lofty purpose in mind when no longer than a year ago he disrupted Parliament by attempting to override the B. N. A. Act and to force the language and school system of Quebec upon the Province of Ontario? Does he stand for national unity when he takes sides now with his own province as against the rest of the Dominion?

The Liberals of East Peterborough proclaim Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a safe guide, overlooking the fact that from the last year of his power down to the present he has been leading his party into one disaster after another and now has it helplessly floundering in the mire.

That resolution expressing confidence in Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the one thing needed to alienate beyond recall the votes of the soldiers and of all those whose sympathies are with the nation's defenders.

MR. HALL AT NORWOOD.

MR. R. R. HALL certainly did launch a tirade against the Borden Government at the convention in Norwood. Nothing that had a semblance of graft, nothing that by a skilled orator and specious pleader could be distorted into the likeness of profiteering, was overlooked. Mr. Hall was in his best form, and his political righteousness shone forth with something more than its usual lustre.

It must be said, however, that anything Mr. Hall was able to rake up is dwarfed by comparison with a game of graft that was for years so successfully worked by his own party right here at home.

And it seems that none of the speakers at Norwood called the attention of the party to the fact that in the coming campaign it will be impossible to divert the golden waters of the Trent Canal to irrigate the arid fields of Liberalism in East Peterborough.

MR. WALDRON AND UNION.

"WE HAVE HAD union government since the beginning of the war," said Mr. Gordon Waldron to the Liberals of East Peterborough, according to the report of his speech in the local party organ. "The Liberal representatives gave their unquestioning support to every measure of the Government for carrying on the war."

Mr. Waldron has arrived at this comfortable conclusion by an easy stretch of imagination. Was it a union government in 1915, for example, when the Opposition fought the first special war tax bill at every stage, and by a narrow margin only missed dividing the House on the final adoption of the measure?

Was it a union government in 1916 when Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers read national ruin in the War Profits Tax Bill introduced by Sir Thomas White to meet the daily increasing cost of the war, when the Opposition took the stand that such a tax would keep capital, seeking investment, out of the country, and would drive out or cripple enterprises already established here? That was the cry of the Opposition in 1916. They changed it a year later, demanding a still heavier impost on capital.

There is little suggestive of union in a Parliament in which the Opposition have striven to embarrass the Government at every stage, whether the matter had to do with the conduct of the war or with purely national affairs. There was not much unity of action in the recent session of the House, especially when the question of conscription was brought up, when party lines were ignored and the Liberal party received a setback from which it is not likely to recover for many a day.

Mr. Waldron has demonstrated his claim to be called a Liberal in at least one particular. He certainly entertains liberal views on what constitutes union government.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO there was a campaign in progress for a Federal election, just as there is today. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in power, and the Empire was at war. Canadian soldiers were fighting with the British troops in South Africa. The soldiers from this country were sent to the Motherland only after pressure had been brought to bear upon the Premier, and then they were sent only on the condition that Canada be in no sense held responsible for their maintenance after they landed in England. The part that Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Premier is willing to take in a war of the Empire is not a matter of conjecture. What he has already done is an open book, and what he did in 1900 he twould do again in 1917 if he had the oportunity. No compulsion so far as the men were concerned, and the least possible expense to Canada, if he took any hand in the Imperial defence at all.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it is true, was returned to power in 1900, but it was by the votes of the very people who are his hope in the coming contest, and one of the issues seventeen years ago was a war of the Empire, as it is today.

WIN THE WAR.

THE TORONTO GLOBE administers a timely editorial rebuke to the [illegible] of Canada that apparently has arrogated to itself the task of winning the war, the members of the League that is now in session at Hamilton. The Globe says:

> A correspondent protests against the phrase "Win-the-war" as applied in news despatches to certain political conventions and candidates. His objection is well taken. The phrase originated honestly with the non-partisan league of that name, formed, before the conscription issue arose, to promote war organization and foster a better understanding—the Bonne Entente—between English and French Canada. It had no invidious or offensive meaning. Usurped by a parliamentary candidate, or conferred upon him, it throws a slur on the patriotism of his opponents. All Canadians, excepting perhaps a few of enemy birth or ancestry, hope the Allies will win the war. All parties, excepting Mr. Bourassa's, favor Canada's participation in the war. Party controversy ought not to betray any Canadian into aspersing the loyalty of fellow-countrymen who differ from him only as to methods by which Canada should aid the cause. It is unfortunate that the country is in the throes of party strife, when unity in the face of the enemy is desirable, but it is not divided on the supreme issue, if we rule out the Nationalist clique. The "Win-the war" label should be banished from the election campaign.

The Win-the-War League is a development of the Bonne Entente that was organized with the best intentions but with indifferent results last winter to make peace between the two races in Canada. The founders of the league had lofty ambitions. Beyond a doubt it was their original intention to organize an independent politcal party in Canada, a party that would strive to win over the most patriotic elements in both the old organizations. The necessity for such a party no longer exists, if it ever really did. The Union Government takes in everything and covers the field completely.

The claim has been made that the members of the League, good as their intentions may be, are short in their sight and narrow in their views. They are inclined to insist upon what are really inconsequential conditions before extending any candidates their support.

At Hamilton yesterday the League adopted a resolution pledging the support of the organization to any Union candidate who is nominated at a fusion convention. To hold such a convention will prove a vastly more difficult task than organizing half a dozen leagues. A genuine Union candidate should be assured of the League's support, even if a few formalities in connection with his nomination are waived.

There is little room in the field for another Win-the-war party, especially if its operation has a tendency to complicate matters. There was a necessity for the League some months ago, but that necessity has passed. The League has been superseded by a more powerful and representative organization. No one would object if the League remained in the field in an advisory capacity or as disinterested workers on behalf of the war party. This spirit of toleration is not likely to be extended to them if they insist upon the role of dictator.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

When a banker lends me money I have to pay him five, six or ten per cent. interest, perhaps more. When I lend the banker money by depositing it in his bank so that he may invest in various finacial enterprises of secured return, he pays me anywhere from nothing to two per cent. When I lend the banker money, I lend him my own money; he lends me some other man's money, and not his own. I would like to be a banker!

TODAY'S STORY

Miss Annette Benton, on returning from a visit, brought a gift to her mother's colored servants. It was the "day out" for Lily, the housemaid, so Annette distributed her gifts, reserving for Lily a scarlet silk blouse.

"That won't do," said Mrs. Benton. "Lily's in mourning."

"Mourning?"

"Yes, for her husband; he died in jail, and Lily's wearing a long crepe veil."

When Lily returned, her young mistress expressed regret. "I'll give the blouse to Lizzie, [illegible], and get you something else."

Lily looked at the blouse. Then she swallowed. "Don't you give that blouse to no Lizzie, Miss Annette, co's nex' mont' I'se gwine outa mournin' from the waist up."

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

We had to rite a compersition on horses for homewerk yestidday, this being mine:

Horses

Horses are 4 legged animals wich can wag their tales even ferther than dogs, but they ony do it wen there is a speshil reason, sutch as flies. Therefore wen a horse wags its tale, that dont always meen its happy, on account of horses having bin known to bite peeple with one end wile they are wagging the other.

Horses are the most usefill animals there is. Peeple use them to ride on, pull things and stand on their hine legs in circuses. All horses know the diffrents between Giddy up and Wo, but some of them pertend they understand Wo better than they understand Giddy up, thus proving that sumtimes the laziest peeple are the most intelligent.

The smallest a horse gets is a pony, but the bigest is jest a exter big horse.

Horses can do meny things that peeple cant do, sutch as eating hay and holding their bits in their mouth without thinking enything about it, and also some things that peeple can do, sutch as counting with their frunt legs.

Sints the invention of awtomobeels horses are not quite as usefill as they ust to be, except wen the awtomobeels brake down, awn account of awtomobeels have took the place of horses to ride erround in, but they can never take their place for horseback riding.

The following is a pome about horses:

The horse is a faithfill animal,
He loves to werk for man,
So if you find a deserted apple core,
Always give to a horse if you can.

Wit and Wisdom

"Ah, Miss Ethel, may I not dream that one day you will be mine?"

"You may, but it won't come true."

"I always sign my name to the poems I publish."

"That's right. Then no innocent person can be suspected."

Husband—Did you see me there?

Wife — Yes; thats how I knew I was dreaming.

Two women met on their way to a neighboring gaol in England. In the course of conversation one remarked that her mission was to see a conscientious objector. The contempt of the other knew no bounds. "Well," she exclaimed, "I'm glad my man ain't one of them things." Then with energy and pride, she added: "He's in for forgery."

"What on earth did that fellow mean when he said he was a 'peregrinating pedestrian, castigating his itinerary from the classic Athens of America'?"

"He meant he was a tramp beating his way from Boston."

"John, John," whispered the alarmed wife, poking her sleeping husband in the ribs. "Wake up, John; there are burglars in the pantry and they're eating all my pies."

"Well, what do we care," mumbled John, rolling over, "so long as they don't die in the house?"

"An' hoo's your husband this mornin', Mrs. Tamson.

"Oh, he's awfu' bad. The doctor says his temperature has gane to 150."

"Nae, nae; you've made a mistake; Sandy's temperature could ne'er be as muckle as 150; at least not in this world."

Little Words of Tongue and Pen

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

Everybody is liable to make slips of tongue and pen, and the general belief with regard to them is that they are merely amusing mistakes, of no particular significance. But often they are indeed significant.

Often they cast unexpected sidelights on the character of the persons making them, or reveal unsuspected trends of thought. Through a slip of tongue or pen knowledge may sometimes be gained of mental attitudes that have been carefully concealed.

Thus a young woman, in speaking of a friend, Mrs. Brown, frequently referred to her by her maiden name, Miss Black, instead of by her married one. A psychologist, noticing this, said to her one day:

"Why do you dislike Mr. Brown?"

"Dislike him?" she repeated. "What in the world makes you think that I dislike him?"

"Because you so often seem to forget that your friend is married to him."

"But that is nothing. It is only a slip of the tongue. And a natural one, for they have only been married recently."

"On the contrary, it is a slip which suggests to me that at heart you resent having to call her by her new name. Candidly, do you not dislike Mr. Brown?"

"If you must know it, I do. I wish she had never married him. I am sure he is not worthy of her. I detest him."

Another lady, asked by her husband to stay home from church and do some typewriting for him, made two interesting errors in her transcription.

Instead of "Bridal March," she typed "Bridle March." And for "person" substituted the word "parson."

Here the errors plainly indicated the resentment she felt at being obliged to miss her customary churchgoing.

Which reminds me that when a wife begins thoughtlessly to sign letters or documents with her maiden name there is some ground for suspecting that she is not so happily married as she hoped to be.

It is worth observing that most slips of tongue and pen occur when a person is tired. That is why most people pay little heed to them.

They regard them as trivial, meaningless by-products of fatigue. Weariness, it is argued, has momentarily clouded and confused the mind, so that precision of statement is difficult.

But weariness does more than this. It weakens the mind's control of its contents. Ideas which the mind ordinarily could and does withhold from expression now have a chance to emerge into at least partial revelation.

And slips of tongue and pen constitute one of the means by which revelation is effected.

The moral is obvious.

If we do not wish to betray ourselves by tell-tale slips of tongue and pen, let us beware of becoming excessively fatigued—or at all events of talking to others or writing when excessively fatigued.

The bosses are ready to hand out the party trench gas, and indications point to success only for those candidates who have gas masks and who know how to make use of political camouflage. Nervous Ailments

Few people realize that nervous ailments often arise from digestive troubles. The stomach fails, for some reason, to digest food properly. Then the system languishes and the nerves become exhausted in striving to continue their work. Impure blood also causes nerve troubles, but frequently it is in the stomach where the mischief starts. As the nourishment is carried to the nerves by the blood, it will be seen what an important connection exists between the stomach, the nerves and the blood, and how such troubles as nervous headaches, nervous dyspepsia and insomnia may begin.

In such cases relief is easily obtainable by means of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These pills replenish the blood with the food elements on which the nerves thrive; at the same time they exercise a tonic influence on the digestive organs, enabling the system to derive nourishment from the food taken. By this perfectly natural process nervous ills are steadily dispelled by Dr. Williams Pink Pills. If you are suffering from nerves, or require a blood-making tonic, give these pills a fair trial, and see how speedily the best of health will be yours.

May Have Dispute With Sweden Next

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Nov. 3.—There is unrest in political circles in Helsingfors over the agitation in the Swedish press of the possibility of the seizure by Sweden of the Aland Islands lest they be captured by Germany. Finnish newspapers declare that in no case will Finland give up the islands which constitute Finland's chief defense.

Russia Not Worn Out But Is Tired

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Nov. 3.—Russia is not out of the war, declared Premier Kerensky, following his statement that she is worn out by the strain and looks to the other Allies for help. Kerensky says his country began fighting and will continue to take an enormous part of it but the other Allies should shoulder the big burdens.

A MERE DROP IN THE BUCKET

Economists profess to be staggered because Canada is adding $150,000,000 more to its debt through the Victory Loan. They forget that Canada has added an amount to its national wealth this season that makes $150,000,000 look very small. The rise in the prices of wheat, oats, barley and other grains has alone involved over $400,000,000 and the amount of money Canada has received in payment for exports of munitions and products of the farms apart from grains reaches a staggering total.

Mr. James Carruthers made the statement today to the Victory Loan Committee that the value of the grain crops this year in the three northwest provinces would reach the huge total of $750,000,000, while Ontario alone raised $150,000,000 worth of wheat, oats and barley, or an amount equal to the present Victory Loan. One billion dollars would hardly cover the value of crops of all kinds in the whole of Canada.

The Newmarket Express-Herald reports that a branch of the Eaton office established in that town as an experiment has failed and closed its doors. The blinds are down and the staff is gone.

There may be mourners, suggests the local paper, but there will be no procession or funeral obsequies. They folded their tent like the Arabs and as silently stole away.

The same firm had Lindsay selected as a centre for the establishment of a branch office, but that is as far as it got.

30 Artists Have Made this Test

Jacques Urlus.

Thomas Chalmers.

Marie Kaiser.

Julia Heinrich.

Anna Case.

Arthur Middleton.

Glen Ellison.

THREE very important points are definitely proven by the stupendous fact that thirty different artists have stood beside the new Edison and sung or played in unison with their re-created voices, before over 1,000,000 people in the United States and Canada, and over 500 newspaper critics have stated in their own columns that it is absolutely impossible to distinguish the real from the re-created voice.

These three points are:

1st. That the New Edison flawlessly re-creates every form of music, because these tests have been given by sopranos, contraltos, tenors, baritones, and bassos, also by violins, flutes, cornets, and banjos.

2nd. That it is a genuine acid test, because the thirty artists who have made these tests in public include such famous Metropolitan stars as Marie Rappold, Anna Case, Thomas Chalmers, and Arthur Middleton, whose voices are well-known to the leading music critics, and any variation of quality would be instantly detected.

3rd. That the New Edison is the only instrument that really re-creates music so perfectly that it cannot be told from the original, because no talking-machine would dare make such a test.

You cannot weigh and consider such positive, conclusive evidence as this without at least deciding that is worth hearing—and once you have heard it and compared it with "talking-machines" you will realize that here is the instrument you must have in your home.

The NEW EDISON

"THE PHONOGRAPH WITH A SOUL"

We have two booklets "Edison—his life and his favorite Invention," and "What the Critics Say," that we want you to read. One tells you about how Edison invented this wonderful instrument, the other shows what newspaper critics think of it. Call or send for them—they are free.

Entertainment at St. John's Church

TEACHERS AND SCHOLARS ENJOY "LANTERN" PROGRAM LAST NIGHT.

The second monthly entertainment to the teachers and scholars of St. John's Sunday School was given last night in the school under the auspices of the A.B.C. Club. Mr. Bates, president, was in the chair, and pleasantly conducted a very enjoyable and instructive programme. Three sets of slides were shown on the screen by Mr. Douglas Caniff, the first, "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," being accompanied by fine reciting from Mr. Reggie Brown. The old story, with its lesson of the evil results of a broken promise was well received.

The second set had been made from pictures of famous masterpieces illustrating twelve parts of the "Apostles Creed," and was accompanied by an interesting address from the Superintendent of the Sunday School, Mr R. J. Devey, a lesson for every day life being drawn from every part of the Creed.

"The House that Jack Built," set number three secured a royal reception, the quaint old couplets on each picture being joyously shouted out by the youngsters in chorus as heartily as if they had been rehearsed. A song was nicely sung by Miss Beryl Bates, also "Polly Woggle," humorously rendered by four boys of the Club.

The slides were from the Lantern Slide Department of the Sunday School Commission in Toronto, who now have over seven thousand beautiful slides for the use of its members.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE MASK IS OFF

Editor Review:—The mask is off. R. R. Hall is to be the straight Laurier candidate in West Peterborough. There can be no saw-off or treaties with Laurierism. It is the enemy of Canada. The election will be a fierce struggle between the discontended ones who hate Canada to be part of the great British Empire, helping in the war and those who want Laurier and Quebec to triumph. And for the sake of the power Laurier's followers including Mr. R. R. Hall will swallow all their professions and go to it blind. Laurier's Liberals have thrown over the Liberals who joined the Union Government. You can tell them every time. The mask of hypocrisy is off. The Liberal Convention is to be turned into a Laurier Convention with Mr. R. R. Hall as candidate. Heaven help him. His speech at Norwood was a disgrace to the long and honourable and patriotic settler. There will be no treaty with greedy people. We have nothing to exchange. Yours truly,

Found New HEALTH

Of greater value than gold and silver is health restored. Up in the mining district of Larder Lake, Ont., Mr. Sid Castlemen discovered something—that the high words of praise given to Gin Pills are true. Here is his story, in part.

"I had heard of your GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS and decided to give them a trial at once, as I had been suffering for some time with my kidneys and urine. I sent my chum out to get them (about 30 miles) and I am pleased to inform you that in less than 8 hours I felt relief. In two days the pain had left me altogether. . . To-day I feel as well as ever I did and my kidneys are acting quite naturally." (Full testimonial sent on request together with FREE SAMPLE of Gin Pills.)

Snider Suffered Most All His Life

FEELS BETTER SINCE TANLAC OVERCAME TROUBLE THAN HE HAS IN THIRTY-FIVE YEARS.

"I'm feeling better today than I have in thirty-five years, and it's all due to the good work of Tanlac," said James A. Snider, of 17 Jackson St. west, Hamilton, recently. Mr. Snider has the distinction of being one of the fastest coopers in Canada, but was forced by ill-health to give up his trade. He has returned to work, however, and is employed by the Paardeberg Chapter, I.O.D.E. Mr. Snider is well known both in Hamilton and vicinity, and although sixty-nine years of age, he has the appearance of a man many years younger. Continuing his statement, Mr. Snider said:

"A medicine that will make a person my age gain in weight, and relieve them of troubles of thirty-five or forty years' standing is certainly wonderful. I had been suffering from a bad stomach nearly all my life. I had no appetite and just had to force myself to eat. At times I felt like there was a hundred-pound weight on my stomach, and I was almost doubled up with misery. Gas would form from what I ate and make my heart flutter, and I often had dreadful smothering spells. I have had the best treatment both in the United States and Canada, and have taken all kinds of medicine. I would feel a little better for a day or so and then feel as bad or worse than ever.

"Tanlac did for me just what others say it has done for them, and I want to make this statement because I feel like it may help lots of people who are in the same fix I was. Why, before I took Tanlac I had rheumatism in my knees, and the pain was so severe I couldn't straighten up, and now the rheumatism is nearly all gone and I can walk as good as anybody. It has put my stomach in good condition, the gas has stopped forming, and I don't have any more of those awful smothering spells. My food agrees with me and I know it is building me up because I have already gained several pounds and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. All the pain is gone now, and I want to say again I feel better than I have in thirty-five years. I can't say enough in praise of Tanlac, and I'm going to tell everybody I can about the good it has done me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS ARE MADE PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

A lower demurrage on export freight at Montreal has been arranged by the Railway Board at the request of the Board of Trade of that city.

Chief Armstrong, of Kingston, is asking for the exemption of three of his firemen from military service.

NOTES ON PASSING EVENTS

(By Paterfamilias)

The coal situation is acute. There seems to be none to any extent in town, except it be in the cellars of the fortunate; and it may be safely estimated that over a thousand houses have from one to two tons in their cellars more than last year, while the remainder are practically destitute. Alderman Dobbin, the City's coal yard chief feels like resigning; he is tired of being called up all day long and blamed for conditions over which he has no control. The other night at 11.30 he answered a phone call that coal must be found for one family there and then; he could do nothing. Again a day or two ago one family was in such distress that he went personally to the coal yard, scraped up—and it was scraping—half a bag of nut coal and half a bag of pea coal, and despatched it to the sufferers on a Utilities rig. It would take 1200 tons of coal to fill the orders the city coal yard has on hand, and orders keep multiplying. No wonder the worthy coal censor runs his hand through his hair —that perplexed motion of his— and exclaims in despair "What are we going to do about it?"

The Law of Self Preservation

From early spring and on through all summer, some people were loading up with coal; they had the cash and could do it. Others who had not a bank account had to take chances and today with winter evidently set in, chances seem nil. One can hardly blame the dealers nor the purchasers. What was needed was an enforced conserving of coal by the government for the people, arranging for an equal distribution. But like other vital questions our Fuel Controller may lock the door after the horse is stolen. It is no use telling people to be economic in the use of coal when they can't even buy the elusive mineral. Why not reverse for once the old Bible proverb, "To him that hath shall be given," and enforce a conscription of coal as of men? In England at the beginning of the war the government commandeered motor vehicles as a national necessity, then why not commandeer coal as a community need? Had the government controlled an equal distribution of coal through local officers the writer from knowledge to hand ventures to say there would have been no need for a man to help himself from a local coal yard, as happened quite recently. We are fond of inviting the Germans to be democratic like us, but there's not much democracy in one man's cellar, having therein two year's supply of coal, and the ninety and nine tempted by force of circumstances to break through and steal.

Thou Art the Man!

The Win-the-War League advocates the return to the Federal House of a man whose policy is win-the-war and adequate recognition of returned soldiers, support of soldiers overseas, conscription of wealth and manhood, irrespective of party. "That's the policy for us," says an authority for the Great War Veterans, "but promises, like pie crusts, are made to be broken. We want a man who DOES these things, and we already have him in Captain Burnham. He is a soldier himself, has won for returned soldiers much consideration and has boldly demanded more in the House of Commons, where he has already pronounced himself for win-the-war first, last and always, and declared for conscription of both man and wealth. Then, why, oh, why, bring speakers here to tell us we want such a man?"

Where Did the Money Come From?

In George St. Church Thursday night, at the closing session of the Sunday School Convention, Secretary Halpenny remarked he had reason to be ashamed of the men of Peterboro for the following reason: There were twin meetings Wednesday night—one for men only, the other for women only—and the collections showed that for every dollar the men contributed the women gave two, to say nothing of $7 to boot in the total.

"But don't forget, Mr. Halpenny," exclaimed a masculine voice, "that the women got the money from the men first."

Poor old man! At the beginning of creation a rib was taken from him to create a mate, and she, the woman, outshone him in beauty. And she has taken from him ever since to cut a shine, so to speak; but to put him to shame in the matter of a collection plate is carrying the harrowing game a little too far. But Mr. Halpenny, why did you set such a trap? You see, had the meetings been open to both sexes that night, the man and his wife would have gone together and, of course, the man would have contributed for both. But, no, you separated them, and consequently the man had to fork out twice. That gentleman who corrected you has certainly cut his wisdom teeth, and the genial secretary of the S.S. Association is not wanting in that respect. However, it was all for a good cause, and so let it be!

Queer Incidents

Last night Ald. Weir drew attention to a funny incident, and Alderman Dobbin followed suit. (Not to use names we'll borrow the letters A, B and C from the alphabet). Said Ald. Weir, when looking over some old council meeting records, I saw an account of $2 for Ald. A's nose. Well, replied Ald. Dobbin here's one better than that: Some years ago the Finance chairman, when initiating some accounts, marked one, in a spirit of fun, "for tobacco and whiskey," and it appeared in a local paper "Ald B, for beer and whiskey, $5. And that puts one in mind of another queer incident. In a report of a council meeting, when typsetting machines were first introduced in town, a stupid operator set up in every case Old C said this and Old C thought that and many so forths instead of Ald C as written. It so happened that the alderman in question was particularly loguacious that night and "Old C's" consequently of frequent occurence, and the error went through the press. Well Old C went through the newspaper office next day, still in a garrulous mood. He knew he was old, he said, but to tell him so about fifty times in a column of newsprint was a little thin.

Eight persons were killed and 21 injured in the last German air raid over London.

CHILDREN HATE PILLS, CALOMEL AND CASTOR OIL

IF CROSS, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED, GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

(b) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in military service, he be engaged in other work in which he wishes to be engaged and for which he has special qualification;

(c) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in military service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated or trained;

(e) Ill health or infirmity;

(f) That he conscientiously objects to the undertaking of combatant service and is prohibited from so doing by the tenets and articles of faith, in effect on the sixth day of July, 1917, of any organized religious denomination existing and well recognized in Canada at such date, and to which he in good faith belongs.

Canada's Victory Loan Will Keep the Workers Busy

WHEN the war started many people predicted the ruin of Canada's industries.

But time has shown that the natural resources and basic industries of Canada are of immense importance in helping to keep Great Britain supplied with food, munitions and equipment.

Because of this, there has been a steady cash market for the farmers, as well as plenty of work at good wages for all the workers in other lines of industry.

But now the time has come when Great Britain can purchase her supplies on this side of the Atlantic only on credit. If Canada does not grant this credit, Britain will be obliged to place her orders where credit is available. If Canada does grant this credit our cash markets will be continued and the workers kept busy.

The Only Way

to raise the money needed to establish this credit is by borrowing from all the people of Canada through the sale of Victory Bonds.

Every man and woman in Canada, therefore, is vitally interested in the success of Canada's Victory Loan, for upon its complete success depends the continuance of Canada's agricultural and business prosperity.

EVERY MONTH MANY WOMEN

Take ZUTOO Tablets and are free of the Griping Pain and Sick Headaches.

Read what Mrs. Wright says:

"I received your sample of Zutoo Tablets, and took them for severe pain (monthly) and headache. At the end of 30 minutes, I was entirely free of pain and experienced no more throughout the period. I suffer a great deal at these times and feel grateful that I have a remedy which affords quick relief. Every woman in the land should know about Zutoo Tablets and what they will do."

RID STOMACH OF GASES, SOURNESS AND INDIGESTION

"PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN" RELIEVES STOMACH DISTRESS IN FIVE MINUTES.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is to valueable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief, its harmlessness, its certain unfailing action in [illegible] achs. Its quick relief in indigestion, dyspepsia and gastritis when caused by acidity has made it famous the world over.

Keep this wonderful stomach sweetener in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent [illegible] from any drug store, and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember, as soon as Pape's diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach it helps to neutralize the excessive acidity, then all the stomach distress caused by it disappears. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming such stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Big News in Brief

Another large credit was granted by the United States to Great Britain.

Sweden is contemplating the despatch of vessels to the States to bring back all nationals subject to the United States draft.

The Chinese Government has agreed that nine of her best sea-going vessels, aggregating 29,984 tons, should be chartered to the British Government.

Confirmation that a German warship has been sunk in the Sound is given in a despatch from Malmoe, Sweden. It is reported that the vessel struck a mine.

Satisfied Mothers

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. The satisfaction she derives from their use is wonderful. They are easy to give the baby; their action is prompt and thorough and above all they are absolutely harmless. Concerning them Mrs. Jean Dechaine, Lacordaire, Sask., writes:—"I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets. I had no trouble in giving them to my baby and they have promptly cured her of constipation." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LARGEST CORN CROP ON RECORD

CAMPAIGN BEGINS IN CANADA TO INCREASE PRODUCTION OF BAGS

The following extracts are taken from the United States Food Administration Bulletin No. 10, issued by direction of Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator:

"We have secured one of the largest corn crops in our history. We also have abundant crops of oats, barley, kaffir corn, soy beans, velvet beans, cotton seed and peanut meal, and we will have a larger supply of mill feed than normal. Not all of these are hog feed, but they will enter the general feeding question by adding to the general pool of feed."

"If we aggregate all of the feeding stuffs, and if we subtract the amount of fodder grains which we can expect to export in view of the present shipping outlook, we will find one astounding fact. We have today somewhere near the equivalent of 1,000,000,000 bushels of feeds more than last year. This is an increase of nearly 25 per cent for which we have no corresponding number of animals to feed unless we begin to increase them at once. In other words, as our animals have not kept pace with our increase in concentrates, we have much more feed this year than we have animals to eat it. Therefore, if farmers are to find markets for feed, it must be to a great extent through an increase in animals."

Production of Hogs

A campaign for increased production of hogs is being inaugurated in Canada. The market is practically unlimited and the farmers need have no hesitation in devoting much more attention to the production of hogs, which is one of the most important and most rapid means of increasing the available supply of meat animals.

It is absolutely essential that Canada should conserve and increase live stock as rapidly as possible. Stocks in Europe have been greatly depleted. The Allied nations in Europe have been compelled to kill more than 33,000,000, of their stock animals. Moreover, the shortage of tonnage and difficulties of arranging convoys for merchant ships from more distant countries have practically confined the source of supply to the North American continent.

The question of the slaughter of cows that are capable of breeding is also a serious one which should receive immediate attention.

Reducing Danish Swine

Owing to serious difficulties in obtaining fodder, the Danish Food Committee has advised the farmers of Denmark to kill three-quarters of the country's stock of pigs, reducing it from two millions to half a million.

After a ten years' search, Claude Van Wyck, heir to an estate of 250,000 in Duchess County, New York, has been located in Oregon

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

DUCK SHOOTING

The duck shooting season is about to open in Maryland, and during the next few months thousands of sportsmen from all over America will travel to the ducking grounds. Of course the number of duck shooters will be greatly decreased this year because of the more important shooting affair going on over in Europe. That Maryland ducks are favored above the wild ducks of all other parts of the world is due to their diet of wild celery, which is found principally on the flats of the Chesapeake Bay country. Practically all of the Maryland ducks have their habitat in Canada, along the bays and gulfs of British America, where they mate and rear their young. With the coming of the autumn they start south, the majority stopping off in Maryland, but many going on down the coast to still warmer climes. There they find awaiting them the sportsmen with their guns, sneakboats, sinkboxes, decoys and other paraphernalia of death and destruction. The Susquehanna flats, about midway between Philadelphia and Baltimore, are renowned as ducking grounds among sportsmen the world over. In years past this section has been visited by many of the most famous sportsmen of America and Europe. Going after the ducks in motorboats used to be popular, but sportsmen have decided that this is not fair game, and it is now illegal.

PROPER SPIRIT SHOWN BY BOXERS

That was a nice tribute that Jim Corbett paid to Bob Fitzsimmons who took his title from him, when, in addressing a memorial meeting in New York, on Sunday, he referred to his old adversary as the pluckiest and fairest fighter he had ever met, and as the man he would prefer to be beaten by, if he must suffer defeat. There was a time when Corbett would not have talked that way, but time heals wounds. Fritz never showed any vindictiveness towards Corbett, but the latter, before they fought, hated the Cornishman for the way in which he insisted on trying to force him into a match that should decide the title.

One meeting between the men, at Green's Inn, in Philadelphia, is historic. That was before they fought and Corbett, by his actions on that occasion, got himself in wrong with all followers of the fistic sport save those who were his strong partisans. After he had been beaten, and the sting of defeat had passed, Corbett adopted a manly attitude, gave Fitz full credit for his victory, though always blaming himself for not pressing an advantage that he had early in the bout, and which he threw away through over-confidence. In later years the men were good friends, as were Fitzsimmons and Jeffries, who did to Fitz what the latter had done to Corbett. There really is no reason why two fighters should be enemies any more than in the case of ball players or other demonstrators of athletics of one sort or other. Boxing is merely a game, after all.

SOME FAMOUS RACERS

Frank J. Bryan, who allots handicaps for the Pimlico meeting, has just issued the weights for the Arlington handicap, which will be the feature of the opening day next Thursday. The Maryland Jockey club has received an entry of more than 150 handicappers for the race at a mile and sixteenth.

Though it is scarcely likely that either Hourless or Omar Khayyam will start, the weights are interesting in showing how the expert handicapper estimates the ability of the two great three-year-olds. The recent victory of Hourless, though only one out of three starts against Omar Khayyam, has gained him the position of the leading three-year-old, according to Mr. Bryan's figures. He has asked Hourless to carry 128 pounds in the Arlington, one pound more than Omar Khayyam.

The handicapper also pays a high tribute to Harry Payne Whitney's great mare, Regret, which shares the place at the head of the list with Old Rosebud, which under Mr. Vosburgh's handicaps has occupied the pride of place among the handicap horses. Both are asked to carry 134 pounds and they are the only older horses asked to give weight to Hourless and Omar Khayyam.

THIRD STRIKE FOR CRAWFORD

Looks like Detroit has seen the last of Sam. Crawford, oldest of the players, in years and in point of service, who have kept that town on the baseball map for the eleven consecutive seasons in which it has been a factor in every race save two. Samuel at the present time, is in Omaha, Nb., home of Mrs. Crawford, accompanied by his wife and their daughter. They are pausing there for a re-union of the Crawford family, and for a visit of a week or so, prior to speeding on their way to Los Angeles where they will spend the winter.

It is probable that Sam will not return to Detroit. He plans to make California his home, and, in anticipation of this, some time ago sold his home on Hague avenue, as well as a lot on Boston boulevard on which he had intended to build a new residence. So far as can be learned the Detroit club does not intend to offer another contract to the player whose four years' agreement ran out this fall. Crawford may play some ball in the Pacific coast league, though the prospects for a salary that will tempt him are not bright, as the circuit named is not over prosperous right now. He is a free agent, and can arrange his own terms. Sam has handled his earnings wisely, and does not need to worry whether or not he lands anywhere.

WANTS TO BUY AMERICA

Sir Thomas Lipton, four times challenger for the America's cup, today expressed a desire to purchase the schooner yacht America, which, brought the cup to this country in 1851.

Members of the New York Yacht club, custodian of the America's cup, also are said to be anxious to purchase the yacht, but the present owners have not announced whether they will sell.

JACK COOMBS LINED UP

Iron Man Jack Coombs of the Brooklyns may be the new manager of the St. Louis Cardinals to succeed Miller Huggins. President Branch Rickey has a high opinion of Coombs, who has practically decided to retire from the diamond. Coombs also has been strongly recommended to Rickey it is said, by President John K. Tener. Col. Ebbets of the Brooklyns said yesterday that he knew nothing about the proposed engagement of the Iron Man, and that the latter still was the property of the Brooklyn club. If Rickey hasn't reached a private agreement with Ira Thomas, formerly Connie Mack's lieutenant, it is believed that he will soon open negotiations with Ebbets for Coombs' release.

The Saskatoon Star says: "There is a dispute between the C. P. R. and the conductors. Just what the point of difference is, is not yet known, but those conversant with railway matters say that the company is demanding a share of the fares."

TEA
RED ROSE TEA

WHICH?

"This bulk tea is the best I could buy at the price, Mrs. Brown, but I believe you will like Red Rose better.

"We use Red Rose at home and like the rich flavor. My wife says it goes further."

Hundreds of grocers are making statements somewhat like this.

They have sold Red Rose Tea for many years and have found the quality so good that they use it in their homes.

Most grocers naturally like to make an extra profit on their bulk tea, but they cannot help recommending Red Rose Tea because they know it's worth the price.

They know it goes further because it consists chiefly of the teas from Assam in Northern India, the strongest, richest teas grown anywhere in the world.

Red Rose tastes better and goes further.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. W. and Reginald Turner, Ronald McKee, Albert Garbutt, Albert Armstrong and J. Comstock.

BUSINESS TALKS TO WOMEN

In every office where five or more people are employed there is always a possibility that someone of the force is dissatisfied with the way the office is run and unhappy in his work.

The bigger the office, the more probability of this state of affairs, and the greater the number of unwilling workers.

It is an utter impossibility for the man at the head of the business to know who these complainers and faultfinders are, for to the boss every worker pretends to have nothing so much at heart as the success of the business.

It is to the worker in the ranks that the faultfinders come with their complaints and the argument that "there is no chance here." Oftimes the arguments are right; sometimes they are wrong. The newly-engaged worker finds it hard to say which, but there is one line of reasoning to follow that cannot help but keep the course straight, and that is to say: "I was engaged to do certain work here, which I agreed to do at a certain salary. I am getting that salary. Advancement and favors are but additional compensation which I did not ask, nor was promised. My acquaintance with this worker who is so dissatisfied is just as incidental as my acquaintance with the walls or floors about me—they all happened to be here when I arrived. I will live up to my agreemnt, to sell certain services for a certain price." That and that only is the way to keep out of it.

INVALID WINES NOW UNDER BAN

LIST OF THE BRANDS WHICH CANNOT BE SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

The Provincial License Board yesterday issued a statement that a number of medicated wine brands come within the prohibitions of the Ontario temperance act, and that their sale has already stopped or must not continue. This will be the instruction issued to chemists and dealers by the inspectors. These instructions follow the analysis of the wines by the department, and the opinion is expressed that the only way these can be sold is by a doctor's certificate, and in quantities of not more than six ounces at a time.

Those brands named in the order are: Wilson's Invalid Port Wine, Hall's Wine, Dr. Emerson's Invalid Port, Peavoy's Port Wine, Monikess Port Wine, Puritant Port Wine, Dr. Kilborn's Invalid Port Wine, Dr. Coventry's Invalid Port Wine, St. Francis' Invalid Port Wine and Vin St. Michel.

The board has been notified that Monikess, Puritant, Dr. Kilborn's, Dr. Coventry's, St. Francis', and Peavoy's are no longer being sold by the manufacturers, and that the makers of Gordon's Health Wine have not only stopped selling, but have also recalled that already sold to dealers, and are supplying only an unfermented wine which they claim contains less than 2¼ per cent. of proof spirits, under a similar brand.

Tar and Feather Coat Given Pro-German

LANSING PEOPLE SEIZE OBJECTIONABLE PERSON, DEALING PUNISHMENT

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 3.—After being given a mock trial, at which he was accused of pro-Germanism, William Saler, 56 years old, well known here, was tarred and feathered by a group of more than 25 men, clad in white robes. Saler was seized about two blocks from his home by six men, who pushed him into an automobile and drove to a golf links, two miles west of the city, where a score or more men were waiting. After the assault, Saler was driven back to within a block of his home and deposited on the sidewalk.

The police have located several persons who saw the kidnapping, but have no clue to the identity of the band. Saler refused to make any statement even to the police.

OPEN DOORS FOR S. S. DELEGATES

BILLETING COMMITTEE SAY THEY HAD NO DIFFICULTY PLACING VISITORS.

The people of Peterboro are certainly hospitable. The billeting committee of the recent Sunday School Convention asked the different churches for billets for the delegates. The response from all the different denominations was so generous that it quite exceeded their anticipations. Many of the delegates when they arrived instead of asking to be billeted, went to the homes of friends. Quite a number of people who were so generous in their offers of hospitality did not therefore receive any of the visitors.

The billeting committee desire to thank those in particular for their kindness in offering to take delegates and hope that they did not feel too keenly disappointed. The generosity of the people in general made the work of the billeting committee comparatively easy.

SIR WILFRID RINGS IN TARIFF

ENUMERATORS BEGIN WORK PREPARING VOTERS LIST FOR THE COMING ELECTION

Sheriff-Hall, Returning Officer, has Received Instruction From Government—Personal Canvass Required to Ascertain What Names are to be Erased from or Added To List.

Sheriff Hall, who has been appointed Returning Officer for West Peterborough, has received the instructions for the enumerators who will prepare the list of voters at the coming election. There is one enumerator for each polling subdivision, and these officials will begin their work at once. They will make a personal canvass of the houses and business places in the city, and are entitled to courteous treatment, as they have authority for the performance of their task. Citizens are asked to remember that the work of the enumerators is something altogether aside from the Military Service Act.

The enumerators who will prepare the list for West Peterborough were selected in September by the executive committee of the Liberal-Conservative Association, but members of both parties were appointed, so that the work now in progress will be entirely non-partisan. It will be noticed, too, that there are women on the list, so that all classes of the electorate are represented. The executive committee carried out in every way possible the conciliatory attitude adopted by Sir Robert Borden.

The following are the enumerators who will make the canvass and prepare the new voters' list for West Peterborough:

NORTH WARD—H. P. Lindsay, F. W. Dates, J. C. Wood, G. W. Powell, Mrs. W. J. B. Everett.

SOUTH WARD—Joseph Pollard, Isidore Gosselin, Sam Deyell, David McQuaig, J. O. Fife.

WEST WARD—T. W. ROBINSON, N. Routley, J. J. Lynch, Miss Maime McCarthy, Charles Crowe.

CENTRE WARD—L. A. Platt, Jos. R. Metheral, W. L. Sharp, J. A. Armstrong.

EAST WARD—Miss Bella Morgan, Thomas Collins, Joseph Sucee.

SOUTH MONAGHAN—Wm. Waterman, John White, Wm. Fell.

NORTH MONAGHAN — Bert Sanderson, Herbert Foster, Bruce Johnston.

SMITH—George Moncrief, G. W. Mann, Sam Adams, Otis Northey, Arthur Smith.

ENNISMORE—John Maloney, Clayton Telford.

HARVEY—John Jones, W. T. Elliott, Peter Graham.

GALWAY—W. J. Dudman, James Ritchie, Wm. Ritchie.

The following shows clearly who have the right to vote at the coming election, those whose names must be erased from and those whose names are to be added to, the list:

Qualifications of Male Persons.

The qualifications in the case of a male person necessary to the placing of a name on the voters' list are in a general sense those required by the provincial law to entitle a male person to vote at a provincial election. The law of the province requires that the voter's name should appear on the provincial lists in order to entitle him to vote at a provincial election. This requirement is inapplicable to the preparation of Dominion lists and so will be disregarded. The provincial qualifications as to age and residence are that a male person shall be twenty-one years old, and shall have resided within the province and the polling sub-division for certain periods mentioned in the provincial statutes, but the residence qualification of the province being inapplicable on account of the necessarily different dates and procedure, it is provided by the Dominion Act, section 32, sub-section (2), that so far as residence is concerned, the qualification shall be residence for one year in the province and for thirty days in the constituency, immediately prior as respects both periods, to the date of the issue of the writ of election.

Qualifications of Female Persons.

LOCAL LIBERALS TO HOLD CONVENTION THIS WEEK

Mr. R. R. Hall is Slated to Run on Straight Party Ticket—Mr. J. A. Aylmer Proposed as Independent.

The local Liberal party will hold a convention some day this week, the exact date to be announced later, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest the riding with Capt. Burnham. This candidate will be an out and out Laurier man, just as was the choice of the party convention in East Peterborough. Mr. R. R. Hall from all indications will be the nominee.

The manifesto of Sir Wilfrid Laurier published today will inspire the local party with new hope for the reason that the chieftain temporizes further with the conscription issue which he really attempts to sidetrack by introducing a number of questions that are not pertinent.

At an informal gathering of some of the leading local Liberal lights held recently the selection was discussed. The majority were in favor of running a straight party candidate and Mr. R. R. Hall was their choice.

The gathering, however, were not unanimous. Some of those present attempted to eject a little leaven into the cake of dough and to give the proceedings a gilt setting by proposing that an independent candidate be nominated, a man whose unadulterated ambition to win the war was above question. In this connection the name of Mr. J. A. Aylmer was mentioned.

The majority, however, prevailed. It is to be a party fight so far as the Liberals are concerned and Mr. Hall is to be leader of the forlorn hope.

GETS JUDGMENT, $50 AND COST

MR. DOBLE'S CAR WAS DETAINED AFTER CLAIM HAD BEEN PAID

His Honor Judge Huycke gave judgment today for $50.00 and Division Court costs, in the action brought by Mr. Doble, Commercial Traveller, against McCaskey's Limited, who seized his car. The $50.00 is given for the detention of the car some days after the money had been paid to release it. The claim against the bailiff was dismissed on the ground that the third party proceedings did not apply to the bailiff and that he had not acted within the scope of his employment as bailiff. The bailiff was not joined as a co-defendant in the action.

In this action, Mr. Doble's costs will amount to, on the County Court scale $125.00 as well as the costs of each of the other parties will amount to about the same.

Mr. J. G. Guise-Bagley appeared for Mr. Dobble, Mr. J. J. McLellan, K.C., of Toronto appeared for McCaskey's Ltd., and Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the bailiff.

BRITISH MAKE FURTHER GAINS ON WEST FRONT

Prisoners, Machine Guns and Trench Mortars Were Captured.

HUNDRED FOE KILLED IN RAID

Casualties of the British Forces Were Light in All Engagements.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 5.—Further details concerning yesterday's raid by London troops in the neighborhood of Gavrelle show that fourteen prisoners, four machine guns and two trench mortars were captured by us, says today's official report.

From the Franco-Belgian front, in addition a large number of the enemy, estimated at nearly one hundred, were killed, and all dugouts in the raided area were destroyed or left in flames. Our casualties were very light.

Yesterday evening a party of Sherwood Foresters raided the enemy's trenches to the northeast of Loos, capturing a few prisoners and killing a number of Germans. Our casualties were again light. Hostile reconnoitering parties were dispersed by our fire last night in the neighborhood of Hollebeke and Reutel.

Serious Charge Laid Against Local Man

ACCUSED OF MISAPPROPRIATING FUNDS RUNNING INTO FOUR FIGURES.

A well known citizen was arrested Saturday night, charged with misappropriating funds to the amount of between $3,000 and $4,000. The accused found no difficulty in procuring bail to the extent of $10,000 made up of two sureties of $2,500 each and $5,000 in bonds from himself.

The case will be heard in the police court on Wednesday morning.

The charge is made by the head of the firm with which accused had been employed.

ITALIANS ARE PRESSED BACK; 6000 CAPTIVES

Austro-German Army Have Crossed the Tagliamento River.

ARE STILL MOVING WESTWARD

General Cadorna May, However, Be Making a Strategic Retreat.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Nov. 5.—The Germans have crossed the Tagliamento River, the war office announces. The Austro-German pressure against the Italian northern wing has been intensified.

In effecting the crossing of the Tagliamento River, says a Berlin war office report, the Germans captured six thousand prisoners and several guns. The report states that the German armies are still pressing westward.

After their retreat from the Isonzo in consequence of the Austro-German offensive, the Italians took up positions along the west bank of the Tagliamento River, which runs across the northeastern tip of Italy from the Alps to the sea and offers a natural line of defence for the plains of northern Italy. This line is shorter than the old one, and apparently was more practicable for defensive purposes, but it is not certain that the Italian commander, Gen. Cadorna, intended to hold it, as he may not have had sufficient time to organize it, electing merely to defend it while preparing another line further back. Pinzano is on the northern edge of the plain in the foothills of the Alps, about forty miles north of the Adriatic.

SIR WILFRID WOULD SUSPEND MILITARY SERVICE ACT UNTIL ENDORSED BY REFERENDUM VOTE

Long Looked for Manifests Finally Given to Public—Attempts to Cloud Real Issue by Dragging in Tariff and Other Questions.

Ottawa, Nov. 5. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier has issued his manifesto. In a document addressed "To the Canadian People" the Opposition leader declares his policy and outlines his aims.

On the all-important question of participation in the war Sir Wilfrid claims that "a fundamental objection to the Government's policy of conscripition is that it conscripts human life only, and does not attempt to conscript wealth, resources, or the services of any persons other than those who come within the age limit prescribed by the Military Service Act."

The first duty of a Laurier Administration would be "to find the men, money and resources necessary to ensure the fullest measure of support to our heroic soldiers at the front and to enable Canada to continue to the very end to do her splendid part to win the war."

To this Sir Wilfrid adds: "As to the present Military Service Act, my policy will be not to proceed further under its provisions until the people have an opportunity to pronounce upon it by way of a referendum. I pledge myself forthwith to submit the Act to the people and, with my followers, to carry out the wishes of the majority of the nation as thus expressed."

As remedies for an economic situation "which is admittedly critical," Sir Wilfrid promises:

Tariff reform.

Control of food supplies and prices.

Stop to profiteering.

Would Remove Tariff Increases.

The two increases in the tariff made since the beginning of the war he would remove. These are: 7½ per cent. on all commodities coming into Canada from outside Great Britain, and 5 per cent. on goods coming from Great Britain. He also "would immediately remove the duties on agricultural implements and other essentials as demanded by the Western farmers."

In connection with the high cost of living "he would take drastic steps to bring under Government control all food-producing factories so that food may be sold at a fixed price under the control of the Government."

If satisfactory arrangements could not be made with the food-producing factories, Sir Wilfrid declares, he would not hesitate to commandeer.

The manifesto proceeds: "One of the most important contributions towards winning the war is to put a stop to profiteering on war supplies. The Government has deliberately encouraged profiteering for the benefit of its partisan followers. A first duty of my administration would be to ensure to the country, which pays for war supplies, the excess of exorbitant profits being realised by profiteers." If necessary, Sir Wilfrid continues, "he would not hesitate to take control of the factories engaged in the supply of war materials."

Government Shops.

Suitable Government shops also, Sir Wilfrid believes, should be turned to the production of war materials at cost prices. Sir Wilfrid passes in review alike some of the legislation of the late Government and the programme of the present. He finds no trace in the manifesto of the Union Government that its Liberal members have influenced their colleagues to the adoption of measures they deemed essential. He refers to "most of the articles," in that manifesto as "stale commonplaces resurrected for a new election."

He declares of the War Times Election Act, passed last session, that it "is a blot upon every instinct of justice," and holds the view that the Canadian Northern Railroad purchase should be adjudicated upon by the new Parliament.

JUDGE HUYCKE MEETS MEMBERS OF TRIBUNALS

Elucidating Address to Members on Principles To Be Applied.

MAGISTRATE LANGLEY SPEAKS

Authority of the Tribunals in Conducting Hearings—Have Absolute Power.

All the members of the district tribunals, excepting Mr. Maloney, met his honor, Judge Huycke, in his chambers at the court house Saturday afternoon.

There seems to be a veil of mystery surrounding Mr. Maloney's personalty, as none of the tribunal members know him, not even Mr. T. E. Bradburn, whose tribunal partner he is. He is supposed to reside somewhere near Centreville. Judge Huycke delivered a splendid and timely address, elucidating the provisions of the act, and principles to be applied in regard to all claims for exemption. All present highly appreciated the information and advice offered by his honor.

At Judge Huycke's request nearly all members of the tribunals present replied to his honor. The speakers were: D. W. Dumble, J. A. Aylmer,

MANIFESTO IS WET BLANKET TO PARTY HOPE

GOVERNMENT LEADERS PLEASED THAT SIR WILFRID IS SO CLEAR

NEWSPAPERS CONDEMN STAND

A FEW OPTIMISTIC LIBERALS, HOWEVER, SAY STATEMENT WILL WIN VOTER

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—Satisfaction that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's position on conscription is set forth so clearly is expressed by Government leaders and supported here today. On the other hand Laurier followers declare it will gain their leader many votes.

Hon. Sidney Fisher, who is Sir Wilfrid's chief English speaking supporter in Quebec, was here today in consultation with the opposition leader.

Newspaper editorial comment gathered from all parts of Canada indicates almost unanimously disapproval among the English speaking press of Sir Wilfrid's manifesto. Notable exceptions were the London Advertiser and the Edmonton Bulletin.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1917

SIR WILFRID'S MANIFESTO.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S long-looked-for manifesto has finally been given to the public. The outstanding points in it are the demand for the suspension of the Military Service Act until the people vote on it, the promise of tariff reform, and the condemnation of the Election Act.

The verdict given by the people on December 17 will settle the fate of conscription. If the Unionists are sustained, conscription will be a fixture. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier is returned to power, that will be the end of the Military Service Act. He will be the first to so interpret the verdict.

To ring in such a question as tariff reform is simply an attempt to divert he public's attention from the main issue. Sir Wilfrid has made such promises before, and failed to implement them when the opportunity offered. Tariff reform is simply another of the catch phrases for which he is famous.

His opposition to the Election Act was to be expected, and his condemnation of that measure will have as little effect as his action occasions surprise.

THE EXAMINER AND UNION.

THERE IS SOMETHING seriously the matter with The Examiner. Either it is at odds with its party or the party has throttled it for the present, fearing to trust it with a hand in the brewing of the broth.

The Liberals have come out from under the barn and expressed confidence in and sworn fealty to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Examiner neither condemns nor approves of this action, but treats an event of so much moment, especially under the circumstances, with the densest silence.

The Liberals of East Peterborough meet in convention and nominate a straight Laurier candidate, defying fate as they do so. Three days have passed since that auspicious event was pulled off, and yet The Examiner has not found time to make the slightest reference to it or to extend to Mr. W. H. Johnston, the candidate, the courtesy of its benediction.

Is it possible that the grouch that has possessed the spirit of our contemporary in dealing with political matters for the past year has so soured its spirit that it canot utter a kind word even for the members of its own party? In its Saturday's issue, for example, it devoted so much space in its editorial department o pillorying the new Union Government that it had no room left for mere idle commendation of its friends.

It is plain that the winning of the war is, with our neighbor, a secondary consideration to castigating the Premier. It has no use for the coalition that has been effected to bring harmony out of discord and to unify the best talent in both parties for the great task in hand. It groans at the very idea of aliens being deprived of the right to vote, aliens who are not eligible for military service. Every protest uttered by our contemporary on this head is an insult to the men in khaki and to their anxious friends at home. The alien vote would go against the party that is charged with the duty of prosecuting the war to the limit of Canada's resources. An alien's vote would be a shot from the rear directed against the battalions that are upholding the national honor in the battle line.

The Examiner is displeased, too, with the Act which confers a limited franchise upon Canadian women. In this it is illogical as well as ill-natured. The franchise was not conferred upon the male voters of all classes simultaneously. Manhood suffrage was attained by slow degrees. The matter of allowing the women of the country to vote at the coming election was left to themselves. They are satisfied with the action of the Government, even if The Examiner is not, and they are really the party most concerned.

The Examiner says, dropping into the parlance of the gambler, the Government is playing the election game with loaded dice. It is doing nothing of the kind. It is simply providing for a fair game by removing from the box the dice that are warranted to turn up every time so as to show a given number. They are removing from the deck all those cards the backs of which have been carefully marked by the players who are looking for an unfair advantage.

The Franchise Act was adopted by closure, a fair limitation on the time allowed each speaker, it is true. No one knows better than The Examiner that but for this rule the measure would never have been passed, but that a garrulous Opposition would have talked it to death simply by prolonging the discussion until the life of Parliament had expired. It is nothing unusual for a deliberative body to set a time limit on debate.

The alien who has been disfranchised for this election would nullify the vote of a soldier who is making sacrifices, the fruits of which his fire-in-the-rear opponent enjoys. Any newspaper, any politician that takes up the cudgels in behalf of the alien is in reality carrying on a sniper's warfare against the men in the trenches.

THE PRICE OF MILK.

WHATEVER DOUBT may exist as to the professional attainments of the writer who, in The Review the other day, discussed the price of milk over the cognomen "A Practical Farmer," there can be none as to the authority with which Mr. B. Cooke speaks in a letter published in another column of this issue. Mr. Cooke is a farmer and a practical dairyman. He knows what he is talking about and deals in facts and figures. No one can deny that he makes out a strong case for the milkman.

How is it that the public will as a rule stand an increase that really amounts to something on some article and never grumble, but will protest vigorously when the baker raises his price one cent a loaf or the milkman puts his milk up a cent a quart higher? It is invariably the small dealer who is at odds with his customer. The people seem to have no objection to being robbed, provided the robbing is conducted on a wholesale plan. This is only another development of the principle by which a man who wrecks a corporation generally escapes and is acclaimed a prince of finance while the hungry man who purloins a loaf of bread is branded as a common thief.

Everything that the farmer buys has gone up in price. Everything that he has to sell must follow the same trend if he is to remain in business. Mr. Cooke demonstrates that the cost of producing milk has within the past few years increased by nearly three hundred per cent, while the price of the product is not more than twenty-five per cent higher than when conditions were easy. Can any reasonable person object, in the face of the figures which Mr. Cooke presents?

The man who peddles milk around the city is not a bloated plutocrat by any means. His work is hard and his profits small. He is entitled to a chance to live at his calling. If the price of his stock in trade has gone up, the same can be said of every other article the consumer has to buy. The milkman is not the only offender, if an offence it be to expect a fair profit.

The price of milk has gone up in other cities. If the Peterborough consumers refuse to pay the present scale, the milk will be sent to Toronto and a local famine will be the result. The farmer cannot be blamed if he seeks the best market for his produce.

PREPARING THE LIST.

THE WORK of preparing the new voters' list for the coming election will soon begin in this riding, and the enumerators who have this important work in hand will make a personal canvass of the city in order to get the necessary data. They are officials of the Government and as such are entitled to every consideration. What they have to do chiefly is to remove from the present list the names of those who have been disfranchised by the Act, and to add to it he names of those who will vote for the first time. The later list includes the female relatives—that is, the mothers, wives and sisters of the soldiers.

There is an enumerator for every polling subdivision in the riding, and they have been selected in a spirit of fairness, both political parties being represented. The Prime Minister, since an election has been unavoidable, has adopted an attitude of conciliation, and this spirit has been emulated by the committee that selected the enumerators.

The coming election is not like former political contests. It is, rather, or should be, a getting together of all those in Canada who are anxious to see the men in the trenches reinforced without further unnecessary delay and accorded every other possible support.

A contest between a Unionist and a Laurier Liberal at a time like this would be nothing less than a disgrace to West Peterborough, while a contest between two men of similar views would be only a trifle less regrettable.

MISREPRESENTING THE PREMIER.

MR. GORDON WALDRON, the Toronto lawyer and Liberal campaigner, said at the Norwood convention that his party had been led into the present situation. They had been assured by Sir Robert Borden that this country would never have conscription. Then, with the prospect of an election coming, Sir Robert Borden announced that conscription would be introduced.

The charge that conscription was introduced as an election cry is unwarranted. It had been the aim of Sir Robert Borden from the beginning to avoid an election in war time. He announced conscription as part of his policy and then asked Sir Wilfrid Laurier to co-operate with him in its enforcement and in the government of the country. This meant no election for another year at least.

It is unfair to say that Sir Robert Borden ever assured the people that this country would never have conscription. He never went further than to say that it would be used only as a last resort. From time to time it was announced from Ottawa that the introduction of conscription had never been considered and that there was no prospect of it. That did not commit the Premier to a permanent adhesion to the voluntary system.

Within the past year and a half semi-official hints have been given that if the recruiting returns failed to show better results, some form of compulsion would have to be tried. At a recruiting meeting held in the Armories last winter, Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister Armories last winter, Hon. Martin Birrell, Minister of Agriculture, said as much. Mr. R. R. Hall presided at that meeting and should be in a position to bear out this statement.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MR. R. R. HALL pleads, but the public sit in judgment.

• • • •

FREE SPEECH is a blessing to the wise and the ruin of many a politician.

• • • •

"THE MORE the merrier and the easier," remark the Unionists in East Peterborough, as they hear of another candidate

• • • •

AT ALL EVENTS no one can charge that the brand of Laurierism on a candidate is anything in the nature of camouflage.

• • • •

ONE EXCELLENT WAY to fire a shot for civilization, to kill a German by proxy, is to vote for the Unionist candidate on December 17.

• • • •

EVERY TIME a politician-lawyer attempts to defend the record of the former Administration he succeeds in indicting his own judgment.

• • • •

SUGAR IS SCARCE, which fact may account for the deluge of bitterness which our George Street contemporary is pouring upon the Union Government.

• • • •

GERMANY'S ATTEMPTS to smuggle rubber will create the impression that the Kaiser is looking for raw material to provide himself with a conscience.

• • • •

THE WOMEN with the vote will thank heaven that they can do something for the soldier boys besides knitting socks and sending them other comforts.

EXPERIENCE BROUGHT WISDOM

"I heard you explaining to the grocer this morning," observed Kersmith, "that he sent you a bushel of potatoes that tasted of kerosene. I was surprised at your gentle, almost apologetic, tone. If you want to get any satisfaction out of a man like that grocer you have to read the riot act to him when he makes a break—and he's always making breaks."

"Oh, I don't know," replied Foxworthy, "I went into the store and told Hinshaw, the grocer, what was worrying me, and wore a forgiving smile upon my pallid lips. He was quite courteous and agreeable, and said he'd remedy things in three shakes of a bobcat's tail, and he did. He sent out some good potatoes and took away the misfit ones.

"I haven't much sense, speaking in a general way. My parents always held that if I ever learned to come out of the rain they'd be surprised. But even a man of my feeble intellectual capacity learns a few things, and I have learned that reading the riot act never gets a man anywhere.

"When I was younger, and my heart was hot and restless, I used to boast that no man could run over me. I considered the riot act an imperishable document, ranking with the B.N.A. Act, and read it whenever occasion offered. As a consequence I was always applying liniment to my head and having my features replaced by surgeons.

"I remember when Kemper, the coal prince, sold me a load of fuel and I found a few pieces of rock in it. I don't suppose the rock would have weighed more than twenty pounds, but I went storming down to Kemper's office and said the coal was half stone and likened him to Sir Henry Morgan and other corsairs and threatened to tell all my friends of his misdeeds and have them boycott him. He listened patiently for a while and then got up and pushed me out of his office with his feet and I bumped my head against an iron lamp-post with such vehemence I bent the post.

"If a thing like that occurred now I'd drop into the coal office in a casual way and explain the matter as though I appreciated its humorous aspects and it's dollars to doughnuts that the coal man would give me an imported cigar and send a wagon right out to the house to make things good.

"In my fatuous days when I believed in the riot act, I had Trimble, the tailor, make me a suit of clothes. When I put on the coat I found there were two or three spots on it. I took the garment to the tailor's joint and spread it out and denounced him and all his generation and said he wasn't fit to make harness for mules, let alone raiment for human beings.

"He tried to explain that a drop or two of oil from the sewing machine must have got on the cloth and it would be an easy matter to clean them off. But I was enjoying my own oratory and continued to point out that he was a monster of such hideous mien that to be hated he need but to be seen. Seeing that I was wound up for all day, he seized a big ironing board and broke it over my head and I was delirious for some time afterward.

"Things like that kept on happening to me until one fine day when I had a lucid interval I concluded then that there must be some truth in the old saying about vinegar being a poor thing to catch flies with. I changed my policy then and my life has been joyous ever since."

EDITOR'S MAIL

AS TO LAURIER LIBERALS.

Editor Review: Allow me to compliment you upon your straight talk to all critics, advisors, schemers and other opponents of the Borden Union Government.

Laurier and his Quebec anti-conscriptionists are trying to capture Canada and are putting a Laurierite Liberal in every constituency. East Peterborough now has one. Is West Peterborough to have another? If the Liberals here think that Borden is laying up, perhaps innocently enough, great capital for himself and his party for the future, then let them bring out a conscriptionist as an opponent of the Borden Unionist candidate who is now in the field by the nomination of the Conservative party recently revised and amended and confirmed by the Conservative Executive. Mr. Burnham has his full credentials as a Borden Unionist candidate. Why cannot the Liberal convention do the same if they wish to and not put the threatened disgrace on Peterborough of a supporter in the field of a leader who will leave our boys at the front hung up high and dry.

It is true that there is hypocrisy abroad and rotten samples of it too, as when a well known prig of a win-the-war catch-as-catch-what group met and proposed to slay Mr. Burnham for his independence in parliament in conservation of wealth and pensions. These same body snatchers are big "win-the-war" men now and non-partisans. That's the kind of bluff and guff such things are made of. Always keep your eye on the unco' guid and pure goods advertiser.

Mr. Editor, any monopolist is bad but a blowhard patriot one is the worst. Let every man now ask himself this question: Are you, my son, a Borden Unionist, a Liberal Unionist, a Tory, a Liberal, a Laborite, or only a know-nothing or a worse than know-nothing, a prig of a self-styled catch-as-catch-what "win-the-war" bluffer? Are you a thinker and above the line or only all things and nothing to all men that by some means you may catch something?

THE PRICE OF MILK

Editor Review:—One of the most interesting articles in Thursday's issue of the Review was under the heading "Editor's Mail". It was interesting inasmuch as it showed what absolute nonsense people can write.

The letter is signed "A Practical Farmer", and I can't imagine why in the world a non-de plume such as that should be signed at the end of a letter showing absolute ignorance of practical or any other kind of farming.

Did "Practical Farmer" read the articles in all the farm papers a short time ago proving by figures that although the cost of production of milk has increased one hundred per cent, yet milk and its products have only gone up twenty-five per cent? If "Practical Farmer" would just pinch himself and wake up he would realize that milk has been produced at a loss or a very bare profit for sometime now, and although possibly it costs no more to produce milk on November 1st than it does on Oct. 31st that is no reason why the hard working farmer shouldn't at least, be allowed to make some profit. Everything the farmer buys in town has gone up in price and at last real practical farmers are awaking to the fact that they must have more profit or else go out of business.

Our "Practical Farmer"? tells us "The corn and root crops never were better." Where? He doesn't tell us, but I am sure he can't mean round this part of the world, for the corn and roots are very poor. Then he informs us "grain is fed only in small quantities." That's right, or don't give the cows any at all, they'll do very well without grain just as a hard working man would do well with nothing to eat but bread and water. What kind of cows does this "Practical Farmer" keep? china cows stuck up on the sideboard as ornaments likely, or maybe he has a De Laval calendar hanging on the wall.

And now to top all he says "it costs the farmer no more to feed cows now than it did ten years ago." Let me quote a few figures from the market report of this week's Canadian Countryman and then let him think of the prices even five years ago.

Bran $35 per ton, middlings $45 per ton, oats 65 cents per bushel, oil cake $58 per ton, cottonseed $53 per ton clover hay $14 per ton. All these feeds were anything from fifty to a hundred per cent cheaper five or six years ago. Ten years ago $50 would buy a real good cow, an equally good cow today would cost $125.00 and yet our farmer friend tells us it costs no more to produce milk now than it did ten years ago.

Eight cents per quart retail would give no profit whatsoever to the producer. I have peddled milk in Peterboro at 7, 8 and 9 cents and believe me there is considerably more abuse and grumbling than profit in it.

Our "Practical Farmer" is most likely a city man, afraid to let the farmer make more than a bare living, and his practical farming most likely consists in dusting insect powder on his wife's pet pullets in the back yard.

If he is a practical farmer let us have his name and address, and if he is not a farmer at all, for goodness sake stop him writing on subjects about which he is absolutely ignorant.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space.

B. COOKE.

R.R. 8, Peterboro.

A SOCIETY EVENT

Editor Review:—I notice in The Review of Saturday night an account of a wedding in High Life at Ottawa at which there were one thousand guests gathered together from all parts of the province. I suppose there must be marrying and given in marriage even if the world is at war, but what is the use of preaching thrift among the common people while the aristocrats at Ottawa blaze with jewels and shimmer with costly raiment.

The letter carriers of the country are asking enough money to keep their families decently. The Government does not appear to have money to meet their demands, but it evidently has money to burn up in dazzling social functions.

TODAY'S STORY

Dr. Hardwood Flores, president of Frontwoods college, eyed the tall young man dubiously.

"So you would like to enter Frontwoods college?" he said.

"I sure would, doc," returned Poplin Buttons readily. "I ain't much on book learnin' so far, but I'm a willin' worker."

"The qualifications required of an entrant to Frontwoods college are very rigorous," said Dr. Flores solemnly. "Can you tell me offhand the cube root of 7 ⅓ multiplied to the tenth power?"

"Somewhere in the neighborhood of half past 9, wouldn't it be, doc?" replied Buttons timidly.

"It would not," said Dr. Flores dryly. "Perhaps you can tell me the specific gravity of scrambeling gas?"

Buttons stood first on one foot and then the other and then said timidly. "Would it help any, doc, to know that I can run 100 yards in 4⅘ seconds, and make 13 feet 6 inches in the runnin' high jump?"

Dr. Flores rose excitedly and clasped Buttons' rough but honest hand. "You'll do," he said.

Take a good color scheme, say yellow, which always lights up nicely, and use it to cover your table. You can buy beautiful flowered table cloths in paper, and if you know how to make yellow paper chrysanthemums they would be highly decorative. Make for selling a number of fancy knitting bags, the material of which is comparatively inexpensive. You can acquire a lot of ideas by using your eyes in the downtown stores. The bags, with their gay colors, will be pretty on your table and if you could buy a lot of dolls and dress them they would be highly effective and would sell well if offered at reasonable prices.

"Dear Marion Holmes: I have two white woolen suits that have shrunk from being washed in hot water. Is there any way of treating them so that I may be able to wear them again?

I wish I might tell you what to do, especially at this time, when woolen underwear is trying to rival cloth of gold in price, but flannels once shrunken are like scrambled eggs, never to be restored to their original condition.

RED CROSS WORK AT STONEY LAKE

SOCIETY HAD A BUSY TIME DURING THE PAST SUMMER

Following is the report of the Stoney Lake Red Cross Association:

Officers — President, Mrs. L. H. Graham; 1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. L. B. Stewart; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. W. C. Eddis; secretary, Miss Evelyn Robertson; treasurer, Miss Freda Cole; secy.-treas. for Peterborough, Mrs. Knapman.

The Stoney Lake Red Cross Association has finally closed its books for the season. Some of the work, having been left over from the summer, was given to various members to finish, and no report could be given until this was returned.

The list of finished articles comprise 15 T bandages, 84 towels, 49 hot water bottle covers, 12 stretcher caps, 22 wash cloths, and 66 pairs of socks.

Taking into consideration that fewer members were working, this compares favourably with last year.

These articles have been sent to the University Base Hospital Committee, from whom the material was received.

The sum of $506 has been collected through donations, fees, entertainments, and the net receipts of the regatta, the largest donation being a cheque for $25 from Mr. F. B. Archibald of New York.

A cheque for $400 has been sent to the head office of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Toronto.

An invalid chair and tables, costing $100, have also been presented to the Davisville Military Hospital by the Association.

Famous Crime Forgotten.

M. Cailleaux has returned to the French Chamber, and recently took part in the discussion on the income tax—a fact which seems to show that the crime which once attracted the attention of the world has been forgotten by the French people. It is more than three years ago since Mme. Cailleaux called at the office of the "Figaro" and shot dead its political director, M. Gaston Calmette, who had attacked the financial policy of her husband day after day. "You have ruined my life," M. Cailleaux is reported to have said to his wife after the tragedy, and he resigned from the Doumargue Ministry. After seven days' trial Mme. Cailleaux was acquitted, and the crime was quickly enveloped in the shadow of the European crisis.

No Music From Prussia.

Modern Prussianized Germany is many gulfs asunder from the old-time Germany of real culture and romance. German music is one of the great art possessions of humanity, and it is a remarkable fact that not one of the great German composers was a Prussian. From a list compiled by Professor Dickinson we learn that Bach was a Thuringian, Handel a Saxon, Gluck and Mozart Bavarians, Haydn an Austrian citizen, and probably a Croat, Weber, and Schubert Austrians, and Schumann and Wagner Saxons. Beethoven was born in Bonn and was of Flemish descent, Brahms was born in Hamburg, and Mendelssohn was a Jew. Richard Strauss is a Bavarian.

An Indian Census.

The last census of India, the most extensive ever attempted in any country, was taken on a day regarded by the natives for religious reasons as inauspicious for them to leave their homes.

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va. — "After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends." — Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Why and Wherefore of Food Control

"FOOD Service" or "How to Shatter Germany's Threat of Starvation" is the title of the latest effort to come from the Department of the Dominion Food Controller. It is a handbook for use by speakers who desire to persuade the public to enlist in the food service campaign. It is only after all the data was gone over by experts that the booklet was allowed to be published, and, therefore, everything that it contains is guaranteed to be accurate. The material was gathered by the Food Controller's staff.

The booklet endeavors to deal with the following twelve main facts:

The armies must have men.

The armies must have food.

Victory depends on both.

There is a world famine in wheat.

There is a world shortage of beef.

There is a world shortage of bacon. Canada has abundance of other foods.

Britain is seriously menaced by submarines.

Canadians must eat less white bread, and reduce the wheat consumption at home by twelve million bushels.

Canada must send 25 per cent. more beef and bacon to the Allies.

Housewives must absolutely eliminate waste.

Every Canadian household should be pledged to food service.

The speaker, who is asked the embarrassing question of why there are so many eggs in cold storage, is advised to give the following answer:

Eggs accumulate in cold storage at the end of the packing and surplus egg production season. If storage houses did not have them in store now it would be as serious in its way as if there were no grain in the granaries at the end of October."

"Why is there so much butter and beef in cold storage?" are other questions to which answers have been prepared. The butter question receives the following answer:

"We are nearing the end of the surplus production and storage season. The demand for fats in Europe is becoming greater every day. Anxious inquiries for fats of all kinds are being made. The demand will be still sterner in the near future to spare all kinds of fats for export. Butter exports from Canada were one million pounds before the war, and last year they were seven million pounds."

The reason for the large amount of beef in cold storage is given in a short paragraph: "Because by the marketing of grass-fattened animals every fall a comparative surplus of beef occurs which is taken care of by cold storage. Every pound of beef in storage is capital on which we can draw for supplying our friends in need overseas."

On the inside front page of the book an explanation is given of why the Canadian housewives should economize with their flour. The article says:

"It is now calculated that Great Britain, France, and other European allies and men at the front will require 971 million bushels of wheat. Great Britain and the allied European countries can provide but 349 million bushels, leaving 577 million bushels to be supplied by import. The normal consumption of Canada and the United States, the only countries readily available in the present food crisis, would permit the export this year of not more than 207 millions, according to the latest crop reports. That means a shortage of 370 millions for Great Britain and her Allies, and a shortage for the soldiers in the field.

"If the 370 millions shortage had to be provided entirely by Canada and the United States, Canada's proportion would be 25,900,000 bushels, or one-half the normal consumption. Canadians must make up as large a proportion as possible of their share by substituting other foods, or the German starvation campaign will succeed.

"To help do this, the Food Controller asks the people of Canada to save 12,000,000 bushels of wheat by economizing flour. This will still leave 13,900,00 bushels of this share to be secured from more distant countries.

"Similarly with beef and bacon and other exportable staples. If we do not substitute other foods, of which we have an abundance, we cannot win the war."

A comparison is shown of the difference in the shipments of bacon and beef to Britain, France, and Italy since the outbreak of war. In 1914 23,620,861 pounds of bacon and 190,787 pounds of beef were shipped. In 1917 the shipments had increased to 307,284,673 pounds of bacon and 33,723,791 pounds of beef.

"Our cattle and hogs are not increasing. We must decrease our home consumption if we are to increase our exports," reads the food-note. "The census for the first three years of war tells the story of how our Canadian herds are decreasing. In 1914 there were 3,363,531 heads of cattle and 3,434,261 hogs; 1915, 3,399,155 cattle, 3,111,900 hogs; 1916, 3,313,519 cattle and 2,814,672 hogs."

Special emphasis is placed in the booklet on the joint action of the food controller. Joint action to secure essential commodities for export while protecting the general public against exploitation and permitting returns to producers is the plan of the British, Canadian, and American food controllers.

The Meaning of "Maru."

The word "Maru," attached to the name of every Japanese merchant ship and commonly accepted as meaning "ship," has no especial meaning, according to Captain Takeshima, of the Japanese steamship Hudson Maru, which was captured and released by a German raider in the South Atlantic. Captain Takeshima said that the word is the survival of a Japanese custom centuries old. He explained the origin as follows: "There are two opinions as to how the custom originated. One of the stories, which I believe is the correct one, is that in ancient times the Japanese attached 'maru' to the name of anything precious or highly prized, as a sword or a baby. It was first applied to a ship's name about 2,000 years ago, when the Empress Jingo sent an expedition to Corea. She added the word to the name of the ship that transported the troops to Corea. Ever since then 'Maru' has been part of the name of every steamship or sailing vessel. It is never used with the name of a warship."

"Uncle Sam."

The practice of calling the United States "Uncle Sam" is believed to have originated during the revolutionary war when there was a beef inspector in Troy, N.Y., named Samuel Wilson. Owing to his great popularity among his workmen he was called "Uncle Sam." After inspecting beef he shipped it to a contractor named Elbert Anderson, marking it "E. A. U. S." Someone asked a workman what those letters stood for, and he jokingly replied "Probably Elbert Anderson and Uncle Sam." The joke spread from one to another until people became accustomed to refer to the packages marked with the letters U. S. as belonging to "Uncle Sam."

LADY'S WAIST.

From a material point of view white crêpe de Chine, with collar and cuffs of pale blue satin, makes this waist more than attractive. The world of fashion approves, too, of its semi-tailored simplicity for everyday wear. The fronts are gathered to the [illegible] at the back, which extend over in yoke effect. The closing edges are rolled back to form long, narrow revers. A large round collar comes just to the tops of the revers. The one-button fastening is a smart touch which adds distinction. The long sleeves are gathered into a [illegible] cuff, and these in turn are trimmed with a roll of the collar material.

BUSINESS TALKS TO WOMEN

Some employers have made a rule that no employe may talk on the telephone or receive mail in the office. These employers may have made the rule to conserve to themselves the things they pay for, concentration and service of their workers, and they may have made the rule with the welfare of the employees at heart.

True, there are certain lines of business where it may sometimes be necessary for employees to have telephone calls, to receive letters, and to have callers, but in the average business office where the worker goes in at nine A.M., and goes home at five P.M., with a full hour allowed for lunch, there is no reason on earth, except a matter of life or death, why such a worker should be allowed to send or receive telephone calls or correspondence or to have callers drop in for a personal chat.

Telephone calls, no matter how brief, take the mind of the worker off the work to be done, which is the most important thing at the moment. Letters have the same effect.

Presumably every one has a home where phone calls and letters may be sent, and that is the place for them. The business office is no more the place for these things than it is a place to hold receptions, and when the business office starts to compete with the social club as well as with other business offices something suffers, and it is usually the quality of output in that office.

HOW TO CONSERVE COAL SUPPLY

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

Economy in the use of coal is one of the war necessities of this winter. This is why people in many parts of the country were asked not to light their furnace fires until today, and to burn as little coal as possible all winter long.

But many do not see how they can economize in the use of coal to any greater extent than they have customarily done. Here is a suggestion that should be of value to such people:

Keep large bowls of water, or water fed wicks, in your living quarters. With humidified air in your room you can be comfortable at a far smaller consumption of coal than is needed if the air is deficient in humidity.

Specifically, a room heated to 65 degrees of moist air is more comfortable than a dry room at a temperature of 70 degrees.

Yet many people find it necessary to heat their rooms to 75, even to 80 degrees. This is because the room humidity is considerably below what it ought to be.

To what degree should a room be humidified? Concerning this there is considerable difference of opinion among authorities.

But they are agreed that the air of the average furnace heated room is, as a rule, much too dry for their comfort or health.

Often, in such a room, books warp, and furniture begins to go to pieces. This is a sure sign of excessive dryness.

To offset it — and at the same time to help reduce the coal bill — bowls or pans with a large surface should be kept in the room, near the radiator.

And, to promote the evaporation of the water in these bowls or pans, wicks may be cut from felt, and placed in them in a vertical position, the upper end being above the water surface.

The replenishing of the water in these humidifying vessels costs, of course, a little time and trouble. But the result will be well worth it.

In too dry a room, no matter how high the temperature may be raised, some discomfort is likely to be experienced, owing to interference with the normal radiation of the body.

Discomfort being experienced, there will be a corresponding difficulty in thinking and working at normal efficiency owing to the intimate relationship between mental power and sensations of organic well being.

So that, for the sake of comfort and working ability, no less than in order to effect economical use of coal, it is important to keep moisture in the air of artificially heated rooms.

Asserting that Germany was justified in her invasion of Belgium, W. M. Kebley, a lawyer of Wellsboro, Penn., was seized by a crowd and forced to kiss the Stars and Stripes.

The Airplane Camera.

The greatest work of the airplane is to locate the enemy's strongholds and batteries and then map them. The multiple airplane camera which the Allies are using—an American invention, by the way—can map the German lines with truly marvelous proficiency. Where, in the first part of the war, artist-observers were used to make pencil sketches as accurately and as quickly as they could, now cameras such as this one are employed to take thousands of photographs at the rate of one a second, if necessary.

One multiple airplane-camera, described in the Popular Science Monthly, is capable of seven hundred and fifty exposures, with a single loading. The secret of this great capacity lies in its use of ordinary motion picture film. It is constructed much like the ordinary film camera, with the exception that the turning of the film for a new exposure is accomplished automatically by the action of a set of gears.

The camera is placed on the airplane so that it will have an unobstructed view downward and slightly forward. One pull on the flexible cable, connected with the operating lever of the gears, winds up the previously exposed film, sets the shutter, makes the new exposure, and registers its number. A spring instantly brings the lever back into normal position ready for the next picture. This happens so swiftly that it is possible to make a continuous record of a flight. In bomb-dropping the camera is capable of taking pictures of the bomb in the air and at the very instant of explosion.

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however, low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

ENUMERATORS BEGIN WORK

put on the lists are that they shall be British subjects and not Indians, twenty-one years of age, that they shall have resided in the province and the constituency for the same period as is provided by the Dominion Act for male persons, and that they shall be either wives, widows, mothers, sisters or daughters of persons, male or female, living or dead, who are serving or have served out of Canada in any of the military forces of Canada or of Great Britain, or within or out of Canada in any of the naval forces of Canada or of Great Britain, in the present war, but such female relatives of such military or naval persons as have been discharged from the military or naval forces otherwise than in an honourable manner are not entitled to be placed upon the list, nor can such female relatives of persons as have joined the naval forces of Canada, and have been engaged only in Canada, since the passing of the "War Time Elections Act" on the 20th of September, 1917, be placed on the lists.

Duties of Enumerators.

Before acting the enumerator will take an oath of office before the Returning Officer, or any other person who can administer an oath, and will at once proceed to compile a list of the persons qualified as before mentioned to vote at the election, for the polling division for which he has been appointed. He will make sufficient copies of the list to enable him to post up two of the copies, retain one for the time being (the original) and send a copy to each of the candidates. In making the list, he will add his own name to it, if qualified in the electoral district. The list must be completed fifteen days before polling day. In some portions of the province, the enumerators MUST adopt as a basis of the list that they are to prepare, the provincial list formerly in force. In other portions of the province they MAY adopt the provincial list formerly in force. The different requirements will be particularly indicated later on in these instructions. The enumerators will in all cases secure the necessary information as to persons entitled to go upon the lists, and as to their qualifications, in the manner most satisfactory to themselves, preferably by personal visit to the homes or working places of the electors. They are not entitled to require an oath or statutory declaration in order to authorize the placing of a name on the list. They proceed upon credible information and they may accept such from persons other than an elector, as to the right of any person to go on the list. They must be satisfied as to each person's right. They are entitled to secure from the legal custodians of provincial or municipal lists any necessary certified copies of any provincial or municipal list upon payment of a nominal fee of ten cents for a printed list, or one cent for every two names in writing appearing on such certified copies.

Disqualified Persons.

(a) Every naturalized British subject who was born in an enemy country and naturalized subsequent to the 31st of March, 1902.

(b) Every naturalized British subject who was born in any European country (whether or not the sovereign or government thereof is in alliance with His Majesty in the present war) whose natural tongue otherwise described as "mother tongue" is the language of an enemy country, and who was naturalized subsequent to the 31st of March, 1902.

(c) Any person who shall have applied for a certificate of exemption from combatant military service on conscientious grounds, whether or not a certificate of exemption for such service shall have been granted, and unless and UNTIL IT HAS BEEN REFUSED.

Appeals.

In the cities of Ontario, or in any county or district town, having a population of 9,000 or over according to the last Dominion census, the provincial Voters' Registration Boards are under the new Act constituted Boards of Appeal. If the enumerator refuses or omits to enter upon the list, the name of any person, the applicant may, in person or in the case of a qualified person who may be absent from the polling division at the time of the enumeration, an elector in the polling division acting on such absent person's behalf, may within four days after the posting up by the enumerator of such list, appeal to such Board of Appeal by notice in writing stating the fact and filed with the enumerator and with the Clerk of the Board of Appeal. An appeal shall also lie in like manner, and on the like and further notice by registered letter to the person entered on the list, from the entry by the enumerator of the name of such person on such list. The registered letter shall be mailed to the address of the person as appearing on the list.

Military Voters.

Any returned soldier or sailor who is no longer in the service, who produces a certificate of discharge or in the case of an officer other proper papers releasing him from further service, may vote in the polling division in which he resides on election day, even though his name be not on the list of that polling division.

All soldiers or sailors who are still in the service may vote as military electors at any military or naval poll, where they may present themselves. These military and naval polls will be found where any body of soldiers are assembled for any purpose whatever under a commanding officer or in hospitals, etc. on election day. The votes of such soldiers and sailors may be applied by them to the particular constituency wherein they have a right to vote, and their votes will be applied to the candidate they vote for, as an individual, or as a Government or opposition candidate.

Soldiers or sailors whose names appear on the list of any place where they may happen to be on polling day may vote as civilians, at ordinary polling places; having done so they cannot vote again as soldiers or sailors.

FESTIVAL SERVICES IN ST. JOHN'S LARGELY ATTENDED

Music Thoroughly in Keeping With the Joyous Nature of the Anniversary—Two Thoughtful Sermons by the Ven. Archdean Beamish.

Large congregations attended the dedication anniversary services at St. John's Church, both morning and evening.

The music for the festival was suitable for the two-fold objectives of the day. The morning celebration was distinctly a service within the octave of "All Saints," the hymns, "The Saints of God," and "For all the Saints" were sung, and the introit hymn, "The Church's One Foundation," was used in connection with the corporate parochial communion. The service was solemnly reverent and after the reading out of the names of the soldiers from the congregation who had made the supreme sacrifice, the choir sang the anthem "God shall wipe away all tears."

Choral Evensong rang with the theme of the Anniversary of the Dedication, in psalms, hymns, prayers, and sermon. Mr. W. H. Hutchinson sang effectively the solo "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death" (St. Paul) and the anthem was "These Are They Which Came Out of Great Tribulation." The work of the choristers was splendid, and called forth a well deserved tribute from Archdeacon Beamish after Evensong.

The Communion of Saints.

Venerable Archdeacon Beamish, yesterday morning, in the course of an eloquent and thoughtful discourse on the Communion of Saints, declared communion between the living and departed Saints to be a gift in common made possible by the power of God. Baptism is nothing, he said, but a sprinkling of water and the giving of a name except God the Holy Ghost is present. The holy sacrament is nothing but bread and wine unless God the Holy Ghost be present. Communion of Saints is having, by the power of God, fellowship with the faithful departed in the church militant and church expectant. The faithful departed are neither in heaven nor hell; no man has ever yet ascended into heaven, and no man has ever yet been adjudged or condemned. And the departed are in a spirit world awaiting judgment. Remember the thief on the Cross to whom Christ replied: "This day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." Jesus did not mean heaven, for on the third day when He arose from the dead, the first words He said to Mary Magdalene were, "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended to my father." Therefore where He was those three days his body lay in the sepulchre was not heaven.

The departed, the reverend gentleman went on to say, are not asleep, nor in a trance, or comatose condition, but in a state of waiting, vivid, conscious life—remembering fully their life here on earth, with all its opportunities and dangers of being misspent. They are the same men five minutes after death as before, for death has no change, and all is one continuous life in the commonwealth of God, through intermediate stages up to the highest citadel in heaven. Man's life after death is either one of progression or retrogression until the day of judgment. To accept the opposite idea that man's future state is fixed at death is unreasonable. What a farce, he saw, it would be to, on the day of judgment, face one's judge, a thousand years after one's passing away from earth, only to be sent back to the destiny fixed at the time of death.

There is no truth, declared the speaker, that men go to heaven or hell at the time of death, and there is nothing in the Scriptures to justify such a belief. But there is plenty of evidence in the Church to recognize a Communion with Saints. They pray for us, we pray for them. We are here, they in Paradise, joining with us in the same worship of God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost.

HIS ONLY HOPE, THE SLACKERS

VETERANS CALLED UPON TO HELP DEFEAT SIR WILFRID.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—In a letter issued to all the branch secretaries of the Great War Veterans' association, and made public at Ottawa, Acting President J. J. Shanahan called upon all members of the associate to unite in support of "win-the-war" candidates. In every constituency, he says, all possible effort should be made to secure the election of a candidate who places conscription and the successful prosecution of the war as the primary items in his platform. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, says Mr. Shanahan not having up to the present done this, it is apparent that he relies on slackers and separatists to elect him. Therefore, members of the Great War Veterans' association must do all in their power to secure his defeat.

For the Many— Not the Few

PREVIOUS issues of Canadian war bonds have been purchased largely by wealthy financial and industrial institutions and regular private investors.

This time, to make the loan a success, everybody must buy Canada's Victory Bonds.

The denominations have been made as low as $50 so that the many instead of the few may help Canada to raise the money she needs to carry on the war.

People who never before have been investors are urged to buy Victory Bonds. Their savings may be small individually, but are certainly tremendous in the aggregate.

You; your neighbour; men and women of every trade and profession; employers and employees; city people and country people; old and young; all must put shoulder to the wheel. Every little helps.

Buy all you can. Strain a point—buy to the very limit of your ability. Influence others to do the same. For not only will your savings earn large and continuous interest, with absolute security of principal, but you'll be helping to win the war and to maintain Canada's agricultural and industrial prosperity.

CHURCH LOSES GREAT LEADER

DR. ALBERT CARMEN PASSES AWAY AT HIS HOME IN TORONTO.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent Emeritus of the Methodist Church of Canada, passed away Saturday evening at the residence, 42 Murray street. Dr. Carman was 84 years of age. He met with a slight accident shortly after the last General Conference of the Methodist Church in 1914, and had been in ill-health ever since. A week ago his illness took a serious turn and he was confined to bed. On Monday last he became unconscious and the end came about 7 o'clock Saturday evening.

Dr. Carman was a commanding figure in the Methodist church, and it was largely through his efforts that the church has attained the position that it today holds in this country. He was a clear-sighted worker, a forceful, eloquent speaker and a great preacher and platform orator. He possessed large experience, ripe judgment and altogether wonderful energy and understanding of all matters brought before him. He was of United Empire Loyalist stock and a son of the late Philip Carman, of Iroquois, Ont., who was for many years reeve of his village and warden of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, and of Emmeline Carman, a daughter of the late Col. Peter Shaver, M.P.P. He was born in Iroquois on June 27, 1833. He was educated at Dundas Grammar School and at Victoria University, Cobourg, where he took his B.A. in 1855, his M.A. in 1860, and where he received the honorary degree of D.D. in 1891. Later he received the honorary degree of LL.D. at the North-West University. In July, 1860 Dr. Carman married Miss Mary Sisk, eldest daughter of the late Capt. Compulsory Service Democratic

The United States has profited by its experience in the Civil War. In 1863, after that war had been raging for two years, Lincoln and his government recognized that the only fair means of raising troops to prosecute the war successfully was compulsion.

The usual objections were made on the grounds of constitutional liberty but all determined opposition was put down. It was necessary to shoot a few here and there, but strong repressive measures by b civil and military authorities w applied and the measure was succ fully enforced.

Today the United States Gove

The Military Service Act, 1917
CANADA

Privileges and Penalties

For Class One Men, Employers, Parents

For Class One Men

If your examination by a Medical Board has placed you in Medical Category B, C, or E, attend the nearest Post Office, attach Medical Certificate to claim for exemption and your present responsibility under the Military Service Act ends.

If placed in Medical Category A, and you feel justified in asking for exemption on financial, business, or domestic grounds, you have the right to claim exemption before a tribunal. It is not necessary or desirable to report for Service or to make claim for exemption in person. Simply go to nearest Post Office, fill in the form provided, leaving it with the Postmaster for free transmission to Registrar.

For Employers of Class One Men

The employer may make claims for exemption of Class One Men in his employ on the forms obtainable at the nearest Post Office.

In their enthusiasm to serve Canada there will be a number of men in Class One who will desire to report for service, but who will better serve the national interest by continuing their present occupations. It is the duty and privilege of employers to claim exemption in such cases.

For Parents

Where domestic reasons exist for the exemption of a Class One man, application may be made by parents or a near relation for the exemption of such man.

N.B.—Care should be exercised to prevent more than one claim for exemption being made in respect of any one man. When the claim is made on industrial grounds it is best made by the employer.

Penalties Provided

Failure on the part of a Class One man to report for service or apply for exemption on or before November 10th a term of imprisonment not exceeding five years with hard labor; also claim to exemption is forfeited.

Attempt to bribe any member of an exemption tribunal, medical board or military representative —a term of imprisonment not exceeding five years and not less than one year.

Employer reducing wage, or altering conditions of employment by virtue of making claim for employee's exemption—fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, nor less than one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not to exceed six months.

Any person urging a man in Class One not to observe the requirements of the Military Service Act—imprisonment for term not less than one year nor more than five years.

Principal Gandier of Knox College Appeals for Support for the Foreign Mission Field

Principal A. Gandier, D.D., Knox College, Tornto, preached two sermons in this city yesterday, in the morning at St. Paul's and in the evening at Knox, both discourses being strong appeals for financial support for the foreign mission work of the Presbyterian Church. Principal Gandier, who is regarded as one of the most powerful preachers in Canada, is also noted for his organizing ability, and especially for his devotion to foreign mission work.

At Knox Church last night he emphasized the necessity of carrying on the work of the church in India and China. In the former country there are only thirty men and twenty-five women engaged in the work among the millions of natives. If an army o fas many men and women attempted to conquer a country of as many millions the world would laugh at the effort, but in the spiritual field such disparity of contending forces was almost unnoticed.

When this war is over India will have a right to a greater say in the affairs of the Empire, and the missionaries are the teachers who will prepare them for their duty. The millions of yellow men in China can only be kept as the friends of the white races if they are made the subjects of missionary work.

Principal Gandier made light of the financial sacrifice of those who contribute to mission work, as compared with the sacrifices of those who devote their lives to the cause. Besides, he said, all the revenue of the Presbyterian Church for one year would not pay Britain's war bill for a single hour.

They have a chance to get away from their prison. But if the eyesight has failed in any way, there is no sliding out of the responsibility of having the eyes cared for. Neglecting them while waiting for them to improve by themselves will only aggravate the distress and make the final lens adjustment more complicated and expensive. Better get away from the trouble by letting Dr. Fowler examine the eyes and tell you what they need.

LINDSAY YOUNG ELIGIBLE ATTEMPTS TO LEAVE COUNTRY —STOPPED AT COBOURG

Last week a twenty-three year young man hailing from Lindsay made an effort to leave Canada for the United States. He presented a passport to the immigration officer at Cobourg asking permission to cross to Rochester on the ferry. The passport was filled in but lacked the proper stamp of the immigration officer at Lindsay. His medical examination certificate, also the required permission of the O. C. of this military district to visit United States was lacking. Without these necessary documents the young man was informed he could not leave Canada. At first he stoutly denied wishing to evade the Military Service Act, but on being informed his N.G. passport would not be returned to him, but sent to Ottawa for investigation, he vehemently declared he would commit suicide rather than go to war. When he was politely informed the harbour, with twenty feet of water, wherein he could carry out his direful threat was close by, he changed his mind, and decided he would return to Lindsay and take chances on getting exempted. The harbour was sure death—with the exemption board he had a fighting chance.

Put Napanee Church Organ in Bad Shape, and Left Without Paying Board Bill

According to the Napanee Express a stranger who undertook to tune the organ of Trinity church, left his job unfinished and the instrument in worse condition than when he found it. He worked a few hours, returned to the church the following day, and left to go to the Campbell House to get his tools. He never returned leaving behind him a board bill. From the Campbell House he also is alleged to have stolen a long lighting cord which was found at the church.

HISTORY OF OLD ST. JOHN'S CHURCH DATES BACK TO EARLIEST DAYS OF PETERBORO

Present Nave Completed in 1835—Officials Held High Places in Civic and National Affairs—Dead and Living Wardens—Home of "The Peoples" Chimes,

REV. J. C. DAVIDSON
Rector of St. John's Church, Canon of St. Alban's.

ST JOHN'S ANGLICAN CHURCH. PETERBOROUGH.

Yesterday, the 35th anniversary of the dedication of St. John's church on All Saints' Day, 1882—the building then having been thoroughly restored—was fittingly observed. Venerable Archdeacon Beamish of Belleville presided at both services and delivered eloquent and illuminating sermons, while the music under Mr R. J. Devey's capable leadership was of a specially joyful and acceptable nature. Large congregations were present.

Eighty-two Years Old

The anniversary of St. John's dedication as restored in 1882 must not be taken as indicating its actual age for the nave was completed in 1835 thus dating the antiguity of the church back 82 years.

On one of Peterborough's seven hills—for in this respect the city of the Otonabee resembles the city of the Tiber—stands St. John's Anglican church, the history of which runs concurrently with that of Peterborough itself from the early days of Captain Charles Rubidge, who located here as Immigration Agent in 1831. Rev Samuel Armour was the first church of England pastor in Peterborough and first conducted services in an old log building. In 1835 the present edifice was built under contract with the late Mr. Joseph Scobell, at an estimated cost of £1,300, which amount subsequently grew to £2,150 owing to extra work and alterations found necessary. The building was dedicated to St. John. In 1882 St John's Church was completely restored at a cost of over $15,000. Captain Charles Rubidge enjoyed the distinction of being the first Warden of St. John's, having officiated from 1833-1839, and in 1846.

The Rectors

Rev. Samuel Armour was succeeded by Rev. Richard D'Olier, B.A., Trinity College, Dublin, a representative of one of the old Hugenot families The Rev. Charles Wade, M.A., was his successor, followed by Rev. Robert J. C. Taylor. This reverend gentleman was principal of the then only school of any importance in Peterborough, and among his pupils were Mr. Strickland of Ashburnham, Judge Benson of Port Hope, and the late Richard Birdsall of Westwood.

To Mr. Taylor succeeded the Reverend Mark Burnham, father of the late John Burnham, at one time reeve of Ashburnham and M.P., and of Dr. George Burnham, recently deceased. In 1858 Mr. Taylor was succeeded by Rev. John Walton Romeyn Beck, a minister loved by his own and highly respectd by other denominations. He died in 1889.

Mr. Beck was followed by Canon John Cheyne Davidson, present incumbent, in 1890, now overseas a chaplain with the honary title of major. For one year of his absence terminating last spring, Rev. Canon Cornish of Yorkton, Sask., very acceptably filled the charge of St. John's parish.

LATER-DAY CURATES

At the death of Rev. Mr. Beck, owing to his poor health, two curates were in office Rev. J. C. Davidson, subsequently created Canon of St. Alban's Cathedral shortly after his assuming the rectorship of St. John's, and Rev. E. B. Kenrick. The latter gentleman was followed by Rev. E. Vickers Stevenson and Rev. Charles Carpenter.

An Endowed Church

Peterborough is one of the [illegible] Rectories created at Dr. John Strachan's instigation, by Sir John Colborne in 1835, which means that certain public land was appropriated for church purposes. The Rectory Lands of Peterborough consist of its present site, four acres, including the land on which the row of buildings from the Sun-Life premises on Water street, east side, to Burnham and J. GuiseBagley's offices stand; and the land on which stands all buildings on Sheridan street, west side, from Hunter to Brock streets. The land is leased to owners of buildings, lease to be renewed on expiry, or compensation for improvements made during his occupancy. About the time other grants were made the church, the principal of which were ten glebe lots of farm land in the Township of Smith and park lots 10 and 17 adjoining the town. By act of parliament, however these glebe and park lots were subsequently vested in the synod for the relief of other parishes less prosperous than that of St. John's, the rector of which receives but a small interest on the investment of the money realized by their sale.

A Church-like Church.

When the tower of St. John's was first built, a clock was installed therein at a cost of $400, but its regulation caused so much trouble and expense that it was neglected and at last removed.

The church is now one of the most beautiful and most tastefully decorated churches in the Province. In fact, it enjoys popular reference to as a church-like church, which with its beautiful and admirably kept grounds is characterized at home and abroad as one of the "lions" and land-marks of Peterborough not to be missed by visitors. Its style is "third-pointed," the broad flat arches and elaborate tracery of the Tudor Gothic. While this is the architectural style of the main part of the structure, the chancel is "first pointed Gothic, the lancet, sharp-pointed arches of the Plantagenet age. Thus, the chancel, latest built, is in a style of architecture some centuries older than that of the original building. The windows are all stained glass, four being memorial windows, of the latter one in the wall of the tower was erected in 1882 by the ladies of St. John's congregation in memory of Arthur Romeyn Beck, Lieutenant Royal Navy, lost at sea with the crew of H.M.S. "Atalanta," February 1880. In the chancel is a tablet, erected by the congregation in memory of Georgina, wife of the Rev. J. W. R. Beck, rector, who died May 8, 1864, aged 37 years. Here also is a tablet in memory of the late rector himself. At the western side of the chancel is the organ of one thousand pipes, installed many years ago at a cost of $2,750. At the time these alterations were effected, and commemorated yesterday, the old school house in the rear of the church was replaced by a Sunday School of fine white brick, in "first pointed" Gothic.

In the grounds, just east of the church, there still stands a group of ancient pines, the remains of the old virgin forest. These, however, are fast thinning out.

Modern Additions.

Come to more modern additions and improvements to St. John's, there is the vestry, to the east, erected during the wardenship of Messrs. D. Hughes-Charles and Chas. H. J. Mitchell in 1907, at a cost of $3,000. It is modern in all its appointments. On the ground floor is the rector's sanctum and robing room for the choir boys and men. While above is accommodation for the choir's lady members. Mr. D. Hughes-Charles was chairman of the building committee in this connection, and the late Mr. John E. Belcher architect, as he was of the church proper during his life. In the top story of the vestry is a window to the east in testimony to Mr. Belcher's voluntary architectural services rendered the church. It bears his family crest with the motto "Loyal Au Mort" and the following inscription: "To the glory of God and in Honor of John E. Belcher, C.E., Architect, 1907." This window was a gift from Robert McCauseland Co., Toronto, stained glass window mfrs., and secured by the wardens under cover as it were.

The rectory on the north-east corner of the grounds was erected in 1908 by the congregation during the wardenship of Col. Joseph Mills and Charles H. J. Mitchell, at a cost of about $9,000. Mr. Peter Campbell was chairman of the Building Committee.

Regimental Colors.

St. John's Church is the home of the 57th Regimental colors, and on the northern wall of the nave, east of the chancel, may be seen the old colors of this regiment deposited in 1905, when Peterborough ladies presented new ones worked by themselves.

Full of Memories.

This ancient sacred building is replete with memories of the dead and past, almost all its permanent furnishings having been contributed in memory of some departed member. The hanging chancel lamp is of Egyptian design, having been brought from the east by Miss Ruby Burnham, and dedicated to the memory of the late Mrs. Chas. Perry.

The People's Chimes.

The chimes of St. John's belong to the people, and were dedicated by Bishop Sweeney of Toronto on its 75th anniversary, June 22nd, 1911, (Coronation day). They cost some $6,000, subscribed by present and former citizens of Peterborough of all creeds. Mayor W. G. Morrow, representing the city generally, took part in the ceremony, and was formally presented with the bells for the people. The 57th Regiment was present in strength with its band. Rev. J. C. Davidson was chairman of the committee which collected the funds, and Messrs. G. C. Wainwright and A. E. Elliott the treasurers. The wardens were Messrs. A. H. Stratton and W. F. Johnston.

These chimes are to be rung on all national and holiday occasions and whenever local events warrant it. No charge is made, only for weddings, when $1 is the fee. Richard J. Devey is the chimes master.

There are 13 bells, and commencing with No. 13 their names are: Perseverance. Hope, dedicated to Mrs. Sarah Fitzgerald. Temperance. Meekness. Faith, Goodness, Love. Joy, Peace. Long Suffering, and Gentleness.

Modern Lighting

The present beautiful and ecclesiastical system of lighting was installed last year during the wardenship of Messrs W. F. Johnston and W. R. Morris, at a cost of $1350.

Paid Officials

Mr. R. J. Devey, the organist and choir master, has been with St John's since 1906. Sexton John Barcher is in his 35th year of service, and Vestry Clerk W. H. Walker has officiated for sixteen years. Mr. Walker also for seven years superintended the Sunday School.

Wardens Dead and Living

HOW BILL WAS SIGNED.

Historic Event Took Place in City of Toronto.

Scarcely more than a stone's throw from where Governor Simcoe had his seat of government a hundred and twenty years ago, his Excellency the Duke of Devonshire appended his signature to the Military Service Act, making conscription law in Canada.

The primeval character of the country has changed since Simcoe presided over the destinies of the pioneers who were laboriously hewing out a new empire from the woods of Upper Canada. The change is typified in the replacing of the rambling wooden walls of Castle Frank by the massive stone, red-tiled, gubernatorial palace of to-day.

The signature written by the Governor-General was the signing of the covenant that the Canada of to-day will leave no stone unturned to protect the heritage bequeathed by those old pioneers, and to preserve the ideals common to the greater British Empire.

The ceremony took place in the blue parlor on the first floor, part of the suite occupied by his Excellency. During his absence at the Exhibition a special messenger from Government House, Ottawa, had arrived. The Duke returned shortly before six o'clock, and the large blue envelope which the messenger had brought from Ottawa was placed in the hands of his secretary, Colonel Henderson. The secretary broke the heavy seals which closed the envelope and glanced through the contents. He immediately took the Act, with the two other Acts which were ready for signature, to the Governor-General.

The Duke of Devonshire received the document in the blue room. The heavy piled rug silenced the steps of his secretary as he entered and crossed to the old-fashioned, slender legged writing-table, placed where the soft glow of electric light from the frosted inverted bowl above fell full upon it. The Governor-General took the papers and looked carefully through the engrossed pages. The little clock on the ivory mantlepiece opposite ticked quietly. There was no sound but the crackle of the paper as his Excellency turned the pages to note that each was initialled by the clerks of the House and of the Senate to indicate that they had received the requisite number of readings. Satisfied that the Act was correct, he took an ordinary pen from the table and added his name, thus making the Act law, and all its clauses, with the exception of the calling out of the different classes, immediately became operative. The reading and signing occupied from twelve to fifteen minutes.

It is understood that the pen with which the Act was signed has been presented by his Excellency to the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir John Hendrie.

It is appropriate that the Act should have received the Governor-General's assent in such a conscription stronghold as Toronto. That this should have been so was apparently altogether unpremeditated. It is understood that it was originally thought that it would suffice if the bill were signed by Mr. Justice Duff as administrator. But after the bill had been so signed there was some question as to the validity of the step, and to make assurance doubly sure it was determined to secure the signature of the Duke himself to another copy.

New Grain Pest.

Something has been hitting some of the wheat fields in the Edmonton district and down in the central part of the province, and no one knows yet just what it is. A number of farmers have been somewhat worried over the looks of their grain, and in certain cases in which some hail had fallen they put in claims for insurance. The hail companies, however, after the usual inspection, refused the application on the ground that the damage complained of was not due to hail, but to the depredations of an insect. Samples of the affected grain were then sent to Edmonton for expert analysis. The weed and seed branch has received a number of such samples, but has not yet completed its examination of them. The damage to the wheat stalk is similar to that caused by the Hessian fly, with differences that indicate some new pest at work. Much the same report comes from Saskatchewan, where it is said that in some cases thirty per cent. of the crop has been affected. There, too, the farmers thought they had been hailed, and applied to the companies for insurance money.

Wit and Wisdom

Didn't Care About His "Religion."

The night watchman of a large hotel saw an apparition in white moving along the hall at 2 a.m. He hastened his steps and tapped on the shoulder what proved to be a man.

"Here, what are you doing out here?" asked the watchman.

The man opened his eyes and seemed to come out of a trance.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "I am a somnambulist."

"Well," said the watchman, "you can't walk around these halls in the middle of the night in your nightshirt, no matter what your religion is."

The Income Tax.

The rich man's income tax is great,
He gets the gold but cannot hoard
it:
For him there is a two-third rate,
But then, of course, he can afford
it.

Fifty-two people were killed on the streets of New York last month.

Did Not Let Go.

There is in Paris a highly esteemed music-hall actress called Mistinguett. Sometimes our Canadian soldiers in France visit the music hall where she is appearing, and one night the entire front row was filled with Canadian officers. Mlle. Mistinguett leaned far over the footlights and offered them her heart—a little golden heart with an electric wire connection. Everyone who touched it jumped and let go in a hurry, until it came to the turn of one big artilleryman well down the line. He grasped it firmly and held it, smiling up at the lady. "Won't you give me back my heart?" begged Mlle. Mistinguett. "Oh, please?" At last the big fellow let go the bauble amid a thunder of applause. "See," cried Mlle. Mistinguett, turning to the audience, "when these fellows take hold of anything they don't easily let go."

Honey Crop Less This Year.

Last year the bees of Ontario apparently had a banner year, but it cannot be said of them this year. According to the Department of Agriculture the honey crop will be from one-third to one-half of what it was last year, though the yield will be around what it was for the preceding two or three years.

Last year the honey crop was 90 pounds per colony, while this year the best that can be expected is 51.6 per colony. In Ontario there are between 125,000 and 150,000 colonies of bees producing honey, or in other words the honey crop this year will be between 6,375,000 and 7,750,000 pounds.

The reason given for the drop over last year's yield is that the season was wet during clover time and the backwardness of the season generally. The western section of Ontario is more affected than the eastern portion. One apiarist, about 20 miles from Toronto, who had 22,000 pounds of honey last year, has only 6,000 this year.

The Ontario Beekeepers' Association report from 500 members bears out the statement from the Department of Agriculture. The association reports that the market has been bare of honey, and owing to the increase in the necessaries of life, it is expected the price of honey will be increased slightly.

The prices recommended are: Best quality light extracted, wholesale, 14 to 16 cents a pound; retail, 17½ to 20 cents a pound; best quality comb, wholesale, $3.25 a dozen; No. 2 comb, wholesale, $2 to $2.50 a dozen. These prices are being paid at the present time in Ontario and in the United States, where prices have advanced, the surplus honey from the western States going direct to Europe for the use of the armies of the Allies.

Bravery displayed on the field of battle has won Thomas Butkiewiz, jr., reinstatement to the Luzerne bar, says a Wilkes-Barre despatch. Following a term as Assistant District Attorney, he was convicted of misappropriation.

Senator La Follette has written a letter of sympathy to Rev. H. S. Bigelow, who was whipped by a Kentucky Ku Klux Khan for an anti-war speech.

About two thousand of the 15,000 Red Cross nurses enrolled in the States thus far have been sent to Europe.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

JESS WILLIARD THE MOST MODEST OF CHAMPIONS

Doesn't Like the Boxing Profession and Passes up Chances to Make Easy Money.

Now that the circus season is over and Jess Willard has nothing to occupy his time, he might pay a little attention to ring affairs for a change. There is no demand for a championship match that calls for a $50,000 purse, as none of the champion's prospective opponents, looms large enough upon the horizon to make it worth a promoter's while in these troublesome times. But there seems to be no particular reason why Willard should not do a little exhibition boxing for a percentage of whatever he can draw at the gate.

All the other heavyweight champions were willing to take on the small fry without making any fuss about it when there were no big matches in sight. In between his championship fights John L. Sullivan made his famous tour of the country, meeting all comers. Jim Corbett made no bones about polishing off a second rater here and there while Fitzsimmons and Jeffries frequently donned the gloves against all comers. Jack Johnson, although always careful to insist upon his price—$30,000—when his prospective opponent was one of the prominent contenders, was not so particular when it came to a short, no-decision bout with some second rater.

Willard is Backward

Willard is the first heavyweight champion to refuse to show himself in action unless paid a small fortune for the stunt. According to the majority of fistic experts, Willard outclasses even the best of the contenders so far that a match would be no contest. If that is the case, it is all the more reason why he should be willing to box a few rounds here and there, if only to let the sporting public know that he is alive.

The general impression is that Willard has grown so fat and soft that it would take several weeks of hard training to make him fit for even an exhibition bout, but that is not the case. He is quite capable of stepping into the ring at less than a week's notice and taking care of any of the heavies now performing, with the possible exception of Fred Fulton.

Looks Very Fit

The big fellow's face is thin and his cheekbones stand out like those of any athlete in training, while he carries less fat around his waistline than he did when he arrived in New York to begin preparing for his bout with Frank Moran a year ago last March. Before the Moran affair he had done nothing for several months and he had grown soft in the interval, but at present he is in fairly good shape as a result of outdoor life with the circus and boxing with his sparring partner, Walter Monahan.

One reason why Willard keeps himself so exclusive is that he has a profound dislike for anything that resembles fighting. If he had anything of the pride of position and natural love combat that old Bob Fitzsimmons and all the other champions had in more or less degree, he would find plenty of excuse and opportunity for doing a little boxing, even though there is no rival who appears to threaten to annex his title. Any athlete who is sure of himself and is the best man in his special line likes to show off a little, [illegible] to mention the easy money to [illegible] up, and if Willard really [illegible] he could make [illegible] like a lot of jokes it [illegible] to think that he would [illegible] to do it.

Willard's indifference leads one to suspect that he believes the laugh might be on him instead of his opponent if he got into the ring with some husky youngster. Jack Johnson was never so pleased as when boxing rings around some dub and meanwhile holding a conversation with the ringsiders. Fitzsimmons thought it a great joke to plant his left shift and bring down some giant novice, but Willard has no box [illegible] tricks to display. He evidently has not forgotten how the fans used to ridicule his efforts right up to the time he met Johnson for the championship. He has no desire to offer himself as a target for more gibes.

Not So Sure of Himself

Although outwardly Willard looks to be physically fit, it must be remembered that he is getting well along in years and there is no means of telling how he would stand the strain of a real battle, now that almost two years have gone by since he appeared in the ring. Moran was not capable of extending him to any great extent, but even then it was noticed that while Willard had acquired more finish to his boxing he [illegible] much of the vigor that he [illegible] when he first appeared [illegible].

The champion is always considered to be invulnerable until some younger man comes along, and then ring followers wonder why they did notice the signs of retrogression before. No doubt if Willard remains idle for years to come all challenges directed his way will be laughed out of court. But if Willard ever does fight again, even in an exhibition bout, the chances are that he will not come up to expectations. Willard knows that so well that there is very little chance of seeing him in the ring unless he is guaranteed a sum out of all proportion to the worth of the match.

504 MEN APPLY FOR EXEMPTION

TWENTY-FOUR REPORT FOR DUTY—ONE SWORN IN FOR THE NAVY.

Postmaster Jas. Edgar reports that five hundred and four men have filed their claims with him for exemption and only twenty-four reported for duty.

On Saturday sixty-three utilized their exemption claim privilege and one A man signed up.

"This morning twenty registered their grounds for exemption and one A man was sworn in for naval service.

Newspaper Men Exempted

The Printer and Publisher says:—Joseph M. Stephenson, business manager of the South Bend (Indiana) News—Times, was recently granted exemption from service in the draft army, on the ground that "the operation of a newspaper is just as essential for the winning of the war as fighting in the trenches and that he could not be spared from his newspaper duties."

Gariel R. Summers, father-in-law of Mr. Stephenson, and principal owner of the News-Times, made a written statement in which he claimed "discharge from liability for military service for the said Joseph M. Stephenson upon the ground that he was engaged in an industrial enterprise necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of the national interest during the emergency."

SPORTING NOTES

Cincinnati fans didn't relish the passing of Clarence Mitchell to the Brooklyns by the waiver route.

Walter Holke, of the Giants, who is in St. Louis, still suffers from pains in the head as a result of his injury by a foul ball in the world's series.

Grover Cleveland Alexander has tied Mathewson's record of winning thirty or more games in three consecutive seasons.

Roger Bresnahan, part owner and manager of the Toledo club, favors a third major league, providing his city is included.

Another Hamilton hockey player has joined the army in the person of "Ken" Craig, one of the junior players. He is with the 64th battery, stationed at Guelph. The battery will likely have a team in the intermediate O.H.A. series.

There were no examinations made Saturday night.

22 Saturday Morning.

Twenty-two men passed through the ordeal Saturday morning. They were graded as follows: Category A 11, B 1, C 1 and E 9. Nine E men out of 22 examinations is not very good physical showing.

18 Saturday Afternoon.

In the afternoon eighteen applicants stripped for examinations, as a result of which their certificates read: Category A 11, Category B 3 and Category E 4; this was a trifle better physical offering than that of the morning.

21 This Morning.

The doctors handled twenty-one men this morning, when 13 were tabulated in Category A, 5 in E and 3 in C.

Elistments in the Various Churches

(Toronto Star.)

According to the Newman Club the Anglican Church is away ahead of all others in enlistments, with fifteen per cent. of its membership. The Presbyterian Church has 4.82, the Methodist 2.69, and the Roman Catholic 2.92. The notion that the Roman Catholic Church is away behind in enlistment is dispelled by these figures. Otherwise we see no very useful lesson in them. We know of nothing in the teaching of the Anglican Church that makes its members more warlike or patriotic than others, nor are we aware of any Presbyterian doctrine that accounts for the fact that there are more Presbyterian than Methodist or Catholic soldiers.

These are the same figures that The Review published as long ago as last August.

ASKED $3000 IS GIVEN $25

JUDGE HUYCKE GIVES JUDGMENT IN CASE OF SHERWOOD VS. SHEEHY.

His Honor Judge Huycke gave judgment today in an interesting case brought some time ago by Frederick Sherwood against Richard Sheehy, in which the paintiff claimed about $3000 damages as a result of an alleged breach of an agreement to loan the sum of $2,000 for building purposes.

The agreement was made in February, 1914, and the sum of $200 was then advanced. Later on in or about the month of May the plaintiff asked for the balance of the moneys, but owing to the scarcity of money, the defendant was unable to carry out his agreement. As a result of this the plaintiff was unable to proceed with the erection of the buildings contemplated by him, and last summer brought an action for the above damages.

After the action was brought the defendant paid into court the sum of $25.00 in full satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, and this being unaccepted the case proceeded to trial.

In the judgment handed out today by His Honor Judge Huycke, it is held that the damages as claimed by the plaintiff are too remote, and the only damages to which the plaintiff is entitled, if any, is the difference between the interest agreed to be paid, and the current rate of interest, and it having been proved at the trial that the current rate of interest was no greater than the rate agreed to be paid, the Judge allowed only nominal damages, and also any costs the plaintiff might have been put to in obtaining the money elsewhere. These the Judge fixed altogether at the sum of $25.00, the sum which had been paid into Court at the commencement of the suit.

Mr. J. G. Guise-Bagley appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. R. Corkery for the defendant.

BOY DROWNED AT YOUNG'S POINT

FOUR YEAR OLD SON OF FRED M. YOUNG THE VICTIM

(Special to The Review.)

Lakefield, Nov. 5. — A very sad accident happened on Saturday about 6:30 o'clock when Francis Young, the four-year-old son of Mr. Fred M. Young, of Young's Point, was drowned. The boy's father, his uncle Mr. Pat Young, and Mr. Young, his grandfather, wer piling wood on the Empress, which was 200 feet from the house, and the boy was with them. It seems the boy wanted to go into the house, and his father told him if he would wait until he had unloaded two wheelbarrows of wood he would go with him. The child still insisted on going in, and, thinking the boy was cold, Pat put his sweater on him. The child started off, and called back saying he was going to he house.

When finished, Mr. Young went to the house for his tea, and there discovered the child was missing. A thorough search was made. Mr. Frank Walsh, at that time taking goods from Young's store to the Empress, joined in the search. Finally Mr. P. Young went to the edge of the canal opposite Mr. P. P. Young's residence, and there saw something floating in the water, and upon further investigation found it to be the body of the child. His father, uncle and grandfather pulled him out. Every possible means of restoration was resorted to, but to no avail, although the child could not have been in the water more than 15 or 20 minutes. Francis was a bright little chap and very popular among the villagers.

The funeral service was held at the home Monday morning at nine o'clock, interment being made in Young's Point cemetery.

CANON CORNISH WILL NOT ASSUME ST. JOHN'S CHARGE

Canon Davidson, the Rector to Return Home Christmas for Good—Hasso Cabled the Bishop of Toronto.

The congregation of St. John's Church have been wondering when Canon Cornish would arrive to assume charge of the parish until after the war, as agreed upon in September last. In the first place the reverend gentleman could not leave Yorkton, Sask., as early as he expected, and now circumstances have arisen to justify the announcement that St. John's will not have the pleasure of his renewed services.

Rector to Return.

A few days ago Warden W. F. Johnston received word from Canon Davidson that he would return at Christmas. The Canon, however, did not state whether he was returning permanently or not, and Mr. Johnston wrote his lordship Bishop Sweeney of Toronto, asking advice and instruction, as Canon Cornish had been engaged on the distinct understanding that the rector had definitely decided not to come home as long as the war continued. The Bishop then cabled Canon Davidson asking advice as to his intentions, and received a return cable yesterday to the effect that he was returning permanently. His lordship immediately notified Warden W. F. Johnston of the situation.

Big Church for Canon Cornish.

In the meantime Bishop Sweeney had received word from Canon Cornish that he had been offered the incumbency of the second largest church in Saskatchewan, Grace Church, and subsequently the Bishop of Saskatchewan pressed Bishop Sweeney to prevail on the officials of St. John's to release Canon Cornish from his engagement. Warden Johnston was so notified by his lordship and this morning called, through the phone, a meeting of St. John's Advisory Board for tonight.

Released From Engagement.

The offer of Grace Church to Canon Cornish relieved St. John's officials from considerable embarassment, and under the circumstances, the Advisory Board can do nothing but acquiesce in the reverend gentleman's release.

This morning at eleven o'clock, Bishop Sweeney phoned Warden W. F. Johnston that he had consented to release Canon Cornish from his engagement with St. John's.

ALL FACTIONS CLAIM VICTORY IN NEW YORK

AMERICAN METROPOLIS IS HOLDING ELECTION FOR MAYORALTY TODAY

FIGHTING MEN'S VOTES DECIDE

CAMPAIGN JUST CLOSED WAS ONE OF MOST BITTER IN MUNICIPAL HISTORY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Nov. 6.—New York is holding its quadrennial mayoralty election today. Fair weather that ushered in the day led to predictions by the various campaign managers that a record breaking vote would be polled. Of 696,509 voters who registered it was expected that at least 675,000 would cast their ballots.

Many close political observers believe that the result may hinge upon the vote of those fighting men now stationed in training camps on this side and overseas. The soldier-sailor vote has been estimated at about 50,000 and it will be about a month before it is known how these men voted.

At the close of a campaign almost unparalleled for its bitterness and many sensational charges and counter charges the campaign managers of the four parties issued statements claiming victory. The Fusion party predicted that Mayor John Purroy Mitchell would be re-elected by a plurality of at least 50,000 while Tammany Hall claimed that County Judge John F. Hylan, Democrat, would be elected by 70,000 plurality. Other candidates also claim victory.

The Gideons held a conference in Brantford over the week-end.

Three men perished when the Lunenburg (N.S.) schooner Ralph went to pieces.

UNITED STATES AND JAPAN ARE IN AGREEMENT

REACH UNDERSTANDING AS TO CO-OPERATION IN WAR AGAINST GERMANY

SAFETY OF CHINA GUARANTEED

GERMANY'S TRICKERY OF YEARS IS UNDONE IN A FEW DAYS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Nov. 6.—Japan and the United States have reached a complete agreement in regard to China and at the same time have arrived at a clear understanding as to military, naval nd economic cooperation in the war against Germany.

This momentous development was announced today by Secretary of State Lansing, who made public notes exchanged by him and Viscount Ishii, the special Japanese Ambassador, formally recording an agreement recognizing that Japan has special interest in China but pledging independence and territorial integrity of the great eastern republic and reaffiring the doctrine of the open door for commerce and industry.

In a statement accompanying the note Mr. Lansing said Viscount Ishii and members of his mission now on their way home had performed a service of the highest value to the United States as well as to Japan. Secretary Lansing spoke of an attitude of a campaign of falsehood adroitly and secretly carried on by the Germans and said that the propaganda of years had been undone in a few days.

A CANADIAN HEROINE

This is "Miss Canada," otherwise Miss Gwendolyn Haynes, of Toronto, who will appear in every moving picture house in Canada next week, in company with no less a star than Sir Thomas White. The film is entitled "Victory's Call to Canada," and advertises Victory Bonds.

WILL NOT TAKE THE RISK

(Editorial in Today's Globe.)

Only once during a long career has Sir Wilfrid consulted the people by a referendum. He asked in 1898 for their views on the prohibition question. Outside of Quebec the electors declared for prohibition. In Quebec they voted overwhelmingly against the proposal. The opposition of Quebec even then counted for more, in Sir Wilfrid's estimation, than the approval of English-speaking Canada, and no measure of prohibition was introduced.

The collapse of Russia and the partial collapse of Italy abroad, and the drying up of the stream of voluntary recruiting at home are factors in the present situation that Sir Wilfrid ignores. But the German hordes cannot be ignored. They must be met and outfought. The Military Service Act will provide Canada's share of the men needed to win the war—and that without delay. Sir Wilfrid's policy would, if adopted, mean that practically no recruits would be embodied or trained in the Dominion for several months at least, perhaps not at all.

The risk is too great. Sensible electors will not take it. They will vote against Sir Wilfrid's "perhaps" and in favor of the Union Government's imperative call for obedience to the law. The enemy is at the gate. Words will not stay his progress. We must have men, and we must have them now.

Seem to Have Possession of Village of Passchendaele so Long Striven For—British Launch Another Attack in Flanders.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 6.—Canadian forces in their offensive against the Germans this morning to the northeast of Ypres, on the Belgian front, have established themselves at a point one hundred yards beyond the village of Passchendaele, says a telegram from Reuter's correspondent at the British headquarters in France.

Satisfactory Progress.

London, Nov. 6.—The British attacked this morning on the Flanders front in the neighborhood of Passchendaele. The war office reports that satisfactory progress is being made.

Russia Will Stick.

Petrograd, Nov. 6.—Russia is still doing her utmost to carry on the war. She will continue to do her duty. These are the views of Premier Kerensky, whose secretary, in his name, protested today against any other interpretation of the recent interview with the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 6.—The French broke into the German line at several points last night and took prisoners. A German attack near Carnillet on the Champagne front was repulsed.

Italians Forced Back.

Rome, Nov. 6.—The Italians have been compelled to evacuate territory in the mountainous area to the north of the plains of Northern Italy, in order to establish new lines. The enemy occupied this territory after the Italian withdrawal.

TWENTY ONE MEN FACE MEDICAL BOARD TODAY

ELEVEN WERE GRADED IN A CLASS AT THIS MORNING'S SESSION

FIVE DAYS LEFT TO REPORT

ANOTHER WARNING ISSUED TO MEN WHO ATTEMPT TO SHIRK

Business at the Armories is somewhat slackening these days, and the number of examinations in a day have reduced to that previously calculated by the doctors as a possible accomplishment in one day. Yesterday 41 men were examined and graded as follows: Category A 23, B 4, C 8, and E 16.

Yesterday Afternoon.

At this session 18 men stripped for examination, and passed into the following grades: A 8, B 2, C 4, and E 4.

Only 2 A's Last Night.

Last night's session proved quite a shock to the examiners, with only 2 A men being found out of a total of 12. The grading was as follows: A 2, B 2, C 1 and E 7.

Twenty-One This Morning.

Twenty-one applicants were passed on by the medical board this morning, with the following results: A 11, B 2, C 1 and E 7.

Due Warning.

There are just five days remaining during which men may escape the penalties provided by the Act for evasion of duty, and the tone of the announcements of the Military Service Council does not leave any doubt as to the intention of the authorities to enforce the measure. The tribunals commence their sittings on Thursday, but, judging from the number who have not yet reported, it will be quite impossible for them to hear the applications of all who seem to be holding off until the last three days of the week to make personal representations before the tribunals.

Many Courses for Tribunals.

According to a book of instructions just issued by the Military Service Council, a very wide latitude is allowed the tribunals in making their decisions. Besides finally disallowing a claim after all evidence has been heard, they are permitted to take any of the following eleven courses: Disallow by default; general postponement; postponement until a later class; exemption allowed until the man ceases to be employed in some special work; exemption allowed if a man has secured special employment within a limited number of days in some work of national importance, and until he ceases to be so employed; exemption allowed for a given period until the man has completed his educational training; temporary exemption by reason of financial occupation; temporary exemption because of business obligations; temporary exemption by reason of domestic position; exemption until the services of men in categories other than "A" are required.

SIR WILFRID TO OPEN CAMPAIGN

WILL HOLD FIRST MEETING IN HOME CONSTITUENCY FRIDAY

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier expects to open his campaign in his home constituency in Quebec East on Friday evening next. The Opposition leader will address a public meeting in Quebec city.

No extensive series of public meetings is planned by him, owing to the fact that he does not desire to endanger his health during the cold weather, when he is susceptible to bronchial trouble.

He expects to go to Winnipeg toward the end of next week, and will address a meeting there and also meet his Western organizers. He will not go farther west than Winnipeg, and even that trip will not be finally decided upon for a few days. His Eastern campaign will probably be confined to two meetings a week.

PTE. LLOYD IS IN HOSPITAL

MOTHER RECEIVES WORD THAT HE HAS BEEN WOUNDED

Mrs. A. Lloyd, 868 George street, has received word that his son, Pte. Harry Ernest Lloyd, of the C.M.R., was admitted to hospital on October 30, suffering from gunshot wounds. Just how badly he is injured was not stated.

PLENTY OF COAL IN PETERBORO NOW DECLARES ALD. McINTYRE

Steps Must be Taken to Ascertain How Much is Stored Away in Cellars—Situation Exasperating, Says City's Fuel Yard Director.

At last night's Council meeting Ald. McIntyre declared that the people are going to be up against it for coal this winter. "Council," he said, "should take steps to ascertain how much coal is stored away in cellars. Dealers have been delivering it steadily all summer, and there is plenty of coal in Peterborough somewhere at this very moment. It is not right that certain people should be allowed to hoard up black diamonds whilst others are suffering from the lack of fuel; and it is up to this Council to appoint a Fuel Inspector to take a census of all coal in Peterborough, and see that it is equally distributed."

Ald. Dobbin replied that government authority to compel dealers to give information as to how much coal has come into the city this summer and fall is being sought. Everything suggested by Ald. McIntyre has been anticipated and as soon as information is to hand Council will be apprised.

"Early in September," said Ald. Dobbin, "the city served two and three tons when ordered; the last six weeks but one ton, and very lately not more than half a ton to any one customer. Now no coal is being supplied any person who has a reasonable amount in the cellar. A distressing feature of the situation is that those who have been least able to buy are the worst off. It is exasperating to have people begging, pleading and imploring for coal. What other dealers are doing I don't know, but Ald. Weir has been very fair, given us every information possible, and even helped the city in many ways. We put 50 tons of big coal from R. Hicks, at a trifle higher price than our own coal will cost, into the city buildings, to permit of distributing in the community its city's coal under order as fast as it reaches us."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1917

A UNIONIST IN EVERY SENSE.

J. E. SEXSMITH, M.P., has been East Peterborough's parliamentary representative for the past nine years, having been first elected in 1908 and again in 1911 by a greatly increased majority. His record is before the people and will bear the closest scrutiny.

Mr. Sexsmith was a loyal supporter of the Borden naval policy, a policy which has been so emphatically justified by the events of the past three years. Ever since the outbreak of the war he has realized that the best interests of the country demanded that the party spirit be put to one side. He has been in favor of Union Government ever since the idea was first suggested. Mr. Sexsmith is a practical farmer himself representing a farming community. He fits the situation to perfection, and his services are highly appreciated by his constituents. He was re-nominated without opposition two years ago at the party convention, and is practically, on his record, the Union candidate now.

It is not hard to locate the influence that was at work in East Peterborough and which resulted in the nomination of a straight Laurier candidate. In every constituency there is always a faction that hungers for the loaves and fishes and to whom the excitement of an election is as the breath of life. It was that faction in Mr. Sexsmith's constituency that forced the issue and staged the play at Norwood last week against the saner members of the party who counselled a different course.

Now that the convention has done its work the situation is marked by a dreary lack of enthusiasm, and some of those who took part realize that a mistake has been made. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's manifesto was all that was required to dampen to the extinguishing point the ardor of the politicians. No one need be surprised if there is another shuffle of the cards and the East Riding be spared a contest.

IS THIS SACRIFICE?

THE MAN OR WOMAN or the family that follows the menu published day after day in the papers, under the sanction of the Food Controller, may not fare as sumptuously as did Dives of old, but they certainly will not suffer for lack of nourishment. And yet it is nothing unusual to hear such people talk of the sacrifices they are making.

There is nothing of sacrifice in this or in any other form of self-denial that may be adopted. Giving up the use of one article for another equally pleasing does not scarify the flesh. Anything that the people at home can do is as nothing compared to what the men overseas are doing, too, without a murmur.

The soldiers, many of them, have given up good positions to fight their country's battles for $1.10 a day. Any agitation for an increase does not come from them, for with the true soldier the question of money is one that does not concern him. But it is the soldier who is making the sacrifice. The voluntary use of cornmeal or of whole wheat bread should not beget in mortal man or woman a tendency to boast of what they are doing to help win the war. There can be no real sacrifice without suffering.

PROLONGING THE WAR.

THE POLICY OF Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as set forth in his manifesto, published yesterday, is a policy which will inspire the Kaiser and his party with new hope. It is a policy that the German autocrats would gladly give millions of dollars to see implemented in Canada or in any other country that is in league with the Allies. It is a policy which helps to keep alive the embers of the war.

Germany has only one inducement to keep up the fight, and that is the hope that disunion may arise among the Allied Powers. The deflection of Russia has made the probability of peace more remote than ever. The news will reach Berlin that recruiting in Canada has stopped and that there is a division in this country, that one party is in favor of and the other unalterably opposed to continuing the war. For this idea among the Germans Sir Wilfrid is responsible, and it is a belief that, when spread among the German people, tends to hold them in place and the fighting men in the battle line.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy is one of delay. In this he is in the same category as Russia, that proposes to hold off for the winter months and until her allies have put forth still greater exertions.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier says that he is not satisfied as to what further is expected of Canada. Delay is his watchword. His compatriots would be encouraged to shirk their duty while wounded Canadian soldiers, not yet fully recovered from their injuries, limped back to the trenches to hold the battle line.

Does Sir Wilfrid Laurier doubt for a moment that every allied country has not done its full share, or does he now propose to leave the rest of the task to the United States? When he speaks of trade problems and kindred topics at this time he is simply drawing so many red herrings across the trail. He is vastly more concerned for the alien's right to vote than he is for the welfare of Canadian soldiers.

His manifesto should solidify the Union party and destroy the Liberal leader's last vestige of a chance for recognition outside of his own province.

NO GRAIN FOR LIQUOR.

ACCORDING TO an order-in-Council just issued, no grain can be used in Canada for the manufacture of liquor after November 30, a measure which is certainly justified under the circumstances. It is probable that there is already in stock a sufficient supply of alcohol to be used for the manufacture of high explosives for several years to come.

This is one of the enactments that was originally suggested in Parliament by Capt. Burnham, another example of initiative on his part. Something like a year ago, when he met local temperance workers in a conference in this city, he expressed himself as in favor of preventing the use of grain by distillers and brewers. He brought the matter up in the House soon afterward, and his suggestion has now been molded into a law of the land.

DON'T BLAME THE KAISER.

IT IS BECOMING more and more the fashion these days to blame the Kaiser for every form of evil that the world has witnessed for the past two decades or so. There is sufficient for which he can be held responsible without going far afield to rake up cases against him. False accusations only tend to weaken the indictment.

One writer goes so far as to allege that the handiwork of the Kaiser is to be detected in the Dogger Bank incident in 1904, when the Russian fleet opened fire on a number of British fishing boats, mistaking them for the warships of Japan. The writer says that the Kaiser had hatched this plot in order to make trouble between Russia and England.

Even the Prince of Evil is entitled to his dues. It is hardly fair to hold the German emperor responsible either for the quality or the quantity of the vodka which the Russian naval officers are said to have consumed prior to that unfortunate blunder.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THERE IS freedom of speech guaranteed, but besides this every Britisher has a constitutional right to preserve silence.

• • • •

THERE IS MORE money in the city, according to per capita circulation, than was ever known before, and this should make it easy to invest in war bonds.

• • • •

WHEN THE PRICE of any commodity rises, the dealers seem to get the news by telegraph. When the prices drop, slow freight appears to be the channel of communication.

• • • •

WASHINGTON has gone dry, a boon to the tailors. The men of that city will require new inexpressibles equipped with hip pockets capable of taking care of a large private stock.

• • • •

AFTER THAT manifesto, no Laurier Liberal can continue to be truly popular, even with himself.

• • • •

IF, AS President Gandler says, the Church must make democracy safe for the world, then what an excellent mission field can be found in Russia.

• • • •

DELAY IS dangerous, and Sir Wilfrid's war policy is marked chiefly by nothing else.

• • • •

SIR WILFRID LAURIER wants one of his followers to contest each riding in the Dominion. It is now up to Sir Sam Hughes to venture a declaration as to where the gold required is to come from.

• • • •

A MAN CONVICTED of an offence against the Military Service Act will lose his vote. Laurierite fanatics may not be wise, but half a dozen words should give them pause.

• • • •

IN TIMES of great emergency the Italians forget political division and unite in one great policy. In some respects the Italians are much in advance of Canada. But then, Italy has no Laurier Liberals to complicate matters.

• • • •

A DOSE of Unionism taken before each meal and at bedtime should help to relieve the chronic grouch under which our contemporary is laboring.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A Source of Party Weakness.

(Toronto Star.)

Partyism is defensible as a means of fighting for principles and of expressing honesty in differences of opinion. The less attractive a party becomes to office-seekers and persons desirous of making profit out of the country, the better for the party and the country.

Saved Their Self-Respect.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

When, in order to save their "self-respect," as Hon. F. B. Carvell—a member of the Union Cabinet— put it, both he and Mr. F. F. Pardee turned their backs on Sir Wilfrid Laurier, it was certainly a cruel jab at the reputation of "their revered leader," as The Globe calls him. In ordinary life much is endured in a friend, before one's self-respect imperatively calls a halt.

For Country First.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

In these days of shifting political boundaries the ordinary man may find some difficulty in keeping in touch with the landmarks. A good plan for safe guidance is to keep constantly in mind the principle that the first duty of a good citizen is to his country.

Potatoes.

(Montreal Star.)

"Buyers are paying $1.25 a bag. There are plenty of potatoes here," says a despatch from Huron county, Ontario, where large supplies are being purchased for Quebec. Now, watch these $1.25 potatoes cost $2.50 by the time they reach us.

Rather Absurd.

(New York World.)

For a gallant crew to start out on the conquest of Great Britain in a million-dollar airship six hundred feet long to be brought down in France by the tire trouble or something; and to be captured by a farm hand with a shotgun out hunting rabbits—well, that is adding terrors to war!

SACRIFICE WILL COUNT NOW

(By Ray Lyman Wilbur.)

(Dr. Wilbur is president of Leland Stanford university and director of food conservation in the food administration.)

Arthur is away at boarding school for the first time in his life. And he is enjoying it. He has found a host of new friends, he has a good room and a good roommate and he has begun to have dreams of making the school team. Even so, there are times when he grows a bit homesick. And one of those is when he is seated at a long table of the dining hall. It isn't that he dislikes the food. It does well enough, and he has no fault to find. Yet there are moments when he cannot help thinking of his family sitting around the dining table at home, laughing and talking and watching his mother while she cuts one of those wonderful mince pies of hers.

Oh, those mince pies! Was there ever anything like them? What wouldn't he give for a big wedge out of one of them? Will they tuck one into that box they have promised to send him each week? That is a vital question to him.

Meantime what are Arthur's people back home doing? They have their regular supply of mince meat canned and stowed away. They are fond of mince pie themselves. Yet they know that Arthur, living on the routine boarding school fare, is counting on having that mince pie arrive from home at periodic intervals. What does the family do under these circumstances? Do its members use the regular amount of mince meat for themselves? Or are they saving of it, substituting other desserts for mince pie, so that Arthur may be sure of having his?

I leave you to answer.

And in the meantime I am going to take the abrupt leap from the family circle to a tropical islet in the south seas. There is nobody on it except three sailors, the sole survivors of a shipwreck on a near by reef. Yes, there is a fourth, a wee mite of a child whom the sailors saved when its parents perished. It sounds almost like a plot for a short story, doesn't it? But I am still thinking of food. Luckily, the island is rich in edible tropical fruits. And, still more luckily, the day after the wreck, one of the sailors found, washed upon the beach, a small case of condensed milk. Who got the milk? The sailors? Or did they save it for the baby, while they themselves got along well enough on cocoanut milk, breadfruit and mangoes?

This time also I leave you to answer. I wouldn't impugn the kindheartedness of the sailor man the world over by even intimating that there could be any doubt about the answer.

Are you tired of imaginary illustrations which seem to you to lead nowhere? You will quickly discover that they lead somewhere very definitely if you will pause to consider world events.

Our allies, fighting men in the trenches and women and children at home, need certain kinds of food. They are wheat, beef, pork, dairy products and sugar. We have these foods. We shall have plenty to send over where it is needed—if we are willing to make the slight substitute necessary in our own diet.

Otherwise we shall not be able to send over the food they need. Or, to put it more informally and pointedly, we shall—in this particular—be leaving our friends in the lurch.

An ancient proverb runs: "What's life to a man when his wife's a widow?" Remodeled for this occasion, we may say: "What good are our soldiers in France if the people we are sending them to fight for have meanwhile died of starvation?"

For cutting down the use of certain specified foodstuffs the personal sacrifices we shall have to make are trifling. The results possible from such small sacrifices and substitutions are immense.

The necessary surplus of food must be raised. And that problem is up to you, and to all of us.

The lad at boarding school got his mince pie. The baby on the south sea island had his milk. Are our allies—making common cause with us in the fight for freedom—to fare worse when it comes to depending on us for wheat, beef, pork, dairy products, and sugar?

Or shall we, for their sake, each and all of us, help them by sending them the foods they need, even though we have to make some slight substitution in what we ourselves eat?

EDITOR'S MAIL

BOOSTING OUR OWN LAND.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—

I notice that in some of the leading papers there are articles written about Sir Joseph Flavelle and the Davies Packing Co. I have known and done business with Sir Joseph for many years and always found him square.

The Flavelle boys are self-made business men. As regards the Davies Co. the strong competition there is in that line of business they must have produced a very superior article of good value to have succeeded in getting such a large contract from the Government.

It is not so much in the price as in the amount of business that tells with a good working capital. As to the ladies vote they can be relied on to give an intelligent vote at any time on public matters.

We have the Carnegie Library here and other foreign elements doing business here and I think it's all right.

But I am very glad to know that one of our own city boys has been honorably successful and the Government was wise in choosing a loyal, capable, reliable business man to look after the affairs of our country.

Wit and Wisdom

Thought for the Day.

"It's wonderful," observes a bachelor friend of ours, "how a baby conceals its shame at hearing the kind of stuff its mother talks to it."

There Is a Reason.

Auntie — Johnnie, did you enjoy the book I sent you on your birthday?

Johnnie—Never looked at it yet.

Auntie—Why don't you like it?

Johnnie—'Cause ma said I'd have to wash my hands when I read it.

Not Many Possessions.

They were new neighbors and Virginia Lou, aged five, put her wits to work to find out about them. She accordingly appeared in the yard of the neighbor accompanied by her three-year-old sister.

"Where do you live?" she asked.

"Right here," explained the neighbor.

"Well, you didn't use to live here."

"No."

"Well, do you have a grandfadder?"

"No."

"Or a grandmudder?"

"No."

"Or a fadder?"

"No."

"Well, what do you got?"

To a Penny.

"If I could just get somebody to invest $1000 in a scheme of mine, I could make some money."

"How much could you make?"

"$1000."

At the Game.

An Englishman was once persuaded to see a game of baseball; and during the play, when he happened to look away for a moment, a foul tip caught him on the ear and knocked him senseless. On coming to himself, he asked faintly:

"What was it?"

"A foul—only a foul!"

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "A fowl? I thought it was a mule."

His First Lesson.

Mr. Quibbles had engaged a new office boy. He was a raw-looking youth; but Mr. Quibbles prefers them that way; they aren't such an anxiety as the smart brand.

One of Maddock's first tasks was to copy a letter, and, as is the custom in lawyers' offices, the letter and copy were read over together.

"Dear sir," read Maddock, "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th ult.—"

"Maddock," interrupted Mr. Quibbles, "what does 'ult' mean?"

For a moment an expression that was absolutely blank overspread the features of the new youth; then it cleared, and a smile of conscious knowledge took its place.

"Please, sir," he said, "it's what they say to the soldiers when they want 'em to stop!"

The Exception We All Make.

"Children should be seen and not heard."

"Not exactly. If you say other people's children should be seen and not heard I'll agree with you."

Building permits issued by the Chatham Fire Chief Pritchard during October totals $43,950.

TODAY'S STORY

"Be sure and send my trousers out to be pressed, and have them back by night," was the parting injunction a man left with his wife one recent morning.

She called up the tailor once. He did not come. She called him up again toward noon. A few minutes later she heard footsteps in the hall.

"Here they are," she said, with relief, opening the door and forcing the trousers into the hands of a man outside.

"Thanks," he said, and shuffled away.

When the tailor had not brought the trousers back that night the husband telephoned him.

"I didn't have time to go get them," the tailor replied.

The husband wore an old suit that night.

Two days later the janitor saw the husband.

"I'm much obliged to you for those trousers your wife gave me," he said.

GAY VARIETY IS THE RULE IN WOMAN'S FOOTWEAR THIS YEAR

Eashionable Styles Include Shapes to Suit all Feet and Tastes

It is certainly a far cry from those awkward, ungainly wrappings of skins which formed the foot wear of our primitive forefathers, to the graceful creations of leather and satin, offered to the woman of today. The new season's shoes are attractive, neat and shapely, cut on graceful lines, and fashioned harmoniously, as to coloring.

It is a curious thing, according to a representative of one of New York's smart Fifth avenue shoe shops that tan, which is seldom fashionable more than one season at a time, has now been in favor for three or four seasons and is still highly popular, with no signs of being superseded by black, as was prophesied some time ago.

Cordovan or cocoa brown which is the dark reddish brown variety, is much liked just now and comes in both calfskin and kidskin, so that it may be made up in a number of styles. The high boots are sometimes plain, sometimes made in a combination of leather or leather cloth, in contrasting, but harmonizing colors.

There seems to be a decided tendency to what are known as the military or walking heels, but that does not mean that Louis or French heels are to be done away with; not at all. They are still here in full force, with their two inches of height, and they are appearing frequently in the Oxford ties which are well liked for street wear at present. These ties bid fair to be popular for some time, as they may be worn to good advantage with over-gaiters, when the weather grows cooler. One smart-looking model is made of black kidskin, with narrow panels of black cloth at either side of the evelet strip which is of leather.

Military Heels

The tan Oxfords, which come in the regulation light tan leather, as well as the darker reddish Cordovan variety, usually have the military or flat broad walking heel. Some of the smart sport styles have pointed tips, which extend around the sides of the vamp, almost to the instep. Tan pumps, as well as black ones, are in vogue and they come usually with the high heels, although there is more or less demand right along for low heels.

There is no shortage of leather, according to this house; in fact, there is more of that commodity on hand than is wanted or needed just now. And there is no excuse for hoarding shoes, for, unless conditions change decidedly, shoes may be cheaper next season than they are now. The better grade of shoes have not advanced in price; it is the medium and cheaper ones which have become so much more costly, and the prices of them have soared almost to the level of the best and finest. No one need worry about being obliged to wear cloth shoes. They are, as a rule, rather ugly things, though not so of necessity.

Speaking of cloth shoes, one is reminded of the footwear which was so much used during the 1830 period, the cloth shoes with little straps of leather laid across them. Such hideous things as they were! Surely nobody would willingly turn back to wear them. They are in vogue still in some of the country districts of France, but there is a reason for them there. They are not worn as dress shoes, but as everyday home comforts, for they are lined with some woolly material which makes them welcome in the houses which are not always well heated. There are, however, high boots of fine ribbed cloth, in gray and tan and black, which are neat and good looking.

Ornamental Models

Fancy-topped shoes are still popular and will be worn quite as much as heretofore, so states this authority on shoes. There are boots with black lower portions and uppers of white kid, or buckskin, or of a pale cream or soft beige. Also gray uppers are much used on otherwise black shoes, and sometimes tan is combined with black, but that is not so popular an admixture. Many of the tan shoes have uppers of a soft, light, tan buckskin, which is a soft, pleasing and harmonious combination, much more so than the sort of covert cloth which makes the tops of others.

Some of the new shoes have black vamps only, or tan ones, while the entire remainder of the shoe, heels and all, is made of a contrasting color. Some have the vamp and heels alike and the rest a contrast. Some have a great deal of stitching, or, as in the case of the heavy leathers, much punchwork; others are as plain as possible. Those high, cream-colored shoes are still popular, although they no longer lead.

Pumps of delicate pearl gray suede retain their popularity for afternoon and evening wear, and many of them are ornamental with large buckles of cut steel. Of course, the silk stockings must match them perfectly.

No one need hesitate nowadays to wear light-colored shoes—when they are suitable to the time and place and harmonize with the costume—for so great has been the demand that it has been necessary to make cleaning mixtures to match all colors, even such as may be used on the colored buckskin shoes.

Fashionable Hosiery

As for stockings, the up-to-date woman will match those carefully to her shoes, whether she wears high boots, low pumps or Oxford ties. Silk, of course, is the preferred fabric except for sports wear, when the heavy woolen variety in white, colors, or the attractive heather mixtures are considered most smart, as well as the most comfortable and useful. When the shoe is of the two-toned or fancy top variety, the stocking should always be matched to the upper part. Some people, of course, buy their stockings to match the vamp, when that forms a contrast to the rest of the shoe; but it is generally considered better taste to make the stocking match the upper part of the shoe, for then, especially with the short skirts of the day, the height of the shoe, the point where it ends and the stockings begins, is less noticeable.

Must Beat the Hun.

"Keep the war going until properly finished" was the courageous but pathetic message of fellow-prisoners in Germany given Pte. J. C. Baber, of the Royal Montreals, who was repatriated from Switzerland recently. Taken prisoner in the Ypres battle in 1915, Baber passed through three prison camps, once reaching Achen as a proposed exchange, only to be rejected. Finally, in May, 1916, he was sent to Switzerland. Nothing that has ever been published fully describes the brutal treatment in these camps, he told the Canadian correspondent. The men were dependent on the Red Cross parcels, and the parting words of those left behind was to continue these and wage war until the Hun was beaten. Life in the internment camps was terrible, but if necessary they were prepared to remain another three years, as the Hun unbeaten would try again ten years hence.

Coal Found in New Brunswick.

Anthracite coal has been discovered fifty miles from Fredericton, N. B. Captain Russell Bellaney, of New York City, a student and geologist, secured a license from the New Brunswick Government to explore for silver, which he believed was to be found in the Salmon River district of Queen County. His investigations brought him to a strata which proved to be coal, very closely resembling the anthracite of the Pennsylvania fields. Tests made showed it to produce an intense heat and to be almost odorless and clinkerless. It ignites quickl, and burns slowly. It is estimated conservatively that there is at least a half million tons in sight.

Production of Wood Pulp.

Of the five provinces engaged in the pulp industry three greatly increased their production and two fell behind last year. Those which increased in production were Quebec, Ontario, and British Columbia, and those which showed decreases were New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Whether They Be Gun Toting Rivals or Private Citizens—His Own Story of What Happened to a Professional Acquaintance at Skinner's Grocery.

By M. QUAD.

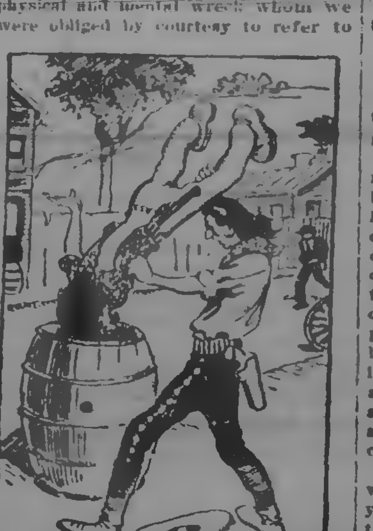
[Copyright, [illegible] by Associated Literary Press.]

MAJOR BORGARDUS relates that as he was returning from a trip to Lone Jack the other day he was pursued for over a mile by a large cinnamon bear and came near being overtaken. We don't believe the story. We don't say right out that the major is a liar, but, if pinned down to it, we would make affidavit that he couldn't tell the truth for money.

The report published in a rival paper that we had driven every lawyer out of Glveadam Gulch at the muzzle of a gun is, of course, all nonsense. Three or four years ago, before the bar got on to our editorial tactics in the case of a libel suit, we believe we did help a lawyer or two, but there has been no trouble of late, nor do we apprehend any. It is the business of a lawyer to start a libel suit against us if retained for that purpose, and it is our business to call on him and quash the case, and the understanding is so well grounded that no trouble ever arises.

It is now two weeks since Sam Roys went over to Cat mountain to gather geological specimens, and no one has heard from him since the day he left. There is a general feeling that Sam picked up a grizzly bear and that the bear objected.

We were told on Tuesday that the physical and mental wreck whom we were obliged by courtesy to refer to as our esteemed contemporary had threatened again to shoot us on sight—being about the hundredth time in the last two years—but we were by no means prepared for his wonderful feat on Wednesday. He actually did stop us on Apache avenue and pull a gun. For some time we were in doubt whether he would shoot us or himself; but, finding he was liable to accident, we picked him and his gun up and deposited them head first in a barrel in front of Skinner's grocery. The editor remained there, with his heels in the air, until some one extended a helping hand. We shall never draw a gun on our esteemed, although we may jab at him with a toothpick.



HEAD FIRST IN A BARREL.

Our esteemed contemporary in his issue of Tuesday says that he met us on Cochise place Sunday evening and fired five shots at us, but owing to the darkness we escaped. We were on Cochise place Sunday evening. We passed two loving hours with a widow whom we have long been sweet on and after pressing her hand for the thousandth time got under our hat and departed. We walked down to Cheyenne street and from thence to Apache avenue, but did not see even a prowling dog. Our esteemed may have encountered us, but we can't recall the incident. He may have fired upon us, but if so we haven't the least remembrance. We have offered time and again to stand up before him by daylight at any range he may elect and let him blaze away, and why he should put himself out at night is a puzzle.

We believe that forty-nine out of every fifty editors in Arizona will agree we are always ready to extend every courtesy to members of the craft and that we seek to honor and elevate the profession in all we do. Last week Mr. John Baker, editor of the Bad Hill Gazette, sent us a letter at the hands of a man named Stuart. In that letter he called us a bluffer, a coward and a sneak and added that if we would be at Ten Mile Creek Sunday noon he would rid the earth of an encumbrance. As we had never had a word with Mr. Baker we were surprised at his challenge, but courtesy compelled us to say that we would be on hand at the time named. We were there at 11:30 and waited until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but no Mr. Baker showed up. We intend to make it our business to ride over to Bad Hill some day soon and take his editorial nose between our thumb and finger and pinch it and give it a twist.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About Some Interesting Little Creatures.

INSECTS THAT WORK BUSILY.

Manner In Which They Gather and Store Food For Winter—How the Babies Are Cared For—Mother of the Tribe and the New Homes.

Tonight, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I shall tell you about

THE FLYING ANTS.

Suppose you shut your eyes and go with me into that little ant hill by the rosebush in the garden. You will have to run through many long hallways or galleries in the ground.

Everywhere you will meet ants hurrying in and out. Some of them will be carrying grains and seeds to put into their storehouse for winter. Others will be carrying the baby ants in or out of the different little rooms or cells. These babies are at first only tiny white worms. You will notice other ants carrying little bundles wrapped in white. These are sleeping babies who have wrapped themselves up in gossamer blankets to awaken after awhile as full grown ants. Then the ant nursemaids will tear off the covers, and the little ant will come out of the cradle.

In every ant hill is a queen mother, who lays the eggs from which the young ants come. The other ants take the best of care of her. She never does any work or goes out of the ant hill alone. In the fall, however, she gets restless, tired of staying in the house, and sometimes just will go out in spite of everything. If she is a young queen she is very apt to want to go out and see the world.

She has wings, and some other ants that have wings, too, follow her. A whole cloud of these winged ants swarm out of the ant hill after the queen.

Perhaps after awhile she makes up her mind to go back to the ant hill. Then there is great rejoicing among the other ants.

When the queen goes back to her cell the other winged ants unhook their wings from their sides and go to work. You see, the wings are not fastened to their bodies, but are just hooked there so that they may be taken off when they are no longer needed. They would be in the way of the working ants, who must dart into all sorts of tight corners and through many narrow openings where wings might be torn.

Sometimes there are several queens in an ant hill. Then not all the queens come back to the ant hills. Some fly off to see the world and never get home again. When they are tired flying they drop to the ground and crawl into some snug hole, where they lay a lot of eggs. Then they go to sleep for the winter, and in the spring, when the eggs hatch, the mother takes care of the young ones till they in turn can take care of her. It is by wandering queens that new ant colonies are started.

His Logic.

"We could get along very well without lawyers," proclaimed the radical. "I consider lawyers nothing but parasites on the body politic."

The attorney sneered. "Your theory on this subject is like your theories on all other subjects," he said. "You presuppose a model state of society. In a model state we should need no lawyers, but at present society is imperfect. Therefore, lawyers are a necessity."

"I expected you to say that," said the radical. "Will you stick to it that a lawyer is a necessity and accept all the consequences of that statement?"

"Yes."

"Out of your own mouth I condemn you. 'Necessity knows no law!'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Too Much For Tommie.

"Mother wants you to come right over and see Tommie," said the little girl.

"What seems to be the matter with him?" asked the doctor.

"He can't swallow. His teacher gave him some big words to spell today, and we think some of 'em got stuck in his throat."—Yonkers Statesman.

LONG ARM OF THE LAW

MOUNTED POLICE BROUGHT THE MURDERERS FROM ARCTIC

Two Eskimos Murdered Priests, and They Learned That British Justice Will Not Be Thwarted—They Were Captured After a Search That Lasted for Almost Three Years.

IN the record of the Royal North-West Mounted Police there is no more wonderful story than that to which "finis" was written in an Edmonton court-room the other day. Two Eskimos, Sinnisiak and Ulluksuk, murdered two Catholic priests, Fathers Laroux and Rouvier, near Bloody Falls, on the Coppermine River, far in the Arctic Circle, in 1913. After a pursuit that lasted for more than three years, and extended over 6,000 miles, the murderers were brought to Edmonton by Sergt. "Danny" LeNouze and Constables Wright and Withers. They were convicted; indeed, they freely confessed their crime and were sentenced to death, but on the strong advice of the jury and the judge it was decided that it would be a crime to execute men who understood so little the nature of their offence and who at the time it was committed feared that the priests were about to shoot them. So the Eskimos will be sent back to their icy homes, there to spread among their fellows this wonderful story of the long arm of British justice.

The hunt for the Eskimos began on May 1, 1915, when Sergt. "Danny," the Irishman with the French name, took his two men and left Edmonton for Peace River. Here the party fitted out for a three year trip, then proceeding down the Peace River to Lake Athabaska, then down the Slave River across the Great Slave Lake, and into and down the Mackenzie River as far as Fort Norman. Here they picked up an Eskimo interpreter, who, with his wife and daughter, was attached to the party. At this point, too, another constable joined the party. They reached Bear Lake on August 4 after a hard journey. Here they found old Fort Franklin, still standing and in good repair. It is named after the Arctic explorer, who once spent a winter on the spot. Then they started across Great Bear Lake, a huge body of water, and it took them from August 12 to September 8 to make the distance of 400 miles. All were seasick. The party had a dozen husky dogs with them and had to fish daily for their food.

The next stop was at Dease Bay, where they expected to come across the cabin of the priests. It was at this spot that Stefansson found the first evidences of a blonde Eskimo in 1911. When they came across the cabin they knew at once that the priests had been murdered, for it was looted, but still there was nothing to give a clue to the murderers. Up to this time, it ought to be remarked, the officers were only working on a report that the priests had been killed by unknown Eskimos, and until they reached the ransacked cabin they had not even presumptive evidence that a crime had been committed. They remained here through the winter, going into the Barrens to kill meat. By the middle of March all was ready for the dash into the Arctic. It was March 29, 1916, when they began the last stage of their journey, a 200-mile trek to the world's rim. In a month of sledding and traveling by foot they had reached the Coppermine River. Here they fell in with Eskimo bands, and the real hunt began.

They were armed with automatic pistols and rifles, for they did not know what sort of reception they might meet, but the Eskimos, though sometimes sullen, were never hostile, and not once did the officers have to use their weapons. It would have been useless to do so in any event, for had the Eskimos meant mischief they were numerous enough to overwhelm the white men. What gave them their wonderful authority was not their guns, but the knowledge that they represented the North-West Mounted Police, men who never let go of a man once they had seized him, and would follow a murderer to the ends of the earth. The Eskimos, however, were comparatively friendly, though at first it was difficult to get much information from them. The police traveled here and there, and finally drifted out to Cape Lambert, in the Dolphin Straits. It was here they learned the story of the murder, and that the murderers were in the neighborhood.

It appears that the two murderers had been practically expelled by their tribe, and were living like outcasts. At a point near the edge of Victoria Land the officers found Sinnisiak in an ice hut. When they walked in on him he merely glanced up, though a big gun lay near his hand. The interpreter told him that he was under arrest. He immediately told all the details of the crime, and offered not the slightest objection to going with Sergt. LeNouze. Some weeks later they picked up Uluksuk, who was with a number of companions. He quietly submitted and presently the outfit started on the return journey. In fact, all the way back the Eskimos worked like the white men and were never under guard. The winter was spent on Herschel Island, and in the spring the back trail was taken. One of the most gruesome features of the story, and at the same time one of the most interesting to those who have studied the habits of Eskimos, was the admission of the murderers that they had eaten the livers of their victims, thus establishing what has long been suspected, namely that cannibalism is practised among some of the denizens of the Far North.

Since the beginning of the war Germany has built about two hundred and fifty submarines.

Mrs. Green Gains Twenty Pound

WAS ALMOST NERVOUS WRECK WHEN SHE BEGAN TAKING TANLAC.

"I have actually gained twenty pounds by taking Tanlac, and my friends and neighbors seemed amazed at the wonderful change in my condition," was the remarkable statement made by Mrs. William Green, at 141 Hunter street, Hamilton, recently. Mrs. Green has lived in Hamilton and vicinity all her life, and has a wide circle of friends who rejoice with her over the return of her health.

"I had suffered from stomach trouble until I was almost a nervous wreck," continued Mrs. Green. "For two solid years I was unable to do one thing about the house, and my stomach became so upset that I couldn't retain the medicines prescribed for me. For four months about the only thing I could eat was milk and eggs. I was so weak I could hardly walk from one chair to another, and for months I don't suppose I slept more than two hours a night. I spent eleven months under two specialists, who finally said they could do me no good. My case seemed hopeless, an operation failed to help me, and I was told that nothing more could be done for me.

"Of course I was discouraged, despondent and almost hopeless, and now it seems hard for me to believe myself what a wonderful change has come over me since I began taking Tanlac. If anyone could feel like a new person I do, and when I told one of the physicians who was treating me what I was taking he said it certainly had done me a lot of good, and advised me to keep it up. I have a splendid appetite now, and nothing I eat gives me any trouble. My nerves are in good shape, and I can sleep all night and on until nine o'clock in the morning. I can do almost everything there is to do about the house now, all my despondent feelings are gone, and everything seems so different. I am now on my fourth bottle of Tanlac, and can heartily recommend it to everybody."

Not True to Life.

"Yes; it's hard to get them to look right."

"How so?"

Disinterested Love.

She—Tom, dear, I have at last discovered that I love you. He—Ah, you have heard, then, that my uncle has left me $5,000? She—Sir, after that remark we must part forever. I heard it was $50,000.—Boston Transcript.

Make Good Raiders.

Canadian officers on leave here from the French front have informally recommended to American officials that American Indians be employed or enlisted for service with the expeditionary forces. Manitoba Indians with the Canadians have done excellent work at scouting and in No Man's Land.

"These Indians with us," said a captain with the Canadian forces, "have performed services that never could have been performed by a white man. The Indian of North America has it in his bones to be a good fighter and a crafty one. We have them in nearly every regiment. Again and again during the past two years I have seen them go out at night between the trenches, and, without firing a shot, without making the slightest noise, or creating the slightest disturbance, come back leading a half dozen or so Germans, from whom much valuable information has been obtained."

QUESTION OF MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS BY GENERAL VOTE BEFORE CITY COUNCIL

Trades and Labor Council ask it and Ald. McIntyre Fathers a Notice of Motion in That Direction—Why Any Elections This Year?

The City Fathers cleaned the slate of the following routine business last night:

The Quaker Oats Co. wrote, asking a remission of their taxes for 1917 owing to the destruction of their mills by fire. They are assessed for patriotic purposes, war tax and garbage collection. Their appeal to the Court of Revision had not been allowed on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction over buildings destroyed by fire. The company did not think it fair they should suffer by reason of technicality. This went to the Finance Committee.

J. Guise-Bagley wrote that he had been instructed to sue the city for damages for injuries sustained by Clifford John Shannon, a six-year-old boy when playing in an unprotected road scraper on a private lot adjacent to Romaine and Park streets. The boy's finger had to be amputated and his parents expected damages therefor, together with hospital expenses—this was sent to the Legal Committee.

Reports

The report of the Property Committee's session earlier in the evening was adopted as read by Ald Saunders.

The Finance Committee's report and that of the Committee of the whole council also passed without question.

$1,000 For Charity

F. W. Harcourt wrote, "I write you as official guardian. In compliance with the Charities Accounting Act, the solicitors for the estate of Sir Sandford Fleming, have sent me a copy of his will. Under it the executors are directed to expend $1.000 toward charitable objects in the city of Peterboro. Messrs. Hall & Hall, Barristers, Peterborough, are solicitors for the estate. Probate was issued to Sandford H. Fleming, Walter A. Fleming and Hugh P. Fleming, sons, residing in Ottawa, and Edward E. H. D. Hall, Barrister, Peterboro.

This went to the Finance Committee and appreciation of the bequest expressed.

To Secure License

Ald. Dobbin moved that the City Clerk take steps to secure a license for operating the city's coal yard.—Carried.

Too Much Salary

Ald. Dobbin reported that Fireman Engineer Jamieson expected $1200 a year, that is a hundred extra as engineer in the fire hall, and another extra hundred as engineer at the sewerage pump house. As Jamieson is not particular to retain the position, and Chief Grange is prepared to replace him with a competent engineer at $1100 a year, he (Ald Dobbin) wanted to know how to instruct the Fire Chief.

Ald. Smith—"I don't think Jamieson is entitled to an extra $100 for looking after the engine which is scarcely ever used.

Ald. Worth—"When he's attending to the sewage pumping station he's not doing anything else, and I don't see where the call for an additional $100 salary comes in."

Ald. Smith and Worth moved that the position of fireman who looks after the engine and cares for sewage pumping station is only worth $1100.—Carried.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that the assistant chief's salary is only $1100 a year.

Shirts For Firemen

Ald. Dobbin reported that when a bill was presented the Fire, Water and Light Committee by Fire Chief Grange for ten shirts, he (Ald. Dobbin) had concluded that the goods were for Grange himself. In this he finds he was in error, the item being for 10 uniform shirts for the firemen. It has, he said, been customary for the city to supply uniform shirts in the brigade. This explanation was satisfactory and the customary policy in regard to uniform shirts not interferred with.

Elections By General Vote

Ald McIntyre gave notice that at the next meeting he will move that the municipal elections be decided by a general vote, the Trades and Labor Council is agitating for this, which he thought the best policy.

Ald Smith—"The general vote system has been tried here and elsewhere and discarded as not satisfactory. The trouble with the Trades and Labor Council is that owing to so many returns by acclamation they do not get a chance to vote. If they want to vote so badly why do they not put candidates in the field."

Ald. Dobbin remarked that the general vote system gave way to the ward policy because people thought they would get better men in the field. It has always been a cry for better men, and no matter who the aldermen are they only get abuse no matter how much energy and time they sacrifice in the city's interests.

The Mayor—"To my mind it matters not how the municipality is governed so long as we get men capable and with the time at their disposal to fill the offices.

Garbage Collection

Ald Smith raised the question of tenders for garbage collection. He thought it difficult to get tenderers, as the contract not being assured for more than one year, the outlay necessary for the work does not warrant new men bidding for the contract.

Ald. Stratton—"The city itself should get into the game as soon as possible; get proper appliances and do the work by day labor, which would assure better results at a minimum expenditure. This proposition should be considered with the tenders for garbage collection."

His Worship replied that Engineer Parsons had been instructed to prepare estimates for the city undertaking the work.

Why Elections

Ald Stratton here suggested that an effort should be made this war time to save the expense of an election. "We have a good mayor, he said, "and perhaps he could be prevailed on to remain in office another year, and the people induced to let the retiring members of the council be returned by acclamation.

Ald McIntyre—"I do not think that could be worked out. You cannot prevent aspirants for municipal honors from cropping up, and seeking nominations."

There were present Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Smith, Weir, McIntyre, Worth, Langford, Stratton, Dobbin, Saunders.

TEN YEAR OLD BOY IS MISSING

LEFT HOME ON HALLOWE'EN NIGHT AND HAS NOT BEEN SEEN SINCE

Ormond Allen Jackson Braden, aged 10 years, has been missing from his home on Hartley street, since Hallowe'en night, since when no trace of him has been found. The following is his description: Sandy hair and complexion, slimly built, freckled face! dressed in grey colored peake jacket, brown trousers, black boots and stockings; also grey sweater coat with red facings.

This is another boy who has wandered from home more than once; the last time, in 1916, he was found on Clarke's farm in Douro, and it is thought he may have made for the country again and imposed on some good-natured farmer with a plausible story.

Wallace R. Campbell, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Ford Company, of Walkerville, was shot by a masked burglar and seriously wounded yesterday.

WILL CLOSE MARKET ARCADE CONVERT IT INTO TWO STORES

Market Hall To Be Served From Square Entrance Only—Will Eliminate a Loafing Spot and be a Source of Revenue.

City Trust Commissioner V. Eastwood appeared before the Committee of the Whole Council last night, and asked, unofficially, if they would recommend the conversion of the market arcade into two stores. This would eliminate a loafing place, and serve the market hall entirely from the rear. Council's approval, he said, would strengthen the Trust's hands in this matter.

On motion of Ald. Weir, Council's approval was recorded.

"Municipal Canada."

Mr. D. C. Nixon, representing "Municipal Canada," an estimated thousand page book, of which an edition of 5000 is guaranteed, circulated in the British Empire, Allied countries and the States, interviewed the committee in regard to the city paying for an illustrated pen story of Peterborough, its advantages and resources and so forth in the publication.

Mr. Nixon said the publication would be replete with industrial, manufacturing and commercial information of Cananda and its resources in general, including Peterborough. It will be an excellent means of defeating Germany, commercially and industrially, as regards its ambitious designs on British trade after the war. It will practically advertise Canada to the whole world, and is to be circulated by the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce. The price per page for each municipality is $200, including 500 copies of the write up, printed in pamphlet form, furnished the municipality for its own distribution.

At a subsequent meeting of the Council it was decided, on motion of Ald. McIntyre and Worth, to buy a page space in this work at $200, providing its circulation of 5000 copies is guaranteed, that Sir Geo. Foster endorses the scheme, and that in addition to the 500 copies of city's page in pamphlet form, two complete copies of "Municipal Canada" are delivered to the Council.

CITY DEALERS TO HANDLE GVT. FISH APPOINTED BY COUNCIL

Messrs. Pringle, Douras and Braund are the Men—Middlemen to be Prohibited—Food Controller can Supply Lake Erie Herring.

Ald. Dobbin submitted the following report at last night's council session:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee appointed to consider and act with regard to a supply of fish for this municipality, supplied under the proposition as outlined by the Department of Game and Fisheries, Toronto, beg leave to report as follows:

The Committee met in consultation with Messrs. Douros, Braund (R.C.) and Pringle. The general regulations as governing the supply, in accordance with the communication from the Department were agreed to at once.

It is recommended that the local distribution be left in the hands of those noted above, vis., Messrs. Douros, Pringle and Braund. These men agree to have placed for each, orders as follows:

Pringle—250 lbs. ordered on Mondays for Tuesday's trade. In proportion of half trout, quarter whitefish, quarter pickerel.

Repeat orders each Thursday for Friday's trade.

This to continue until otherwise advised.

It is suggested that the initial order be arranged so as to have the first sales day on Tuesday, November 6th.

It is suggested that as some publicity be made of the arrangement in the papers, that the sales may be as large as possible.

The report was adopted as read.

It is understood that this fish will be retailed at 14c a pound.

Before this report was adopted a communication was read from J. Steinburg, petitioning that he be included in the number of dealers to handle government fish. His petition was endorsed by quite a few consumers.

Ald. Dobbin said the Committee had not approved of Mr. Steinburg's proposition. It was felt that the sale of government fish should be confined to not more than three dealers; otherwise the quantity handled by each would be ralatively small. Should nine or ten men handle the fish, at the small margin of profit allowed by the Food Controller there would be nothing in it for any one. This, he continued, is a question of securing for the people fish at reasonable prices. Middlemen must be cut out as much as possible. The stores mentioned in the report do not deliver fish. Mr. Steinburg does and also sells to other dealers. Mr. Pringle will refuse to handle the fish were Steinburg listed with him and the others.

In this connection Ald. Dobbin reported that the Food Controller is prepared to supply 600 lbs of Lake Erie herring, twice each week, at 10c a lb.

The inference to be derived from the objection to Mr. Steinburg is that as he does not keep a store but delivers fish, his competition with the other dealers would not be fair, as they cannot see that the margin of profit allowed on government fish would justify their delivering the same.

12th Anniversary Annex

TO-MORROW, NOV. 7TH

SEE WINDOWS SEE WINDOWS

OUR Great Bargain Department is twelve years old To-morrow, so we planned a fitting celebration to commemorate the establishment of this unique bargain section. The Peterboro public recognize the advantages that it offers, with the result that many households in the city and county annually reduced their expenditures. Often the question is asked "how are such low prices possible"?. We consider this an opportune time to reply. The Annex disposes of large quantities, and this in many cases permits us to deal direct with the manufacturers. The wholesalers and manufacturers allow a liberal discount for cash payments. This also reduces the price for the consumer. When the wholesalers and makers have travelers samples or broken lots to dispose of at the end of a season, the Annex has a reputation throughout the trade, as a suitable outlet for such lines.

A word about to-morrows list of merchandise. It is a noteworthy collection that has been assembled with a view to your requirements for the winter season. The prices are so exceptional that it will be decidely unprofitable for you to overlook any one item on this page. See windows for many of he sole lines.

INSPECTOR STAPLETON COMPLAINS—BUT HE REFUSED TO GIVE RECEIPT FOR SAMPLE

The City Council's Property Committee met in brief session last night. There were present Ald. Saunders presiding, Mayor Duffus, Ald. Smith, Dobbin, Langford, and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton.

On motion of Ald. Dobbin and Smith the chairman was authorized to have the 93rd band instruments put in repair at a cost not exceeding $10.

Flash Light For Inspector

On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Smith, the Sanitary Inspector was authorized to procure a flash light for his use in dark corners.

Hot Water Tank

In regard to a hot water tank for the police station, the matter was left in the hands of the chairman of committee, with power to act, he to see the chairman of the City Trust Commission.

Refused Sample of Milk

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton reported that he had been refused a sample of milk from the Pure Milk Co. This refusal was not made at the creamery, but by a driver, who refused the milk unless he received a receipt for same, which he declined.

The Committee declared milk wagon drivers were entitled to a receipt, as they are responsible to their employers for every half pint of milk disposed of. The Inspector was authorized to procure a receipt book and adopt the policy of giving a receipt for milk taken to test.

East Ward Main

The Board of Health recommended the complete construction of the 8 inch water main in East City as a sanitary measure. This will form a connecting water main between the East and the West, to the advantage of both, in the matter of fire protection especially.

OSHKIGMONG

(Special Correspondence)

Oshkigmong, Nov. 6.—Chief D. E. Whetung and wife and their son Floy Peter McCue and George Johnson, have returned from their automobile trip to the historic Kitch Chekekahbekah (falls) of Niagara and its famous city, Buffalo, Rochester and all intermediate cities and towns both in Ontario and across the borders. The party speaks highly of their trip to the States and appreciate the cordial reception they received from their American friends and hope some time in the near future the trip will be duplicated. One whole day was spent at Niagara, sight seeing, led by Mr. C. Swartz of the city. Messrs. Swartz and Childs showed no lack of hospitality while the party remained in Niagara. The Chief and his party made a flying visit to the Indian Reservation situated some distance from Niagara and had a brief talk with the Chief of that place.

The "Tin Lizzard" (as the Chief calls his auto car) did its duty remarkably well and made nine hundred miles without making a break, but on nearing its destination, the Lizzard felt disposed to make opposition to the progress the passengers were enjoying and finally came to a stand still regardless of its driver, somewhere in Ennismore. Fortunately a good samaritan happened to pass by the way, who at once understood the nature of the situation, gave some of his mechanical appliances and set the monster in motion once more, and sent the crew rejoicing on their way.

Mrs. George Goose who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. D. Taylor has returned to her home at Scugog.

Mrs. Sylvester Sawyer of this village has gone to Scugog to visit her friends there.

Mrs. D. Whetung, sr., has returned from a visit at Hiawatha.

Miss Lavina Whetung is visiting friends at Halls Bridge.

NO MORE GRAIN TO MAKE LIQUOR

ORDER IN COUNCIL PUTS BAN ON USE AFTER NOVEMBER 30

Ottawa, Nov. 6.—No grain of any kind and no substance that can be used for food shall be used in Canada after November 30 for the distillation of potable liquors. An order in Council to this effect has been passed upon the recommendation of the Food Controller. It will remain in force "until the Governor-General in Council has by order declared that the present abnormal conditions have ceased." The penalty for violation of the regulation is a fine of up to $5,000, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Under an order in Council of August 9, the use of wheat for distillation or manufacture of alcohol was prohibited, except that the Food Controller may license the use of wheat in the distillation of alcohol for manufacturing or munitions purposes. The new order will save for food purposes considerable quantities of barley, corn and rye, although for months the distilleries have been using these grains principally in the manufacture of industrial alcohol and not for beverages.

2. With a view to the protection of the community against the transmission of venereal disease, all members of the Canadian expeditionary force shall submit to blood examinations when so required by superior authority.

3. Notwithstanding the foregoing provision, and in addition thereto, it shall be an offence cognizable by a court-martial, for a solider belonging to the Canadian expeditionary force to refuse to be inoculated or vaccinated, or to submit to the blood examinations above-mentioned and for such offence he shall, on conviction, be subject to the penalty provided for an offence under section 18 of the Army Act.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

IN MANY INSTANCES BALL TEAMS MAKE A MANAGER

But Christy Mathewson Is One Who Has Not Been Made in This Way

Clarence Rowland, because the White Sox won the world's championship, has been hailed as the greatest manager in the game. But if the Giants had defeated the White Sox, Chicago fans probably would have renewed their clamor for Rowland's scalp. McGraw was unjustly blamed in some quarters for the downfall of the Giants. In Boston Jack Barry was scored for the failure of the Red Sox to repeat, while George Stallings, the Miracle Man of 1914, was held responsible for the terrific slump of the Braves. Fielder Jones was panned all season because the Browns were in the cellar. Connie Mack again was ridiculed for the low standing of the Athletics. Bill Donovan was released because the Yankees finished in the second division, while Miller Huggins was engaged to fill his place for the season that the St. Louis Cardinals landed in third position. Wilbert Robinson was the "Master Mind" when the Brooklyns won the pennant in 1916, but he was helpless last reason. Jimmy Callahan was removed from the management of the Pirates last June, but his successor, Hugh Bezdek, couldn't get them out of last place.

MATHEWSON ONE OF THE EXCEPTIONS

The above facts are related to strengthen the argument that in many cases winning ball clubs make managers. But, as usual, there are exceptions to this rule. One of them is Christy Mathewson, who took hold of the Cincinnati Reds when they seemed hopelessly disorganized and in one season rounded them into a first division club. Pat Moran is another exception. He won the 1915 pennant with the Phillies, who had been in the also ran class for many years. McGraw built up the Giants from tail-enders in 1915 to pennant winners this year simply by welding together conflicting elements. McGraw exercised rare judgment in selecting star players, who were purchased by President Hempstead. It has been a time honored custom to hold a manager responsible for the showing of [illegible] club, but in numerous instances the players have been to blame for the criticism aimed at their leaders.

More Self Denial and Sacrifice is Needed

SIR THOMAS WHITE EXPLAINS FINANCIAL SITUATION TO MANUFACTURERS

Toronto, Nov. 6—In an earnest plea before about 150 members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in the board of trade rooms yesterday afternoon Sir Thomas White, minister of finance, told of the reversal of the financial situation brought about by over three years of war.

Before the war the pound sterling was king but now, owing to the vast drains on the resources of Great Britain, through loans to her allies with which to carry on the war, her credit was now so strained that, on this side of the Atlantic at least, the dollar had replaced the pound

It rested with the people of Canada, he said, to save through self sacrifice and self-denial, to rehabilitate Britain's credit.

"If we cannot save the money with which to secure credit for Britain then we will be unable to sell our surplus to Britain," he said.

Sir Thomas stated that in view of the war financing of the American Government in its Liberty Loan issues, it is his desire that the Canadian Victory Loan, 1917, should not be promoted in the United States. No commissions will be given, consequently, for obtaining American subscriptions.

The Hotel Frontenac annex on Round Island in the St. Lawrence River, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

THE LAW MUST BE OBEYED

The fight the Allies are making against Germany is a fight to enforce the law. They believe that laws are passed to be enforced and they are willing to lose hundreds of thousands of men in forcing respect for the law upon Germany.

The spirit of the Allies is a spirit intolerant of lawlessness, which will use the whole national power if need be to enforce respect for the law. What keeps the Allies fighting and binds them together is a common determination that the time will come sooner or later, when Germany will respect international law, which now she disregards at will.

It goes without saying that each Allied country will enforce at home respect for the laws it passes and will punish severely all those who break such laws. Canada's attitude will be shown, if need be, in the enforcement of respect for the Military Service Act.

American Army to go to Aid of Italians?

CONFERENCE OF ENTENTE LEADERS BELIEVED TO MEAN THAT

Washington, Nov. 6.—The fact that a conference was held at Paris between General Pershing and the British Premier, Lloyd George, while the latter was on his way to Italy, leads to the belief that the American troops in France will be sent to the Italian front. This action would, it is felt, have a tremendous heartening effect on the Italians, who have felt that Italy has not received sufficient support from this country.

Guy Fawkes' Night Observed in Omemee

(Special to The Review.)

Omemee, Nov. 6.—The annual celebration of the frustration of the gun powder plot, was duly celebrated by boys, big and small, on the night of Nov. 5th when a grand torch light procession made up of Indian, cowboys, negroes, and characters in costume too numerous to mention, followed up by the family mourners of the never to be forgotten dare-devil, "Guy Fawkes," was held. The main street was thronged with people from early evening, who came from near and far annually to visit the village and participate in the big night with the youths of the countryside.

About 9 p.m. the parade started from the east end of the village up main street and then to "Sandy Point" via George street. The blushing maidens did not lack escort of the masked variety. One feature of the affair which was particularly noticeable was that the notorious "Guy" this year wore a spiked helmet, the spike shining out as the flames rose around his. So ended Nov. 5th, 1917, in Omemee.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—Where there is only one son remaining of a family and his brothers are all at the front his claim for exemption, made before the proper tribunal will not be opposed. Where two or more sons have gone from a household the claims of remaining brothers for exemption may also be allowed. These are the instructions received by the local boards from Ottawa today.

AFTERNOON TEA FOR RED CROSS

FOUR YOUNG LADIES REALIZE $54 FROM GARDEN PLOT—WILL GIVE TEA TO SUPPLEMENT AMOUNT

Four loyal and patriotic young ladies of this city, with the commendable object of raising funds for the Red Cross in view, undertook to work a garden lot on Alberta street themselves this summer. They named the plot of ground "Overall Farm," which they planted, hoed and reaped without any assistance whatever, frequently rising as early as six o'clock in the morning to commence their self-imposed labors in a worthy cause, and as a result they realized $54 worth of vegetables, which they disposed of through their own agency.

The young ladies in question are the Misses Mabel Patterson, Helen MacLaren, Irene Scott and Jessie Cressman, who, now disappointed in the outcome of their farming exertions (but they should not be), will give an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Hunter street, on Saturday, November 10th. A musical program will be provided, and a voluntary collection invited, the proceeds to go toward supplementing the $54 already realized in aid of the Red Cross.

Lost a Diamond Valued at $400

BUT FRANK MONTGOMERY RECOVERED THE PRECIOUS JEWEL

On Saturday morning Mr. Frank Montgomery, proprietor of the Montgomery House, Simcoe street, missed a $400 diamond out of his ring. The stone had loosend from its setting, and Frank was not sure if he had lost it in the house or on the street. The premises were searched high and low in frantic despair, but no diamond was to be seen. In the afternoon, however, a farmer's boy saw something glittering on the sitting room floor. He picked it up and on being told the stone was a $400 diamond, nearly fainted, it is said. And no wonder, with coal unpurchasable and $400 diamonds lying around loose on hotel floors it's enough to shock the senses out of the strongest-minded.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

PRISONERS MAY ESCAPE

They have a chance to get away from their prison. But if the eyesight has failed in any way, there is no sliding out of the responsibility of having the eyes cared for. Neglecting them while waiting for them to improve by themselves will only aggravate the distress and make the final lens adjustment more complicated and expensive. Better get away from the trouble by letting Dr. Fowler examine the eyes and tell you what they need.

"REDEMPTION" THE SAME OLD STORY OF WOMAN'S WRONGS

Photoplay Now Running at Grand Shows How Erring Woman May Redeem Herself, but Process is Beset With Difficulties.

"Redemption," the story that is told on the films now being shown in the Grand Opera House is the same old recital of human experience. It demonstrates that the woman who has sinned may be able to work out her own temporal redemption but the process is slow and painful. At every corner she turns she is likely to bump up into her former record or meet up with a Pharisee with his pockets full of rocks ready to stone her. The plot also reveals that truism that while the woman is put on the pillory the man who sinned with her not only escapes, but is prone to plume himself on his righteousness when he publishes the guilt of his unfortunate partner from the housetops.

The pictured story of Evelyn Nesbitt, the heroine of "Redemption," is based on the career of Harry K Thaw and his butterfly spouse, although the details are not followed very closely. The original of the late Stanford White, instead of getting his fate from the muzzle of a revolver, escapes with the inconvenience of a personal encounter, but in other respects he plays the part of the unprincipled but polished New York man of the world who regards every woman as his lawful prey. He pursues the woman who is striving to live down her past, and denounces her by reason of her early sins when her path crosses that of his own children. Man's arrogant selfishness and woman's power of sacrifice on behalf of her child are admirably portrayed on the screen.

To photo play is one that seems popular—as it should be—with the women of the city, as it is another recital of human experience in which womanhood receives something more to the purpose than mere poetic justice. The matinee audience yesterday was large, and the house was filled again last night. The exhibition will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night, with a matinee each day.

TO HOLD ALOOF FROM POLITICS

VETERANS' EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE ISSUE A MANIFESTO ON ELECTION

Sergt. W. E. Turley, secretary of the Toronto branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, was appointed today organizing secretary of the Ontario Provincial branch of the organization, but will not sever his connection with the local branch for some time yet.

On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Provincial branch of the G. W. V. A., he has issued the following manifesto:

"That no branch of the G. W. V. A. should nominate any member or private citizen for Parliament. The G. W. V. A. is a non-political association, and intends to remain such. Once we nominate a man for Parliamentary honors we have departed from our general policy, and have taken action contrary to the spirit of our constitution.

"Great war veterans should endorse any man who is selected by representative organizations supporting the Union Government war-winning policies, and should concentrate their efforts to secure his election.

"It is necessary to the development and power of the Great War Veterans' Association that we should hold ourselves aloof from any political alliance, thus maintaining the right to criticize any candidate for or elected representative to Parliament, whose action on any public matter is not in accordance with our ideals.

"Local branches may send delegates to a non-party convention called for the purpose of nominating a suitable candidate, who will support the enforcement of the Military Service Act, and all other such measures as shall tend to win the war."

"MY IRISH CINDERELLA"

With Daisy Carleton as "Peggy"

The Grand Theatre will offer a new play to its patrons next Saturday when "My Irish Cinderella" will be seen at this popular playhouse. "My Irish Cinderella" is a play that goes right home to the average audience because the story it tells rings true.

Peggy McNeil a slip of an Irish girl living in a poor house in New York is taken to London by Wingate Earl, the nephew of the Earl of Lonsdale, Peggy is passed off on the old Earl as his grand child by the nephew who is plotting to get control of the Earl's estate when he dies. After living in the home of the Earl a short time Peggy has changed from the rough little Irish girl and Wingate Earl falls in love with her and seeks to marry her, and as time passes it looks as though Peggy reciprocated all his attentions but, she meets a young American aviator, who has been serving his country and her admiration for him ripens into a love that sounds the deathknell of Wingate Earl's love affair. But this is only a hint at the big love interest in the play and how it has been worked out through many interesting scenes. Some of the big scenes in the play are said to be thrilling yet it sparkles with brilliant Irish wit and humor.

Miss Daisy Carleton as Peggy will introduce several big song hits during the action of the play, including "There's Something In The Name of Ireland," "My Irish Cinderella" and "Over In Erin."

CANADA'S SOLDIERS IN TRIUMPHAL ADVANCE WIN THREE POSITIONS

W. A. Willison, Special Correspondent of The Canadian Press, Describes the Capture of Towns by Canadians in Recent Operations.

(By W. A. Willison)

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, Nov. 6. — In another great advance along their whole front, the Canadians seem to have taken Passchendaele, Goudberg and Mosselmarkt. If this is so, no more signal triumph has been won in the whole history of the Canadian corps. Our divisions will have more than settled the old score on St. Julien. Dominating Roulers and Roulers plain, Passchendaele would give the allied forces a firm footing on the series of great spurs extending from Gheluvelt on the south, including Bellevue Spur and Passchendaele Ridge, running northeast for miles. Possession of Passchendaele would mark a great triumph in the long struggle to secure possession of this higher ground. It would give the Allies the advantage of position in the salient and relegate the Boche to the lower levels dominated by our guns.

At six o'clock this morning our guns opened a tremendous barrage fire, and two minutes later men from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and western and eastern Ontario were out of their shell holes and temporary mud wall trenches in an advance which by 7:30 had carried them beyond their objectives. It was an artillery and machine gun battle. For an hour and a half our guns were never silent. Protected by a splendid barrage our infantry moved slowly forward while our counter-batteries dominated the enemy's guns and swept his assembled artillery positions with their fire.

Knowing too well the vital necessity of maintaining the Passchendaele position secure, Hindenburg, after the successful Canadian advances of Bellevue Spur and the capture

Capt. Burnham Makes A Proposition

To the Editor of The Review:

Some two years ago I was selected by the Conservatives of West Peterborough as their candidate at the next election. Since then a Union Government has been formed by the Prime Minister. Immediately upon its formation I submitted my support of it to the Prime Minister, and was thanked by him. I also communicated with the executive committee of the Conservative Association of West Peterborough, and my action was approved by it. The committee also pledged its support of the Union Government and of my candidature, on behalf of the Association which it represents, as it has power to do under the constitution and bylaws of the Association, made and adopted by a full convention. As the matter stands at present, therefore, I am a duly accredited Union Government candidate—"a" Union Government candidate, you will observe, not "the" Union Government candidate—and only the candidate chosen by the Conservatives of West Peterborough. If no one else comes out, there would be an election by acclamation. But it is open to the Liberal Association to do precisely as we have done, and if the Liberal Association selects as their standard-bearer a supporter of the Union Government, then it will be up to both of us to see which of us is to withdraw, if it should be deemed necessary for either of us to do so. In the event of our being the only candidates, it might be considered desirable, however, that both of us should remain in the field, both getting the blessing of the Union Government, since whichever one was elected, he would be a supporter of the Union Government.

This might be considered desirable, since it cannot be denied that whoever is elected now will have the better chance at the election after the war of being again elected. Therefore it is plain that both parties might like, if no harm is done now to the cause, to have both Union candidates remain in the field.

But the question takes on a different complexion when the possibility arises—as appears to be the case—of the Liberal conventions selecting a Laurier candidate, and not a Union candidate.

I ventured to write to The Examiner yesterday, stating our case, and asking about the prospect, but did not get an answer, although there was a courteous reply.

This letter to you now is to let it be known, therefore, just where I stand and just where, doubtless, the Conservative executive and Association stand, viz.: for a compromise, if need be, on a Union Government candidate, but for no compromise if the Liberal convention choose a straight Laurier candidate.

If any other recognized party, such as the Labor party, for example, wishes to nominate a man, similar considerations would, no doubt, arise. When two gentlemen went about recently in the two ridings (as your correspondent pointed out), asking that all party candidates should be banished and that they themselves should be chosen as representatives, they failed to see the peculiarity of the position in which they placed themselves. It is not necessary to say more about that.

To conclude, therefore, let me repeat that we hope all parties will join in choosing one or more Union Government candidates. We are ready to consider any such proposition from any recognized convention. But manifestly there cannot be any compromise with an opponent of the Borden Union Government, nor with people nominating themselves for the position on the pretence of being exclusively the only reliable win-the-war champions or on any other similar and somewhat specious pretext.

A copy of this letter is being sent to the Liberal Association.

GERMANS MAKING NO ATTEMPT TO RETAKE GROUND LOST YESTERDAY

British Consolidate Themselves in New Position and Intermittent Artillery Fire is Only Operation Today—Huns Lose Heavily on Verdun Front.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 7.—The Germans made no effort during the night to regain the ground captured yesterday on the Ypres front by the British. On the battle front there is nothing to report except intermittant German artillery operations says today's official statement. Our troops have been engaged in consolidating the positions won in yesterday's attack. A successful raid was carried out last night by Liverpool troops northwest of Queant. We captured a few prisoners.

SACRIFICED SOLDIER.

Paris, Nov. 7.—The Germans lost many men last night in vain attacks on the Verdun front at Chaume Wood also near St. Quentin and northwest of Rheims. Artillery is active at all fronts.

Huns Pursue Italians.

Berlin (via London) Nov. 7.—The Germans are continuing their pursuit of the Italians, and have taken more prisoners, the war office announces. "In the mountains and on the Venetian plain the pursuit is being continued," says the statement. "Some thousands of prisoners have been brought in."

Where Germans Fail.

Rome, Tuesday.—The German plan has failed in regard to its political objective, says a semi-official statement issued here today. "Strong confidence is felt hat it will fail to accomplish its military object."

British Take Gaza.

London, Nov. 7.—The war office announces that the British in Palestine have captured Gaza from the Turkish forces.

Italians Retire.

Rome, Nov. 7. — The Italians have withdrawn in good order from the Tagliamento River toward the Livenza, it is announced officially.

VICTORY LOAN BONDS WILL BE ISSUED AT PAR

RATE OF INTEREST TO BE PAID IS FIVE AND A HALF PER CENT.

FIVE, TEN, TWENTY YEAR SERIES

SIR THOMAS WHITE ISSUES FULL STATEMENT OF CONDITIONS.

Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, yesterday announced the particulars and terms of Canada's Victory Loan, as follows:

Subscription books will be open on Monday, Nov. 12, for five, ten and twenty-year bonds, dated Dec. 1st, 1917. Interest payable half yearly—June 1 and Dec. 1. Bonds will be in denominations as low as $50. The price of the new loan is to be par—100 cents on the dollar—for 5½ per cent. bonds, with the privilege of spreading the payments over a period of five months in monthly instalments. In view of this privilege of spreading the payments, and as a full six months' interest will be paid the purchasers on June 1, 1918, the bonus of interest thus allowed will reduce the price so that the bonds yield the investor 5.61 per cent. on the 20-yea rbonds, 5.68 per cent. on the 10-year bonds, and 5.81 per cent. on the 5-year bonds. This loan will carry conversion privileges into future issues, and will be free of any present or future Dominion taxes—including income tax.

Surrender Privilege.

War loan bonds due Oct. 31, 1931, at 97½ and accrued interest.

War loan bonds due March 1, 1937, at 96 and accrued interest.

These will be accepted in part payment for bonds of the 1937 maturity only of this issue.

HYLAN HAS LEAD OF OVER 148,000 FOR MAYORALTY

LARGEST PLURALITY EVER GIVEN A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR IN NEW YORK.

ALIEN VOTE DECIDING FACTOR

PROHIBITION WINS IN THREE STATES, EQUAL SUFFRAGE IN ONE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Nov. 7.—This morning revised reports indicate that Judge Hylan, Tammany candidate, has a plurality of 148,178 as mayor of New York City, and practically all civic organizations are in control of Tammany.

Ohio in Doubt.

Cincinnati, Nov. 7.—Contrary to last night's reports, there is this morning considerable doubt regarding the result of the voting on the prohibition measure in this state yesterday. At an early hour this morning there was ten thousand of a majority against prohibition with two notably dry counties to hear from. Woman's suffrage is undoubtedly decisively beaten in this state.

Records Broken.

This is the largest plurality ever given a mayoralty candidate in the city's history. Van Wyck won in 1897, the first city election after consolidation, by only 80,316, and Mayor Mitchell, now defeated for re-election, carried the city four years ago by 121,209.

These figures are exclusive of the soldier vote which will not be known probably for some weeks.

In the general Democratic sweep there was one slight rift. Merion E. Lewis, Republican, the only State officer running this year, is re-elected attorney-general. Though Devoe P. Hodson, Democrat, carried the city for that office by about 72,000, Mr. Lewis' up-State majority is not less than 200,000, leaving him a victor by a large plurality.

General Rioting Occurs.

General rioting marked the voting in all the Socialist strongholds of the city.

Almost Clean Sweep.

All the Tammany candidates in New York city were elected with one exception, Merion Lewis, Republican, being re-elected attorney-general.

LIBERALS TO HOLD CONVENTION IN VICTORIA HALL SATURDAY P.M.

Decision Was Reached At Meeting of Executive Committee Last Night.

The executive committee of the Liberal Association held a meeting at the Empress Hotel last night and decided to hold a convention of the party in Victoria Hall at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. A straight Laurier candidate will be nominated unless all signs fail and it seems to be a foregone conclusion that Mr. R. R. Hall will be the convention's choice for the sacrifice. Before conscription becomes an issue and the Liberal party went to pieces on that rock there were at least half a dozen aspirants for the nomination, but enthusiasm has died down with unevitable defeat staring the Liberals in the face. So far as the other prominent aspirants are concerned Mr. Hall can have the nominations and welcome. At the meeting last night it was realized that the soldiers votes and the votes of their newly enfranchized relatives will be a serious consideration in the coming election and an obstacle to Liberal success. How to overcome it is a problem that the members of the committee were unable to solve.

May Separate Little Ones From Parents

Mr. George Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, made a trip to Centre Dummer yesterday investigating conditions in that locality. One family, consisting of mother, father, and three children ranging in age from three to ten years, he found living in a state of wretched poverty without access to the needs for either their physical or moral welfare. The mother is mentally defective, but the children are mentally bright and intelligent, and Mr. Powell is afraid that he will be justified by the conditions found in removing the little ones to the Children's Shelter here.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER WILL BE PLEASED TO COME

Capt. Burnham today received a lengthy letter from Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in which the Minister discusses the political situation. He gladly accepts the invitation to address a mass meeting here in company with Hon. F. B. Carvell in the interests of the Union government. The date of the meeting will be announced later, probably for the 20th inst.

HOUSE REJECTS PEACE OFFERS

London, Nov. 7.—A. J. Balfour Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying in the House of Commons to a peace motion proposed by H. B. Lees-Smith, Liberal member for Northampton, declared:

"The aims for which Great Britain entered the war were not and are not either Imperialistic or vindictive, but one and all are needed for the double purpose of the emancipation and security of Europe."

Mr. Balfour asked the House to show by an overwhelming majority that: "We believe in the cause for which we are struggling and which we know we can bring to a successful termination. . . Great as are the sacrifices already made, we are ready to continue them, and continue them indefinitely, until the great, righteous and unselfish objects we have in view are finally secured."

Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, amid loud cheers moved closure, which was carried 282 to 33.

Mr. Lees-Smith's motion was then negatived without division.

City Coal Committee In Search Of Fuel

Aldermen Dobbin and Stratton are out of the city today on a visit to Toronto and maybe Buffalo in search of information as to just what the prospects are for keeping the city's coal yard supplied this winter.

They left with the full determination to leave no stone unturned to find relief for the present acute situation in regard to fuel.

74 YEARS OLD AND CLAIMED EXEMPTION

HE WAS ALSO LOOKING FOR MEDICAL EXAMINATION AT THE ARMORIES.

ONLY 29 REPORTED FOR SERVICE

621 HAVE NOW CLAIMED EXEMPTION AT THE PETERBORO POST OFFICE.

The total number of applications at the post office, up to eleven thirty this morning, for exemption claim d for service. Yesterday was a busy forms was 621. Only 29 have reportday for this department of registration under the Military Service Act, 65 calling for exemption blanks and three A men signing up in readiness for the call. This morning, however, saw a lull in applicants, but 11 presenting themselves, and they were in search of exemption.

74 and Claimed Exemption.

An old man yesterday put in an appearance in Past Master Edgar's sanctum and demanded an exemption claim blank. He quite understood, he said, that all, no matter how old, had to either prove their claim to exemption or report for duty. Earlier in the day he had appeared at the armories and enquired of Sergeant Pollock where he could be medically examined. The latter asked him how old he was, and he replied 74 and seemed surprised when informed that he need not bother the medical examiners.

Another man, aged 37, applied at the post office for an exemption paper, and on being told he was not in the class said his employer had sent him up to claim exemption, and he was going to comply. Postmaster Edgar let him have a blank, which he filled in, and which has been sent to headquarters in the usual way. Neither these two men nor the employer referred to read the papers, evidently.

Alleged Bigamist Taken to Toronto

Detective Meagher left for Toronto this morning on the 7.35 C. P. R. train, with Frederick Oaks, committed for trial, a couple of weeks ago by Police Magistrate Dumble, on a charge of bigamy. The object of the trip is to take the evidence of Rev. Mr. Plummer, who officiated at Oak's second marriage, the reverend gentleman being too advanced in years to be present at the coming trial in Peterborough.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1917

THE NEW YORK ELECTION.

JUDGE HYLAN, the Tammany Hall candidate, was elected yesterday mayor of New York by a plurality of 100,000 over his opponet, Mayor Mitchell, who was the nominee of the Fusion party. The election campaign was one of the most bitter ever held in New York, where political animosity is warmer than in any other place under the sun. The war was the issue, really, and the anti-war party has won by a tremendous margin. The election in New York yesterday, second in importance only to that of the contest for the Presidency, is valuable as a barometer of public sentiment. It is an indication, too, of what could be expected if the coming election in Canada were held under similar conditions.

The war party has not been defeated in New York by the votes of the best American citizens. In that city the aliens are in the majority, and it was the alien vote that elected Judge Hylan. The alien is the slacker and the opponent of conscription. Pro-Germans marched to the polls in New York yesterday in solid phalanx, under flying banners, and killed the votes cast by native-born Americans. They voted against the United States taking any part in the war.

Aliens in Canada would do likewise, but fortunately for this country the aliens have been deprived of the opportunity to dictate the policy of the country and to take the management of national affairs out of the hands of the Canadian people.

In the case of a house being consumed by fire, the volunteers who rush in to help save the furniture are not all to be trusted. Some of them may simply be intent on enriching themselves by appropriating all valuables that are easily portable.

FABLES AND FOIBLES.

> A responsible public man will not peddle such gossip as that relating to a "saw-off." The Examiner has said nothing about a "saw-off" between East and West Peterborough; that is one of the fables such as Mr. Burnham's organ is inventing day after day.—The Examiner.

WHEN RIP VAN WINKLE awoke from his somewhat protracted slumber he no doubt regarded as a fable the story of the American revolution when it was first told him. Those who slumber while others toil are always skeptical of events that transpire while they themselves are dead to the world.

For the benefit of our cynical neighbor we will state that the saw-off proposition was actually broached to Mr J. E. Sexsmith while he was in this city last Thursday evening. It was made to him by a prominent Liberal in the presence of a representative of The Review. That should be conclusive evidence that the story, which was talked about everywhere, was not a fable. The Examiner, however, is apparently opposed to dice-box politics, relying as it does upon another agency.

The statement that Col. T. J. Johnston proposed to run as an independent candidate was authorized by himself. It was a matter of news that escaped our phlegmatic contemporary, and on that account is probably jeered at as another fable in that quarter. But it was nothing of the kind.

At all events, even a fable is interesting, and generally conveys a moral, two virtues that are not detected in those dreary and ill-natured political homilies that The Examiner inflicts on its readers day after day.

Judging from our contemporary's attitude, the public is justified in the conclusion that it has lost the confidence of the party and is skulking in its tent.

YESTERDAY'S ELECTION.

THE HAND OF THE ALIEN can be traced in every election held in the United States yesterday. In those States where they are numerically strong they carried the day, evidently banding together and voting together for a purpose. In New York City alone the American was swamped by the copperhead vote. In Ohio, Delaware, New Mexico and New Jersey the anti-war party in all cases met with signal defeat. In all of these States, too, with the exception of New Jersey, prohibition was given a majority vote. In the latter State, where in some of the cities there are large numbers of Italians, the temperance movement received a setback, and the reverse is attributed to their vote.

It is significant that it is only the pro-German vote that was registered against the war party. The natives of the nations of the Allied Powers are for the war. It is the pro-German voter alone who has been disfranchised in Canada.

In the United States the leading newspapers have been commending the action of the Canadian Government in dealing with the alien vote. Many of the papers suggest that similar action be taken in some of the American States, in which the pro-German element seems to hold the balance of power.

A RECORD OF THE WAR.

THE OFFICER in charge of Canadian War Records has asked us to make known that it is desired to compile a complete history in photograph of the Canadians' share in the war, in the same way that all other belligerent countries are compiling similar records.

It is particularly desired to obtain photographs of all officers, N. C. O.'s and men who have served or are now serving in the overseas military forces of Canada, and it is requested that an appeal should be made to this end through these columns.

All officers and other ranks serving overseas may find it difficult to send in their photographs, and their relatives are, therefore, especially appealed to, to send in their photographs for them.

By preference, the photographs should be unmounted, and printed on bromide paper, in order to ensure permanence. Each photograph should be accompanied by a concise record, not exceeding two or three hundred words, of the subject's military career, including date of enlistment, promotions, distinctions, and so on, as this will greatly assist in obtaining a full and accurate record of all concerned.

In addition, it is desired to collect all photographs dealing with the mobilization, training and departure of troops, together with pictures illustrating reviews, sports, presentations, etc. Any photograph of this nature is regarded as a document of historical importance, and it is hoped that the possessors of all such photographs will deem it their duty to send either the originals or copies, which will be ultimately placed in the permanent public archives of the Dominion.

All photographs, which will be acknowledged, should be addressed to the Officer in charge Canadian War Records, 14 Clifford St., Bond St., London, W.1., England.

AS SEEN FROM OUTSIDE.

(Chicago News.)

A GENERAL Parliamentary election is to be held in Canada on December 17th. This announcement, just made by the Dominion Government, is not wholly unexpected, although when Premier Borden succeeded in inducing several prominent Liberal statesmen to enter a coalition or national ministry many persons thought a general election might be avoided.

For a year or more the overshadowing political issue in Canada has been conscription for the sake of efficient and vigorous mobilization of the resources of the Dominion in its support of the Mother Country. On this issue the Liberal party split, many leading members declining to follow Sir Wilfrid Laurier in opposing conscription. The reconstruction of the Cabinet has relieved the political situation, but there is still much unrest and uncertainty in the country, and the Government is hampered in its effort to enforce the Conscription Act.

The Coalition Government, therefore, has decided to appeal to the country and clear the political atmosphere. The chief issue still is conscription as a policy aiming at effective organization of the military as well as of the industrial resources of Canada. The fight cannot, therefore, be a straight party fight.

There are various issues in the campaign not connected with the world war. The Borden Government, as it stood prior to the recent organization, was under fire from several directions. It was charged with general inefficiency, and weakness in failing to resist spoils raids on the public treasury. It was denounced as lacking in constructive vision, ability and progressivism.

Premier Borden, however, has adopted a progressive and constructive platform. He has promised the further extension of woman suffrage—only a limited "war suffrage" having been granted recently to Canadian women. He stands for railroad consolidation and more economical and efficient railroad service. The outcome of the election is admitted to be doubtful, but a defeat for the Conservative party would not necessarily mean defeat of the war policies of Borden and his Liberal allies. Advocates of conscription expect in any event a majority in the popular branch of Parliament.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MOBILIZE for the big event—"December 17th."

NO COUNTRY now has a merely academic interest in the war. Quebec is not a country.

• • • •

"QUEBEC is still in the war," says a Montreal exchange. "Still" is certainly the word.

IT IS ONE THING to establish a civic coal yard. It is entirely another thing to lay in a stock.

• • • •

THERE ARE just two varieties of Laurierites. One is un-British and the other is pro-German.

• • • •

THE ALIEN VOTE, if given free rein, would do in Canada what it did in New York yesterday.

• • • •

WE CANNOT ALL go to the war, but we can do the next best thing, and vote and work for the Union Government.

• • • •

FREEDOM OF SPEECH vindicates itself daily. But for it the Laurier Liberals would not be able to expose themselves.

• • • •

THE AMERICAN people are for the war heart and soul, as shown by the election yesterday. The alien has established for himself a different record.

IT MAY NOT BE patriotic to buy your girl candy, but the embargo does not hold with regard to the movies and other places of entertainment.

AN EXCHANGE says that there are 33,000 feeble-minded persons in New York State. Judging from the mayoralty returns yesterday, they appear to be pretty well segregated in the city of that name.

How To Be Your Own Palace

I have lately been thinking much about that wonderful line of John Donne's:

"Be thy own palace, or all the world's thy jail."

Donne is not a modern psychologist. He was a poet who lived and sang long before the science of psychology was ever heard of. He was, in fact, a contemporary of Shakespeare's.

And, like Shakespeare, he was a master student of human life, giving expression to truths vital to mankind but to which most men paid all too little heed.

Among the people whom I have met is a certain millionaire, a millionaire many times over.

He owns a magnificent city home, a veritable palace. He owns several beautiful country estates. He owns automobiles innumerable. And he has a retinue of servants at his beck and call.

Yet he has found it impossible to settle down and enjoy his leisure. He is nervous, he suffers from sleeplessness, he is forever moving feverishly from place to place.

Before the war he was a persistent tourist in Europe. Nowhere did he remain long in any one city or country.

Back and forth between America and Europe he voyaged, like some prisoner pacing restlessly up and down in an enormous jail.

The trouble with this man, though he does not know it, is that he has failed lamentably to be his own palace.

He has given years to amassing the kind of wealth represented by his manifold material possessions. He has given scarcely as many days to accumulating true personal riches.

He is totally uninterested in literature, art, music, philosophy, the sciences, the beauties and wonders of nature. His ego is a miserable hovel, not a palace.

The world is full of men conditioned like this.

They may not be as wealthy as the millionaire. Few of them are. But like him they have neglected to amass wealth of the spirit.

Contrasting with them, pleasantly contrasting, there are some men, even men living in tenements, who live joyous and free because they are their own palaces.

Never are they at a loss for mind-filling, soul-satisfying occupation. They do not need to harry themselves all over the world in quest of the blue bird of happiness.

It comes fluttering to them in the pages of a book, in a quiet corner of some art gallery, in the trees of a park, in the sights and sounds of the street.

Free men? Of course these are free men, the freest in the world.

There are worse evils than poverty. There are better things, far better things, than material wealth.

"Be thy own palace, or all the world's thy jail."

Wit and Wisdom

Excellent Practice

"Little Stanley's writing shows a remarkable improvement," said Mr Wilberry, smiling in pleasure as he surveyed his son's lesson book. "His writing was quite his weakest point. I suppose it is the reward I promised him which is making him practise?"

"No", said Mrs. Wilberry laconically.

"But I'm sure he's been practising—and pretty hard, too."

"Yes; but it wasn't because of your reward. He practises for two hours every day now; but it was I who thought out the scheme for making him do so."

"Indeed! What was the scheme?"

"I told him to make out a list of everything he wanted for Christmas!"

Employee—"I've just been married air, and would like a rise in my salary."

Employer—"Sorry, young man, but we aren't responsible for accidents unless they happen in the works!"

She (gazing upward)—"How very bright the stars are tonight, Mr. Sampson!"

He (promptly)— "They are not brighter, Miss Clara, than—than—"

She (softly)— "Than what, Mr. Sampson?"

He—"Than they were last night."

Diplomacy

A policeman popped his head inside a crowded car.

"Excuse me, ladies and gentlemen" he said, "but there are two swell thieves in here."

"Dear me!" cried a nervous-looking individual, in shocked tones. "I can not risk my reputation in here."

Up jumped another gentleman with a gold watch chain and white waist coat.

"I must get out at once," he said. "I have just taken some money out of the bank, and I won't chance being robbed."

"It's all right now, drive on; they've both got out."

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

Seventeen years ago today was election day in Canada. Mr. James Kendry was re-elected over Mr. J. H. McClellan by a majority of 336 in town and 18 in the townships, the largest margin ever given a Conservative candidate in this riding. Mr. J. E. Sexsmith made a game fight in East Peterborough, but Mr. Laing's majority was about 300. Sir Wilfrid Laurier carried 59 of the 65 seats in Quebec, and was returned to power by a majority of about 46. Ontario elected 54 Conservatives and 34 Liberals.

TODAY'S STORY

Here is an incident that Chanute man tells as having occurred in a Kansas town. He was in a ticket office and watched the proceedings. A man came to the window and asked for a ticket to Kansas City, inquiring the price.

"Two twenty-five," said the agent.

The man dug into a well worn pocket book and fished out a bank note for $2. It was all the money he had.

"How soon does this train go?" he inquired.

"In fifteen minutes," replied the agent.

The man hurried away. Soon he was back with three silver dollars, with which he bought a ticket.

"Pardon my curiosity," said the ticket seller, "but how did you get the money? It isn't a loan, for I see you have disposed of the $2 bill."

"That's all right," said the man. "No, I didn't borrow. I went to a pawnshop and soaked the bill for $1.50. Then as I started back here I met an old acquaintance to whom I sold the pawn ticket for $1.50. I then had $3 and he had the pawn ticket for which the $2 bill stands as security."

A Woman's — Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. Margaret Grassman, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. George A. Dunbar, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. Kissling, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

He incidentally hints that "Livvy" would not be "without his e, and that he is not so enamored with the game that he would refuse a good price!" Sounds like something Eddie would cook up himself.

Good also takes a rap at the Ottawa club, alleging that the locals have changed front and that they were anxious to have a Toronto team . Again it looks as if the Toronto News sporting editor was listening to Eddie Livingstone. The Ottawa club stated at the outset that it would back up Quebec in the fight against the Toronto club, if the owner intended to continue in the race, and such has been their stand. At no time have they shown the least weakening in their position, but have remained with the other four clubs to the end.

Had not Eddie Livingstone stepped down and out, he would have been placed in a much worse position than he is in at present. His action was merely making the best of a bad job. When the new body had been formed, as it was proposed to be done, they could have declared all of the Toronto players free agents and the four clubs could have had their choice at the players' own terms. It was not the intention of the N.H.A. that the Toronto owner should lose any more money than he had already dropped when they made his franchise non-operative. In fact they were very solicitous on his behalf. Even now, it is not expected that they will refuse his waivers, giving him the chance to make as much money as he can on the sale of his players to help cover his deficit.

AUCTION AUTOGRAPH BASEBALL

A baseball bearing the signature of President Wilson was the novel memento put up at auction at a ball game which was played recently for the benefit of the nation's new regiments. The president's signature was secured by one of the congressmen on behalf of constituents who sought to obtain something out of the ordinary for the occasion. The ball was widely advertised and, on being offered to the highest bidder at the opening of the game, was sold for $151. It cost $1.25. The proceeds from the sale of tickets and the ball will be used to purchase delicacies for the regiment.

SPORTING NOTES

The T.C.S. rugby team, Port Hope, play a game in Lakefield tomorrow.

The minor leagues are finding much fault with their treatment at the hands of the big circuits. They say that it is impossible to get clear titles to promising young players.

Connie Mack declares that he will advocate new pitching rules calculated to do away with the shine ball and spitter.

Frank Chance is attending strictly to his orange grove at Glendora, Cal. He didn't see more than a dozen games in Los Angeles this year.

Among the best known members of the champion San Francisco team are Pick, formerly of the Atlantics; Hunter, who was traded by the Giants to the Cubs last year; Maisel, who once was tried by the Tigers; Corhan, a former Cardinal; Erickson, another Detroit castoff, and Baker, who was released by Hughey Jennings last year.

Centrals Win Two From The Leaders

Last night at the Water St. Bowling Alleys the Grocers, the league leaders, and the Centrals met in a five pin league match. The match was by far the best game of the season, and was witnessed by a number of bowling enthusiasts. Both teams were in fine rolling trim and some good scores were rolled. The Centrals won the 1st game by 22 pins, and the second game by 19 pins, the Grocers coming back and winning the third game by a 113 pin margin. For the Grocers, Outram and Ross were the stellar men: Outram 586 and Ross 545, with high single of 252 in 2nd game. Matthews was high for the Centrals with a 534 total and a 220 count in 2nd game.

The scores were as follows:

No Time To Waste.

Like true British workmen they were not for the moment doing anything particular. Some were smoking and lounging about with their hands in their pockets, on a site chosen for the erection of some new houses.

"I can't allow this idling," said the builder," coming up full of importance and ideas. "Come along; get to work."

"Can't go on, sir," replied a bricklayer, looking at his trowel with tender solicitude and affection; "we ain't got no plans yet."

"Plans?" echoed the builder, with scorn, "never mind about plans. Put a kitchen here," he explained, with a wave of his hand, "and a parlor there," pointing near to the imaginary kitchen; "they're bringing in the furniture next week. What's the good of wasting time? Get a move on you, men!"

ROUTINE BUSINESS BY BOARD OF EDUCATION

Various Matters Disposed of at Regular Session Last Night.

The members of the Board of Education, in regular session last night, disposed of a large amount of routine business with their usual dispatch. Those present were Messrs. Eastwood (chairman), Miller, McGrath, Fowler, Crane, Gordon, Neal and Denne.

Miss Edna Stubbs, one of the teaching staff, was granted sick leave until the end of the year. Mr. A. D. Hone reported his readiness to return to his place on the teaching staff of the Collegiate by the first of the year.

The Y.M.C.A. directors asked for an increase in the rent paid for the use of the gymnasium from $600 to $800 a year, but this was refused. The Board held that as the Y.M.C.A. is not taxed and enjoys other concessions, the present rental is high enough.

Another room will be opened in the Central School at the beginning of the year.

The school nurse reported 420 visits during the past month. Twenty-eight pupils were excluded for various reasons. There are five cases of scarlet fever, but all the patients are making favorable progress at the Isolation Hospital.

The number of students enrolled at the Collegiate Institute last month was 351, and the average attendance was 339.

The report of attendance at the various public schools was as follows:

	On Roll	Ave.
Central	450	406
Queen Alexandra	293	272
King Edward	459	403
Queen Mary	477	437
King George	286	259
South Central	398	320
Kindergarten	224	192
Total	2363	2149

The collection of portraits of graduates of the Collegiate Institute in the military service has been increased by the addition of enlarged photos of Lieut. Grant Mowat and Private Marvin Kennedy, both of whom were killed in action. Chairman Eastwood has presented a portrait of his son, Lieut. V. Eastwood, who has won the Military Cross.

POSSIBILITY THAT B MEN MAY GO UP TO A CATEGORY

If Found Fit for Fighting Units After Six Months Training—This Policy is in Force In England, and May be Adopted in Canada.

The examination tribunals will sit tomorrow Friday and Saturday to hear oral claims for exemption from military service. The earliest closing hour will be five p.m.

"The last day upon which a report for service or claim for exemption can be made is November 10. In order to meet the possible disinclination some men may feel to sign a form of application for exemption and to afford such men an opportunity of appearing in person before a tribunal to prefer the claim, tribunals are required by the proclamation to open their sittings on November 8. They will receive oral claims for exemption from men to whom the proclamation applies, or on their behalf, from their employers, business associates or near relatives, and few, if any, cases will be referred to them by registrars for disposition on each of these days.

But One Application.

"As the Act forbids more than one application for exemption by or at the instance of any man, tribunals will satisfy themselves that applicants who appear on these days in person to make application have not already done so, either through the post office or before another tribunal.

"Where, in the case of applications made in person, the tribunal has satisfied itself that the applicant has made no previous application, it will first obtain from the applicant the information called for on the forms of claim for exemption. The applicant may be asked to sign the form, but it is quite unimportant whether it is signed or not. It should, however, be dated and initialled by both members of the tribunal."

Should there be but few personal applications for exemption those claims will in all probability be disposed of at once. If the number is large it may be found advisable to devote the first one, two or three days to receiving claims and securing all particulars thereto. Disposition of the claims would be deferred until cases assigned by the registrar have been settled. The fact must not be lost sight of that the tribunals are active judicial bodies and any one attempting to use undue influence is liable to a very heavy penalty.

May Go Up One Automatically.

The Imperial authorities have abolished Category C entirely. All men estimated to be fit for fighting units after six months training will go into Category A, and Category C men will automatically be transferred into Category B for service on lines of communication in France, in the Army Medical Corps, or in forestry, railway and labor units. adopting this policy in Canada. If so, it would certainly not materially increase the combatting strength from Peerborough, as so far there have been only 107 men classed in Category B, and 98 in Category C. As yet, however, no word has been received from Ottawa in this regard.

TEN MILLIONS FOR C.N.R. STOCK

Ottawa, Nov. 7. The Government has settled its policy in regard to the C. N. R. The agreement will fix the maximum of the amount to be awarded the owners of the 60 millions of common stock taken over by the Government at $10,000,000, and will fix the date by which the award is to be made at or near the first of the year. No great time will therefore elapse before the amount is fixed and the new board of directors to be named by the Government in charge of the railway. The only name so far known in connection with this board is that of Hon. F. Cochrane.

of Crest Farm and Meetcheele, issued a special army order commanding that Passchendaele should be held at all costs, and if lost must be retaken. For days the enemy had been rushing up guns and new formations of troops to insure his hold on the position. His efforts proved unavailing. The best troops the enemy has give ground before our forces, who have moved steadily toward their objective since the beginning of the Passchendaele operations Oct. 25.

Details of the fighting are not yet to hand, but our forces on the right plunging toward Passchendaele have advanced well beyond the ruined village, overcoming the fortified enemy shell holes and concrete strong points in advance and capturing numerous machine gun positions which threatened our attack from the Passchendaele-Zonnebeke road to the village itself, where the enemy, from cellar and machine gun positions in the ruins, fought to break down our attack. To the left our infantry met with desperate opposition 75 yards in front of Meetcheele, where the enemy stronghold formed the key to their whole left position, as Meetcheele did to ours. Mosselmarkt was the scene of another determined resistance.

THE WAY OUT.

Perhaps You Don't Know How to Save What You Can't Can.

When you have canned and pickled and preserved all the fruit and vegetables your family can use and your cans and jars and bottles will hold, when you have offered to give some to your neighbors and found that they, too, have a superfluity and when you can't even sell what you have because every one in your little town is raising the same, what are you going to do?

I wish there could be a plan something like this:

Have a committee in each unit as determined upon—the township, for instance—make a house to house canvass to find out just who has or will have extra fruit and vegetables and on what conditions they would be willing to dispose of them; then have the local committees operate with a committee in the nearest center where the food could be used and have donated automobiles and volunteers go out after it; then dispose of it in the best way.

I believe if some plan like this could be carried out systematically all over the country a great deal of food would be saved which might otherwise be wasted. Now is the time to do it.

But in the absence of an organized plan don't let your garden and orchard stuff waste. If you can't use it all yourself make it a point of patriotism to see that some one else has it. Don't let your apples rot on the ground even if you have to do the work yourself and then pay to get them to some one else. Make it not a question of dollars, but of service. Think of the boys in the trenches and their sacrifice and don't waste ammunition.—Mary Elizabeth Rodhouse of the Vigilantes.

Mold In Pickle Crocks.

When the pickles are in the crock and ready to cover take a piece of clean white flannel, double it and cut a pattern of the top of crock from outside edge. Then lay the flannel down over the top of pickles, tucking in all around nicely. Place the cover on and set away. The mold that would form on pickles will collect on the flannel.

At any time if the mold should collect on flannel pretty freely, which it will, remove it, wash it and dry thoroughly; then replace the flannel on pickles. Be sure to keep them well covered with the flannel, and if you follow directions closely you will find the last of your pickles as good as the first.

Money doesn't make the man, but a little thing like that doesn't worry the man who makes the money.

SCHOOL BOARD COMMIT REPORT AS TO DEF

A Number of such Pupils are Fo Public Schools—Steps to be Deal with the Problem.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night Dr. F. C. Neal presented the report of the Special Committee appointed some time ago to inquire into the question of mentally defective children in the public schools. The report, which was adopted and the suggestions concurred in, were as follows:

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:

Gentlemen:

Your committee appointed to deal with the matter of mentally defective children, beg to submit the following report:

(1) Public men and women are at last beginning to recognize the importance of caring for the feeble-minded, and the responsibility comes home to us of making ourselves cognizant of the existing facts, of educating the public as to these, and of shouldering our part of the task of coping with the problem. There are estimated to be about 7,500 defectives in the Province of Ontario, and we may take this to be a conservative estimate.

Of this number about 2 per cent are to be found in our elementary schools.

As to the causes, about 75 per cent are to be found in our elementary schools.

As to the causes, about 75 per cent of all cases are hereditary, the remaining 25 per cent being due to such cases as birth injuries, cretinism, hereditary syphilis, etc.

A striking increase in the number of cases is shown from the age of 9 to 11 years, and a gradual increase from the age of 12 to 14 years. The older the child, the more marked does the mental defect become. Thus it will be seen that the public school is the key to the situation, as far as obtaining information regarding the number of defectives among children, especially those of the lower grades. The high-grade mental defectives do not generally become known until they have committed some depredation or have given evidence of moral delinquency.

2. Regarding the classification of these cases, they are usually arranged in three groups:

(a) Idiots or those persons whose mental age is about 2 years. These form about 6 per cent of the cases, and are absolutely unable to care for themselves, being unable ever to guard themselves from ordinary physical dangers.

(b) Imbeciles or those whose mental age varies from 3 to 7 years. They are only partially capable of caring for themselves and cannot manage their own affairs. These constitute 18 per cent of the cases.

(c) Higher grades or Morons those whose mental age is from 7 to 12 years or higher. These cases have certain gifts and capabilities and may be made to a large extent self-supporting, but require care and supervision, for their own protection and for the protection of others. These form 76 per cent of all cases.

We will next consider the relation of the feeble-minded to the normal members of a community. To the average person the term "feeble-minded" does not suggest very much. They are apt to think of them as poor weak creatures unfitted to fight the battles of life, who should be taken care of in some way and there the matter ends. A deeper scrutiny would show that this class of people are a startling menace to a community as the following figures will show. If all feeble-minded were placed in suitable environments, and given special training to develop their limited capabilities:

(1) The number of criminals would be largely reduced, as 25 per cent of all criminals are found to be in the feeble-minded class.

(2) The number of juvenile delinquents would be

EMPLOYER TAKING UNDUE ADVANTAGE OF EMPLOYEE. Every employer, and every person acting on behalf of any employer, who stipulates or attempts or offers to stipulate with any employee or other person for any reduction of an employee's salary or wages, or for the alteration of any other term or condition of his employment, in consideration of the employer exercising or refraining from exercising his right to claim exemption from military service on behalf of any employee, or who alters or attempts or offers or proposes to alter, adversely to any employee, any of the conditions of employment affecting such employee by exercising or refraining from exercising or by authorizing or suggesting the exercise or abstention from exercising of his right to claim exemption from military service on behalf of any employee, shall be guilty of an offence, punishable on summary conviction, by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the convicting magistrate: the fine to be not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, and the imprisonment not to exceed six months.

CEREAL MANUFACTURERS WILL DEFEND INTERESTS

Large Sums atStake in Peterborough and Other Towns—Meeting in Toronto.

Manufacturers of package cereals, wholesale dealers and retail merchants are not going to submit to the ruling of the Food Controller without a protest. They met in Toronto yesterday afternoon on this question. Their opposition to the new order is based on the following grounds:

"It will destroy an industry to develop which millions of dollars have been spent, and it will mean that the consumers will not be satisfied because the cereals for the most part except oat and corn meal, will lack that crispness which is their peculiar advantage should we be compelled to sell them in bulk."

Peterborough's big cereal industry, the Qunker Oats Co., is interested in this matter to no inconsiderable extent. In planning for the re-erection of their huge mills here, the use of pound and two pound packages of cereals entered largely into their plans. To deny them that privilege would destroy a portion of their industry in which large sums have been invested, to say nothing of dispensing with the employment of some two hundred and thirty hands.

This new order would also affect the printing industry to a large extent. Cereal manufacturers enclose in their present packages coupons for premiums, which they will certainly eliminate if forced to put up their foods in 20 pound packages. They will from information to hand, resort to bags, give no premiums, dispense with printed coupons and the elaborately printed colored wrappers with which the card packages are now covered, booklets, folders, etc. All of which means a loss to printers of trade running into thousands of dollars each year. One way and another. There is a large amount of printing connected with the package system, and printers stand to lose considerable by the change.

Better an impediment in the speech than in the brain.

It's advice when you give it and a lecture when you receive it.

A man doesn't have to wear good clothes if he can afford them.

Too much cannot be said in favor of the person who hasn't much to say.

A woman's idea of economy is to buy a 5 cent loaf of bread instead of a dollar sack of flour.

When people say of a dead man, "He is better off," it's a pity he isn't in the position to appreciate his good luck.

PRISONERS MAY ESCAPE

They have a chance to get away from their prison. But if the eyesight has failed in any way, there is no sliding out of the responsibility of having the eyes cared for. Neglecting them while waiting for them to improve by themselves will only aggravate the distress and make the final lens adjustment more complicated and expensive. Better get away from the trouble by letting Dr. Fowler examine the eyes and tell you what they need.

this attention as these children cannot be educated in the regular way. Various methods of dealing with this class of children have been proposed. One is to have auxiliary classes in local centres, and another is to have Government institutions for the whole province.

The latter method is obviously to be preferred in many ways, but knowing the present inadequacy, and the unlikelihood of much if any extension, during the war, or for some time after, the auxiliary classes have a good deal to recommend them. In the first place much time would be saved to the normal pupils by the removal of the mentally defective from the classes, and at the same time the moral tone of the classes would be much improved.

The mentally defective children would be much happier and better behaved, for they would be being taught what they could learn.

5. Through the auxiliary classes, many of the facts regarding this problem could be made clear to the public. It is a mistaken kindness to attempt to deceive parents as to mental defect in a child. Every consideration and kindness should be shown them, but they should not be deceived. When it is too late to act they will find out the real state of affairs, and then they will naturally blame those who have kept them in ignorance, thus neglecting the best interests of the mental defective and his family. In this connection, the work of the school nurse and the medical inspector of the school would be indispensable. Their work would furnish data which should be given to the public so that they may know conditions as they exist in our schools, their tact and influence should go far toward eradicating prejudices and ignorance.

Outside of Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa nothing definite in the way of auxiliary classes has been done in the schools of the province, although a number of other places have been considering the question. After visiting Ottawa and seeing the work there my own conclusion was that the greatest gain was to the normal pupils through the removal of the defectives, and the great weakness of the auxiliary classes, that no permanent cure was provided.

Each Auxiliary Class should have:

1. A special trained teacher. 2. A small number of pupils 14 to 20. 3. A double room—one with school desks for class work, and another with equipment for manual training, household, sciecne, sewing, weaving, etc.

In view of their research in this matter, which they feel to be far from exhaustive, your committee beg to submit the following resolutions for your consideration:

1. That the school nurse must be given further training by having her visit other centres.

2. That we as a school board in co-operation with other school boards of the province, support the petition of the Ont. Medical Association and other organizations. That the question be fully and speedily dealt with by a commission. 3. That it is advisable to introduce some form of medical inspection in our schools. 4. That during the coming month Dr. Helen McMurchy be invited to visit our schools and go into the matter fully with the whole Board, to advise as to arrangements for dealing with the problem in our schools.

Respectfully submitted,
DR. F. NEAL, Chairman.

To Answer Eight Charges of Theft

A well-known citizen appeared at the police court this morning in answer to a charge of theft of $1145, on information laid by Wm. H. Lytle.

Mr. V. J. McElderry is in charge of complainant's interests, and Mr. G. N. Gordon is counsel for the defense.

Mr. McElderry asked for an adjournment, he not being ready to proceed with the case.

Mr. G. N. Gordon consented, but said adjournment must extend over next week, he having business in Belleville the whole of that time.

His worship also pointed out that if the case was not proceeded with now, he could not agree on any specified date for adjournment, he having to attend the tribunal, which sittings commence tomorrow.

Adjournment until Monday, November 19th, was granted on the understanding that if necessary, by force of circumstances over which his worship has no control, further enlargement will be made.

The two sureties and defendant renewed their bonds, and accused was again allowed bail of $10,000.

More Charges.

Police Magistrate Dumble here read seven more charges of theft of the following amounts on separate dates laid by same complainant: $4.40, $4.40, $9.74, $6.35, $35.00, $65.00, $8.54—a total of $135.53.

Hearing of these charges was also adjourned until Monday, December 19th.

Defendant was a clerk for the complainant.

The court room was filled with spectators.

Hylan Has Lead

Woman suffrage won in New York state, but lost in Ohio. Prohibition won in Ohio, Delaware, New Mexico. Local option lost in New Jersey. All the anti-war tickets were defeated.

The Mayor-Elect.

Mayor-elect Hylan began his career in New York as a track-layer on the old King's County elevated railroad at a wage of $1.50 a day. When the road was completed he was given a job as fireman of one of the little steam locomotives which drew the trains in the pioneer days of elevated railroads in this city. He later was promoted to engineer, and is credited with having taken out the first train on the day of the great blizzard in 1888. He was discharged by the railroad company when an inspector found him studying law in his cab. He was admitted to the bar in 1897 and began practice in Brooklyn.

Hylan was appointed a city magistrate by Mayor McClellan in 1906 and was appointed a county judge of King's by Governor Glynn, late in 1913.

MORE HOGS FOR ONTARIO FARMS

Toronto, Nov. 7.—Prominent farmers from all parts of Ontario yesterday pledged themselvets to do everything in their power to increase the production of hogs in the Province during the next few months. This was the result of a meeting at the Parliament Buildings at which Food Controller the Hon. W. J. Hanna told of the serious food shortage in Britain, France, Belgium and Italy, and urged the production quickly of as many hogs as possible to meet the situation and help the allies to win the war.

In the course of his remarks the Hon. Mr. Hanna stated that "the storage end of the business will be under as complete Government control as it is possible for the machinery of government to adopt, and that will be true not only of Canada, but also of the United States, so that whatever price the consumer pays the producer may know that no unreasonable part of that is taken up by the packer and distributor."

Mr. Hanna also announced that the embargo on corn coming from the United States would be raised in December.

Lord Rosebery once mentioned to Dr. Creighton that there were times when he could not sleep.

The Bishop remarked, "Well, my lord, I never suffer from sleeplessness, for whenever I feel weary I begin to read a sermon, and I am off in a very few seconds."

"Ah, my lord," replied Lord Rosebery, "of two evils I will choose the least. Much rather would I go without sleep than read a sermon!"

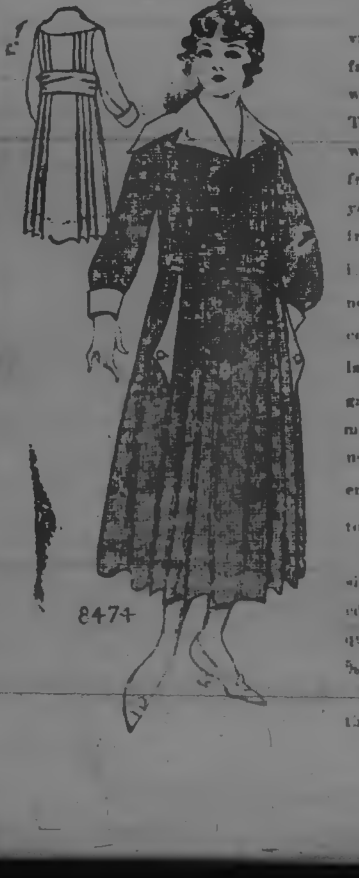
MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.



The most fashionable as well as serviceable material for the high school girl's fall dress is serge, and one of the best ways to make it is suggested in No. 8474. The dress has a shallow yoke under the wide collar, and the lower part of the front and back is plaited in groups to the yoke. The neck is slashed at the centre front and laced with a cord. The dress is to be slipped on over the head. The neck is finished with one of the newest collars, cut in points at the front, to simulate revers. The sleeves are long and gathered into cuffs. A broad belt of the material has a novel closing, which is being used on many of the new dresses. One end slips through a bound sash and buttons onto the belt.

The dress pattern, No. 8474, is cut in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Width at lower edge is 2¾ yards. The 16 year size requires 3⅝ yards 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

CARING FOR THE SOLDIER BOYS

Returned men who wish to take advantage of the facilities afforded by the Vocational Training Courses instituted by the Board, under the Military Hospitals Commission, will be glad to learn that on Wednesday, Nov. 14th the District Vocational Officer, Major Good, of Kingston, accompanied by Capt. Randall, will be in Peterborough to confer with men desirous of taking up training.

It is not intended that men will be assisted to change an occupation if they are at all fitted physically, to go back to it. But to endeavor to afford opportunity and instruction to any who from physical unfitness are now obliged to look to some other trade or occupation to afford employment.

The very best possible results are coming out from the efforts of the Vocational Board, and many men to whom the future seemed to offer very little chance for employment have been placed in a position to go on with work profitably.

The officer will arrive in the city evening of the 13th and can be consulted by any who may be engaged in the day time. Make appointments in advance, with the local member of the Board, F. H. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Room, and the case will have every attention.

It will be well to communicate wishes in writing, and as early as possible. These statements will be forwarded to the Kingston Office, for early consideration, and then on personal interview, the matter can be closed up.

In the meantime register your wishes at the office, as above.

IN MEMORIAM

At an Executive meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Peterborough Presbyterial, held Nov. 6, it was resolved that the Peterborough Presbyterial place on record their deep sense of loss in the removal by death of Mrs. Hugh Waddell, their beloved president.

The officers feel keenly the great blank caused by her removal. Her beautiful Christian character and devotion to duty have been an inspiration to all. Her clear judgment and executive ability were invaluable to the Society and her keen interest in the Master's work was a stimulus to many others.

Although called to the Higher Service her life and influence still speak and beckon them forward and onward in the work she loved so well.

S. T. WOOD DEAD.

Writer on Globe Was Well Known by Lovers of Nature.

Canadian journalism lost a unique figure yesterday in the death of S. T. Wood, of the editorial staff of the Toronto Globe. Early in the summer his health began to fail, and while on vacation at Ben Echo, in Eastern Ontario, his illness became critical and he was forced to return to Toronto. Since then his decline had been steady, though he was confined to his bed only during the past month.

Mr. Wood was born in Wollaston township, Hastings county, and the funeral will be held at Belleville on Friday.

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

(By Eleanor Preston.)

My little boy beside a desk at school
Reads tales of Goldenlocks and Ridinghood;
He counts the busy hours and finds them good;
And nothing fears, more than a broken rule.
East London and just another school
With sunny curly heads bent over books,
And loving glances following teacher's looks.
And thoughts of mother in the evening's cool.
The roof split open with a crash and rend,
And little children screamed with dreadful noise,
And from their mangled bodies blood gushed hot,
And on the floor a little severed hand—
So small it might have been my Billy-boy's!
Herod! God may forgive you, I could not.

Future King of England Proves While at Front That He Is a Democrat

WHEN a young officer first joins the staff at headquarters, it is considered the fitting thing among the young but more experienced officers to play certain old-time tricks on him. Not even a prince who is the heir to the throne is regarded as of too high rank to escape from this ordeal. But before Edward, Prince of Wales, went to the front he was well posted in this matter, and his royal highness did not, therefore, fall into any of the traps laid for him.

Shortly after his arrival at headquarters the prince was greeted by a young staff officer, who informed him that he had been requested by a commanding officer to send a despatch at once to ———, and that the C. O. had said that the prince would take it.

"Here is the despatch," the young staff officer said, "and there is one of the despatch cars,"—indicating an immense, raking, glittering Rolls-Royce. "You had better start at once!"

The prince looked at the young officer, then at the despatch which he had been handed.

"I shall certainly start at once," said the prince, "but can you get me the C. O.'s written order? I ought to have it, you know."

The young staff officer burst out laughing.

"Oh, I see you know more than I thought!" he said. "It is rather an old joke, I admit."

The joke, if it had come off, would have consisted in getting the prince to enter the car, which belonged to a highly irritable brigadier, who was standing near it, and in listening to the brigadier's language when he saw the prince starting off with it.

PRINCE OF WALES

The prince is one of the most popular members of the staff, and, like a good officer, is ready to turn his hand to any job he may be set.

He has superintended the loading of food wagons for the trenches, has driven generals in his own car to different parts of the line, and has helped in the laying of telephone lines.

The prince belongs to the Chauffeurs' Club at the front, the most democratic institution of its kind in the world. The subscription is five shillings, and anyone who drives a mechanically propelled vehicle of any sort is entitled to belong to it. It has among its members princes, dukes, artisans, mechanics, and clerks.

Once, when the Prince of Wales was having a cup of coffee at the office bar in the club in the late afternoon, he saw a very dirty looking figure standing next to him. It was that of a man who had just returned from the trenches with an empty food wagon.

"Hello!" said the dirty man, and then his Royal Highness recognized an Oxford chum with whom he had had many a sparring match in his Oxford [illegible]

"TO PRAY OR NOT TO PRAY," QUERY RAISED IN NEW YORK PAPER

Editors of Sun Makes Coustic reply to a Skeptical Correspondent.

A cynical writer sends the following communication to the Editor of the New York Sun:

To The Editor of The Sun— With all respect to those devout persons who feel that in times of peril like these they must turn to heaven for support, one cannot but snicker at the idea of setting aside a given day for prayers, for whatever purpose they may be.

I have been brought up with the idea that God is all knowing, all wise, all powerful. This I believe to be the faith of all who profess Christianity.

But if we are right in our belief by what logic have we the impudence to advise the perfect one what to do or what not to do?

In the first place, if He is all knowing, He knows what we think before we speak. Therefore why waste time speaking?

By what logic do we pray for victory? Do we assume that our prayers are going to move God to change His mind, and give it to us instead of the Huns?

Moreover, if God is all wise, He knows the future. If He knows it, then it is already foreordained and despite His all power He could not change it. All power and all wisdom you see, may conflict.

In view of these things it seems to me plain impudence on our part to do more than our level best to win and leave God to His own job. Work is the best form of prayer, and it is well illustrated by McLandburgh Wilson in The Sun, in verses on the editorial page.

There are lots of ways to pray,
Take your choice;
Preacher's praying in the church
With his voice,
That our righteous cause may win
From the Hun
Brother's praying in the field
With a gun.

I'd like to know which prayer God would be more likely to heed—the one offered "in the church with his voice," or the one "in the field with a gun."

It seems to me the wisest thing to leave the copartnership with God to rest with Wilhelm for the present. We poke all sorts of fun at his pompous assumption of celestial favor and then we turn around and claim it for ourselves.

Cut out the prayer stuff so far as the voice is concerned, but pray "like the devil" with a gun. Those prayers are more likely to be heard. God helps those who help themselves.

PRO BONO.

The Editor's Comments

To the above letter the Sun in an article headed "Let us not pray," makes editorial reply as follows:

The forceful letter printed beneath this title on this page today will excite the most divergent feelings and opinions in our readers; it will not leave many of them indifferent.

The writer might have tempered what will strike some readers as the brutality of his observations. He cannot, for example, profess to render respect to devout persons while in the same sentence snickering at a day of prayer. Nevertheless, he makes points which deserve consideration despite the oppressive language which he employs in stating them.

He is mistaken in thinking that prayer to the Deity is, or ever can partake of, the nature of advice.

He is mistaken in thinking that since the Deity is omniscient, knowing what is in our hearts to say to Him, prayer, spoken or unspoken, is a waste of time.

He is mistaken in thinking a prayer for victory illogical or impudent or ineffective.

When we pray we do not, even the boldest of us, venture to suggest that God shall accomplish our will and purpose. We ask for guidance, light upon His will and purpose and strength to carry out our part in it.

And what is meant by a waste of time? We cannot waste His time, and, surely the moments of self-preparation for our duty are not ill spent.

We pray for victory because only through victory can we do the right as God gives us to see the right. We are not so arrogant as to think of the Deity as allied with ourselves. We are His servants. We no more presume in asking Him for instruction what to do and strength to do it than a child that turns to its father for instruction and support is guilty of impudence.

Nor is prayer ineffective. It cannot change the Divine purpose or alter the future; but it can and does hearten millions to endure and fight in the present. What man ever affixed a bayonet without a prayer in his breast? What mother ever sent her son to war without a prayer for his safe return?

Our correspondent, at the close of his letter, qualifies his objection and limits it to spoken prayer. It is a confession that he recoils before the tremendous implications of the things he has said. But spoken prayer is inseparable from unspoken prayer. He might as well bid mankind never to utter any of its thoughts.

THE ANTIQUE—UP TO DATE.

SHE gazed at the tall old clock on the stair,
'Twas a relic of days long fled,
A costly timepiece, a treasure rare,
But lately purchased and placed up there,
"A quaint old gem!" she said

"Did you stand in some old manor hall,
Where the firelight flickered red
On polished floor and on carven wall,
Where fell the shadows of ladies tall
And straightly stiff?" she said

"Did you look, perchance, on a winsome maid—
Alas, a century dead,
Softly demure and sweetly staid,
In a tortoise shell comb and a gay brocade
With a very short waist?" she said

"Did you see her lover, a comely swain,
A-bending his stately head
To touch her lips and to touch again
Till her fair cheek warmed with a crimson stain?
Oh, quaint old gem!" she said.

"Ah, the wondrous pictures seen by you
In the days so long since fled!"
But the tall old clock fetched a grin to view,
"I wonder what she would say if she knew
I was made last week?" it said.

A Terrible Loss.

Those crafty German raiders have not all the world has yet learned, declares the London Chronicle. A veracious and observant workman has just explained the position to his mistress. "Yes, mum, these raids is very costly." "Very; roads and buildings cannot be repaired for nothing," she answered, sympathetically. "Oh, it ain't that, mum. It's the ladies, poor dears. They faints, and it takes a lot of brandy to bring 'em round. And brandy is so expensive in these 'ard times. That's where it comes in, mum." True daughters, without doubt, of 'adies whom Dickens limned.

Ireland Imports Foodstuffs.

Ireland, an agricultural country, is largely dependent on other countries for her farm produce, food and drink stuffs. The value of her imports of these commodities amounted in 1915 to 38 per cent. of the value of her total imports. The exports of farm produce, food and drink stuffs from Ireland are, of course, very large, their value in 1915 amounting to 58 per cent. of the value of the total exports. Practically all go to Great Britain and are consumed there.

Britain To Discuss Marriage By Proxy

The question, should marriage by proxy be legalized in Great Britain for the special benefit of men at the front, is now being discussed at great length in the newspapers. France has already made this war-time concession, and the Australian Government has called a conference of churchmen and others to consider the adoption of a proxy form of marriage between Australians at the front and women in Australia.

While soldiers from England generally have a chance of returning on leave for the purpose of marriage, there are frequently difficulties in the way, and marriage by proxy would probably be frequently employed if the laws permitted, especially in the case of a man severely wounded or stricken with serious illness at the front.

CONVICTION SECURED FOR SELLING GINGER.

HOW SHE PICKED HIM.

SHE chose him out of all the crowd
Of men that came and went.
His voice was low, his tie was loud,
But she was well content.

The first man's education was
Perhaps more finished, and—
The second's manners gave her pause
Because they were so grand.

Another's garments fitted him,
Another's hair was curly,
Another's name was swell, but Jim
Was captured by this girlie.

And not for wealth and not for love
Was Jim by Maudie chosed—
He merely was the one man of
The whole bunch that proposed!

Noted Presidents.

"Well, Uncle Rod, I hear you have another pair of twins at your house."

"Yaas, missus," responded the man, "we has. Bress dey little hearts!"

"Have you named them yet?" asked the woman.

"Yes'm," said Rod. "Done named 'em aftah two ob de fust pres'dents of dis country."

"Indeed!" said Mrs. Stone. "which two?"

"Ole Christofo C'lumbus an' Julyous Caesar," said the man. "We's great on namin' de chillun fo' de presidents 't our house."—National Monthly.

Mixed Excuses.

"Sister," said the suffragist candidate the morning after election, "why were you not at the polls yesterday to exercise your sacred and exalted privileges as a citizeness of this republic?"

"I think one can be just as good when out walking in the field"—

"Sister," interrupted the candidate sternly, "that's your Monday excuse to the minister!"

"Beg pardon," said the sister, "what I meant to say was that I didn't go out to vote because I had not a thing fit to wear—really!"—Jericho Journal.

FORTY CENTS A PECK FOR DRY ROT POTATOES GOOD PRICE!

City Needs a Pure Food Inspector to Guard Consumers Against Imposition.

Peterborough has a milk inspector, a coal censor, a bread inspector, and what not to safeguard the public against imposition, and from the look of things the city had better go one better and appoint a potato inspector. With pork at 40c a pound, milk at 12c a quart, eggs at 50c a dozen and butter at 50c a pound one can ill afford to buy food that is uneatable.

Last Saturday a lady dropped into a store and enquired the price of potatoes. "$2.90 a bag or 40c a peck" was the reply. "But," said the customer, "they are only $1.50 to $1.75 a bag on the market, and in a store higher up 35c a peck. "Yes, I know, madam," replied the store-keeper, "but my potatoes are a first quality brand, I secured a large quantity, and can quarantee them absolutely good."

Well, to make a long story short, the lady purchased a quantity of the absolutely good, first quality brand potatoes of mother earth at 40c per, only to discover on preparing them for the pot that over half of them are absolutely last quality brand, bad dry rot specimans of the Irish staff of life.

This store-keeper, who enjoys a reputation for Christian principles and square dealing would do well if ignorant of the actual quality of those 40c spuds to investigate and peel down the price to proper value, or trace them back to whence they come, and act accordingly.

Government Fish Is In Great Demand

PETERBOROUGH NOW ON THE LIST WITH OTHER PATRIOTIC TOWNS

The places selling government fish, with a view to saving bacon and beef for those brave boys at the front fighting for British democracy and liberty are Toronto, Ingersoll, Paris, Guelph, St. Thomas, London, Ottawa, and this week Peterborough is on the list. The government is supplying fish at six cents cheaper per pound than through the agency of independent retailers, and now let consumers take advantage of the opportunity to secure pure, fresh fair-priced brain stimulating food, if only for patriotic purposes, and for patriotic purposes alone.

Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid reports that his scheme of supplying cheap fish to Ontario people is a popular one, and very welcome, and a huge quantity of fish is required to meet the ever increasing demands so far this week over ten tons of white fish, trout, pike, pickerel and silver mullets have been shipped to Toronto from Lakes Nepigeon, Nipissing, Midland, Meaford and Lake Erie for distribution to other points.

Your Duty to the Fighting Men

ON the shell-torn fields of Flanders; amid the ruins of devastated France; upon the submarine-infested waters, and among the storm clouds of the sky, men from Canada are doing their duty.

They are doing it willingly, cheerfully. They are sacrificing the joys of home, the companionship of those they love most dearly, denying themselves all comfort, foregoing all thought of material prosperity, laying down their priceless lives—all this so that you may live your life in peace and security and that your hearth and home may remain inviolate.

Your duty—you who are not fighting—is simple. Dedicate your money to the cause of Victory, by buying Canada's Victory Bonds to the limit of your ability. They will be offered commencing next Monday.

Canada must borrow—
Your duty is to lend—to make your money fight.

WAR HAS MADE HOOVER FAMOUS

Now Recognized Among World's Greatest Men.

LIVED LONG IN ENGLAND

He Was Hardly Known in His Own Country Before 1914, but His Splendid Record in the Past Three Years Now Causes Many to Boom Him for President of U. S.

UNDOUBTEDLY one of the big men of the day is Hoover, American food controller. He prefers to call himself food administrator, having the same dislike as Mr. Asquith for "that word dictator." He has been mentioned in responsible quarters as a likely successor to President Wilson in the White House, and the suggestion has been warmly received by people who do not know what his politics are. If he is able to keep prices of food in the United States at a reasonable level through the war there is no boon he could demand from his fellow-countrymen that would not be granted; and the people have such confidence in him that if he fails they will probably argue that no one could have succeeded. Over and over again it has been said that before the United States entered the war Hoover was the biggest American living. His work for Belgian relief kept Uncle Sam on the international map. Whenever a European thought of an American he thought of Hoover.

HERBERT C. HOOVER

When he was made food dictator pro-Germans and others denounced him as an Englishman. He is not an Englishman, but he has lived most of his working years in England and working for English interests. His business is English; his partners are English. Probably he was never heard of in the United States before the beginning of the war. This is rather wonderful, for our cousins as a rule do not overlook their millionaires, whether at home or abroad, and Mr. Hoover belongs to that select class. But Mr. Hoover, though he is not much past forty, had been living almost in retirement for some years, and even in England, outside of mining and financial circles, he was not known. He leaped almost overnight into international celebrity when the war broke out. A committee was hastily formed of Americans in London to assist other Americans to get home, and Hoover's organizing ability was recalled by some American. He was appealed to, threw his coat off, and got busy. Through his hands 42,000 American refugees passed, and about 5,000 of them needed financial assistance.

Before this task had been accomplished the plight of Belgium had begun to force itself upon the attention of the world. The country was overrun, employment had ceased, food was running short. Germany recognized no responsibility to feed the population she was trying to enslave. Belgium's allies could do nothing but contribute funds which might well be appropriated by Germany. There was a big job waiting for a big neutral, and Hoover stepped into it. He called to his help a number of Americans, most of them engineers like himself, and they took over the task of getting food and other supplies into Belgium and distributing them among the suffering Belgians.

They worked in the face of the apathy at best and the hostility at worst of the German authorities, but they did work and with the assistance of British money and of large contributions from almost every civilized country they saved the Belgian nation from starving to death. It is said that when Hoover and his helpers began they had only $500,000 in sight, a gift from the British Government. Nevertheless, they proceeded to place orders for $2,000,000 worth of food a week.

Hoover's unique experience in feeding Belgium made him a natural selection as food controller of the United States, for it ought to be remembered that the United States did not wait until Americans were hungry or the Allied soldiers starving before appointing a food controller. Hoover now works in Washington with a tremendous staff upon a task that is far more difficult than that which he grappled in Belgium. But he has the habit of success.

"Bolsheviki" Russia's Peril

THE present political situation in Russia can be presented in a few words. The country is passing through a crisis which is without doubt the gravest crisis in all Russian history. Not a single party, but only a strong coalition of all the progressive forces can save the country. Russia as a whole perfectly understands the situation and demands a coalition Cabinet. Responding to this demand, Kerensky formed the coalition Cabinet.

But the crisis is not yet over. The Bolsheviki are against the principle of coalition and demand that all power be turned over to the Councils of Workingmen's and Soldiers' Delegates. It is not very probable that they will finally yield to Kerensky's decision, and therefore we may expect a conflict between them and the Provisional Government at almost any moment.

The history of the Bolsheviki in Russia, after the revolution, is a history of their steady growth. When Lenine appeared in Russia, immediately after the revolution, it seemed that he, with his extravagant views, had hardly any following in the country. The situation has changed since then. The Bolsheviki now control the Petrograd and Moscow Councils of Workingmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, they control the councils in some of the provincial cities, they have a very considerable number of seats in the Democratic Conference. If the Bolsheviki are permitted to exist in the present-day Russia as a legitimate, openly-acting political power, we will see their strength growing and growing. This is the greatest danger which revolutionary Russia faces at the present time. The rule of the Bolsheviki in Russia, if the moment for such rule comes, will be almost a death sentence for the country and the revolution.

The growth of the Bolsheviki power can be very well explained. The term, Bolsheviki, was used for the first time in 1903, when the Russian Social-Democratic party split in two, and the majority, led by Lenine, accepted this name. Bolsheviki in Russian, means "the majority." Until the present war the Bolsheviki, including Lenine, really represented a part of the Russian Social Democratic party, and could be recognized as Socialists of the Marxian School, differing from other Russian Social Democrats only on questions of tactics.

The war has changed Lenine and his following remarkably. When Lenine arrived in Petrograd and made his first speech, one of the prominent Russian Socialists told him that the point of view he, Lenine, represents as nothing to do with Socialism ,and is a pure expression of anarchists' ideology. This really describes "Bolsheviki," and explains its power in Russia. The Bolsheviki are anarchists, if not in theory, then in their feeling about life and in their political practice. The ground for anarchy is fertile in Russia, and herein lies the success of the Bolsheviki.

The sufferings of all the countries involved in the present conflict are enormous, but probably it is safe to say that, aside from Belgium, no country has suffered so much as Russia. To the usual sufferings imposed by the war were added the terrible crimes of the old regime. If monarchy in Russia had died 12 years ago, during the first revolution, it would have been a natural death, and both sides would have gained by it. The principle of monarchy and the Czar himself would not have been so hated as now, and on the other hand, the country would not have been poisoned as it now is. The monarchic system, in its practically unlimited form, was dead in Russia long ago, and decaying, poisoned all the atmosphere around it.

The old regime, degenerated to such figures as Soukhomlinoff, Rasputin, and Protopopoff, came to an end, leaving the country in a state of such disorganization that no government in the world could have led it through the enormous difficulties better than the Provisional Government did. The disorganization of transportation brought hunger and cold to the Russian cities and created an atmosphere in which every kind of anarchistic agitation could be successful. Lenine and his followers with their slogan of immediate peace, with their hatred for the wealthy classes, with their slogans for the dictatorship of the labouring class, naturally could appeal more to the suffering, comparatively uneducated Russian masses, already exhausted by the war and the crimes committed against them by the old regime, than the arguments of Socialist leaders like Kerensky and Tseretelli, who appeal to the masses to stay in the war, and if necessary suffer more and more for the cause of the world's democracy.

Kerensky is not less a Socialist than Lenine, but the difference between them is that while Lenine would like to establish the Socialist State almost immediately, Kerensky understands that an apple, sweet and ready to be eaten in October, is sour and indigestible in June. The Bolsheviki are the kind of revolutionists who discredit the revolution more than any counter revolutionists.

The rule of the Bolsheviki in the near future is almost inevitable if they be not eliminated from Russian life by immediate decisive measures. Otherwise, their power is liable to grow, and will grow with the coming winter, with the hunger and cold threatening almost every Russian home. The Bolsheviki danger is like a cancer. If it is not operated on in time it is bound to grow till it reaches the vital organs and kills the patient.

LETTERS WERE RECOVERED

Written by Canadian and Recovered From Dead German.

This is the story of two letters that will reach Canada shortly. They have each two bullet holes in them, unspoken evidence of one of the war's tragedies, and they contain the last messages of a soldier of an Ontario battalion to two women, believed to be his mother and his sweetheart. This soldier, with others, was sent out to make a sortie from our trenches in the St. Laurent sector of the line. It may have been because of a premonition, that strange clairvoyance so often encountered at the front, or in pursuance of a custom before going out, that this soldier wrote two letters. Leaving them unsealed for submission later to the censor, he carried them with him into action. He never returned. He has a soldier's grave out somewhere behind the German front line.

A few days after he was reported missing it was decided to extend one of our posts in that area two hundred yards along the trench in which the enemy's posts were located. This dangerous task was given to two young officers of an Ontario battalion and twenty-eight men. This little party found the enemy trench strongly held, but, in daylight, without any artillery help, they tackled a greatly superior force and bombed their way down the trench for a greater distance than the two hundred yards required. In the course of the action, and of several counter-attacks, both officers were wounded, while one of their men was killed and six others were wounded.

The enemy sustained casualties remarkably high, even in bombing warfare. The official record shows that the bodies of thirty dead Germans were removed from that part of the trench retained by us, while many others were seen in a portion of the trench bombed but not occupied.

In the captured trench were found also severely wounded Germans, an officer and two men. When the officer's clothing was searched, as the custom is, the two letters, written by the soldier of the New Ontario Battalion the night before he was killed, were found among the prisoner's papers. A bullet had gone through the centre of the envelopes. Another had clipped off a bit at the end, but the addresses were still legible. The two letters were sealed, and have been forwarded to the persons to whom they were addressed, with a statement telling of how they passed into the hands of the enemy and now were recovered, after the writer had been laid in an unknown grave. That he survived two bullet wounds in the breast is not considered possible. The letters will be sad reading to the soldier's home folk.

Aldermen Baxter, Brisco and Coatsworth, of Chatham, were found not guilty of the charge in connection with the Gas Company.

A DARK PICTURE.

How Imaginative American Described Canadian City.

The war has hit Toronto hard enough, but not to the extent pictured by the imaginative visitor from West Virginia who gave the following interview to an Atlantic City newspaper:

"Toronto is a city of sorrow," says J. O. Young, of Buckhanno, W. Va. Mr. Young has been taking his vacation in Canada for a number of years and returned recently from a trip to the Dominion.

He states that it has been interesting during the past three years to watch the progress in the public sentiment and activities of our Northern neighbors, as the tragedies of the war have been bearing upon them with increasing weight. Mr. Young was in Toronto when war was declared in August, 1914, and says that the Canadians took the matter very calmly. In 1915 there was more enthusiasm and troops were leaving for the front, and last year the country had settled down to the serious business of the struggle. This year, however, the traveller states, conditions are appalling.

"A companion and myself were at the King Edward Hotel," said Mr Young, "for dinner one evening and for breakfast and lunch the next day, and during our entire stay we did not see another guest except three or four army officers—and the King Edward is the largest hostelry in Toronto. Canadians are not in the mood for the gaiety of hotel life, for in almost every home there is a vacant chair that will never be filled, and trains are daily bearing to the city car loads of maimed and wounded.

"The theatres and moving picture shows are deserted and the churches are crowded. Practically all the work is being done by women or men who are too old, or boys who are too young, to bear arms. Stoop-shouldered, grey-bearded men are motormen and conductors on the street cars. In the stores one is frequently waited upon by a crippled clerk whose awkward manipulation of his artificial leg tells more eloquently than words the story of his misfortune.

"The streets are crowded with young men, who two or three years ago were fine, stalwart fellows, the very flower of the Dominion, but now are hobbling to or from their homes on crutches or dangling empty sleeves, old men at 25. Others have been frightfully burned and disfigured by the burning gases or the explosion of shells.

"Canadians, however, are very enthusiastic about the entrance of the United States into the struggle and they have nothing but praise for the manner in which our preparations are being conducted, especially the adoption of selective conscription, which, Canadians are a unit in stating, should have been adopted there at the outset of the war. Despite the suffering and grief that exists, there is confident belief in the ultimate triumph of the allied cause and the bitterness against Prussianism is so great that suing for peace before complete victory has been achieved, would not be considered for a moment."

Useless Abundance.

"That man speaks seven languages."

"Yes," rejoined Miss Cayenne. "But his wife doesn't pay attention to what he says in any of them."—Washington Star.

Discretion.

"Pop, what do we mean by saying discretion is the better part of valor?"

"Generally speaking, my son, we mean that discretion can run faster."—Judge.

Their Likeness.

"I say, why are juries like revolvers?"

"It is because they go off when they are charged."—Baltimore American.

Caring For Women When War Is Over

The British government is taking important steps to safeguard its various departments against a general exodus of women clerks the moment peace is declared, and to protect the future of the women clerks who will ultimately be replaced by male clerks.

To obviate any general exodus at an inconvenient period, the women clerks are being asked to sign agreements that they will not leave employment for at least four months after peace is signed. Every clerk who agrees to this will be given a supplementary bonus when she leaves of between $2.50 and $5 for every month of service. It is estimated that the average clerk on leaving will be entitled to $100 as a parting gift.

It should not, however, be imagined that the government is only selfishly thinking of itself. On the contrary much consideration is being given to the problem of what is to become of the women clerks when the state no longer requires them. However useful the women may have been, there will be a great cutting down of national expenditure after the war, and these clerks will then have little opportunity of commercial employment.

The solution favored by the state is emigration to the overseas Dominions, and in due course a plan may be expected by which every assistance will be given to the women to go to places where they will benefit themselves, their new home, and the empire.

CHANCE THAT SOME VOTERS MAY HAVE BEEN OVERLOOKED

Be sure you get the vote you are entitled to. There is the chance that on account of haste required and inexperience of some enumerators detailed to prepare the list for the Dominion election, some people entitled to vote may be omitted from the rolls.

When the enumerator calls, full information should be given to him, especially as to which members of the family are overseas, so as to give the female members the right to vote. The act says that this may be exercised by the wife, widow, mother, sister or daughter of any person who is now serving or has served overseas or within or without Canada in the navy. Every male subject of His Majesty, 21 years of age, who has been a resident of Canada one year, and has resided not less than thirty days within the constituency, is entitled to a vote. If the enumerator omits a name, an appeal can be made to another tribunal.

HOUSE FLIES WILL NOT STAY IN ROOM WITH BLUE OR GREEN PANES

French Scientists Tell of Easy Way for Getting Rid of these pests.

Two French scientists writing in the Journal de Medicine de Paris, tell of discoveries they have made which will enable the householder to get rid of house flies if he is willing to give his home a somewhat bizarre appearance by putting in window panes of glaring colors. According to these scientists, flies will not remain in rooms lighted by glass of certain colors, if they can find a way out.

Here is a condensation of their paper, as it appears in The New York Medical Journal:

"C. Galaine and C. Houlbert have been able to show that the eyes of the house fly perceive satisfactorily only white light, the simple colors of the spectrum having practically no effect, especially violet, red, blue, and green. The last two, while slightly perceived, exert a repellent effect on the insect. Yellow and orange are the most clearly perceived of the spectral colors. Into a room with a single window fitted with light blue panes many flies were attracted through the open window by means of odoriferous substances. One pane had been hinged so as to admit white light at will.

"Upon closing the window the flies were observed to become at first somewhat restless and soon after to settle down as in darkness. When a beam of white light was admitted through a movable pane, they promptly escaped from the room through the white light. Green panes gave the same results. With yellow panes, not quite as many left the room when the white light was admitted.

"Thus, in rooms or halls lighted from one side only, as is often the case in hospitals, private dwellings, factories, shops, etc., flies can be got rid of by using blue panes, hinged at intervals. Flies will not enter such premises; any that have entered while the windows have been open will either come to rest or quickly escape through the movable pane when the windows are closed. In rooms lighted from more than one side, the blue windows should be opened on only one side at a time. Flies observing the blue light within will not enter, or will soon turn back and out again.

"To increase the efficacy of the outlet in a badly lighted room, a divergent pencil of white light: the flies, as they enter this pencil, are aspirated, as it were, to the outside. In food stores, restaurants, confectionery and fruit shops, etc., all exposed foods should be kept under blue glass."

"THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS"

The most important function served by the motion picture camera today is the recording and preservation of historical events throughout the world, and such a purpose is served by Herbert Brenon's masterpiece, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," showing at the Grand the last of this week. This film is one of the most stupendous ever conceived, depicting faithfully the events leading up to and attendant upon the Russian revolution and giving sidelights upon Russian court life and the intrigue which flourished there. The evil genius of Russia was Rasputin. The Sacred Devil, and the machinations of this arch conspirator who sprang from humble peasant origin are graphically laid bare. The characters of the picture are drawn almost entirely from actual life, and Rasputin, the ex-Czar and Czarina, Alexander, Kerensky, General Korniloff and Iliodor, the Mad Monk who has been active in the exposure of the nefarious activities of Rasputin and who enacted his own role in the filming of this picture. "The Fall of the Romanoffs" is of a new era in the motion picture world, and is an epic of the screen rarely to be equalled, and will be shown to Peterborough theatre-goers at the Grand Opera House for three nights, commencing Monday, Nov. 12.

PROFITABLE SHEEP RAISING

(1) On an Alberta sheep ranch.
(2) A shepherd can mind hundreds of sheep.
(3) Sheep raised on irrigated land.

THERE is not the least doubt that Western Canada is steadily building a reputation as a wool-producing country. The opportunities it affords for the profitable breeding and rearing of sheep are unsurpassed in any part of the world. An abundance of suitable food of all kinds is available all over the country, while climatic and other conditions are exceedingly favorable. Almost any line of sheep husbandry may be followed successfully in the Prairie Provinces of Canada. On the range sheep breeding and rearing is an extremely profitable industry, especially in those districts where conditions are not well suited to ordinary agriculture.

That the farmer is more and more realizing the value of a small flock of sheep on his farm is shown by the increasing number of participants at the co-operative wool sales each year. Throughout the west this has been noticed at practically all the sales. In some cases, notably at Calgary, Alberta, there has been a greater number of participants and less wool offering than last year, but this is due to the fact that the larger breeders have been induced to sell their wool independently, so that practically all the wool offered for sale came from small farmers, who are obtaining as big returns in this line as in any other. At other places there has been an increase, both in the number of participants and in the quality of the wool offered.

It seems safe to say that within a few years the whole world will be looking to Western Canada, and especially to Alberta for high class wool. The prices now being obtained for wool by those who were foresighted enough to go in for sheep raising, either on a large or a small scale, has opened the eyes of farmers all over the west to its possibilities. Those who have small flocks are using every effort to improve the quality of their wool, and larger breeders are leaving nothing undone in their endeavors to improve their stock, and are sparing no expense to this end. One of the leading breeders after trying all over Canada and the United States, and failing also to get what he required in Australia, recently purchased 250 full blooded ewes and 10 full blooded rams of the Ramney Marsh breed from England paying $125 each for the ewes and $600 each for the rams. A few years ago this same breeder brought in several hundred Rambouillet ewes, and later purchased at the Panama-Pacific Exposition some prize winning Romneys. The crossing of these two breeds has produced a strain which it is claimed, is admirably suited to Western Canada in every way. Altogether, this breeder has spent $100,000 in full blooded stock, which is evidence of his faith in the possibilities of this industry in Western Canada. As to his returns, he had this year 500 ram lambs of the Romney-Rambouillet cross, estimated to be worth between $40 and $50 each, and for which there is a great demand; he has also sent 101,000 pounds of wool to the Government warehouse at Toronto.

Already there is talk about dollar wool. Whether or not this price will be attained is difficult to say at the present time, but it seems certain that the present prices will obtain for some time in the future, and when it is considered that sheep can be raised very profitably with wool at half its present price, to say nothing about the price of mutton, it is easy to understand that those who were far-sighted enough to go into the business some years ago are now literally making their fortunes.

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS BEGIN SITTINGS; CASES PASSED UPON BY BOARDS TO-DAY

Mrs. B. Jinks Claims Son is Almost Sole Support and ask That he be Excused—Another Man with Broken Foot was Passed by the Doctor.

The city exemption tribunals commenced their sittings sharp at ten o'clock this morning, in the city council and at Judge Huycke's chambers.

At the council chamber the tribunal members are Messrs. W. H. Moore, and J. A. Aylmer. Mayor Duffus is representing the military interests. The first case heard was that of Mrs. D. Jinks, claiming exemption for her only 20 year old son, Orville, employed as assistant time and stock keeper at the Lock Works. His father was a member of the 93rd, invalided home with rheumatism, and the boy is claimed to be his mother's only support the best part of the time owing to the father's affliction. "I think, she urged, that my family has done enough for the war, with one killed at the front, and my husband incapacitated from rheumatism acquired in the service.

Mrs. Jinks here went on to complain that because her husband did not contract rheumatism in the trenches no pension is coming to him, in consequence of which she and her husband are dependent upon her only remaining boy's earnings for a living.

Family Physician's Certificate.

Mrs. Jinks here produced a medical certificate from Dr. McGrath to the effect that this boy is suffering from a nervous complaint. She had no certificate from the medical Board, however, and the tribunal declined to pass judgment until he had been examined. She understood that this was not necessary could she present acceptable claims for exemption, but the tribunal took a contrary view and her son was sent to the Medical Board.

Father Earns $2.50 a Day.

While the plaintiff's father has been laid up with rheumatism, it was shown by Mr. Aylmer that he is now earning $2.50 a day as painter in one of the canoe works. The young man himself is earning $12 a week.

Has Broken Foot.

The next oral claim was that of Joseph G. Laplante, 28 years of age, home 257 Romaine street. He has four brothers, two of whom are married, and claimed exemption on the ground of infirmity. He is an employee of the Canadian Canoe Company. He is graded A II, claims unfair examination and said he had suffered from a sore foot 14 years, which kept him busy remaining at work. The arch of his foot is broken, and never a day passes without him suffering pain. Dr. Greer, he contended, merely glanced at his foot, although told the arch was broken, Laplante asked an order for another medical examination, which was granted.

These were the only two applications up to 11.30.

Claim Rejected.

Joseph G. Laplante, who secured an order from the tribunal for another examination of his broken foot, returned shortly before twelve. The Medical Board had refused re-examination, and stood by Dr. Greer's grading of the man as fit for duty in the trenches. Consequently the tribunal refused his claim for exemption, and he will now, it is understood file a claim with the appeal tribunal in Kingston.

This tribunal adjourned at 12 o'clock to meet again at two this afternoon.

In Judge's Chambers.

The Tribunal in the Judge's Chamber, at the court house opened sharp

Afternoon Sessions.

Stanley G. Gillespie was the only claimant present at the council chamber when the tribunal resumed sitting this afternoon. He had a Category E certificate, and was of course exempted until this class is called out.

Wanted Transference.

At the session in Judge Huycke's chamber this afternoon, Chas. Douglas Palmer, aged 23 years and 10 months, residence 43 Hunter street, a barber by trade in the employ of J. W. Welch, East City, applied for exemption on the ground of ill-health and physical infirmity. He holds a Category A II certificate, but claims to have been rejected on two previous occasions when he applied for enlistment under the voluntary system. He was sent back to the Medical Board for re-examination, Dr. Cameron readily acquiescing over the phone in this course.

Favors Lakefield Tribunal.

Cook and Hunter from the country applied for transference to the Lakefield tribunal, they living closer to that tribunal than to Peterborough. They must send their application for this transference to Major H. B. Cook, Registrar, at Kingston.

ROYAL BANK BUILDING FLAT OR PETERBOROUGH CLUB FOR VETS

Latter Building Preferred if Suitable Arrangements Can be made—Sub-Committee to Report for last Time on This Vexed Question.

The War Veterans executive and committee of citizens are working in admirable harmony and accord on the question of suitable club rooms for the G.W.V.A. Both are agreed that temporary premises shall be secured until after the war, and the joint meeting last night resulted in action which promises a satisfactory settlement of the whole question, possibly within a couple of weeks.

Two Propositions.

The veterans put two propositions before the meeting: One was rental of the top flat of the Royal Bank building, George street; the other was arrangements for use of the Peterborough Club building temporarily, and not as permane premises as formerly proposed.

Discussion resulted in adoption of a motion by Mr. E. A. Peck and H. H. Muir that, a sub-committee be appointed to meet the directors of the Peterborough Club, and see what suitable arrangements can be made for use of the building and furnishings until after the war. Failing to reach a satisfactory agreement, the sub-committee then to gather details of expenditures needed and cost of upkeep, etc., were the Royal Bank proposition accepted. Committee to report at a public meeting to be called by its chairman.

It is quite understood that one of these propositions is to be agreed upon.

This sub-committee consists of four citizens named by the Mayor and four veterans selected by President Harvey Staunton. They are as follows: Messrs. E. A. Peck (chairman), G. N. Gordon, Ald. F. H. Dobbin, Mayor Duffus, Comrades G. E. Coleman, Secretary Whatley, Fred Hughes and President Harvey Staunton.

Association Growing.

Mayor Duffus presided at the meeting. There were also present Mrs. W R Morris, Mrs. S. T. Medd, E. A. Peck, G. N. Gordon, B. F. Ackerman for the citizens, and the

GERMAN CRISIS NOT YET ENDED

NEW CHANCELLOR LIKELY AT ANY TIME TO BE DEPOSED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 8.—The German political crisis is represented as being as acute as ever in special despatches from Amsterdam. Some say that Count Von Hertling's chancellorship is in danger of immediate shipwreck. Count Von Hertling is reported to have succumbed to military and junker influence. The Berlin Tageblatt refers to reactionary forces opposing the nomination of progressive leaders. The Koelnische Zeitung blames progressive and socialists for reawakening of the crisis and says that the prospect of a political truce has quite disappeared.

YOURSELF AND PTE. SMITH

Private Smith was a modest man.

He believed always that almost any other man in his part of the city was more important than he was. He felt that way and he looked that way.

Yet, when the brunt of a German charge came against his section of trench, and he alone was left to operate the machine gun that shattered the charge—he did his duty and saved the day.

You too may be modest.

You may have no more than $5 to spare for buying a Victory Bond.

But by doing your duty with that same five dollars (more if you have it) when Canada's Victory Loan campaign opens on Monday morning at 9 o'clock, you will be true to your traditions and true to your opportunities—like Private Smith.

Smith died He invested his life—for good.

You invest your money, for a few years only, and at a high rate of interest.

AUSTRIAN FAILED TO REPORT TO POLICE FOR TWO MONTHS.

An Austrian was charged at the police court with not having reported to police headquarters for two months. He was fined $25 or a month's imprisonment. He had been confined two years in an internment camp in Nova Scotia. Two months ago he left Montreal for Three Rivers, thence he went to Toronto, and finally came here.

Red Cross Parcels Saved Prisoners

OR NONE OF CANADIANS AT ROULERS WOULD HAVE LIVED.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—Private G. C. Private Baber thinks the war is practically won, and peace terms are now being fought for.

694 Want Exemption 39 Report For Duty

Six hundred and ninety-four men have applied at the post office for exemption, and 39 reported for duty. This morning ten filed exemption claims and three registered for military service. PREMIER KERENSKY OF RUSSIA DEPOSED; NEW MINISTRY TO MAKE SEPARATE PEACE

Have Gained Control of Petrograd and are Backed up by Garrison—Change Was Made Without Bboodshed—Germany Reaches End of Reserves.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 8.—Kerensky, premier of Russia, has been deposed.

An Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd says a strong detachment of troops of soldiers' and workmen's delegates occupied the Baltic railway station and that the government commandeered all motor cars, confining the troops at barracks.

The Maximalists have obtained control of Petrograd and issued a proclamation saying the new government will propose immediate peace. The Maximalists were assisted by the Petrograd garrison, which made possible the revolution without bloodshed.

Threats of a Dictator.

Copenhagen, Nov. 8.—The threat that a military dictatorship is inevitable unless the insistence upon a radical vice-chancellor is dropped, and the government of Count Hertling as it now stands is accepted, is held over the progressive democratic elements in Germany.

At End of Rope.

London, Nov. 8.—Germany called up her last reserves within the last few days, according to a Central News correspondent at Zurich telegraphing on Wednesday.

Call National Convention.

London, Nov. 8.—A wireless despatch from Petrograd says that the council of soldiers and workmen's delegates has announced that the split in the council has been healed and that a call has been sent out for a delegate from each 25,000 population to express the will of the Russian army.

Kerensky May Yet Win.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The genral opinion here among those in a position to be best informed of Russian affairs is that Kerensky and his followers probably will at once help the government at Moscow, leaving Petrograd to the Maximalists and those troops who adhere to them. An armed clash is counted among the first probabilities but it is said here that a greater part of the army is expected to remain loyal to the Kerensky Government.

Whether the new revolt will go the quick way of the Korniloff rebellion no one here ventures to predict and Russia's part in the next year of war while she recovers her fighting power no one here assumes to contemplate at this time.

WILL ASK FUEL CONTROLLER TO TAKE COAL CENSUS IN THIS CITY

Trades Council Believes that there are Fuel Misers in Peterborough and that Supply is Unfairly Distributed.

At the regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night William Stevens, of the Bricklayers' Union, was unanimously re-elected secretary, a position which he resigned some time ago when the accuracy of his records had been called in question by a delegate. Clark Sweet, who succeeded Mr. Stevens, is leaving the city. The election of Mr. Stevens to his old position will give universal satisfaction, as he is conceded to be one of the best and most painstaking officials the Council has ever had.

There was a full delegation of printers at the meeting last night, and interest in the sessions seems to be increasing. The printers who now represent the Typographical Union are A. J. Bolwell, Joseph Maynard, James Dillon, Ernest Smith and Sam E. Anderson.

Milk Problem Discussed.

The delegates discussed the milk question, the concensus of opinion being that a central distributing depot should be established by the city to which the producers could deliver their milk, this to be distributed among the customers by civic employes. One of the reasons for the present high price of milk was held to be the overlapping of routes among the distributers.

Coal Question Up Again.

Secretary Stevens was instructed to write to Fuel Controller McGrath asking him to investigate the coal situation in Peterborough. A coal census was suggested, in order to ascertain just what householders are, and to what extent they are, hoarding fuel. One delegate cited a case where a resident ordered a load of coal from the civic yard. When the delivery man reached the house he found that the cellar already contained over ten tons of coal, and it was necessary to level it before he could find room for his own load. If this delivery man had followed the instructions of the city he would not have left the civic coal in such a place, but would have returned with his load. Some residents, it was stated last night, seem to be developing a mania for hoarding coal, just as some people store up gold or other valuables. Fuel controller McGrath is the man to stop this practice, and he will be asked not only to do so, but to commandeer coal where there is an excessive supply.

The Patriotic Fund.

The delegates are opposed to the proposition to raise $60,000 for the Patriotic Fund by a tax levy. It was held this would furnish the landlords with an excuse for raising the rents, but that when the war is over the tenats' burden will not be lightened so easily.

The majority of the delegates were in favor of abolishing the Patriotic Fund altogether. In its stead they would have the Government increase the pay of the soldiers and raise the separation allowance, grading the latter according to the number in the families of the beneficiaries. In this way everything suggestive of charity to the dependents of the soldiers would be avoided.

The suggestion that the Government take over the administration of the Fund met with scant favor, as it was held that such a change would mean a heavier expenditure than ever.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1917

THE COST OF MILK.

(Hamilton Herald.)

THAT in the distribution of milk there is costly and unnecessary overlapping of delivery routes is a fact recognized by the Food Controller's department. It is reported that the department is working on a scheme through which it will be possible to eliminate the waste by centralizing the delivery system.

The difference between the price the farmer gets for his milk and the price which the consumer pays for it delivered at his door varies in different places. In Ottawa the "spread" between the price paid the producer and the price paid by the consumer is 3¼ cents per quart. In Hamilton it is nearly 5 cents. It is hardly probable that the cost of delivery is so much higher in Hamilton than in Ottawa. More probably the Hamilton retailer gets a larger profit than the Ottawa retailer is satisfied to receive.

By eliminating overlapping of milk routes the selling price of milk could be substantially reduced probably to the extent of a cent per quart. For by a centralized system fewer horses and delivery carts would be used and fewer drivers employed. The chief objection to such a system is that people would have to take the milk sent them; they would have no choice of dealers. A good many people would prefer to pay a little extra in order to get milk from the dealer of their choice.

Probably the only workable plan of centralized milk delivery would be by way of municipal control of the system. It is doubtful if we are yet prepared for that.

WHAT HAPPENED SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

SIR WILFRID LAURIER was elected Premier of Canada for the second time seventeen years ago last Tuesday. For the second time it was the vote of an all but solid Quebec that placed him in power. His majority in that province was forty-eight seats. All the other provinces went against him except Manitoba and British Columbia, each of which gave him a majority of one.

What Sir Wilfrid Laurier accomplished in 1900 he can repeat in 1917, unless the provinces of the Dominion other than Quebec awake to the situation. Beyond a doubt he will get in Quebec this year a heavier vote and will carry more seats than he did in 1900, great as was his triumph then. If he is elected Premier on December 17 the patriotic citizens of Canada know what to expect. His manifesto has left no doubt on that question. Canada's part in the war will be abandoned; the slacker will have realized his earthly paradise. The soldiers overseas will be neglected, and the honors won by Canadian boys on the battlefield will avail nothing in bringing this war to a victorious conclusion.

THE WRONG DOORBELL.

TWO LOCAL CITIZENS have tried within as many days to draw from The Examiner a statement as to where it stands on political questions. Both met with equally indifferent success. Anyone who goes to that quarter for information as to the policy of the party is ringing the wrong doorbell. Application should be made over the way. There are other agencies than personal inclination or principle that operate in the drawing up of a political platform.

REPRESENTATION IN COUNCIL.

IT IS REVIVED regularly every year, that proposition that the method of representation in the City Council be changed from the ward system to the general vote plan, just as the members of the Board of Education are elected. The matter has been resurrected this year by Alderman McIntyre, who has given notice of a motion that the change be made.

The general vote plan was tried in this city for a number of years, and was abandoned for the ward system. It is worthy of note that more municipalities are changing to the ward plan than are adopting the system which is proposed by Alderman McIntyre.

Sectional representation is the rule in parliamentary affairs, both federal and provincial. Why it should not apply to municipalities is not apparent. Senators for Ontario are chosen at large, and the point is often raised that the representation is not fairly distributed, but that too often particular districts are given more than their share of appointees. The same objection can be raised with equal force in the case of municipalities. When a city is divided into wards, the residents stand a better chance of securing local improvements when they can apply to two aldermen, than if they are obliged to lay their request before an entire board.

The main argument used by the supporters of the general vote is that under its operation it is possible to secure a better class of men. It is harder, no doubt, to run the gauntlet of a cityful of voters than those in a single ward. It is not clear why this should be so. It will always be a question of securing good men so long as the best class of citizens seem indifferent in the matter of running for office. Changing men, however, is an easy matter compared to changing a system.

The general plan's main defect is that it tends to lessen the individual responsibility of the aldermen, who can be held to stricter account if they represent a certain section instead of the entire city. Under the ward system it is possible for their constituents to keep a close watch on their official acts and to demand an account of their stewardship at the end of every aldermanic term.

The ward system has survived repeated assaults by those who crave change in everything. It is likely to withstand the charge that Alderman McIntyre is now making against it. If it is the proper system in parliamentary representation, the same arguments can be used to sustain it in the government of municipalities. Any system is dangerous that admits of the possibility of electing all or a majority of the aldermen from one particular district.

Another vital objection to the general vote plan is the opportunity it gives for unfairness by the use of the "plumper" vote, by which electors can discriminate between candidates by voting for only one man, while duty calls on them to cast a ballot for five or more.

THOSE RED HERRINGS.

ASIDE ALTOGETHER from his attitude on conscription and his proposed management of the war, Sir Wilfrid's manifesto has nothing to commend it to the electors. He repeats promises that he made earlier in his career and never fulfilled.

Tariff reform has always been a hobby with him. During [illegible] to relieve the so-called burdens of the consumer. He was pledged to secure unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, and never obtained a single commercial advantage from the Americans.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier says that if he is returned to power he will put farm machinery on the free list at once. The duty on these articles is lower today than the figure at which he left it, having been reduced by the present Government in 1913. Any farm machinery not manufactured in this country is admitted duty free.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot consistently pose as the friend of the farmers. They are not likely to forget that he ruined the binder twine industry in this country and doubled the price of that staple to the consumers.

Free food was another of his fads, born of the desperation of hopeless opposition. That policy first saw the light at a meeting in Hamilton some years ago, and perished with the dawn of day. On all questions relating to the nation's trade Sir Wilfrid's record is against him.

WHY, THEN, DELAY?

MEN ARE SO badly needed at the front that it has been found impossible to grant a furlough even to the Canadian soldiers who have been on duty for three strenuous years. And yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier appears to hold the opinion that no more men are needed, and would play with this matter of life and death by taking a referendum to ascertain whether or not more men should be sent!

NOTES AND COMMENT.

TO BUY A WAR BOND is one way of doing your bit.

• • • •

EVERY DOLLAR invested in the Victory Loan means a step toward final triumph for the Allies.

• • • •

IT MAY BE HARD to sacrifice party affiliation, but it is vastly more difficult to make such sacrifices as the soldiers are making.

• • • •

TO A GOOD MANY Liberal tastes, the new Union Government may be quite as unpleasant as castor oil. But it is well to remember that it is necessary to take castor oil occasionally, remarks the Simcoe Reformer.

• • • •

LET DECEMBER 17 be a hopeless day for the anti-conscriptionists and a defeatless day for the Union candidates.

• • • •

THE UNITED STATES has its anti-war element in New York, just as Canada has its Quebec, but the remainder of the American nation seems to be safe and sane.

• • • •

PRETTY SOON every Laurier convention in Ontario will be regarded as more or less of a closed incident.

• • • •

PEACE BY negotiation appears to appeal to no one but the Germans.

• • • •

"PIGS IS PIGS" now, even more so than usual, but raising one for market should not be deemed sufficient to exempt some husky young fellow from military duty.

• • • •

THE WAR would never be won if the Allies fired at the Germans such blank cartridges as Sir Wilfrid Laurier keeps in stock.

• • • •

DOES IT NEVER occur to the anti-conscriptionist that if Canada quits in the war, there may soon be no country left for Canadians to govern?

Friendly Suggestion.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

Those dairy companies who are arranging to fight the sale of oleomargarine could make a good start by cutting the price of butter. This is merely a suggestion.

Sham Unionists.

Some Laurier Liberals who are still in close touch with their old leader are trying to palm themselves off as Win-the-War candidates and entitled to the support of the Union Government and its advocates. Every Union Government candidate should be required to repudiate the Opposition leader. This should be the determining test of eligibility.

High Cost of Votes.

With Dominion elections December 17, municipal elections January 1, and provincial elections next summer, one of the crying needs of the hour is a controller to prevent undue increase in the high cost of votes.

Laurier or the Soldiers?

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

To stick to Laurier is to desert the soldiers. To stick to the soldiers is to desert Laurier. The choice must be made. It is an unpleasant choice for staunch old friends; but The Telegram has no doubt that the vast majority of those old-time friends of Sir Wilfrid will make the right choice when the time to make it comes—the choice that patriotism demands.

ARCHBISHOP McNEIL SAYS HIS CHURCH IS LOYAL TO THE CAUSE

Noted Prelate of Toronto has Interesting Letter in the Star on issue of the day.

Archbishop McNeil of Toronto has written a letter to the Star of that city, which is interesting as showing how the members of his church in Ontario regard the stand taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the people of Quebec on the war issue. The letter which speaks plainly for itself is as follows:

Editor of The Star: In an edition on Friday, The Star gave prominence to an address delivered at Montreal by the Rev. E. I. Hart, attacking the Catholic Church. The speech of Mr. Hart [illegible] great institutions as pitted against each other. One is the Catholic Church. The other is the British Empire. In this way he seeks to explain the war attitude of Quebec and Ireland. If this explanation was well founded we might as well begin to prepare for whatever regime is going to succeed the British Empire, for the Catholic soldiers fighting for the cause of the allies at the front far outnumber the Protestant soldiers. Today the loyalty of the Catholic soldier and of Catholic populations is absolutely essential to the continued existence of the British Empire, and people are so confident that this loyalty can be depended on that they play with side issues which seem superficially to indicate that there is a difference between Catholics and Protestants in this war. There is no difference. We are all involved in the same issue.

Quebec and Ireland are a very small part of the Catholic Church. I am not authorized to speak for either; but I can speak for the Catholic Church in this matter. I do not need to guess or infer—I know that the Rev. E. I. Hart is wrong and mischievously wrong. The raising of false issues at this time is dangerous.

If an Englishman came to Toronto now to upbraid us for spending so much money on motor cars and other luxuries, we might resent his interference, but we should have to confess among ousselves that we deserved the reproach. But if he went on to inveigh against the clergy of the city as lacking patriotism and opposed to the cause of the Allies on the ground that they encouraged the useless expenditure of money needed for that cause, I think he would then be engaged in a mischievous campaign.

Thirty years ago we all held in Canada the opinion which still prevails in parts of Quebec. We looked upon ourselves as British colonists depending on England for defence against any public enemy. Sir Charles Tupper often argued that Canada contributed to the defence of the Empire by production and by facilities of communication, and should not be asked to do more. No one ever thought of accusing him of disloyalty on that account. It is worse than unfair to impeach as disloyal those Canadians who still think as Tupper did. The sentiment of Canadian nationality has grown lusty since his day. It is unreasonable to expect it to grow with equal increase in all parts of the Dominion. As for loyalty, its real test is found in obedience to the law. No part of Canada has yet been found wanting in such obedience. Not until the law is disobeyed will it be time to talk of disloyalty.

[illegible] race are loyal to the Empire more by reasoned submission than by sentiment. They perform their legal duties. They share the financial burdens of the State without complaint. Many of athem are even enthusiastic in their support of British institutions. But the ties of blood are not the same in their case as in ours. Quebec differs from Ontario both in race and religion. The mistake of the Rev. E. I. Hart is that of attributing to religion certain phenomena which belong properly to race.

Ireland is a different case. The summary given by Lionel Curtis in his "Project of a Commonwealth" will do as well as another to suggest the explanation. Referring to the eighteenth century, he says:

A series of laws was passed depriving Catholics (of Ireland) of the right to vote and excluding them from the (city) corporations, from the magistracy, from the bar, from the bench, from the grand juries, from the vestries, and from the army and navy. They might not be sheriffs or solicitors, or even gamekeepers or constables. They were forbidden to possess any arms or a horse worth more than five pounds. No Catholic could be a guardian, and all wards in Chancery were brought up as Protestants. The land of a Catholic was divided among his children, but if an eldest son conformed to the Protestant religion the father was reduced to the position of a tenant for life and the property secured to the Protestant son. . . The most malignant of these measures were those designed to confine education to the Protestant colonists."

These laws were all repealed when they had effected their purpose, more than a hundred years later. But the iron which entered the Irish Catholic soul in the process still shows itself. There is no need of invoking the attitude of the Catholic Church of today, as an explanation of the mentality of the Irish.

The British Government and the Canadian Government would oppose strenuously today the removel of the moderating influence of the Catholic Church in Ireland and Quebec.

NEIL McNEIL,
Archbishop.

THE GIRL AT THE CENTRAL

Mme. Housewife and Mr. Office Manager, imagine yourself strapped to a telephone several hours a day with every sort of voice talking into your ear, voices too faint, too loud, untrained, indistinct, yelling voices, whispering voices, bad pronunciation, worse enunciation! You would probably be raving before the end of an hour, to say nothing of being rankly impolite!

Doubtless listening on a wire without nerve shock can become a habit, just as unruffled politeness can become a habit.

The fault with the man or the woman at your end of the wire, Mr. Office Manager and Mrs. Housewife, is that he or she is too likely to forget that at the other end is not a machine but a delicate human mechanism. Electric wire can carry forever all your ill tempered talk and never be marred. But the delicate ear at the central receiver leads to delicate nerves, vastly more marvelous than all the electric inventions in the world.

What you shout at and command, may be a frail girl, as sweet and refined and ambitious as your daughter. She may be a girl of sensitive body and brain, with a heart as big as all out doors, loving and sympathetic and most lovable.

Moreover, she may be supporting her mother or her sisters by sitting at a telephone desk, and her work may be as important and as dignified to her as yours to you.

That girl may be loved of some man as fine as you, Mr. Office Manager, or as your husband, Mrs. Housewife. Some day she may be the mother of citizens on whom the country will depend for its stamina and its strength. So why be rude to any one so necessary to her employer, her mother, her lover, her nation and your nation?

Of course every "central" is schooled to make the best of your harsh words and I am sure it is less of a nerve wear on her than we think. But why yell and get "mad" when the "stupidity and slowness" may be yours, your impossible mumbling, muffled voice? Listen to central's talk and try to imitate her, for she has been trained to the business.

Though your yelling may not hurt the operator, it does two things. It impedes a public convenience, like the lumbering trucks on the street car track that get you all fussed up when you are in a hurry. Also, it hurts you first in the ill effects of temper and, second, in the hardening of your sympathies toward a fellow human being and worker.

Mrs. Housewife, Mr. Office Manager, number, please, but don't yell. When you yell at central and display your bad manners she certainly has "got your number."

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

Last nite us fellows started to play kings and things, Sid Hunt starting it [illegible] backwards and wawking up and down yelling. Ding a ling, Im a king and I dont give a bing for enything.

And they all 3 kepp on yelling wat hey was, and I put my cap on backwerds and started to run up and down swinging my arms erround yelling, Im a kaiser, Im a kaiser, and no matter how smart you are, Im twice as wiser.

Editor Review: Occasionally I see something in the papers to the effect that the chiefs of the Canadian Indians are working for the franchise. Our own chief at the Chemong Reserve is one of these. If he or any other Indian wants the vote, all they have to do is to move off the reserve and become Canadian citizens. They can get the franchise without fighting for it.

There are any number of Indians here who do not want the franchise with all that it entails. They are those who cannot read or write and who, through lack of training, are not able to hold their own in competition with the whites. Leave well enough alone, is our motto.

OLD TIMES AND OURS.

Comparison of Standard of Music And a Few Years Ago.

When Canadians or Americans begin to deplore the backward conditions of public taste [illegible] doubt, one should not be too deeply impressed. Perhaps a comparison of the standard of musical appreciation today with that of a few decades ago would cheer the deplorers. How many lovers of piano music ever heard of Henri Herz? He came to America in the later '40's of last century and after a course of circus advertising undertook a tour of the leading American cities. The climax of the programme of New Orleans was a piece arranged for eight pianos and sixteen performers, Herz being one. Preliminary rehearsals had been held by the fifteen amateurs, all young women, but on the night of the performance one of the girls was ill. A fashionable lady in one of the boxes was asked to take the sick girl's place. She protested that she did not know a note of music. M. Herz instructed her to go through the motions of playing without striking the keys of the piano, and she consented. But in the middle of this wonderful composition, there was a long rest. Everyone stopped but the one who was faking. She continued making motions as instructed and, to use a colloquialism, put the concert on the Fritz.

Herz could not get an engagement in these days as third substitute pianist in a moving picture house. Seventy years ago his faking did not prevent him from being immensely popular, not only in America but in Europe. There was the case also of Bon Meyer, who debased his art, and pleased his audiences by silly mannerisms. For example, he sat in the audience until his number on the programme was reached. Then he would pull off his overcoat, and, in the words of Fridburg, "ran up to the stage." He was in the habit of playing some passages with the thumbs alone, providing music-box effects, bell-ringing probably with double-sixths as the vaudevillians sometimes do today—and sometimes he even played a variation with his walking stick. Perhaps after a course of this kind of pianoplaying, the well-known mining-town sign was inspired, "Don't shoot the piano-player. He is doing his best." Perhaps this sign is our first proof of the cleansing of public taste.

Considering what musicians themselves have done in America to tickle the ears of the groundlings, the rise of musical taste on this continent has been phenomenal. Certainly we have no reason to be discouraged. The rise of the talking machine and the invention of the player piano have done much to spread about a knowledge of good music and will do more.

PAY THE ARTIST.

Six times in one week a Toronto violinist making his living out of music was asked to give his services for a concert organized to aid some charity. Being a man of obliging temper he complied with three of the requests and for the others pleaded previous engagements. It seems extraordinary that the organizer of an entertainment is willing to pay for the hall, or the printing of tickets and programmes and for a dozen other incidentals, and unwilling to pay for the services of those who alone make the entertainment tolerable. The competent soloist has spent more time and, commonly, more money than is required to make a lawyer. Yet the man who expects a lawyer to give free advice has mental peculiarities. One does not suggest that the soloist should maintain a fixed price. There are times when he is only too willing to play at a reduced figure, but in any case the public should understand that some fee is necessary to retain his services. As for amateurs, that is another question.

A FLUTE VIRTUOSO.

Music Arranged Primarily For Wind Instruments.

Mr. Georges Barrere is well-known in all musical circles as the brilliant flute soloist of the New York Symphony Orchestra. But he is more than that. He is regarded as a scholar of more than common attainments and his researches in the field of musical literature have been of great public advantage. He has been on the alert for years to discover music arranged primarily for wind instruments and has formed various societies for their public performance. At present the Barrere Trio is his special child. It is composed of a flute, a violoncello and a harp, surely a combination that may be considered unique in our times. Mr. Trio will be heard in Montreal, and Barrere is the flautist, Mr. Paul Kefer plays the 'celo, and the harpist is Mr. Carlos Salzedo. Engagements are being taken and it is expected that the musicians will visit, perhaps, in other Canadian cities. There is a vast deal of chamber music of the seventeenth and eighteenth century that gets scant attention in these days of sound and fury. The business of writing delicate concerted music for the salon of some wealthy patron was faced by every composer of distinction. After the rise of the string quartette, rightly regarded as the ideal combination for intimate music, the flute fell on evil days. It became old-fashioned though of course it still held its place in the symphony orchestra. That there are possibilities still of delighting the public with concordant wind is the art creed of Mr. Barrere and his associates.

TRIUMPHANT NOTE.

Listen to Four Thousand in a Big Gathering Sing.

Certain names are handed down from generation to generation in connection with one thing and one thing only. Edward Perronet, of French extraction, is remembered and will be remembered in one connection and one only, as the man who gave to the world what is said to be the most triumphant hymn in the English language, a sort of British Te Deum, one that has made the tunes, "Coronation" and "Miles Lane" famous. That sacred song is "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" to the tune "Coronation," it is most impressive.

An interesting anecdote is told of Perronet. According to it, John Wesley was very anxious to hear Perronet preach; but for some reason the latter was determined not to gratify the wish. One evening Wesley noticed Perronet in his congregation and determined to make use of the opportunity. He therefore announced that Perronet would preach the next morning. At the appointed time the composer of the famous hymn stepped into the pulpit, and told the people that he appeared before them contrary to his wish, his consent never having been asked. Although he felt himself very weak and ill prepared he would give them the best sermon that had ever been delivered. Then he read the "sermon on the mount" and without a single word of his own in the way of comment he closed the service with singing and prayer. Perhaps his voice and expression were such that his very reading was musical.

FLIMSY CLAIM TO EVADE DUTY

FARMER DIVIDES FARM WITH FOUR SONS, EACH OF WHOM IS NOW A "FARMER."

Now that the Exemption Tribunals are sitting, no doubt many claims for exemption from military service will be found of too flimsy a nature to be allowed. For instance, here is one so glaringly apparent as nothing but an attempt to impose on the tribunal and defeat the ends of the act that it is a pity its perpetrator cannot be made an example of.

A farmer working his own land will of course be exempted, at least so it is understood. Well, a certain owner of a two hundred and fifty acre farm since the proclamation of the Military Service Act deeded to each of his four sons fifty acres of that farm. Each son erected a shack on his lot, and now it is understood will claim exemption as a farmer. The real object of the transference and building operations of the beneficiaries seems quite clear without comment.

IS SIR SAM TO HAVEWALKOVER?

LIBERALS IN HIS RIDING ARE UNABLE TO AGREE ON A CANDIDATE.

A meeting of prominent Liberals was held in the office of Mr. L. V. O'Connor in Lindsay, when the question of selecting a candidate for the coming election was discussed. Mr. Geo. Isaac, of Fenelon Falls, was among those present.

It is understood that there was a division of the forces, some in favor of bringing out a Laurier candidate, others of a straight Liberal candidate and others a Union Government candidate. It is stated, however, that if a candidate is selected at all, the majority favored a straight Liberal.

Liberals are non-committal as to the possibility of allowing Sir Sam. Hughes to be elected by acclamation, although Liberals on the street, who were not invited to the caucus, stated that he was entitled to the honor.

She Had Suffered For 20 Long Years

MRS. MORRIS HAD RHEUMATISM SO BAD SHE COULDN'T WALK. FINDS RELIEF AT LAST.

"Words can only partially describe the suffering I endured before I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs Mary Morris, of 462 St. Johns road, Toronto, a few days ago.

"For twenty years," continued Mrs. Morris, "I have tried in vain to get relief from stomach trouble, kidney disorders, and rheumatism, and when I began taking Tanlac I was a confirmed invalid. During all these years I haven't been able to eat without suffering afterwards. My stomach was all upset, I had no appetite, I simply had to force myself to eat, and then my food would sour and bloat me up terribly. I suffered all the time from indigestion and was constantly belching up my food sour and undigested. My kidneys worried me nearly all the time, and during the past three years I developed rheumatism, which started first in my shoulders and arms and then got down into my lower limbs, and for more than two and a half years I have almost been an invalid. I was so crippled up that I could'nt walk; I couldn't even dress myself, and the misery was almost unbearable. Sometimes the pain was like a knife cutting in; then again it was a dull, throbbing pain that seemed close to the bone. My legs would puff up and my joints were so stiff and hurt so I could hardly move them. At times I had cramps in my legs until they felt like they would almost draw double, and no one, unless they have suffered the same way, knows what I had to endure.

"Well, I have spent lots of money for medicines of different kinds, but was never able to find anything to do me one bit of good. I had almost given up in despair, but Tanlac has already done me a world of good, and I believe now I am going to get sound and well. I have just started on my third bottle of Tanlac, and I can tell that I am improving every day. The rheumatism doesn't bother me anything like it did, and I feel stronger and more vigorus than I have in a long time. While I haven't taken Tanlac long enough to say it has done wonders for me, I can say it is doing me good, and that's more than I can say for any other medicine I ever took. I am certainly well pleased with the results I have gotten from Tanlac so far, and I'm going to keep on taking it, as I believe my relief will soon be complete."

CLEANSES THE LITTLE LIVER AND BOWELS AND THEY GET WELL QUICK.

When your child suffers from a cold, don't wait, give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish, or has a sore throat, give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs" to evacuate the bowels, no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

November 11th to 17th is the International Y.M.C.A. week for prayer, and will be observed by the local Association as follows:

A meeting at the Y.M.C.A. building for young men on Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock (speaker to be announced later), and a special program in connection with each of the Bible Classes to be held during the week.

The General Secretary represented the local Association at the Y.M.C.A. National Convention at Ottawa, November 2nd to 5th, there being present at this Convention one hundred and seventy-seven delegates from all parts of the Dominion. Two leaders representing the British National Council and four representing the Y.M.C.A. International Committee were also in attendance. As this was the first National Convention held in five years, it was necessary that a large part of the sessions be devoted to the business that has accumulated owing to the fact that the National Convention has been deferred on account of the war. The main item of business that occupied the attention of the Convention was the seting up of a program to be followed by the Canadian Associations immediately following the close of the war. The Y.M.C.A. is occupying a very prominent place in the world today, especially in connection with war work, but it is felt that reactions are likely to follow the close of the war which will present great problems to the Association movement.

The Convention speakers were of the opinion that the soldiers at the front had deeper religious convictions than the men at home, but that there was likely to be a need for a strong evangelical program to touch every Canadian man immediately after the war. The Y.M.C.A. National Council is suggesting a coast to coast evangelical effort some what similar to the "Men-and-Religion" movement that was so successful in the States a few years ago. The Association leaders have conferred with nine of the leading religious denominations in Canada, seven of which have already given assurance that they are willing to co-operate in such an effort. Every Association is asked to emphasize the religious work among men as never before.

The strongest address of the Convention was delivered by Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the International Committee, who pictured the world situation in a masterly way. He proved a strong defender of Russia, which he said had been called upon to meet four crisis at once—a test that no other nation in the world's history had ever been called upon to meet. He felt that if the Y.M.C.A. work had been as thoroughly organized among the Russian troops as among the British and French the situation would to a large extent have been saved. Dr. Mott asked for nine hundred men to be immediately distributed among Russia, Italy and the American troops that are now in France, and also expressed the need for an unlimited number of men to work among the American soldiers now in training in the United States.

A pleasant feature of the Convention was the presentation of a series of moving pictures which had been taken of the Y.M.C.A. work in England and France. These pictures are to be released and shown by various moving picture circuits throughout Canada. When they strike Peterboro every person should attend, because Dr. R. W. Frank and Charlie Thorpe are shown as prominent winners of athletic contests at the Shorncliffe camp.

A meeting of the Religious Work Committee of the local Y.M.C.A. will be held the fore part of next week to consider suggestions growing out of the Convention.

LABOR MAN IN CALGARY.

Calgary, Nov. 8.—Labor representatives have nominated William E. Irvine to contest East Calgary as labor's representative. The labor league's policy favors universal conscription in a vigorous prosecution of the war so that peace can be obtained without annexation, but is opposed to conscription of man power without conscription of wealth.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 891 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

ROYAL BANK

following G. W. V. A. executive: President Harvey Staunton, Secretary Whatley, R. H. Muir, G. E. Coleman, Fred Haggart, T. W. Quinn, Walter Hughes and Edward Bird.

President Staunton opened the proceedings by stating that since last meeting the Veterans had two propositions under favorable consideration—the upper flat of the Royal Bank building and the Peterborough Club. However, he pointed out that were the former proposition decided on it must be borne in mind that were the membership of the G. W. V. A. to grow at the present rate of increase, larger quarters would be needed in a year; and the Veterans would like to be assured on this point. It looks as though the association would have a membership of 400 or 500 a year from now, in which case the Royal Bank building would not be large enough.

The Peterborough Club.

Mr. G. N. Gordon said the Peterborough Club proposition had been put to the first public meeting. Since then, however, a feeling had gone abroad that the premises were not suitable for the veterans; therefore the club's officers had not been approached on the subject. These officers, continued Mr. Gordon, are men of high standing in the community, who had made sacrifices to the war. They are generous and patriotic enough, he felt assured, to do everything possible to meet the veterans' requirements. Perhaps they would allow the club in conjunction with its members. The membership is not as large as before the war, many having enlisted and others, for various reasons, spending but little time there now at night.

Mrs. Morris—"Would the Veterans be satisfied to use the Club in conjunction with its members?"

President Staunton—"The general feeling is that we would like the building for our own use exclusively."

Mrs. Medd questioned if the Club would be willing to give up the building for a year or two.

The Mayor—"It would be advisable to appoint a sub-committee to meet the officers of the Peterborough Club and ascertain their views. As to the Royal Bank flat, a few minor alterations could readily be made to meet the Veterans' requirements. Its rent would be $300 a year, with heat. Lighting would have to be arranged for."

Mrs. Wedd—"The up-keep of the Royal Bank proposition would be more in keeping with war times, from a point of economy, than that of the Peterborough Club, which would be heavy."

Mr. Peck understood that the Peterborough Club proposition had been abandoned in favor of the Royal Bank building. However, the veterans, he declared, are entitled to have in the city quarters adequate to their needs, and he was satisfied citizens would come forward with the funds necessary to properly equip and maintain temporary premises while the war lasts, with permanent quarters to follow.

Comrade Coleman was satisfied that a new and large building would be needed at the end of a year.

Comrade Muir—"Who is going to bear the expense of maintaining the Peterborough Club? Light and heat would be a big item alone, and a caretaker would cost $600 a year. The Veterans are not going to pay any such cost of maintenance and I would not like to see it saddled on to the citizens. The G.W.V.A. with its present membership, could not bear the expense."

Appeal to the Public.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman thought a sub-committee should make a choice of either proposition, estimate the expense connected therewith, and then appeal to the public.

Mrs. Morris—"The Peterborough Club would be expensive to keep up; the coal bill alone would be a big item, and there would have to be a caretaker. At present a man and his wife are kept on the premises, and before the war a steward also was employed."

Mrs. Morris thought the money for this up-keep might be better applied on rent for the Royal Bank scheme, in which event there would also be a saving for furnishings.

Mr. Gordon—"It is not suggested that the Veterans pay for the up-keep of the Peterborough Club. Its members might be willing to still pay their fees, and allow the veterans use of the building."

Mrs. Morris—"I agree with Mr. Gordon that the members of the Peterborough Club are generous and patriotic, they have given their sons to the war, they contribute to all public and patriotic calls, and it would not be fair to ask them to assume the extra expense of upkeep which would be entailed by the Veterans using the Club.

To Mr. Gordon, Mrs. Morris declared this extra expense in upkeep would be equal to the rent of the Royal Bank premises.

Asked which proposition the Veterans preferred, President Staunton replied: "If it is possible to get the Peterborough Club, we would like it very much."

It was here pointed out that Mr. Denham, President of the Peterborough Club is away, and might not return for a week or ten days.

President Staunton thought a subcommittee should be appointed to meet the Peterborough Club's officials. "If the question is settled in a week or ten days we shall be perfectely satisfied."

Mrs. Medd—"The Royal Bank flat could be made very much more comfortable and at less expense."

Mr. Peck—"It is up to us to be guided by what the Veterans say. Personally, I prefer the Royal Bank proposition. But we citizens owe so much to the Vetearns that we must try and meet their wishes in every respect," [illegible]

CANNOT GET STATEMENT ON UNION FROM EXAMINER

Mr. J. W. Worth Attempts in Vain to Have Our Contemporary State its Attitude on Leading Issue.

Mr. J. W. Worth, in common with other citizens is naturally curious to know how the Examiner stands on the question of Union Government. In a letter addressed to that newspaper last night he attempted to draw it out but as usual our cautious contemporary side-steps the issue. The letter of Mr. Worth and the Examiner's reply are here given:

Dear Sir.—It is exceedingly interesting and illuminating to notice how anxious the Examiner is to see the former member for West Peterborough, Capt. Burnham, retire from public life.

You have been constantly urging us to have a union convention here in Peterborough as in other places. The idea is admirable as far as it goes, but it does not always apply to local conditions, as witness many constituencies in Ontario.

We have also had speakers here from the so-called Win-the-War League, urging us to call a union convention. These men were ignorant of local conditions and would not have come here at all if they had known they were doing so to satisfy the personal grudge of a few men, and were therefore made catspaws by them.

The Examiner, as the official mouth-piece of the Liberal party here in Peterborough, has not once declared whether it is in favor of union government or not.

We hear now, instead, rumors from authoritative sources, that the Liberals are going to nominate Mr. R. R. Hall as their candidate and that he will run as a straight Liberal Laurier.

Now, shouldn't we have been foolish if we had called a new convention and perhaps had a few Liberals help foist a weak candidate upon us, however well intentioned, to afterwards fight the wiles of an experienced politician like Mr. Hall.

No, let us say, as Lord Salisbury said, "Let well enough alone," and let us stick to a man who is already a candidate and whose patri-

MISTOOK HIM FOR A GERMAN

WHEN WOUNDED, CANADIAN SOLDIER STRIPPED OF ALL HIS CLOTHES.

Rev. J. H. Teney, 164 Keewatin avenue, and rector of St. Philip's Church, Toronto, has received a letter from his son, Pte. Arthur Teney, who was wounded last August. The letter, in part, is as follows:

"You would hardly know me now. I am so decorated up. What with my gold stripe, red bomb and good conduct stripe, all on one sleeve, I am quite lop-sided. I resemble a French soldier for ornaments. When I was wounded all my clothes were cut off me by the stretcher-bearers, and a German overcoat was thrown over me. When I got down to the dressing station behind the lines nobody paid any attention to me, and I watched the fellows going away in the ambulance. These men were not so badly wounded as myself. At last I called a doctor over to where I was stretched out on a stretcher, and asked him what was the matter.

"Oh," he said, "I thought you were a Hun. I'll get you away in the next ambulance." What a joke on me. You see, I had a German coat over me and a three weeks' growth of whiskers, and was too sick to speak before. It was bad enough to be wounded, but worse to be mistaken for a Boche.

Private Teney is an old Omemee boy, and his many friends here will be much interested in his welfare.

The Late Thomas Johnston.

The death of Thomas Johnston took place quite suddenly at his home in Bailieboro on Friday afternoon, Nov. 2.

Deceased had been in his usual good health up to a few hours of his death, when he was stricken with spinal meningitis. He was 75 years of age, was well known and highly respected. In religion he was a Methodist and politically a Conservative.

The funeral took place the same evening, his remains being laid to rest in Bailieboro Cemetery, Rev. M. Leigh conducting the services.

His wife, one daughter, Miss Ella at home, two sons, James H. of Bailieboro, William of Lancaster, N.Y., and Hugh of Waters, Man., and a sister, Mrs. Jane McClung of Delhia, U.S.A., survive him and to whom we extend sincere condolence.

Late John Pritchard.

In the passing away of Mr. John Pritchard on the afternoon of Oct. 29th, there passed away one of the outstanding pioneers of the Township of Cavan. Born on the farm where he died, 78 years ago the 19th of last month; the farm in its present state of cultivation as well as his comfortable home and barns, stand as a monument to his untiring energy and painstaking effort. His wife predeceased him nineteen years ago. With his only son and wife and children he has found in the intervening years congenial companionship and many a thoughtful and tactful act, to convince him of a loving son, a thoughtful daughter-in-law and devoted grandchildren.

In the welfare of his community, in the interests of those in trouble, he was at all times a considerate neighbor, a wise councellor and a just friend to those whose interests were entrusted to him. Early in life he became actively identified with the Presbyterian Church in Millbrook. Like many another great man, he never sought office, however, when the need arose, and the case was presented to him, he never faltered in trying to do his duty, or in filling the office to the best of his ability. When elected elder he wished to be excused on account of his youth, but realizing that it was the expression of the congregation's confidence in him, he said, "I accept the office, conscious of weakness and defects, at the same time knowing the source of power to everyone who wishes to do his Master's will." In all the long years that have intervened he never missed being in his place on a communion season, except last Sabbath. For nine long weeks he has been confined to his bed, at times suffering intense pain, which was borne with Christian fortitude.

In politics he was a staunch Liberal, a man whose word was dependable. So much was he admired and appreciated that on more than one occasion he filled offices of trust and responsibility. The large number of relations and friends and neighbors who called to see him during his illness, and the large concourse of people who gathered at the home on Thursday afternoon was a fine tribute to the work and worth of God's noblemen. The services were in charge of Rev. Wm. Johnston of Ashburn, a former pastor of Millbrook congregation for 20 years, a man to whom Mr. Pritchard seemed to be knit. Dr. Lee, the present pastor, Rev. Mr. Craw of Springville and Rev. Mr. Clarke of Cavanville assisted in the services at the home. In the course of his address, Mr. Johnston spoke of his unfaltering interest in the church at home and at large, his abiding trust in his Lord and Redeemer, his sterling character and outspokeness, his hatred of all pretence and sham and show, his love of the simple, clear presentation of God's message to mankind, by men royal in nature, through contact with the unseen Christ. At the request of the deceased there were no flowers, expressing as he did that at the present time the money could be used to better advantage in the care of the suffering and feeding of the world. The hymns sung were favorites of the deceased and of his own choosing. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston sang sweetly.

After the benediction was pronounced the six elders, Messrs. Matthew Gardiner, John Steele, Alex Hunter, D. J. Hunter, Dr. Jemison and T. A. Kelly, carried reverently the remains of their fellow worker, and the long cortege wended its way to God's acre, leaving there all that is mortal of one of the great ones of this township. There upon the hill his ashes lie, awaiting the call of Him who will summon mankind before Him to receive a just reward for their stewardship in time. May we all alike be useful in life and honored in death.

We extend heartfelt sympathy to those bereaved.

Exemption Tribunal

at ten o'clock, with Constable Pratt on duty to maintain order in case of a rush. There was just one claim presented and considered. This tribunal is presided over by Judge Huycke and Police Magistrate Dumble, with Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg in sharge of military interests.

Joseph Frith, 266 Euclid Avenue, was the first and only claimant this morning. He is 32 years of age, and asks exemption on the grounds that he has a step-father, who together with his mother, is of advanced age. He has one brother and sister, both in the West, and he contends that his presence in Peterborough is necessary to look after his parents. However, his parents are in independent circumstances and he does not reside with them.

Frith had not been medically examined, and this tribunal, like that in the Council Chamber, decided not to pass judgment until he had secured a medical certificate grading him where he belongs.

The tribunal adjourned at noon until two o'clock.

Sessions will continue until six p.m. each evening.

DAY OF PRAYERS FOR ALL EMPIRE

London, Nov. 8.—The King has addressed a letter "To my people," appointing Sunday, January 6th, as "a special day of prayer and thanksgiving in all the churches throughout my Dominions."

The King says:

"The world-wide struggle for the triumph of right and liberty is entering upon its last and most difficult phase. The enemy is striving by desperate assault and subtle intrigue to perpetuate the wrongs already committed and to stem the tide of a free civilization. We have yet to complete the great task to which more than three years ago we dedicated ourselves.

"At such a time I would call upon you to devote a special day of prayer, that we may have the clearsightedness and strength necessary to the victory of our cause."

If all men wanted work, there would be but few overworked.

Demands of the Times

The military manoeuvres. All afternoon the attackers had attacked and the defenders defended with conspicuous lack of incident or bravery. Operations were beginning to drag horribly when the white flag went up.

The officers in command of the attackers started in amazement.

"A flag of truce!" he exclaimed. "What do they want?"

The sergeant major endeavored to cover up a smile.

"They say, sir," he reported, "that, as it's tea time, they'd like to exchange a couple of privates for a can of condensed milk if you can afford it."—London Answers.

Clever Wives.

"Every time Billinger goes in bathing he gets cramps."

"I should think it would worry his wife."

"It did, but she's fixed him all right. She made a bathing suit for him and declared he must wear it every time he goes in."

"Well?"

"And now he won't go near the water."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Even.

Two little six-year-old girls who had been former neighbors, but who had moved to different parts of the city, met after a lapse of six months and were swapping the news.

"I have a surprise for you," said one little girl. "Our cat hatched four kittens."

"That's nothing," replied the other little girl. "Our dog laid four puppies."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Not an Even Break.

Rex and Tommy had been inattentive the whole morning, and the teacher said that each must write his name 200 times as a punishment. Presently when the rest of the class had gone home Tommy was found crying bitterly.

"It's not fair," he sobbed. "Rex has only got to write Rex Dun 200 times, but my name's Thomas O'Shaughnessy."—Dundee Advertiser.

The greatest obstacle which stands in the way of providing very young or new-born lambs with artificial coats or blankets to protect them from sudden changes in temperature or from storms until their own coats are heavy enough to serve the purpose, is the fact that the covering material is likely to destroy the lamb odor by which the mother recognizes her offspring.

A blanket has been invented which leaves enough of the lamb's neck and body exposed to satisfy the mother as to the lamb's identity and at the same time covers the vital portions of the body snugly. It is composed of a waterproof outer canvas, with a soft woolen lining. Four elastic loops fasten it on.

Marimba Music.

The marimba is a musical instrument found among the primitive peoples. One type is found in Angola, Africa. There are about 19 keys of hardwood attached to a semi-circular framework. Hollow gourds arranged according to size are fastened to the under side. Each gourd besides its mouth has a small hole in its side covered with a membrane taken from spiders' sticks that are tipped with rubber. In South America the marimbas have sound boxes of wood instead of the gourds.—Illustrated World.

Game of Garibaldi.

In playing this game it must be remembered that Garibaldi does not contain "e's;" therefore no word containing the letter "e" must be used in answering the questions asked.

All the players sit in a circle, and the game begins by one asking his left hand neighbor, "What will you give to Garibaldi?" and the answer must be given before the leader finishes waving his hand slowly three times or a forfeit must be paid. Then the one questioned turns to the one next to him on the left and asks him the same question, and so on around the circle. For instance, one would give a gun, one a book, one a sword and belt. This last having an "e" in it, a forfeit must be given.

Reassuring Information Forthcoming In a Moment of Suspense.

"I WON'T mention the time, the place or the girl," says a busy correspondent, with whom we now get even by taking a leaf from his own book and not mentioning him either. "But I dropped into a certain dump for my supper the other night and ordered. For side dishes—I was allowed two with the meat—I took string beans and fresh peas.

"The waitress came in with the grub, but the beans were missing. I knew they'd be along on the next tray, so I said nothing about it. But I had eaten the meat before the waitress appeared again. She leaned against the table and said in a stage whisper:

"'I wanna tell ya about them beans. We ain't got no beans. The chef says they ain't fit ter eat. The cat hadda fit an' fell in the pot where the beans an' peas was cookin' together. Scalded her so much she lost all her hair.'

"'But, my goodness,' said I, 'you brought the peas, and I ate them! Surely if the peas didn't suffer the'—

"'Oh, the peas is all right. The chef run them through a sieve. But the beans is ruined.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Firewood in Sweden.

On Stockholm's boulevards half the ground space is covered house-high with piles of firewood, while every open place presents the same picture. Numerous steamers are bringing props every week to port before the water freezes in October or November. Sweden in this way is to a certain extent making herself independent of English and German coal for the time being.

STORE LATE VEGETABLES.

[Prepared by department of agriculture.]

A cool, well ventilated cellar under the dwelling offers good conditions for the storage of late vegetables. In cellars that are too warm on account of containing a furnace for heating the dwelling a room may be partitioned off either in one corner or at one end of the cellar, where the temperature may be controlled by means of outside windows.

Barrels, crates, boxes or bins may be used as containers for the various vegetables, but movable containers are preferable to built in bins, as it is possible to remove them for cleaning. It is advisable to construct shelves or a slat floor to keep the crates, boxes, baskets and other containers off the ground. This is highly desirable to insure a free circulation of air and to prevent the containers from harboring mice, rats and vermin. Shelves for canned goods along one side of the room need not be more than six inches wide.

Sporting Writer Marvels at the Armor worn by the Catcher and the Yelling of the Fans.

England is making strenuous effort to understand and appreciate things American these days and is making a success of everything except baseball. At baseball England balks, although it professes to see in the game a semblance to a schoolboy game known to the English as "rounders."

Head Incased in a Cage.

A writer in the Manchester Guardian, after having witnessed a game of baseball by Canadian soldiers, marvels most at the elaborate protective armor of the player and describes the catcher as "the man who stands behind the batsman and stops the missed balls." Detailing the "protective armor" of the catcher, the writer says:

"His head is incased in a cage of metal and leather and a thickly padded covering protects his body from the neck down."

Here is the Manchester Guardian's description of the game:

"A baseball match was played by Canadian soldiers on Fairfield common, Buxton. It made upon the observer's mind a curious blurred impression of something at once familiar and foreign. We have all played a form of baseball in our school days, for baseball is the old game of 'rounders' much elaborated, and in spite of the strange guise in which it revisits us from across the Atlantic one gives affectionate recognition to it as an old friend. But the enthusiasm of reunion suffers a speedy check, and is succeeded by feelings of reserve and shyness.

Puzzling Changes in Game.

"There are puzzling changes both in the form and the manner of the game. There is a fierce swiftness and force in the play which the school game did not possess. The rules are different. Surprising effects follow a catch out or a complete run around; and what was there in the school game to correspond with the equipment of the players?

"Most striking is the elaborate protective armor of the player, who, for want of knowledge of the terms of the game, we will call the wicket-keeper—though there are, of course, no wickets—the player who stands behind the batsman and stops the missed balls. His head is incased in a cage of metal and leather, a thickly padded covering protects his body from the neck downward, his shins are guarded and he wears on one hand, in common with the men who are fielding, a great padded glove, to act as a buffer to the ball when its swift flight is suddenly stopped.

Rather to Be Heard Than Seen.

"It is said that a baseball match, for the uninitiated at any rate, is a thing rather to be heard than to be seen. It requires not merely skilled players, but a body of spectators properly trained in the art of shouting encouragement, advice, warning and stimulating invective.

"Buxton people, though they have seen a number of these matches, played, do not seem to have caught the fever and the Canadians who were in the crowd on Saturday were too few and too widely dispersed to give an effective demonstration of how the game should be played by the spectators."

GIANTS OF OLD.

The never ending argument as to whether the old time ring stars were better fighting men than those of today is being waged more fiercely than ever as a result of the recent death of Bob Fitzsimmons and the great boxing of Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard. Many of the veteran fight fans are willing to admit that Leonard had a few superiors even in those "good old days," but when Bob Fitzsimmons, who held the middleweight as well as the heavyweight title at one time, is contrasted with the present middleweight champion, Al McCoy, there is little more to be said. When it is remembered that the man who defeated Jim Corbett and knocked out such great fighters as Tom Sharkey and Gus Runlin and cut the mighty Jeffries to ribbons actually weighed several lighter than the dub who now holds his old title it must be admitted that "there were giants in those days."

WALTER JOHNSON'S BIRTHDAY

Humboldt, Allen county, Kansas, join on Tuesday with Washington, D.C., in celebrating the twenty-ninth birthday of that illustrious American, Walter Perry Johnson, who is considered one of the pitching marvels of the century. At the beginning of the season which has just closed it looked very much as if Johnson's biggest days were over, but he managed to end the playing year with more games won than any of the American league pitchers, with the exception of three. Johnson is of Scotch and German ancestry. His father and mother were Pennsylvanians. In his youth he went to California, where he played ball with amateur and school nines. In 1905 Tacoma in the Northwestern league, signed him, but turned him over to Weiser, in the Idaho State league. Although only sixteen, he won nine out of ten games he pitched for that team. He remained with Weiser, after having failed to get a tryout with Los Angeles, until he was sold to Washington. He was then eighteen years old. It was with this team that he developed into the pitching star he is considered today, despite his recent slump. Johnson is six feet, one inch tall, weighs 185 pounds and has a reach just two inches less than seven feet. Scientific tests show that his first ball travels at the rate of 122 feet per second.

Big Scheme!

Any one who has handled a baby carriage knows how hard it is to get it up and down the porch steps alone without jarring and jolting. A very simple device is proving a saving both to the carriage and to the mother in one suburban home. Two boards about three or four inches while were nailed to the steps securely, exactly as far apart as the wheels of the carriage. They were cut to fit the top of the step and the walk smoothly. Down this track the heavy carriage with baby in it rolls as easily as on the sidewalk. The boards are painted to match the step and are not at all unsightly.

Y. M. C. A.

A new class league was formed yesterday afternoon, the school boys "A" organizing for competition in games, athletics, attendance, etc. Class "A" are using automobile names for the teams, and the names chosen by the captains were as follows:

Gordon Yeaman—Pathfinders.
John Carlyle—Peerless.
Will Mowat—Pierce-Arrow.
Fred Brooks—Paiges.

The majority of the members of this class have been playing Rugby up to the present time. It is expected that this week will be the last for the outdoor games, and the new league will open on Monday afternon next at 4:15.

Great interest is being taken in the other five leagues, and the different teams are changing places constantly. Teams that feel that they have a comfortable margin on the tailenders often find themselves in the cellar as the result of one day's activities. The Huskies in the Employed Boys' "B" League and the MicMacs in School Boys' "C" have furnished the surprises of this week by climbing out of last place, the MicMacs going up to second place in their league standing.

The winners of the 20-yard potato race were: Employed Boys, E. Legon, 4 2-5 seconds; G. Thompson, 4 3-5; A. Donnely, 4 4-5.

School Boys, "C"—J. Pulkinghorn and G. Patterson, 4 3-5 seconds.

The attendance at the business' men's class has been somewhat affected by the absence of some of the members from the city on hunting trips or other business. A number of new members have turned out this year, and the prospects are for a bigger and better year than ever.

CANNOT GET

stic stand in this war no one question.

Capt. Burnham has publicly, and also to the Prime Minister, declared himself in favor of Union government, and his great record, both in public life and as a patriot, can withstand the strongest searchlight.

Let win-the-war Liberals support the candidate who is willing to support the Union government if elected.

Yours truly,
J. W. WORTH.

Peterborough, Nov 7th

The Examiner's Reply.

Our correspondent's reasoning is not quite impregnable. He argues that "we" (whoever "we" means) "would have been foolish to call a new convention" and "perhaps have had a few Liberals help foist a weak candidate upon us" (whoever "us" means). Why "a few Liberals?" If a fair conference to decide upon a Union candidate were called, it would consist, approximately, of equal party numbers and a few Liberals could not "foist" a weak candidate, especially when, according to our correspondent, a candidate of such great strength, ability and patriotism as Mr. Burnham is according to his suggestion, available.

So far there is no Union candidate in West Peterborough. "Capt. Burnham" may have "publicly and to the Prime Minister declared himself in favour of Union government." That does not make him a Union candidate. Sir Robert Borden has publicly declared that he will accept no man as a Union candidate who is the nominee of a party convention or association. And it is said that cabinet ministers invited and announced to come to Peterborough refused to come except in the interests of a recognized Union candidate. Mr. Burnham is not a nominated Union candidate, though he is eligible, for, as a matter of fact, he is not even a party candidate. A prominent citizen, and prominent Conservative, this morning declared that Mr. Burnham was not a Conservative candidate. He resigned his candidature, and his resignation still holds, for no authorized body dealt with his resignation or endorsed its recall. Win-the-War Liberals may be innocent, but not so innocent that they cannot do a little thinking for themselves, and refuse to fall in with a transparent partizan enterprise.

That Seems to be Impression in London the Teuton's Object Being to Eliminate New Republic From The List of its Enemies.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 9.—The Russian coup was engineered and subsidised by Germany for the purpose of eliminating Russia from among her enemies is virtually the unanimous opinion expressed in newspaper editorial comment. A despondent view of the outlook is taken by some commentators while others claim that the triumph of the Maximalists is probably a passing phase and refuse to believe that they represent Russia or that Russia will agree to a seperate peace.

Kornlloff to Be Tried.

Petrograd, Nov. 9.—The military revolutionary committee has decided to bring General Kornlloff, leader of the recent revolt, and his supporters to Petrograd and imprison them in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul. They will be brought to trial before the military revolutionary tribunal.

Lieut.-Gen. L. G. Kornlloff was commander-in-chief of the Russian armies when early last September several detachments of the troops under his command marched in on Petrograd. The movement collapsed on September 13 and General Kornlloff surrendered. The Board of Army officers inquired into revolt but General Kornlloff has never been brought to trial.

Has Soldiers With Him.

That Kerensky has part of his army with him was reported at a meeting of the soldiers' and workmen's congress last night when it was announced that the deposed premier had met six thousand soldiers returning to Petrograd from the front at a point 23 miles from Petrograd and induced them to turn back with him towards Moscow.

Only Temporary Success.

Paris, Nov. 9. — "Those who thought the Russian revolution had been finished made a mistake," said M. Maklakof, Russian embassador in an interview which appears in the Petit Parisien. "Alas, now blood of our people will flow again in streets of Petrograd. But however sad may be the advent to power of the Maximalists it can be only a momentary success.

In my opinion it is the supreme effort of the Maximalists. This desperate attempt, this daring stroke can be only the signal for their downfall and the organization of a revolution in a national and patriotic sense which is bound to assure victory against enemies within and without. Russia as a whole is about to rally around the national government and form for it a rampart of flesh and blood.

A radical surgical operation was perhaps necessary after the misunderstanding caused by General Kornlloff's move in order to assure the salvation of immortal Russia."

Appeals to Army.

Petrograd, Nov. 9.—The Congress of soldiers and workmen's delegates today appealed to the Russian army to stand firm and protect the revolution against Imperialistic attempts until the new Government had obtained democratic peace.

NO RUSH AT TRIBUNALS BUSY SESSIONS AHEAD

Previously Rejected Man's Claim For Exemption Not Allowed—Is Quite Cheerful About it, However—Travelled 300 Miles To Register.

The City's Exemption Tribunals opened this morning, the one in Judge Huycke's chambers and the other in the city council chamber, with no oral applications on hand.

At the former tribunal late yesterday afternoon Chas. Douglas Palmer of East City, who thought his claim for exemption should be allowed on the ground that he had previously been rejected under the volunteer system, and whom the tribunal granted an order for exemption, returned. A second medical examination at the armories, yesterday afternoon, resulted in his retention in Category A II for trench fighting, and consequently his claim for exemption was not allowed.

This is the first case finally disposed of by this tribunal. Palmer won commendation from Judge Huycke for his manly reply to a question concerning his mother's position, that he would not make that any ground for exemption, as he was confident his younger brothers would look after her.

From Monday onward these tribunals will not have so easy a time having already ahead of them a big batch of written claims for exemption forwarded them by the Registrar at Kingston.

Of Russian Descent.

Chas. Viener, Jackson Lane, city, a Canadian born young man of Russian descent, was the first claimant at the City Council this morning at 10.15. He had a Category E medical certificate and was exempted until E men are called up. Viener was engaged in lumbering in the Parry Sound district, and came three hundred miles to register.

93rd Man Exempted.

Vernon Kerr, Elm street, was the second applicant, and had an E certificate. He had enlisted in the 93rd, but was turned down subsequently by the doctors at Kingston. He also was exempted until E men are called out.

Wants to Collect Taxes.

A young man in the country whose exemption claim is listed for the 21st is asking that decision be made earlier if possible. The Township Council in which he lives is anxious that he resume his office as tax collector he so satisfactorily filled last year, and are anxious to know whether he will be exempted or not.

Returned Soldier.

William Dallady, a returned soldier, until lately president of the G. W. V. A., was granted exemption. He has served abroad with the 3rd Battalion, was wounded in action, and honorably discharged on July 3rd, 1916.

This was the only case adjudged by Judge Huycke's Tribunal up to 2:40 this afternoon.

CAPT. BURNHAM ON THE LOCAL SITUATION

"What is the political situation this morning?" asked a Review reporter of Mr. J. H. Burnham yesterday.

"I see," replied that gentleman, "that Sir Wilfrid has had a great triumphal tour in Quebec. He is going to be a hard man to beat this time, but, for the sake of Canada and the cause I hope he will be beaten."

"How are things locally?"

"Locally, we are waiting for the decision of the Liberal convention tomorrow. I am told that the intention is to run a straight Liberal or a straight Laurier Liberal. If so there will be a fight between a Union Government supporter, in myself, and the Liberal nominee. But it is to be hoped that wiser counsels will prevail and that West Peterborough will have nothing but Union Government supporters in its candidates.

"Personally, I am very much interested in increasing the pay of soldiers and their dependents. The rise in rents and foods has made the present condition of things intolerable. Canada must provide fully—not half—for her defenders and their dependents. Pensions have been increased by practically 40 per cent., but the pay and Patriotic Fund generally are much too low. Whether I win or lose, I intend to devote myself to my duty in this particular, and I have had some experience to go on."

Quebec City, Nov. 9.—It is expected that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will tonight be given another tremendous reception when he appears at Martineau rink meeting. This building holds seven thousand people and overflow meetings will be necessary. The mayor will preside and speeches supporting Laurier and his policies will be given by Sir Lomar Gouin and other prominent personages. Nomination papers for Quebec north will be presented to Sir Wilfrid when he rises to speak. This morning the Liberal leaders held a conference with his candidates in all the ridings within a radius of two hundred miles.

THE WEATHER.

As the progress of the seasons one year usually follows the course of those preceding, it may be noted that on Nov. 4th and 5th of last year, the ground was white with snow for the first time. On the 12th another snowfall occurred, and on the 15th sufficient snow fell to provide sleighing for a few days. The snowploughs were brought out for the first time last fall on the 16th. Real winter weather, however, did not come until Dec. 13th, when we had our first zero. From that date until the end of the month there were 11 days on which the thermometer ranged near the zero mark, or below it. Good sleighing began on Dec. 22nd, and continued uninterruptedly until the middle of March.—W. P.

Capt. Burnham Makes An Explaination

Capt. Burnham says that he finds that the information which he conveys in his proposal to the effect that his offer to the Prime Minister as to his support of the Union Government being brought before the executive committee was not correct, nor did the committee give its support to the Union Government or to his candidature as a Unionist supporter.

The information which he received was given by Mr. C. S. McClelland, who stated that he had brought the matter before the executive committee himself. Capt. Burnham was in Ottawa at the time, and takes this opportunity of correcting the impression which he received from Mr. McClelland in this regard.

This does not alter the fact that Mr. Burnham is a supporter of the Union Government. It simply means that he misunderstood the information conveyed to him on his return.

TOMORROW THE LAST DAY FOR VOLUNTARY EXAMINATION

Doctors Will Book No More Dates After Saturday---Sessions Will Continue To Examine Men Sent by the Tribunals.

Tomorrow will be the last day the Medical Board will book any dates for examining voluntary applicants for examination. That is to say, commencing Monday, November 12th they will only examine such men as are sent them from the exemption tribunals, or those who had applied before nine o'clock Saturday night and they had not had time to deal with.

Number examined	1680
Fit for trenches	1005
For non-combatant service	117
For duty in Canada	101
Unfit for any service	457

5 A Men out of 12.

Last night was about the poorest in regard to physical quality of any session yet. Twelve were examined and six rejected as totally unfit, the number of A men was five and one man went into catagory B.

9 A Men Out of 20.

Yesterday afternoon was not much improvement on the night session. Twenty men applied for examination and the grading was recorded as follows: Catagory A, 9; B, 2 and E, 9.

Past Rejections No Criterion

Some men are claiming exemption on the ground that they were previously rejected. But they should bear in mind it is possible for them to have been physically unfit six months ago, and fit today. In recognition of this the British Government are sending B men up into A catagory, and if after six months training they are found fit they will be enrolled with the fighting forces.

Only 16 This Morning.

There were only sixteen men examined at the Armories this morning. The board is wondering why many with whom they have arranged dates for examination are not meeting their engagement.

The grading this morning resulted as follows: Catagory A 7; B, 3 and E, 6.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1917

SELECTING A UNIONIST.

Editor Review: Will you kindly permit me the use of your paper to call the attenion of the Conservative and Liberal candidates of East Peterborough to a condition of affairs in our constituency which is not for the public welfare. Some time ago the Conservatives nominated Mr. J. E. Sexsmith, ex-M.P., as their standard bearer in the next election. He has consistently voted for his party on all measures pertaining to the war and public welfare, not excepting even the late Franchise Act or the C. N. R. legislation. Since the present Union Government has been formed he has appropriated unto himself the honor of being the duly-appointed candidate for the Union Government without consulting the wishes of the people who would like to support the Union Government. He therefore depends upon a mandate from a convention, many of whose members are openly opposed to Union Government and are now avowed supporters of Laurier's anti-conscription policy.

Then the Liberal nominee is a straight Laurier candidate, favoring procrastination, etc., in this time of national crisis.

These are the facts as now existing in our riding, in spite of the appeals both of our Premier and of the Liberal leaders in our Union Government, that the people should get together and select a Union candidate having the confidence of both parties.

I hereby appeal to both these candidates to resign for the public welfare and jointly call a win-the-war convention to select a candidate whom all the people will have confidence in as a genuine supporter of all aggressive war measures, and thus place our constituency in the forefront as composed of patriotic men who realize that our empire is in a life and death struggle for her existence.

And should this line of public action not agree with the selfish policy of party strife, as evidently desired by the present candidates, I sincerely hope that means may yet be taken to nominate a true supporter of Union Government and give all patriotic citizens a chance to declare their real wishes and desires.

Hoping I am not trespassing too much upon the valuable space of your paper, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
Warsaw. D. R. CLARE.

THE ONE saving grace in Mr. Clare's letter is the evidence he gives that he cannot stand for any man in his constituency appealing to the electors for support as a straight Laurier candidate. Otherwise he betrays the same spirit as that which seems to animate every man who insists on technicalities in the matter of selecting a Union Government. All of these men who write to the papers make it apparent that above all else they are intent on getting the official scalp of he man who has represented the riding during the term of the late Parliament and who has been selected again by his party, the choice meeting with general approval even in the ranks of the Opposition. Mr. Clare may not have in mind the plan that is entertained by so many others, and that is, that in the event of a Union convention being called, to so pad it as to accomplish the defeat of the man who has been chosen by the party which alone has a right to be regarded as Unionists as a whole; but even if he is innocent of such a plot, that is what would be done by the party workers. The men whose records have been proven in Parliament, who have supported the war measures for the last three years, and who are not involved with any party whose attitude in the war is open to suspicion, are certainly in all justice entitled to some consideration. Offers of negotiation, it will occur to all fair-minde persons, should come from the Opposition and not from those in possession of the situation.

In East Peterborough, any such offers coming at this time, will make it appear that the convention at Norwood, after all, was only a bluff designed to frighten the other side into making terms.

Mr. Clare refers to the fact that Mr. Sexsmith voted for the Military Franchise Act and for the C. N. R. legislation. Any reference to these matters now is an unmistakable indication of partisanship on the part of the man who makes it. The taking over of the C. N. R. was a necessity forced upon the country.

No man who would qualify as a Union candidate could possibly be opposed to the Franchise Act which was passed to render effective what the Union Government stands for above all else—the vigorous and effective prosecution of the war.

THE ALIEN'S SOLILOQUY.

I AM AN ALIEN because I was born in Germany. I was naturalized only five or six years ago, and no man can in that time overcome the training of a lifetime or subdue his affection for his native land.

My sympathies are with Germany in this war, although I have sense enough as a rule to keep my opinions to myself, knowing what I might expect if I spoke out.

You cannot wean a man from his idols in fifteen years.

I am opposed to conscription because conscription is one means of fighting Germany.

If the Kaiser won this war and overran Canada, I would welcome his soldiers to this country. Even if I swore allegiance to the British flag, I am still regarded at home as a citizen of the Fatherland.

A Canadian soldier irritates my vision.

I have voted for years in this country, and in certain sections I and my people have held the balance of power. Some of us can't read the English language and have no idea what all these elections are about, but we vote according to instructions.

We would vote for the Fatherland on December 17, if we had a chance, but we haven't. They have disfranchised us, more's the pity. Every alien enemy could and would kill the vote of a soldier who has been fighting the Kaiser for the past three years.

But we have a few friends left. There are politicians and newspapers that sympathize with us in the loss of opportunity to do some service for the Kaiser on December 17.

These British enemies of the Kaiser would not let me wear the King's uniform. They would not trust me with a rifle, and let me into he trenches with their soldiers, fearing that I might be tempted to fire on my own comrades or desert them in a pinch. But why, reason my friends, cannot they allow us in the polling booth, where we could work quietly for our native land?

A TIME FOR SACRIFICE.

THE WINDSOR RECORD, making a virtue of a plain duty, speaks of the sacrifices that are being made by Liberals who renounce their old party associations to join issue with the Union Government.

Peter of old somewhat arrogantly boasted of what he had given up in order to follow the Nazarene, although the "all" that he abandoned was, according to a plain-spoken Scottish divine, nothing more valuable than an "auld boat and a few fish nets."

This is a time that calls for personal sacrifice. The soldier who leaves home and friends and risks his life daily in the trenches is making the greatest sacrifice of all, especially when his life is given for the cause.

The mother, the wife, the sister and the sweetheart are all making sacrifice when they take final leave of the hero in khaki

The women who work night and day preparing comforts for the soldiers are in the category of those who are making sacrifices for their country.

There is personal sacrifice, too, on the part of many a man and woman in Canada who, unable to do anything else, give to patriotic objects until it hurts.

Why, then, talk of the sacrifices made by politicians, sacrifices that are infinitesimal when compared to others?

CANADA FIRST.

IN THE PRESENT CRISIS all citizens and all newspapers in Canada must take a definite stand. They are either for or against the Union Government.

The Liberals of this riding are to meet in convention tomorrow, and it is their avowed purpose to nominate a straight Laurier candidate for Parliament. It may be that they are not sincere in this move, but that, following the example of the East Riding, the nomination of such a candidate is merely a bluff, intended to bring the other side to terms and to settle the question of representation in each by a flip of the dice box or by some other style of casting lots.

No man nominated as a Laurier follower, here or elsewhere, can pose as a win-the-war candidate. The leader's manifesto has settled that question. A voter or a candidate these days must be either for or against Union, he must either be for winning or for quitting the war. No middle course is possible.

KERENSKY DEPOSED.

KERENSKY, deposed from his position as head of the provisional government in Russia, fleeing to escape arrest, is not likely to carry with him the sympathy of the Allied Nations, least of all the British, whom he traduced in his interview with the Associated Press published a few days ago. What he did say will be applauded chiefly in Berlin. There has been no failure or neglect on the part of England in this war, and Kerensky's broad hint to that effect is as untruthful as it is ungenerous. It is true he did try to bring safety to his own country, but this was at the expense of the Allies he was committed to assist.

British officers have served in the Russian fleet and British submarines have operated in Russia's behalf. British motor cars covered the retreat of the Russians when they ingloriously fled before the foe in Galicia.

The revolution in Russia seems complete, the army and navy being on the side of the new ministry. Kerensky faced a problem that seldom confronts a public man, but that fact is scarcely sufficient to excuse his dismal failure to make any headway in restoring order in Russia or to keep faith with the nations with whom Russia's interests are identified.

TODAY'S STORY

"Prolonged subjection to cold is the only sure cure for a hay fever, according to Dr. Feezler Pults, the famous specialist."—News item.

"I'll do it!" cried Mizpah Feets loudly, looking up from the evening paper. "I'll take the money I've been saving for the past thirteen years to send the children to college, and I'll use it to pay the expenses of a trip to Alaska, Greenland and the suburbs of the north pole!"

With Mizpah Feets, to think was to act. Bidding a hasty farewell to his wife and seven collegeless children, he set out the very next Thursday. For nine months he exposed his hay fever to climates varying from 80 degrees below zero in the sun to 113 degrees below in his stocking feet. He took the famous wet ice baths at Br-r-r Springs and the oleomargarine-ray treatment at Far Shivers, where his money gave out and he had only his fare home.

"I mustn't give up now," he thought, and, consulting Dr. Kneecap, the eminent discoverer of the oleomargarine-ray treatment, he was advised to go home and finish his course by requesting his butcher to allow him to pass two hours a day in his refrigerator. Three months after the following Monday found him in Schmutt's butcher store in his home town.

"Sure, sure!" agreed Schmutt cordially, and, shuting Feets up in his refrigerator he closed the door and the combination lock snapped shut. Just then a parade of 90,000 soldiers started to pass the shop, and Schmutt went outside to watch. Eight hours later he threw a sausage with patriotic fervor after the last soldier and, returning to the shop, remembered Mizpah Feets and hastily unlocked the refrigerator.

Mizpah Feets never had hay fever again, and the funeral was notable for the absence of floral tributes.

(Charlotte Observer)

During her absence she will be sadly missed, for she is a glorious bundle of animated sunshine, and flings the radiance of brightest cheer over every scene in which she moves. As spring would miss the beauty and the perfume of its blooming flowers, as the woodland would miss the carolings of its merry song birds, which entwine every twig with a breath of song, as the mountain brook would miss the melody born in its rippling tides as they go singing their wordless songs on their journey to the sea as the sky would miss the glistening radiance of those twinkling stars that embroider the fabric of darkness with the glittering stitches of glistening light, and make a sparkling robe for night to wear, just so will this brilliant jewel of the hospital be missed by every old soldier who admires her so highly for her noble qualities.

Wit and Wisdom

"Yes, and he has been with us ever since."

The decorator and his apprentice were lime-washing the bakery.

They were about half way through their task when the master decorator came to look around.

The apprentice was splashing the lime wash about. The master, not relishing this waste, said:

"Mind your eyes, lad."

The lad said: "It is all right, sir. I have just had one eye full, but I didn't waste it. I put it back in the bucket."

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

Mr. R. C. Read of the De Laval Co. will address a meeting for men at the Y.M.C.A. building on Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, the subject being "Prayer." Every man and older boy is cordially invited to attend this service.

Collegiate Club.

The Y.M.C.A. Collegiate Club will hold its weekly meeting at the Y.M.C.A. this (Friday) evening at 6:15. Subject for discussion is "Civic Assets." It is hoped that every member of the Club will be present.

Complimentary Supper.

Monday evening next at 6:15 a complimentary supper will be served to the Boys' Executive Committee. This committee is composed of three officers from each Bible Class and each of the twenty-four captains of gymnasium teams. The purpose of the meeting is to get the executive strongly behind the boys' membership campaign now on between the six classes, each class being sub-divided into four teams. The class that scores the largest number of points will receive a pennant and a supper. The team, no matter of what class it forms a part, which secures the most group, and each member of the team points will be photographed as a will receive a copy of this photo.

Free Membership.

The individual boy worker who secures five members or the equivalent of five members in fees will receive his own membership free. The boy worker who brings in two members will receive a Y.M.C.A. badge. In this campaign old or new members count five points and each dollar pair counts one point. We hope that the boys will bet busy and greatly boost the membership of the Boys' Department.

To Get Senior Members.

An effort is soon to be launched for senior members, and it is expected that a strong organization of men will have part in this proposed effort to increase the senior membership. Details will be announced very shortly. In the meantime the boys should get busy and gather up everything in sight, for the seniors are to be allowed to enroll junior as well as senior memberships; and it might be said that the boy members are also privileged to enroll senior as well as boys.

Your Money's Worth.

The Association has never had a better program to present to its members than has been outlined for the present season. So every man or boy who takes a membership in the Y.M.C.A. now is assured of more than his money's worth. It is thought, too, that the present time offers the best opportunity for men desiring to engage in a good work for others to enroll themselves in the Y.M.C.A.

His Retort.

She was stout, middle-aged, and weary looking, and when she entered the crowded Toronto surface car a slender youth sprang from his seat. For a moment she gazed disdainfully at the civilian garb, looked belligerently at the boyish figure—right hand stuck in pocket and left wandering over the embryonic moustache—then in a loud voice she told her sentiments in regard to slackers. She talked long, and her sarcasm was sharp and plentiful. Finally, her breath failing, she closed her tirade with an emphatic refusal to accept a seat from a slacker. The young man meantime had not changed his attitude. In fact, from his easy posture, hand in pocket, one might have thought he was trying to show insolent disregard. Then he spoke. "[illegible] have [illegible] any one fighting over there?" "[illegible]," replied [illegible] she had— [illegible] two nephews, and a brother [illegible]. "Do you write to them?" the young man inquired. "It was none of his business," she retorted. Then she admitted she did write "frequently." "Well, madam, the next time you write, ask them if they can find my hand over there." He drew out a dangling sleeve from the pocket. The hand had been cut off at the wrist.

Coal in the West.

The Canadian Scientific and Industrial Research Commission is arranging for the rental from the United States of a lignite testing plant for use in Western Canada to test some of the immense undeveloped low-grade coal-bearing areas of the Prairie Provinces. A proposal was made to the Government for the purchase by Canada of a complete plant for experimental government operation of selected areas thought to be commercially feasible, but which private enterprise will not touch owing to the uncertainty as to economic development. This proposal of the commission was, however, after consideration by the Government, turned down for this year. The Commission will now carry on the work through a rented American plant. The investigations of the Commission during the past point to the feasibility of solving the fuel problem of the Prairie Provinces by scientific exploitation of the at present latent lignite resources of the West.

Growth of Yokohama.

In 1867 the population of Yokohama was 20,800; now it is 440,000, representing 97,900 families. The annual trade is estimated at £17,500,000 in imports and £22,800,000 in exports. The annual revenue of the municipality is £225,000.

Life wouldn't be worth the living if it were a continuous succession of pudding and ice cream.

No Mystery About a Good Coat

Some men like to be in any business where you can hide poor stuff in a wrapper. A cheap cigar is an offense where there is joy and solace in the good leaf.

It's better to buy a Semi-ready Suit with a reputation for honesty than gamble on a garment which lacks the same record of good tailoring. From the wool to the workshops the worth of each garment is known. There is no mystery about tailoring good clothes but cheap-jack work can be hidden from a buyer by the lining. So can cheap wool and shoddy.

Semi-ready Tailored Clothes are shape-stayed and inside tailored so carefully and precisely that you will always look upon the label in the pocket with pride.

FOOTBALL FOLLOWS FLAG OF AMERICANS TO FRANCE

Old Glory Blazes Way For Gridiron Game Behind American Lines.

It has long been said that baseball has followed the American flag into foreign lands; now Old Glory is to blaze the way for football on the shell swept fields of France. Baseball has already been introduced in that war torn land by our sailors, soldiers and ambulance men, and the poilu and his folk have taken kindly to it. Soon they will have their first glimpse of the gridiron game, says a New York Evening Sun writer.

In navy yards and cantonments, at naval bases abroad and in the encampments of the first American expedition to France elevens are being whipped into shape and football is now the leading sport. The teams in the military and naval centers in this country are for the most part composed of men who gained fame as college players and who entered the service at the outbreak of hostilities. These teams are engaged in playing elevens from colleges and universities, and are finding that which Yale, for example, has declared to be an impossible task preparing for war and indulging in sport at the same time rather easy to accomplish.

Makeup of Teams.

However, the teams which will first get into action on roughly laid gridirons in France, behind the line of fire, but perhaps within range of the big guns of the enemy, will be those made up of the rank and file of Uncle Sam's army and navy. In peace times the bluejacket and his companion in arms, the enlisted man of the regular army, have long been ardent football "bugs." The battle ships of the fleet, the cruisers and even the destroyers have for at least ten years struggled among themselves for the gridiron championship of the navy and rivalry has always been keen.

Many of the games on which the championship hinged have been played in Guantanamo, at Puget Sound and in the various navy yards where the spectators were almost exclusively officers and men of the service so that the general public has not been in a position to follow closely the work of the navy teams or to get a good line on their capabilities. The writer recalls one championship game which was played in New York a few years ago, however, between the teams of the United States steamship Nebraska and the United States steamship Missouri.

Sailors Play for Title.

The Atlantic fleet was lying in the Hudson river at the time it was during the holidays and the contest was played at the old American league grounds on the hilltop. Of the crowd of about 15,000 that saw it about 5,000 were sailors and the rest were civilians, and the "landlubbers" were genuinely surprised by the skill shown by the bluejackets on the gridiron.

Last fall the teams at Fordham and Columbia played a number of practice games against outfits from battle ships in port at the time. The Maroon managed to beat the sailors in a majority of the games played, but the blue and White made a sorry showing against the teams they encountered, the sailors easily outplaying the collegians.

Football Popular in Army.

Likewise football has for many years been exceedingly popular in the army, and the forts around New York have boasted of some splendid teams. On the Mexican border last fall innumerable contests were played between teams from regular army and national guard regiments. Efforts are now being made by various organizations to supply every outfit in Pershing's expedition with football paraphernalia, and very shortly the scores of contests played in France by soldiers, marines and sailors will be sent to us by cable and wireless. These are the men who will place the gridiron pastime on an equal footing with baseball, cricket, boxing and the English game of football on French soil.

The men of the new national army are also doing their share toward keeping the game in a flourishing state in this country. Last Saturday the first game was played at Camp Upton at Yaphank, while teams have been developed in other cantonments throughout the nation.

Umpire Tommy Connolly in a recent interview with a New England scribe, was quoted as saying that Napoleon Lajoie was the greatest of all players, and that Rube Waddell, as a left-handed pitcher, never had an equal.

CORP. McINTRYE IN HOSPITAL

Keene Boy Was Wounded in Recent Action in France.

(Special to The Review.)

Keene, Nov. 9.—Lance Corporal George McIntyre of the 5th C.M.R. in France is now confined to No. 2 Stationary Hospital, Abbeyville, France. Corporal McIntyre was formerly a member of the 93rd Battalion and former Keene boy, where he is well and favorably known. He was wounded in action November 3rd.

Two Italian carabineers fired into the automobile of the general commanding of the third army corps of Brandenburg while it was in the suburbs of Udine, October 28. The general was killed and his aide was desperately wounded and made prisoner.

Is Too Proud To Ask Exemption

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The question having been raised as to whether Local Tribunals, appointed under the Military Service Act, would pass upon all cases of men reporting for service as well as those claiming exemption, the Military Service Council has issued the following statement:

Regulation 13 of the act provides that application for exemption may be made by a man himself, his employer or any business associate, or by a near relative. Exemption may be claimed by anyone coming within these descriptions even though the man himself may have reported for service, but unless a claim for exemption is made on his behalf, if he comes within medical category "A," he will merely be notified in due course, after December 10th, when and where he is to join the colors. If he is in a medical category other than "A," his case will be sent to a tribunal by the Registrar, and the tribunal will direct that a certificate of exemption be issued freeing him from service until members of his medical category are called to the colors. If a man has not been medically examined previous to his report for service, he will be directed by the Registrar to attend for medical examination at a specified time, and his case will be dealt with according to his medical classification.

It is stated that in some localities, particularly in the West, a number of young farmers who should claim exemption because of their value to the country as food producers, are too proud to do so. It is pointed out here that the military service authorities have no power to prevent a man from reporting for service if he wishes to do so. If he is too proud to claim exemption, his business associates or relatives may do so for him.

His Knowledge Was Limited.

"I saw young Suburbs running a new machine this morning."

"Was it one of the latest models?"

"I really couldn't say."

"I thought you knew all about automobiles."

"So I do. But I don't know anything about lawn mowers."—Judge.

Hopeful Influence.

"So you favor your wife's membership in political societies?"

"Yes, sir," replied Mr. Meekton. "I'm hoping that sooner or later Henrietta and I will be able to reduce our little domestic controversies to a basis of parliamentary procedure."—Washington Star.

A Careful Neighbor.

"The man next door to me won't wake me up at 5 o'clock in the morning mowing his lawn any more. I've hit on a way to fool him."

"How's that?"

"I borrow his lawn mower the night before."—Detroit Free Press.

Exchanging a Compliment.

College Widow: You displayed some marvelous curves this afternoon, Mr. Yalevard.

Pitcher Yalevard (who had observed her standing between the diamond and the sun)—And so did you.—Judge.

MUST GET $2 BAG FOR POTATOES OR FARMERS WILL LET THEM ROT

Everlasting Jump In Food Prices Causes Industrial Unrest, Strikes and Rumors of Strikes.

Farmers throughout the country say they are not going to sell potatoes at less than $2.00 a bag; they'll see them rot first. One remarked, "I paid $5.00 a bag for seed potatoes and I'm going to get my money out of them." Well, the farmer seems to be getting his money out of everything he grows these days, for prices are up! Away up! Terribly up! ! ! And the Food Controller, had he a few minutes to spare from fish and package cereals might do well by giving a thought to farm products in general. It is the everlasting jump in food prices which causes industrial unrest, strikes and rumors of strikes. Peterboro today is about the dearest spot on earth in which to live.

In England such conditions as now experienced in Peterboro regarding food prices were foreseen and wisely guarded against. The government makes a farmer till his land, fixes the wages he shall pay for help and arranges the price at which his product shall be sold. Should any product be priced by dealers beyond that stated by the government the authorities confiscate the food and sell it at the correct price. And more than this, a man recently returned from England says occasions have arisen in which a farmer holding out for an exhorbitant price, and eventually discovered a huge shortage in his supply, organized citizens having visited his fields and helped themselves.

Band Instruments Repaired by Mr. Miller

Relief Officer Finch Miller has just finished putting the 93rd Battalion band instruments in a thorough state of repair. The city council have made him a grant of $10 for that purpose. But to keep the instruments in good condition needs attention at least once a month and none but a capable musician can do the work effectively. There are 38 of these 93rd instruments; they are valuable, and it might be good policy to make it worth Mr. Miller's while to give them permanent attention.

Put in a small cask and when cold add a pint of yeast. Cover close and let ferment then bottle off and cork tight.

Million And A Half Of Women's Votes

Soldiers' Wives, Mothers and Sisters Should Make Sure They Are On Voters' List,

Peterborough women should not forget that in the coming Dominion elections wives, widows, mothers and sisters of soldiers and naval men are entitled to vote, and see to it that they are on the voters' list. Altogether in Canada one million, two hundred thousand women will be capable of casting their ballot.

This is regarded as a conservative figure, for over half a million men have gone from Canada to the various units or the naval service, while many near relatives of soldiers in the British army live in Canada.

The Whizz Bang a Soldiers' Paper

THE WHIZZ-BANG is a small paper, published every now and then at Leamington, and devoted to war questions. Much of the matter, we gather from the trenchant style, comes from W. D. Gregory's ready pen, and there is a considerable amount of judiciously selected reprint. Sir Robert Borden's peroration on the Military Service Bill occupies the pride of place on the first page of the most recent issue. There is also on page one a paragraph from Dr. Michael Clark's speech, in which he remarked that "there is only one alternative policy to winning the war and that is winning elections."

One particularly happy quotation is from Artemus Ward's "Draft in Baldinsville," as follows:

"It isn't money we want. But we do want men, and we must have them. We must carry a whirlwind of fire among the foe. We must crush the ungrateful rebels who are poundin' the Goddess of Liberty over the head with slung shots, and stabbin' her with stolen knives. . . . We are all in the same boat—if the boat goes down, we go down with her. Hence we must all fight. It ain't no use to talk now about who caused the war. That's played out. The war is upon us—upon us all—and we must all fight. We can't 'reason' the matter with the foe—only with the steel and lead. When in the broad glare of the noonday sun a speckled jackass boldly and maliciously kicks over a peanut-stand, do we reason with him? I guess not. . . . We must save the Union. And don't let us wait to be drafted. The Republic is our mother. For God's sake, don't let us stop to draw lots to see which of us shall go to the rescue of our wounded and bleeding mother. Drive the assassins from her throat—drive them into the sea."

In several other paragraphs the Whizz-Bang speaks with almost profane emphasis of the politicians who are now engaged in playing their old game instead of banishing from their thoughts every consideration but the winning of the war.

The Canadian war cry at the front is reproduced by the Whizz-Bang:

"We met 'em on the Meuse,
We beat 'em on the Aisne,
We gave 'em hell at Neuve Chapelle
And here we are again."

A somewhat similar sentiment is expressed in a letter recently sent from the front:

"On the Somme we gave 'em breakfast,
At Vimy Ridge a dinner served with guns;
We've got a red-hot supper waiting
And hell is yearning for the Huns."

And this one refers to the Pershing expedition:

"The Sammies are here and all is well;
Over the top and give 'em hell."

Under the heading "Help Wanted" we note that "One hundred thousand able-bodied young men are wanted to join a touring party, soon leaving for Europe. Clothing, board, and transportation furnished free and all expenses paid. The party expects to visit Berlin late in the fall, and all tourists will tell you that the 'Fall' in Berlin will be worth seeing."

Here is another thing worth quoting:

"Too many people keep the flowers that they have plucked for the soldier until the memorial service.

"Their songs of praise are not heard until the cable brings the sad news, "killed in action."

"The mantle of charity does not become public property until put in use by the minister that conducts 'the last sad rites.'

"If a man has flowers for me I want them while I am on earth and can smell their fragrance. They will do me no good around the chancel rail. That the grass is kept green around my last resting-place will be of little avail to me on the other shore.

"Here is the place we all need the smiles; now is the time we all need the flowers and the praise, not over there.

"If the fellow who comes around after a German bullet has laid one of our brave lads low and a memorial service is being arranged, to see if there is anything he can do,' will come around to-morrow, we can tell him now he can be a whole lot of help."

A quarrel merely proves that one of the parties to it hasn't any more sense than the other.

One difference between a man and a mule is that the man does the most of his kicking with his mouth.

Small Loans Welcome.

Bonds for loans as small as $50 will be gladly issued, loans payable as follows: 10 per cent Dec. 1, 10 per cent Jan. 2, 20 per cent Feb. 1, 20 per cent March 1, 20 per cent April 1 and 20 per cent May 1. Interest of 5½ per cent is to be paid on the loans twice a year, and a first full six months' interest will be allowed on June first, irrespective of the fact that a person buying bonds on December first would really be only entitled to five months' interest.

NEW FALL SHADES.

Variations of the Old Colors That Are Popular.

Brown is promised a greater vogue than usual, though it was somewhat emphasized last winter. There are several new medium shades bearing fanciful names which no one remembers or uses. Kolinsky is the one most likely to get its name, since every one is familiar with the fur and recognizes the aptness of the name on the color card. Hudson seal is a brown darker than the seal brown of old and included among the American colorings. Java is a good dark brown.

The various manufacturers issue their own color cards, and on the French cards this season American names frequently appear, as in one syndicate's line of "American blues," running from light to dark, but all with a pronounced warmth and intensity.

Greens of rather dark tones are bidding for favor, both the lovely blue greens and the ivy shades, with jade colorings for a good third.

Deep purple and the beet root, which had a trial last winter, are considered very good, and the wine reds are revived, though apparently not with last season's enthusiasm, the purplish Concord being the wine shade most often seen.

Blues of many sorts are, as usual, popular. Women will have blue no matter what the color cards say, and, though Paris has laid more emphasis on black than on the dark blues, of late a large majority of the early autumn suits and one piece wool frocks ordered are in the perennial dark blue.

Mahogany shades in greater numbers than appeared last year are with us. The French emphasize them as they did last winter. This is a most trying color to the average woman and one that in most of its shades refuses to blend amicably with others, but often effective in itself.

Taupe is still beloved, more so than ever perhaps because for some reason known to dyers it is likely to be scarce this season. The Germans monopolize some ingredient necessary to success with this color, so we are told, and many a woman will add this to her grudges against Germany.

Unexplored Quebec.

It is estimated that in the north of the province of Quebec there are still two hundred and fifty-six thousand square miles of unexplored country, making, with the six hundred and forty-two thousand square miles in Western Canada, a total of nine hundred and one thousand square miles. In other words, twenty-eight per cent. of Canada is still unexplored. In the basin of the River Mackenzie there are believed to be great petroleum wells. Natives state that they have seen lakes at the Yukon, from sixty to seventy miles long, that have not been seen by white men. The Mackenzie Mountains no one, not even the Indians knows anything of.

Tracy C. Drake, who is chairman of a committee of hotel men working on the conservation movement with the National Council of Defense, has asked the women who can afford to keep pet dogs to adopt at least one "war calf" and bring it up till it becomes of respectable beef size. He has bought 150 calves and taken them out to Lake Geneva to grow fat for their country. Some of the women of the Illinois Kennel club already have begun to take an interest in war calves.

Mr. Drake states that a three or four months old calf can be purchased at the stockyards for $20 and is as good an investment as a liberty bond. Mr Drake predicts the plan will result in the saving of 200,000,000 pounds of beef to the United States.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The week of Nov. 11 is the world's week of prayer in the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations throughout the world. In eighteen different languages a constant stream of intercessory prayer and praise rises to the throne of God, and the answer comes back in one language, understood of all mankind, the universal language of love.

The prayers of a small group of women and girls led to the foundation of the Young Women's Christian Association, which now numbers 670,000 members, and this week these Associations in every continent are linked together by a girdle of prayer.

The elasticity of the Association and its adaptability to all nationalities is one of the signs that God has inspired its development. The needs of each nationality differ on the intellectual, physical and social sides of a girl's nature, while the spiritual needs are all the same. Chinese girls, West African, Hungarian, French, American, have each their needs, problems, difficulties, but all are entering life's battle, and many of them, were it not for the Association, would get disheartened in the fight and would drift on the losing ride.

A pamphlet from the World's Y. M. C. A., in London, England, publishes requests from Associations in the different lands for all the world to join with them in prayer and praise during this week: praise for specific blessings that have come to their individual Associations; prayer for the advance of their work, and the further opening up of opportunities; praise for the workers already in the field, and prayer that more workers of the right kind may go forth, and that all lines of work may be in harmony with the will of God.

In China there are 56 Association centres, with an approximate membership of 3,862, and 40 new foreign secretaries are needed for pioneer and extension work.

In India there are 166 branches, with a membership of 9,400. Forty-two secretaries from Great Britain and America are engaged in that country, in addition to many workers belonging to European and Anglo-India communities.

In Japan there are 23 Associations and a membership of 2,280. And in South, East and West Africa, in Egypt, in South America, and in the West Indies, there are many Associations, and thousands of girls and young women members, and all these members in all these countries are bringing their Associations before the throne of Grace.

The Association in Canada has for its field both the cities and colleges of Canada, and about 19,000 members among students, business girls, and workers in factories and homes. In the United States the total membership numbers 362,191. These countries, so closely related, give praise for a year of real advance, for enlarged opportunities for reaching the girls in factories and munition plants. Will you join with us in asking a blessing upon the world-wide work of the Young Women's Christian Association upon the endeavors of the local Association, and also the missionary work in foreign lands?

On Sunday afternoon at 4:15 there will be a short service of prayer and praise in the green room at the Young Women's Christian Association—the opening service of the world's week of prayer—and all young women and girls, whether they be members of the Association or not are cordially invited to come.

On Monday afternoon also there will be a similar meeting for one hour, from 4 till 5 o'clock, for members of the board, and committees, and all who are interested in the work of the Association.

SERBIAN LADY ENGAGED IN VERY WORTHY CAUSE

Will Lecture in Collegiate Institute Wednesday Next on Serbia and its Wrongs

Miss Helen Losanitch, a daughter of the former Serbian minister to London, will deliver an address in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall at 8 o'clock on Wednesday, November 14. She is visiting here in the interests of the fund in aid of persecuted Serbians, and this event will no doubt elicit a generous response to a worthy cause.

Miss Losanitch is the daughter of Prof. Siam Losanitch, of Belgrade University, former minister to London, Paris and other capitals, and at present head of the Serbian government committee for reconstruction and the relief of prisoners, with his headquarters in Paris. All the members of her family are either in the Serbian army or government.

Lectures Are Popular.

Miss Losanitch came to the United States in January, 1915, and since that time has divided her time between Canada, the United States and Europe. The American committee consider that two-thirds of the monies which they have received is the direct result of her lectures. She is extremely popular there with all the workers as well as with the public. Her most noticeable characteristics are untiring energy and perseverance in her work, and her sincerity and modesty. She has proved most popular on this tour of Canada. The secretary of the Manitoba branch writes as follows: "I cannot tell you how charmed all were with Miss Losanitch and her splendid lectures. The people were most touched with her graphic description of Serbia, and she has greatly stimulated the interest in our work here. We were so glad to be able to arrange these extra meetings for her. She captivates the hearts of all who have the pleasure of meeting her."

Tells a Simple Story.

Everyone has written in the same strain. She certainly has a most attractive personality and tells her story in such a simple way as to appeal to the most stony-hearted.

Illustrations Also.

Her slides show the retreat which was made by her own mother and father, the hospital where she worked as a volunteer nurse, and the refugee camps in Corsica and France which she has recently visited and to which the British Serbian Relief gives so much support.

The Military Service Act, 1917

CANADA

Notice to Employers

The attention of Employers is especially called to the following provisions of the Regulations passed under The Military Service Act, 1917, and The War Measures Act, 1914, which directly affects them.

EMPLOYER TAKING UNDUE ADVANTAGE OF EMPLOYEE. Every employer, and every person acting on behalf of any employer, who stipulates or attempts or offers to stipulate with any employee or other person for any reduction of an employee's salary or wages, or for the alteration of any other term or condition of his employment, in consideration of the employer exercising or refraining from exercising his right to claim exemption from military service on behalf of any employee, or who alters or attempts or offers or proposes to alter, adversely to any employee, any of the conditions of employment affecting such employee by exercising or refraining from exercising or by authorizing or suggesting the exercise or abstention from exercising of his right to claim exemption from military service on behalf of any employee, shall be guilty of an offence, punishable on summary conviction, by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the convicting magistrate· the fine to be not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, and the imprisonment not to exceed six months.

EMPLOYING MEN WHO ARE IN DEFAULT. Every person shall be guilty of an offence, and liable on summary conviction to a penalty of not less than fifty dollars, and of not more than five hundred dollars, who, after the expiry of the time within which a man is by proclamation or regulation required to report in accordance with section 4 of the Act or to apply for exemption, employs or engages in his service, or continues in his service for a period of seven days, any man who belongs to any class or sub-class which has been called out, and who has not reported as required by section 4 of the Act, or in respect of whom an application for exemption has not been made, unless such person prove that, having made due inquiry, he believed upon reasonable grounds that the man so employed, engaged or continued in his service did not belong to any class or sub-class called out, or that he had reported or had at the time a certificate, or that an application for exemption by or in respect of the man was at the time pending.

EMPLOYER TO MAKE ENQUIRIES. (a) It shall be the duty of every person who is an employer to make inquiries forthwith after the issue of any proclamation calling out men for military service under the Act whether any, and, if any, which of his employees are within the class or subclass called out by such proclamation; and, forthwith after the expiry of the time limited by the proclamation for reporting for service or claiming exemption, to inquire and ascertain whether there are any, and if any, which of the men in his employ so called out who have failed to report or apply for exemption from service, or in respect of whom an application for exemption from service has not been made.

EMPLOYEES TO ANSWER. (b) It shall be the duty of every employee to answer any questions that shall be put to him by his employer, and to give any information which his employer may require of him for the purpose of enabling the employer to comply with the duty imposed upon him by this section.

REPORT TO MINISTER. (c) Every employer shall, forthwith after the expiry of the time so limited by any such proclamation, report to the Minister (of Justice) according to the best of his knowledge, information and belief, the names and addresses and the whereabouts at the time of all employees in his service called out by any such proclamation who have failed to report or apply for exemption from service.

PENALTY. And any person who is an employer who refuses, neglects or fails to comply with any of the requirements imposed upon him by this section shall be guilty of an offence and liable, upon summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding, as to each employee in respect of whom he has so refused, neglected or failed to comply, one hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the convicting magistrate.

EMPLOYING DESERTERS. Every person who employs or retains in his service any man who has deserted, or who is absent without leave, from the Canadian expeditionary force, shall be guilty of an offence, punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars, and of not more than five hundred dollars, unless such person prove that he was not aware, and had no reasonable ground to suspect, that the man so employed or retained in his service was a deserter or absent from the force without leave.

Under the proclamation issued on the 13th of October, 1917, the last day for members of Class One under the Act to report or claim exemption is "Looking for Trouble."

THE LOWLY PIG PUTS ONE OVER

American Breeders Develope Breed That Are Mule-Footed.

Moses, the great lawgiver and sanitarian, regarded swine as unclean and, without naming any names, excluded them from the table of his followers by the edict against using as food any animal that divides the hoof yet does not chew the cud, says the Chicago News.

Despite the recognition accorded it by progressive civilization, the Mosaic pronouncement seemed to prey on the pig's mind and throughout the annals of history there have been rumors and traditions of an aspiring pig that did not part the hoof. Aristotle mentions such a pig in a vague way and Goldsmith specifically tells of a Swedish breed of hogs that had not the cloven hoof. But Aristotle did not insist that he knew what he was writing about and Goldsmith was notoriously inaccurate as a historian, so the matter was not followed up.

Now, however, the ingenious American breeders have developed a distinct type of "mule-footed" swine and these interesting animals have captured several prizes at hog shows and county fairs in Ohio and other parts of the country. Nobody seems to know where the type originated, but that it is here is indubitable. And it is rapidly increasing in numbers and influence.

PRICE OF BREAD.

Action To Be Taken Under License System in U. S.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Direct action to control the price of bread and fix the size of a standard loaf will be taken soon by President Wilson in a proclamation placing all bakers under the license system, administered by Food Controller Hoover. The bakers will be considered as manufacturers and the terms of the proclamation will make it possible for the Food Administration to control the price and size of the loaf. Considerable reduction in price in many localities is expected to be the immediate result.

If you are suffering from constipation or sick headache, try Dr. Norvall's stomach and tonic tablets.

Be sure you get the genuine, as they are guaranteed and should they fail to give you relief, return the bottle to your dealer and he will refund your money

The birth rate in Hamburg, Germany, has fallen below 7.7 per one thousand

Pork is high enought heaven knows, so that any increase in the demand for it is to be deprecated, but it will be interesting to learn whether the mule-footed pig is going to remain under the Mosaic ban. Very likely it will be contended that the pig is seeking to escape on a mere technicality the age-old opprobrium which has been its portion.

Police To Enforce Baconless Days

Peterborough Hotels Need No Watching—Are Conplying With Act.

The police have been asked by food controller Hanna to watch hotel and restaurant keepers, and enforce the law prohibiting bacon and beef on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Regarding Peterborough, it can be stated, advisedly, no police enforcement will be necessary. Travellers say Peterborough hotelkeepers are too wide awake to need watching on Tuesdays and Fridays, and draw the food conserving line to the limit. One Toronto visitor was unkind enough to suggest that the limited bill of fare on these days warranted a reduction in rates.

However, that may be, the last few years Peterborohgh hotel men have been a law-abiding association of citizens, and can be relied on to continue exercising that principle of obedience to the laws in regard to baconless and beefless days.

BOURASSA WILL HELP LAURIER

Leader's Manifesto Finds Favor With the Great Nationalist.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—Henri Bourassa makes clear in his paper, "Le Devoir," the possible attitude of the Nationalists forces in the coming elections.

In the first of a series of articles, in which Bourassa will study Sir Wilfrid's manifesto, the Nationalist leader writes today: "Although weak and little reasuring for the future, Laurier's attitude is better than the radically bad politics of the Borden Ministry.

"Unwavering adversaries of the coalition, of all its politics and of all its members, we (the Nationalists), accept Sir Wilfrid Laurier's program in the measure where it meets our principles and ideals; we reject it everywhere it agrees virtually with the Cabinet's platform. We are willing to help Laurier to throw down the Government of national treason, but we want him to surround himself and his party with barriers high and strong enough to keep out the bandits of the Northcliffe-Sifton type."

Bourassa, before coming to this conclusion, says he is surprised that Laurier, a "real respectable man," still has a soft spot in his heart for the Liberals, who left the party ranks and for every one of them he has an epithet.

HUNTER KILLED SHOT BY COUSIN

Trigger of Gun Slipped When Cocked Half-Way—Regrettable Accident.

Charles Wasnidge of Grimsby was accidentally shot by his cousin, W. F. Wasnidge of Dundas, while duck shooting in the vicinity of Maple Lake, Haliburton. The accident happened at seven o'clock in the evening and the unfortunate victim passed away four hours later. The body was conveyed from Gelert station to Grimsby yesterday.

Few particulars are obtainable, but it is said the two had been shooting ducks. Mr. W. F. Wasnidge was reloading his gun, had pulled the trigger half way up, when it slipped through his wet gloves, discharging its contents in the body of his cousin.

JUST LIKE A MAN.

He May See the Advantages of a Bad Bargain, but Not Like a Woman.

"WELL," said Mrs. Caperton expectantly as her husband entered the room, "how did it look to you?"

"Bully!" cried Caperton enthusiastically. "It's just the place to spend the summer. You'll like it immensely. I know you will. I've engaged accommodations for August with an option on September."

"Is it a nice boarding house?" asked his wife.

"Oh, nice enough," answered Caperton. "The rooms are dinky little things, the windows are small, and the ceilings are low, but"—

"Well, of all things! And you engaged accommodations in such a place?"

"Listen, dearie; I'm not through yet. As I just said, the rooms are small and all that, and I'm told the grub isn't so very good—mostly canned stuff, you know—and they don't keep many cows, so the milk supply is not particularly plentiful when there's a crowd there, but"—

"Are you losing your mind, Jim Caperton?"

"Wait a bit, dearie. Don't be hasty! I'm not through yet. The rooms are small, and the food is not absolutely 'A No. 1,' and they're sort of shy on milk, and it's a good way to the town, and there are not many nice walks, and there's no water near except the well, but those are just minor considerations."

"Just mi"—

"Precisely. Here's the main thing. They've got the finest ballroom and floor I ever saw in my life anywhere, and there's dancing every night and free lessons in all the new steps every morning. Free—just think of that! They keep a fellow there all season just to teach 'em!"

"You big ninny," blurted Mrs. Caperton—"yes, ninny. You know how a place like that fills up. Why didn't you reserve accommodations for July as well as August? Can't you get them on the long distance phone?"—Puck.

Developing the Battle Cruiser.

Great Britain was the first naval power to build the battle-cruiser. Close on her heels came Germany, Russia, and Japan; but all others, including the United States, have no battle-cruisers in their line of battle. It was in 1907 when the Indomitable, the first one, was begun. One year later she crossed the Atlantic at a speed of a little more than twenty-five miles an hour. The Inflexible and Invincible followed, and, when the European War came, Great Britain had a squadron that proved of immense worth to her. In the Jutland battle, however, three of the British battle-cruisers were sunk, shells penetrating their armor and exploding their magazines or boilers. The armor of a superdreadnought would most probably have proved too strong for the shells that destroyed these battle-cruisers. The famous "Cat Squadron," so called because it included the Lion and Tiger, is to-day the last word in the battle cruiser.

An Ironical Exchange.

By that which may be termed an "ironical turn of the wheel of fortune" Belgium obtains a slice of the German possessions in East Africa that is three times as large as Belgium itself. The region, which has been occupied by Belgian troops under General Tombeur, offers a most advantageous outlet for the commerce of Belgian Congo.

Aid to the Tired.

Yeast—A German invention is a jointed lamppost, the upper portion of which may be lowered with a rope.

Crimsonbeak—I can't see the good of that. Even if a man is short of stature he can lean against a tall post in time of need.—Yonkers Statesman.

Not That Feminine.

"She ought to make a good business woman."

"What makes you think so?"

"She doesn't insist on getting down to the depot an hour before it's time for her train to start."—Detroit Free Press.

The Letter the Deed.

He was a colonel of the old school, a veritable Lord Chesterfield. Though suffering from chronic financial embarrassment, he could always find the proverbial friend in need.

Meeting an old comrade one day, he asked the loan of $5. "I shall need it for a short time only; a tradesman has grown rather insistent," he said. His friend had not $5 in change, but gladly pressed a ten dollar bill upon him.

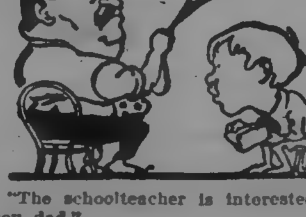
The colonel expressed his thanks; then asked, "And how is your charming wife today?"

"Not at all well, I am sorry to say," was the answer.

"And no appetite, I'll venture. Perhaps some of these hothouse grapes may tempt her."

Whereupon he stopped at a nearby stand, purchased a basket of rare fruit, paid $5 the dealer asked out of his newly acquired $10 and walked jauntily to the gate of his friend's home, carrying the basket.—New York Post.

Teacher's Interest.



"The schoolteacher is interested in you, dad."

"How's that?"

"Why, today, after she'd told me six times to sit down and behave myself, she said she wondered what kind of a father I had."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Way to Unlock.

The red haired office boy was whistling a late popular air, but he didn't carry the tune very well.

"You will break into song occasionally, will you?" remarked his employer.

"Sometimes," answered the auburn haired youth.

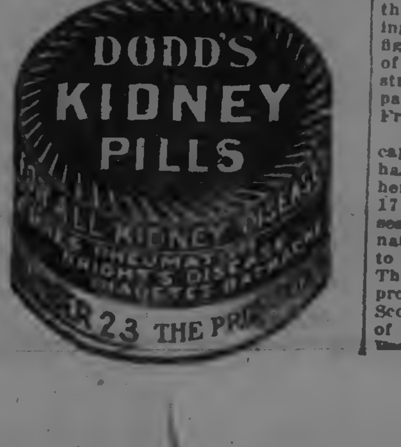
"If you'd get the key you wouldn't need to break in," retorted the boss.—National Monthly.

Sheer Brutality.

"This reminds me of some of the pies I knew in my happy childhood days," said the man without a heart.

"The kind your mother used to make?"

"No. The kind we children would make out of mud."—Washington Star.



LAND OF EVANGELINE.

A Few Facts About Picturesque District of Acadia.

Many people who know nothing about the politics of the question will see a peculiar fitness in the union, which has recently been something more than mooted, between the three maritime Canadian provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island. Before the Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, which ceded them to England, the three provinces formed the French Province of Acadia, rendered famous by Longfellow in his story of "Evangeline." Subsequent research, largely the result of Longfellow's poem, has shown that not a little of the narrative would need revision to bring it strictly into accord with fact, but, in the main, the story of Acadia is as Longfellow told it. Hawthorne briefly outlines it in his "American Note Book." He tells how a friend of his heard from a French-Canadian a story of a young couple of Acadia. On their marriage day, all the men of the Province were summoned to assemble in the church to hear a proclamation. When assembled, they were all seized and shipped off to be distributed through New England—among them the new bridegroom. His bride set off in search of him, wandered about New England all her days, and, at last, found him in the tragic circumstances which form the closing scenes of Longfellow's story. The bridegroom was only one, of course, among some six thousand, and the deportation was the culmination of a vigorous anti-French policy, which, in those days, was the basis of all British politics.

The country itself had probably been discovered in 1597, by the famous John Cabot, sailing under the English flag, but the first settlers were French, who took possession in virtue of the explorations of Verrazano, Cartier, the Marquis de la Roche, and Champlain. In the year 1604 the first settlements were made by the Sieur de Monts, Samuel de Champlain, and the Baron de Poutrincourt, but quarrels broke out with the Jesuits, and, in 1613, the English colonists of Virginia made a descent upon the settlers, claimed the whole country in right of Cabot's discovery, and expelled the greater part of the inhabitants. The treaty of St. Germain-en-Laye, in 1632, however, confirmed France in possession of Acadie, Cape Breton, and New France, and the French colonization of the district went on.

They did not agree well together, these colonists. Feuds were constantly breaking out in their midst, and so notorious did their disagreements become that, in 1654, Oliver Cromwell sent out a force which took possession of the country. But again, under the Treaty of Breda, in 1667, it was restored to France by Charles II. There was, however, no chance of agreement in this part of the world in those days, for, when the French colonists were not fighting amongst themselves, they were fighting with the English colonists of New England, and in this latter struggle the Indians constantly took part, mostly on the side of the French.

In 1710, the province was finally captured by Great Britain, and, as has been said, was formally ceded to her by the Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, the French remaining in possession of Cape Breton. The two nations, however, could not agree as to the rectifications of boundary. The English claimed that the French province included what is now Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, most of New Brunswick, and the Gaspe Peninsula, whilst [illegible] stricted it to the southern half of Nova Scotia. Perpetual quarrels were the order of the day and every day, and, at last, in 1755, Charles Laurence, the governor, determined to make a clean sweep of disaffection. Six thousand French were suddenly seized, hurried into exile, and scattered in many directions. Some eventually found their way back again, but large numbers settled in Cape Breton, and others in distant Louisiana. In 1769 Prince Edward Island, formerly Isle St. Jean, was separated from Nova Scotia and given a distinct government, whilst, in 1784, similar action was taken in regard to New Brunswick. Now the idea is that all three provinces would [illegible]

Answer.—Mark.

Hide and Seek Seated.

The players sit in a circle, and some one who is chosen looks around for a good place—such as a picture, for instance—and says, "I am hid." Then all guess where she has hidden herself, and the person that guesses is "it" and does the hiding.

BOWSER'S DAY OFF

On Which He Heeds the Call of the Meadow Lark.

BACK TO NATURE, IS HIS CRY.

His Mouth Is Watering For Fresh Huckleberries From Dew Covered Vines, and His Quest Leads Him Into Unhappy Paths.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, , by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER was thoughtful. At times he sighed. At times he sat with his gaze fixed on the picture of Washington crossing the Delaware.

The cat rubbed against his leg, but he gave her no more attention than he would have bestowed upon a grizzly bear.

A peddler yelled "String beans!" at the house twelve times in succession, but Mr. Bowser didn't bat an eye.

Had he failed in business?

Had he lost a dime in the street car?

Had he been advised to wear a wig?

He expected to be asked every minute what was troubling him, but Mrs. Bowser evinced no curiosity. He seemed on the point of speaking a dozen times, but finally went to bed with the mystery unsolved. It remained a mystery until he arose in the morning and put on an old suit. Then Mrs. Bowser observed:

"I hope you are not going to repaint the house or anything?"

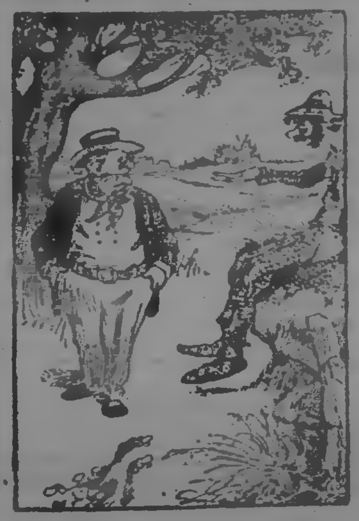
"How would you like to go out into the country today?" he queried.

"What for?"

[illegible] foot on the green grass; to hear the song of the meadow lark; to pick the luscious huckleberry fresh from the dew covered vine."

Mrs. Bowser Withstands the Lure.

"I don't think I would care to go out and stroll around the hot fields. It is as hot out in the country as it is in town. As for huckleberries, I don't believe there's one within ten miles of us. Even if there was it wouldn't be growing on a dew covered vine."



"DO I LOOK LIKE A TRAMP?"

"Perhaps you can teach me how huckleberries grow."

"I can if you think they grow on vines. I've picked many quarts of them. They grow on bushes."

"Not on your life, Mrs. Bowser! They grow on vines. You are thinking of blackberries."

"I'm thinking of huckleberries and nothing else. They not only grow on [illegible] but in and around swamps."

"Do you mean to tell me that I have lived to the age of forty-eight without knowing a huckleberry from a Hubbard squash? Mrs. Bowser, there is a certain impudence and assurance about you that provokes me to the limit. You were not big enough to spell cat when I was picking huckleberries by the bushel."

"Well, let it go at that. If you want huckleberries there are plenty in market. I will get some today and make a pie. There is no need to wander over ten or fifteen miles of country to get a quart of the berries."

"I have invited you," he said, with a severe look—"I have invited you to take a day off with me to hear the meadow lark, and so forth. Incidentally we will cull the huckleberry from the dew kissed vine. Will you go or not?"

"I—I don't think I care to. One is better off around the house such hot days as these. If you are going to stay home today we will ride around on the open cars."

Mr. Bowser Will Go Alone.

"Madam, I am going to the country. I want to see some honest grass and real trees. I want to hear the songs of birds, the hum of bees and the whispers of nature. In addition to this I have dreamed of picking huckleberries for three nights running, and I am longing to devour some right fresh from the vines. Will you go or won't you?"

"I'd rather not."

"That settles it. You can remain here and fry and stew and boil. I shall go and I shall have one of the best days of my life."

"And I shall have a huckleberry pie all ready for you when you return."

"You need have nothing of the kind. I can run my own huckleberry business without any of your help!"

With that Mr. Bowser made his start for the country, and an hour later the suburban trolley line deposited him among green fields. He did not know exactly what to do first, but after a little thought he walked up the highway a piece and then got over the fence into a field to roll on the grass. He hadn't rolled yet when a Weary Willie came along and stopped to say:

"Better hump yourself out o' that, cully!"

"For why?"

"De farmer will be after ye and use ye ruff. Dat's what dey calls tre-pass out here in the country."

"Let 'em call and be hanged! Things have come to a pretty pass when one can't roll on the grass."

"All right, cully. If ye git de boot don't blame me. I was jest tryin' to put ye next, ye know."

Falls In With Strange Acquaintances.

Mr. Bowser decided not to roll. He decided to sit in a shady fence corner for awhile and hear the notes of the meadow lark. There were birds about, and they were singing more or less, but he soon discovered that he couldn't tell the song of a lark from that of a [illegible] which made him secretly glad that Mrs. Bowser had not come along. She would have been sure to say something to hurt his feelings. After a rest of ten minutes he climbed into the road and walked on to look for huckleberry vines. At the end of a quarter of a mile he came to another Weary sitting on a log and gnawing at the last remains of a beef bone. Mr. Bowser was going by without salutation, but the other looked up and called out:

"Say, cully, when did ye take to the hoof?"

"What do you mean, sir?"

"Hain't ye on de pad?"

"Hoof, hoof? Pad? I don't understand the terms."

"Oh, ye don't! Den ye hain't been hatched long! What I'm askin' is do ye belong to de purfesh?"

"Do I look like a tramp?"

"To be honest wid ye, cully, ye don't. Ye look more like de man who takes tickets at de sideshow where dey exhibit de wild woman of Borneo. Are ye down on yer luck?"

Determined to Find Huckleberries.

Mr. Bowser drew himself up with freezing dignity and passed on. He couldn't fight with a tramp, but he determined to make Mrs. Bowser pay for those insults. Forty rods farther on he came to a farmhouse. There was a lathy young man greasing a wagon in front of the place, and Mr. Bowser halted and asked:

"Do you think I might be able to find any huckleberries around here?"

"Mebbe it's hayseeds and suckers you are looking for?" was the reply, accompanied by looks of suspicion.

"I simply desire to find some huckleberries and pick them off the vines."

The lathy young man laughed.

"Well, what are you cackling about?"

"I'm wondering whether you are a fool or a sharper. Why didn't you say that huckleberries grew on oak trees?"

"They grow on vines, as I said, and I see no need of your making a smart Aleck of yourself over it. I asked you a civil question."

"Pa, pa!" called the young man to some one in the house.

"Well, what is it?" asked the old farmer himself as he came out.

"Here's a feller as says huckleberries grow on vines!"

Mr. Bowser "In Bad."

The old man put on his spectacles and went closer to Mr. Bowser and then drew back and said:

"Look out for him, Sam! I think he's the feller that stole our milk cans one night last week! Lord, what a mug he's got on him!"

"See here, but what ails you!" shouted Mr. Bowser. "I come along here and ask you a civil question and you make a great mystery over it. If there are any idiots around here you are the ones!"

"But you said you were after huckleberries," protested the young man.

"Well, what of it?"

"And they grow on vines."

"And what of that too?"

"Don't try any bluff here, old man! Pa, whistle for the dog. Now you git!"

The farmer's wife came out with the dog. She had a hoe handle in her hand. Bowser decided to get. As he started the four took after him, and in his confusion he took to the woods across the road instead of keeping to the highway. The tramp down the road on a log had seen it all, and as the minutes went by and neither pursued nor farmers reappeared and the yelps of the dog sounded farther away he returned to his beef bone and mused:

"I guess he hain't de man who runs a sideshow, after all. I guess he's de chap dat does a stunt wid de hyenas, and dat dey has got de best of him from dis time on!"

Parliamentary Songsters.

The suggestion made in the British House of Commons recently that the Chief Secretary for Ireland should give his brother members a vocal illustration of a disloyal song heard in Ireland, and which formed the subject of a question, could easily be carried into effect from the indigenous talent of the Chamber itself. Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike Fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative about $25,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age, and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

Private Municipalities.

In British Columbia there are several towns created by industrial companies on their own land holdings. The residents of these towns have no say in the government of them, and the owning corporations control in most cases the businesses established.

The Provincial Government has decided to bring the Lands Act into operation in these cases and place these towns in the same position as other places in the Province. The company towns have been fairly well managed in the interests of both company and employees. Under the companies the towns were developed in a systematic manner; schools, churches, amusement places, and libraries were provided.

Under the Government of the Province, one-fourth of each townsite will revert to the Crown, and the other three-fourths will bear the taxes required to develop the town.

Edmonton's Assessment.

The municipal assessment figures of Edmonton for this year will amount to about $100,000,000, as compared with $130,000,000 last year. At a recent sitting of the Court of Revision there were only 165 appeals made, as compared with 409 in 1916 and 1,040 in 1915.

German Defines Kultur.

Here is a definition of Kultur by Hermann Fernau, a German. He defines Kultur in words that must live: "Learning without character, knowledge without conscience, organization without humanity, discipline without liberty, ideal without dignity; such is the result of a mental development that, commencing with the disappearance of the Weimar Germanism, and politically trained by Metternich, Bismarck and William II. and intellectually by Hegel, Treitschke and their disciples, could only play its part as a protecting power of the dynasty. The World's War is the absolute proof of this. It has shown the culmination of this development in a complete victory of Potsdam over Weimar (no need to boycott Wagner opera, then). I believe that after this catastrophe we require an entirely new generation of men to answer by entirely new conduct this—for Germany—entirely new question, namely, what Culture (he means Kultur) means."

THE REAL THING.

Valuable Misinformation.

In the large dining room of the Hotel Marseilles hangs a large equestrian painting representing General Robert E. Lee. It is the mascot of the Hungry club, which has its dinners at monthly intervals at this hotel and was painted by a member of the club.

Recently a lady on the west side gave a bridge party at the hotel in aid of her pet charity. Among the players was a modern Mrs. Malaprop, a typical "climber" with considerably less education than cash. Consequently she was never backward with misinformation on most any subject that came up. During a cessation in the play one of the ladies expressed admiration of the picture and a desire to know whom it represented.

It was Mrs. Malaprop's opportunity.

"That, my dear," she assertively explained, "is General Marseilles, a noted Frenchman, for whom the hotel is named."—New York Times.

The Garden Variety.

A slim chicken who was so thin that she nicked the counter where she leaned against it, trickled up to the hosiery department of a Sixteenth street store and said:

"Cawn you give me a pair of hose that won't bag at the knees?"

Mame shifted her chicle against her back molars, oozed a wise slant over the customer and replied listlessly:

"Not unless yuh take garden hose!"

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

[illegible] Laws.

The Spectator has discovered that the destruction of fruit-bearing trees, in the way shown recently by the Germans in France, is inadmissible as an act of war and was condemned, in Scripture, 3,000 years ago. It proves its point by quoting from Deuteronomy xx.: "When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an axe against them; for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (for the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege; only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down."

Jonah Moths.

In a story in the Century, there is a curious bit of natural history not generally known. "The Coming of the Terror," a mysterious war story by Arthur Machen, is intimately associated with moths. "The moths?" says one of Mr. Machen's characters. "Do you know that it is extremely difficult to kill a moth with cyanide of potassium? Take a frog, kill it, open its stomach. There you will find its dinner of moths and small beetles, and the 'dinner' will shake itself and walk off cheerily, to resume an entirely active existence."

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salol Pepsin and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

BEANS, PAST AND PRESENT

(By Clara Shipman.)

Beans are amongst the oldest forms of food that we have. The common variety, with which we are all acquainted, is supposed to have come orignally from the borders of the Capsan Sea, but this is not certainly known. It has been cultivated in both Europe and Asia since the memory of man.

The bean as we know it, however, came to its present state of cultivation in the United States, and does best in the Northern States and Canada, as hot summers do not produce its best growth. Lima beans are extensively grown in California. In Europe broad, or horse beans, are used as fodder for cattle. A sort of meal is also made from them there which is used on the table.

Beans are more nutritious than wheat, containing when ripe about 36 per cent of starch and 23 per cent of legumine, a nitrogenous substance corresponding to the caseine of milk. Whether for man or for cattle, however, it is essential that they be mixed with other food, as they are richer and stronger than the average man requires his food to be. This is the reason they form such an excellent food for those doing hard manual labor. Dry shelled beans contain on the average 23 per cent. protein, 1 4-5 per cent. fat, 60 per cent carbohydrates, 3½ per cent. ash, and 12 3-5 per cent. water. They are therefore among the richest of the vegetables.

In France and the United States there are several varieties of beans which are eaten with their pods when green, and the French beans are cut up with the pods and salted for winter use in Holland.

In olden times beans were used as ballots, white for affirmative and black for negative. The Egyptian priests, however, considered even the sight of beans unclean, and the people were urged to refrain from eating them. In other countries they were sometimes used as a part of a ceremony though.

Beans are at present 15 cents a pound, and at this price are among our cheapest foodstuffs. Nearly every one likes them, and the housekeepr need never lack for variety in methods of cooking them. In judicious quantities they are especially good for growing children whose abundant energy will cause them to take sufficient exercise to digest the strong food.

TIMELY RECIPES.

Every housewife is continually on the watch for new and reliable recipes. The following, which are adapted to present conditions, will be found worth trying:

Turnip Shells.

6 turnips (uniform size).
1 cupful cold roast lamb.
½ cupful fine cracker crumbs.
¼ cupful cooked rice.
1 minced onion.
1 tablespoonful butter.
½ teaspoonful curry powder.
1 tablespoonful minced parsley.
Salt.
Pepper.

Pare the turnips, cut a slice from the top, and scoop out the inside, leaving about a half inch rim. Cook both shells and covers fifteen minutes in boiling salted water; then arrange them in a baking pan, fill with the meat, rice, cracker crumbs and seasonings; mix well together; cover with the tops, fastening each with toothpicks. Pour around them the water in which the turnip shells were cooked and bake until tender. Pour off the liquid and brown very slightly. Serve in a pudding dish, pouring over the liquid at the moment when taking to the table. Use turnips about eight ounces in weight. The portion scooped out may be saved for mashed or creamed turnip.

Pumpkin Pie.

1 pint white cornmeal.
1 pint stewed pumpkin.
1 teaspoonful salt.
1-3 cupful sugar.

Put pumpkin through sieve and mix with it all the other ingredients, being careful to blend them well. Make in pones or cakes the shape of the hand about half an inch thick. Place in a well-greased pan. Bake in a quick oven till brown—about thirty minutes. Serve very hot with plenty of butter. Canned pumpkin may be used.

Lemon Butter.

3 egg yolks.
1 egg white.
Juice 2 lemons.
2 tablespoonfuls butter.
½ teaspoonful [illegible] vanilla and lemon extract.
1 cupful sugar.

Beat the egg yolks and white with the sugar till light; add the butter and lemon juice, cook over hot water till thick, [illegible]. This may be used as a cake or sandwich filling.

Curtain rises showing Ald. Snobbins seated at desk and admiring his intellectual brow in a small pocket mirror.

A knock is heard on door, and in those dulcet tones he uses for addressing poor women, he says "Come in."

Enter Sir J. F.

"Good morning! Mr. Snobby I believe—"

[illegible] S.—"Snobbin, Sir, is my name."

Sir J. F.—"My mistake, Mr. Snobbin. I am Sir Joseph Flathell."

Ald. S. (jumping up and bowing)—"Delighted to meet you, Sir Joseph. It gives me immense pleasure to meet such a great benefactor of the wasteful poor. But for your heroic efforts at putting prohibitive prices on bacon, there is no knowing how many would have died from overfeeding."

Sir J. F.—"Well, now, it's very nice to find someone who appreciates my efforts and that reminds me of my business. I called to congratulate you on the successful way in which you have made a fish monoply here. That was a great piece of work you and your committee put through, in confining the sale to three dealers."

Ald. S.—"Well, yes, if I do say it myself. I think I managed that fine. Mayor Loveus and Ald. Make-em-tired were inclined to kick, but we managed nicely to slip under their guard. Of course, (giving a wink) a nice little bit of fresh fish as a surprise present is acceptable."

Sir J. F.—"It certainly is, but now, what I want to know is, how you managed to get by that feller Paskins?"

Ald. S.—Oh that's easy, we've got the government supply, so——

(A crash is heard on the door and Director Grasp staggers into the room.)

Sir J. F. (starting up)—Goodness, gracious, what's the matter? Why, it's Mr. Grasp.

Mr. D. G.—"A drink, or I faint."

Ald. S. (bending in cupboard under desk brings out flat bottle marked "Spirits of Ammonia")—Here, take a finger of this! Stop! I said a finger, not a whole arm. Now what's the noise about?

Mr. D. G.—Haven't you heard? Then read this. (Hands over newspaper.)

Ald. S. and Sir J. F. read together.

Stewed Prunes
Supper
Potato and Beet Salad
Bread Oleomargarine Plum Jam

The recipe for Corn Batter Bread mentioned above is as follows:

Corn Batter Bread
1 cup white corn meal
1½ cups boiling water
1 cup sweet milk
1 teaspoon salt
2 tea-spoons baking powder
2 eggs.

Sift the meal into a bowl. See that the water is boiling vigorously. Pour over the meal, stirring at the same time. When lukewarm add the sweet milk, the well-beaten egg yolk and beat thoroughly. Add the baking powder and last fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a hot, well greased baking dish and bake in a moderately hot oven thirty minutes. If baked in a shallow pan, twenty minutes will suffice.

Wheat and meat saving recipes by Domestic Science experts of the Food Controller's Office.

SEA WATER BREAD.

It is a custom in certain parts of France to make bread with sea-water. It is claimed that it keeps moist much longer and is more healthful, as the water contains not only salt but other mineral substances which the body can make use of. Bread made from sea-water is especially recommended by some for growing children, for convalescents, and for all those who need to repair the waste due to fever or hard labor.

A PLATE WARMER.

A wire letter-basket firmly wired to the top of a steam or hot water radiator in the kitchen makes a most serviceable plate warmer. The plates may be put in the basket after breakfast, covered, and left till noon. This is a much safer way to heat fine china than in the oven, where an excessive amount of heat will break them.

EVERYBODY RAGS.

Everybody's started ragging;
They rag at every ball.
They do the hesitation,
The tango dip and all.
Mother's got the habit,
And so has sister Ann.
Everybody rags at our house,
Even our old man

Now, Brother Bill went ragging
And stayed away from school
Until professor told him
It was against the rule.
But now professor's got it,
And so has teacher too.
Everybody's going crazy.
What shall we do?

Some scientist may tell us
A microbe it must be.
'Tis easy to believe him,
For a learned man is he,
Until you start to thinking
That perhaps he's ragging too
And keeps his feet a-traveling
Just like me and you.

Now, if you keep on ragging
From morn till close of day
"You'll rag into the hospital,"
The good old doc will say.
But every Thursday evening,
Just as regular as a clock,
You'll find him at some rag dance,
The dear old doc!

Everybody rags for breakfast,
For lunch and dinner too.
They go to work a-ragging
And rag the whole day through.
They go to bed a-ragging.
They drive a rag machine—
I can't go any further,
For I'm out of gasoline.

THE GARBAGE PAIL

Its Contents May Stand Between Us and Liberty.

EARN YOUR APPETITES NOW!

If You Save but Two Ounces of Food a Day, Stop to Compute What This Means In a Country of a Hundred Million People.

(Prepared by the National Emergency Food Garden Commission.)

The women of the country must be made to realize as never before that it is their part in this war to stop the waste that goes into the garbage pail, a waste that has been estimated at $700,000,000 annually. The figure is staggering in its immensity. Think what two ounces saved a day by a hundred million people means!

The men folks will tell us that the money would take up many liberty bond issues and buy many battleships. In fact, they tell us such an amount would win the war. Yet it goes into the garbage pail.

Women of the contry, earn your appetite! Do something now for your country by conducting your table economically. You will never know until you try it what a fascination there is in work, what a reward it brings. Pass the summer's usual rest and earn your appetite.

Much meat, bread and edible fats are wasted in garbage, and tons of valuable foodstuff for animals are lost to the food supply of the nation by usual garbage reduction or disposal methods. There should be careful analysis of city garbage and enforcement of garbage collection ordinances, requiring that no glass, tin, wood, burnt matches, paper, string or inorganic trash be mixed with the vegetable material, meat scraps or bones which can be used for feed.

These laws are rigidly enforced by Germany in all cities of 40,000 people. Garbage so collected from a population of 17,000,000 people in Germany, although the German garbage pail always has been far leaner than the American one and is especially light at this period, furnish briquettes rich in protein, which, when fed to dairy cattle, produced 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 quarts of milk daily.

On the other hand, with us garbage is sent to reduction plants, where all the fat and oil it contains are recovered for use in making soap or greases.

It is simply a question of service and proper direction. If the women of the country take up the problem one of our greatest war troubles is solved, for who knows but the garbage pail may stand between us and liberty?

VICTIM OF APPETITE.

Prospector Brings in Story of a Wolverine.

A prospector from the Atlin country in Northern British Columbia brings in a belated story of the capture of a wolverine which will bear telling even if the wolverine hide now decorates the den of a man who does not know anything about the matter, says The Vancouver Sun.

This prospector was doing a bit of trapping during the months of snow, and was picking off considerable fur from various injudicious wild beasts until a wolverine drifted into the district and established himself on the trap-line of said trapper. This resulted in much solitary profanity by the trapper. The wolverine raided the traps regularly, always a few hours before the man could get along. The unfortunate trapper would find the trail of lynx, mink, and marten heading for his snares and would follow hopefully, only to discover a trampled and bloody patch of snow, a sprung trap, and the fore or hind leg of some fur-bearing animal in the jaws. The wolverine had dined.

This went on for a couple of weeks and finally the mid-season came along. At this time the trapper-prospector had to get out to civilization to attempt to arrange a mining deal he had in view. He locked the cabin, left the grub in the cupboard, and went. For the sake of healthful ventilation he left a small sliding opening by the wall, dimensions perhaps six or eight by ten inches.

Returning in two weeks, accompanied as ever by his faithful hound, he opened the cabin door and was more than shocked upon seeing the havoc therein. A side of bacon had been almost utterly destroyed, a sack of flour was torn open and half gone, sugar and bread existed no more.

The dog, after a preliminary sniff dashed snarling under the bunk in the corner, and appeared with a snarling wolverine at his fighting end. Active co-operation between man and dog soon put the wolverine in the category of fair fur.

Resultant investigation produced a most interesting state of affairs. The wolverine had fallen victim to his own appetite. The animal, known in a denunciatory way to every trapper, is famed for its gluttony. It will eat until it nearly bursts. This animal when thin and hungry had followed the enticement of the appetizing trapper's cabin. Entering with little difficulty it had eaten so much that it swelled to such an extent that it could not get out of the opening through which it entered. Perforce it took up quarters under the bunk.

The skin, a good one and prime, brought the trapper fifteen dollars last spring, and now adorns the home of an eastern tourist.

Hindoos in Canada.

That of seven thousand East Indians who came to this country upwards of ten years ago few more than one thousand remain owing to adverse economic and climatic conditions is a statement contained in a letter by Superintendent of Immigration W. D. Scott in answer to a memorial from the Presbyterian General Assembly. This memorial urged action to allay racial feeling said to have been aroused among non Christian people of India, who regard the prohibition of Indian immigration to Canada as an insult and denial of their rights. The letter says in part:

"There is not now, and never has been, any legislation which applies specifically and only to East Indians, nor yet is there any distinction by existing regulations applicable to women and children and not to men. Some East Indian agitators, I think, are responsible for creating in the minds of many Canadians the impression that there is a regulation which debars women and children, but permits the entry of men; such is not the case. I do not know of any instance in which women and children arriving at a Canadian port, coming to join husbands and fathers, were not allowed to land."

Rev. A. E. Armstrong, of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Department, said he regarded the admission of the Superintendent of Immigration as "good news," and that it disposes of the "bluff" that has been resorted to in the courts in British Columbia, when the wives of Hindus were refused admission.

The British passed many strongly fortified farms north and northwest of Goeberg. At this point they were fighting nearly half a mile from their jumping off place. The line was pushed northward along the Passchendaele Ridge almost to the point at which the highest crest starts sloping downward. Today's operations were carried out on a 2,500-yard front for limited objectives which had been virtually all gained by 10 o'clock.

Dr. Sproule was formerly Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Lodge of Ontario. He was seized with intestinal trouble last night, and passed away early today. Mrs. Sproule and one daughter, Mrs. Turner, of Salt Lake City, survive. The late senator was born on October 25th, 1843, in the township of King, North York. He was generally recognized as the leader of the Orange forces in Parliament.

LOCAL OPTION BEER IS WITHIN LEGAL STRENGTH

None of the Samples Found Analyzed Were Above Percentage Allowed by Law

Some time ago complaints reached License Inspector Stewart that some hotelkeepers in the city were selling ale and porter that contained more than the two and one-half per cent. of alcohol allowed by the Ontario Temperance Act. Inspector Stewart, accompanied by Chief Thompson, visited these hotels and took samples of the liquors on sale. These samples were carefully sealed and sent to Toronto for analysis by the government official appointed for that purpose.

Analyst Bonham has sent back the result of his investigation, and his findings are witnessed in each case by A. B. Servis and sworn to before E. Saunders, attorney for the Board of License Commissioners. The official report exonerates the hotelkeepers from all suspicion. Not any of the liquor sold, whether ale or porter, contains even the percentage of alcohol which the law allows. The different reports are as follows:

R. Winch, Grand Hotel—Porter, 1 and 85-100 per cent.; ale, 2 and 43-100 per cent.

W. G. Hamilton, King George Hotel—Ale, 2 and 22-100 per cent.; porter, 2 and 37-100 per cent.

Frank Montgomery, Montgomery House—Ale, 2 and 12-100 per cent.; porter, 2 and 43-100 per cent.

Charles Perry, American Hotel—Porter, 2 and 45-100 per cent.; ale, 2 and 16-100 per cent.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN'S MESSAGE TO PETERBORO

The following telegram from Ottawa has been received in Peterboro. It contains no statement that was not anticipated, and does not change the local situation in the slightest. Subsequent events will depend entirely upon what is done at the Liberal convention this afternoon.

The telegram says:

"If a Union convention under the joint auspices of those supporting Union Government is held, the candidate selected at the convention will be recognized as the Government candidate."

R. L. BORDEN."

ARMISTICE FOR THREE MONTHS

Petrograd, Nov. 10.—The Revolutionary Committee, supported by the military garrison, has taken over all government offices in Moscow, according to a telegram received by David R. Francis, the American ambassador, from the American consul-general in Moscow.

The despatch from the consul-general was dated Thursday, and added that conditions in the city were quiet.

An Armistice.

"We plan to offer an armistice of three months, during which elected representatives from all nations, and not the diplomats, are to settle the questions of peace," said Nikolai Lenine, the Maximalist leader, in a speech before the workmen's and soldiers' congress.

"We offer these terms," M. Lenine added, "but we are willing to consider any proposals for peace, no matter from which side. We offer a just peace, but will not accept unjust terms."

THE WEATHER.

"Is this Indian summer?" This question has been asked regarding the beautiful weather prevailing today, and while a definite answer cannot be given, it may be said that the weather of today is at least a very good imitation of what Indian summer weather should be. Indian summer should consist of at least a week to ten days of warm, hazy weather during the first half of November, after the first fall of snow. Of late years it has been irregular in its appearance, or absent altogether, but when it is here, it is one of the most pleasant periods of the whole year. Temperature today, 54 degrees.—W. P.

Sir Wilfrid Fires First Campaign Gun

Quebec, Nov. 10. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier opened his campaign in the ancient city of Quebec last night. He spoke to one of the largest and most intensely enthusiastic of gatherings. But it was not a campaign speech.

In short, telling sentences, Sir Wilfrid defined his position in regard to conscription. He stood for voluntary service. As he made his declaration the vast throng went wild with acclaim. For moment the picturesque figure waited for the cheering to spend itself. Then came his appeal. With dramatic force and fire, amid the tense silence, all the more impressive by reason of the immediately proceeding roars of applause, Sir Wilfrid spoke to his compatriots, men and women, in serious and earnest solicitation. The people heard him in silence.

But Little Doing At The Tribunals

One Claimed Bad Knee Doctors Could Not Find, But Left to Report.

Although this is the last day for orally claiming exemption at the city tribunals, there was practically nothing doing either at the Judge's chambers or in the Council chamber.

Not One Claim.

At the former tribunal not one claim was recorded, while at the latter there were but two. John B. Dyer of Peterborough presented his claim for exemption as a B man, and decision was deferred until the date for which he is listed.

Changes His Mind.

Joseph Boucher, an A1 man who came from Edmonton six weeks ago, claimed a bad knee which the doctors could not find. He is a wanderer, with no home, responsibilities or connections. Questioning, however, elicited from him an admission that his knee was not so bad after all, and might be all right after a few days' training, and he cheerfully departed to report for duty.

Political Peace Reigns at Berlin

New Coalition Liberal Government Has Been Formed of All Parties.

Berlin (via London), Nov 10. — Dr. Karl Helfferich, vice-chancellor, has capitulated, and political peace once more has been restored. The Cabinet containing Count Von Hertling as chancellor, Friedrich Von Payer as vice-chancellor, and Herr Friedberg as vice-president of the Prussian ministry, means virtually a coalition liberal government. The clerical, national, liberal and progressive parties are represented actively in the Cabinet. The liberals are now getting ready to combat the reactionaries in their efforts to obstruct the enactment of the Prussian electoral reform bill.

Thousands Throng To S. A. Congress

Notable Gathering of Officers Held in Toronto Recently.

The Salvation Army of Canada East has just concluded the most successful congress in its history. Advances have been made in every line of work, especially among the young people.

The meetings in Toronto consisted of a welcome meeting on Tuesday night that packed the Temple with over a thousand people.

On Saturday night there was an officer's and local officers' council, which also packed the Temple at James and Albert streets.

Then came their great services on Sunday in the Massey Hall, more than taxing the capacity of the building for both Sunday afternoon and Sunday night. Hundreds were unable to gain admission.

Commissioner Richards conducted the Holiness meeting on Sunday morning and the great salvation meeting at night. The afternoon meeting was of a musical character and was presided over by Mayor Church. Alderman Archibald and Mr. Job Ryrie both spoke after the program was ended. The visible spiritual results of the Sunday meeting was 61 at the mercy seat in the morning and 135 at night, which was a grand sight.

Monday night was a young peoples demonstration and again hundreds were unable to gain admission to the Massey Hall. The young people all did well.

Commissioner Richards conducted councils of war with the 800 officers who were present and the result will be seen, no doubt, in a general onward drive in the coming year in which Peterboro salvationists will take a prominent part.

LIBERALS IN CONVENTION TO-DAY NOMINATE R. R. HALL TO CONTEST WEST PETERBORO

Joseph Wearing Moves For a Conference With a View to Securing Union Candidate.

The debate on the Wearing resolution was in progress as we go to press. It was quite evident, however, that Mr. Hall has the nomination, so that it has been decided to publish Capt. Burnham's address to the electors.

At the convention of West Peterborough Liberals in Victoria Hall this afternoon, at 2:10 o'clock there were just thirty-four men present, including President J. J. Hartley, Messrs. G. N. Gordon and R. R. Hall, and even at that the attendance was not at all representative of district interests. By 2:40 the attendance had swollen to some hundred and fifty Grits, in whom the old-time spirited enthusiasm seemed lacking.

President J. J. Hartley here took the chair and explained that the meeting was called to nominate a candidate to contest this riding. "Some seem to think that we Liberals are not win-the-war men, but such is not the case, and we are here this afternoon to nominate a man who will be earnest in his efforts to contribute to pushing this war to a triumphant conclusion."

Mr. Basil Hall was nominated secretary of the meeting, which was then declared open for nominations.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane was glad to know that the Liberal-Conservative Association was going to nominate a win-the-war candidate for West Peterborough. He characterized Sir Robert Borden as the weakest and most corrupt premier Canada has ever had. Mr. McFarlane nominated Mr. R. R. Hall as the Liberals' win-the-war candidate for West Peterborough.

Call for Conference.

Mr. Joseph Wearing moved, seconded by Mr. Robert Harstone:

Whereas, this convention of Liberals is assembled here for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the coming Federal election,

And whereas, the seriousness of the war situation demands co-operation and unity of action on the part of all classes,

And whereas, a union non-partisan win-the-war government has been formed for the purpose of carrying on the war, so far as this country is concerned,

And whereas, the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, has given the assurance that a candidate nominated by a union convention of Liberals and Conservatives, supporting the Union Government, will be recognized as the Government candidate:

It is therefore moved by Joseph Wearing, seconded by Robert Harstone, that this convention appoint a committee consisting of the executive of the Liberal Association, for the purpose of conferring with the executive of the Conservative Association with a view of calling a Union convention in this riding and that this convention stand adjourned to await the result of the Union convention.

AGREE WITH RESOLUTION.

Capt. Burnham and the Conservative party heartily agree with the spirit of the Wearing resolution. It is utterly impossible, however, for the Conservative nominee to wait for further developments as election day is only five weeks away.

BRITISH ARMY HAVE CAPTURED ASKALON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Nov. 10.—British army in Palestine, pursuing the defeated Turks, has made further extensive gains, the war office announced. Askalon has been occupied.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S MESSAGE

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:
Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election-day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies, and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

"PETERBORO SHOE" WILL SOON BE WORN IN ALL PARTS OF CANADA

B. F. Ackerman, Sons & Co. have New Samples Ready to be Placed on Sale---Factory One of The Best Equipped to be Found in Canada.

Before the world is many days older thousands of people in Canada will be treading on the name of this city. The "Peterborough Shoe," manufactured by B. F. Ackerman, Sons & Co., will be in use, and will be worn by small boys everywhere, and by working men in all parts of the Dominion. Every shoe is branded on the sole with the name of this city, so that every pair sold is an advertisement for Peterborough. Only staple shoes are to be made, and the new shoe just put on the market will be worn in the lumber, construction and mining camps of the country as well as by river drivers—in short, by all sorts and conditions of men to whom good shoes are an essential part of their equipment.

A short time ago the city voted to give the Ackerman Company a fixed assessment on their property as an inducement to take up the manufacture of shoes. The company already has prepared and placed on exhibition at their warerooms fifty of the fifty-seven samples of shoes which they will manufacture. Their equipment is now complete, and includes the best machinery that money can purchase. The company has had some difficulty in procuring workmen, as experts were required in the work of preparing the samples. Their working force is still small, but even now the firm is able to turn out two hundred pairs of shoes a day. They have a capacity, however, for six hundred pairs a day, and this output will call for the employment of about seventy workmen.

Local Sales Made.

Local dealers called at the factory yesterday to inspect the samples and remained to place orders. Some of these gave it as their opinion that the new stock is the best that has ever passed through their hands, and this opinion is shared by an expert from Toronto, who will next week enter the employ of the firm. The company's salesmen will begin work at once, and one of the first fields to be worked will be the western provinces, where the firm does so heavy a trade in the harness that it has been making for years, and where its reputation is firmly established.

Making a Pair of Shoes.

It takes the old style of hand-working shoemaker an entire day to make a pair of shoes, and he must be an expert to accomplish that task. With the modern machinery installed in the Ackerman plant the time required to turn out a pair complete is from thirteen to fifteen minutes. The shoe travels constantly from one machine to another from the time the sole is fashioned until it is ready for the packing case.

Some of the machines are simply marvels of efficiency; those which fasten the soles to the uppers especially so. One machine takes a coiled steel spring, fashions the steel into spikes and drives them into the soles of the shoe all in one operation. Another inserts screws in the soles of a stronger shoe by one movement equally rapid.

Sanitary Workroom.

The workroom of the new department is on the top floor of the Ackerman building and is well lighted and sanitary in every respect. All dust is removed from the room by means of blowers. Mr. Frank McKeen, an expert in his line, is superintendent of the new industry, and is well pleased at the prospects for a successful enterprise.

The citizens made no mistake when they voted for the Ackerman bylaw. The firm will keep faith with the people, and before another year Peterborough will have one of the largest shoe factories in Canada. The fact that only staple shoes are to be made is a guarantee that the sales will be steady as those shoes are always in demand. It is the higher grades of footwear that are effected by commercial conditions.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1917

THE TRADES COUNCIL'S PLAN.

IT IS A MATTER of regret that the members of the local Trades and Labor Council do not possess executive powers so that they might implement some of the many valuable suggestions that they make with regard to the management of public affairs. Among the delegates to Labor's central organization—which after all is merely a debating and advisory body—are to be found some of the keenest intellects in the city. This fact is coming to be more and more recognized, and the impression is passing that the members are only a group of disgruntled agitators intent on destroying the framework of society and the industrial economy of the country.

Evidence of the higher regard in which the Trades Council is held by the general public is not lacking. The members of the Board of Trade have invited and welcomed its co-operation, and the Greater Peterborough Association has invited its members to a place in its deliberations. Politicians, too, are awaking to the growing strength and influence of Labor and are turning this knowledge to practical account.

In their dealings with the aldermen, the Trades Council delegates are not to be flim-flammed. When they ask for anything they insist upon full measure, and are not satisfied with compromises. They have pointed out the weak points in the establishing and the operating of the civic coal yard and other public improvements. Labor is convinced that the local supply of coal is not fairly distributed, and would invoke the full powers of the Fuel Controller to correct this condition.

There has been a great deal of discussion in the press and otherwise with regard to the administration of the Patriotic Fund. Some believe that the present system approaches the nearest to perfection. Others hold that the raising and the management of the Fund should be taken over by the Government.

At their last meeting the Trades Council discussed this question, and it must be conceded that the delegates arrived at a practical and businesslike solution. They would abolish the Fund altogether, that is so far as making a separate matter of it is concerned. Instead of the Fund, they would have the Government increase the pay of the soldiers and increase the separation allowance, grading the latter according to the number in the family to which it is paid. In this way the beneficiaries would receive as just compensation exactly what was coming to them. There would be no suggestion of charity, as there is, in the estimation of some people, when money for the purpose is raised by public subscription or even by a municipal tax levy.

The public body that can devise a better plan than the above has yet to be heard from. The pity of it is that the Trades Council lack the machinery to give their ideas practical effect.

The recognized defect in the separation allowance paid by the Government is that no distinction is made between the soldiers' families as to numbers, but the allowance is the same, no matter whether there are one or half a dozen children to be provided for.

THE SOLLDIERS' CLUB HOUSE.

EVERYBODY seems to be of the opinion that some sort of a home should be provided for the soldiers who have returned from the war and for those who will come back when peace is declared. The matter has simply resolved itself into a question of ways and means.

It is fortunate that there were ladies at the meeting of citizens and soldiers in the Council chamber the other night. The housekeeping instincts of the ladies in the audience saved the situation and demonstrated that in matters involving economical management they have the men outclassed. It was the ladies who were the first to see the advantage of obtaining quarters in the Royal Bank building, instead of taking over the Peterborough club house for that purpose.

One would naturally suppose that the wives of the members of the Peterborough Club would like to see the rooms diverted from their original purpose, as that would have a tendency to keep their husbands at home. In the stand which they took they were actuated by a higher motive — a desire to provide for the welfare of the soldiers.

Even if the Peterborough Club rooms were turned over rent free to the veterans, the cost of maintenance would be almost prohibitive, amounting as it would to over $5 a day. For less than that, quarters can be obtained in the Royal Bank building, including the expense of heating and lighting and engaging a caretaker at $600 a year. The veterans can in the meantime do with quarters that will be inadequate when the rest of the soldiers return. At all events, they are entitled to a meeting place, and little difficulty in raising the money required is anticipated.

DEMOCRACY THAT IS SAFE.

PREACHING in this city last Sunday, Principal Gandier of Knox College quoted President Wilson's statement to the effect that the object of the war was to make the world a safe abiding place for Democracy. Elaborating this quotation, the reverend speaker said that the duty of the Church was to step in and make Democracy safe for the world.

Perhaps this has already been accomplished, and no one will interpose any objection to giving the Church credit for what has been done in this direction. Democracy in its essence is safe. Humanity has nothing to fear from its operation. The history of the United States, the leading Democracy of the world, amply bears out this contention.

The autocratic form of government has played havoc with creation. Monarchs have not only made war for little or no reason upon each other, recognizing no right but force, changing the map of the various continents by conquest, but have ground the spirit out of their subjects, reducing them to a condition little above that of the lower animals. Centuries of absolute sovereignty in Russia have left the millions of that country so little able to govern themselves that we find them living in a state of anarchy now that the force that has ground them so long has been removed. Russia ignores its obligations with its allies and violates every code of international honor, kissing the hand that would have smitten it unto death. But anarchy is not Democracy, and the Russians have yet to learn the first lessons of a free people.

The United States may have hesitated about entering the war, but it was the people themselves, no single ruler, who were responsible for all those months of inaction. The people of the United States, through Congress, alone have the right to declare war. They were true to the traditions, to the teachings of Washington and Lincoln, when they elected to hold aloof from a European war.

The history of the United States with regard to military operations is a marvel of national forbearance. The country has been in existence for over a century and a quarter, and in all that time not one foot of territory has been acquired by conquest, and no weaker nation has been bullied by its powerful neighbor.

Democracy is a safe consideration in human affairs, teaching as it does that all nations, great and small, are entitled to an equal chance, just as the same right is insisted upon with regard to individuals.

A DAY OF PRAYER.

KING GEORGE has proclaimed January 6 as a day of prayer throughout the Empire, when all creeds are expected to unite in petition for the success of the Allies in this gruelling war. This is likely to revive the discussion as to the efficacy of prayer under such conditions, for skepticism has not been altogether stamped out.

When the President of the United States set apart a day for prayer, a correspondent in the New York Sun raised the point that such supplications were idle, that the only effective prayer was made by the man with a rifle, and that the Supreme Being helps only those who show a disposition to help themselves. To this The Sun made a caustic editorial reply which proved that all newspapers are neither cynical nor godless.

The Great Teacher, who left the people of this earth the model petition, prayed Himself fervently when the shadow of an ignominious and unmerited death fell upon Him. Yet He did not ask either that the divine decrees should be changed or the divine plan adapted to His own needs. He did pray, however, that if it were possible, the cup might pass from His lips. It was not possible, but He was given strength to drain it to the bitter dregs.

The soldier prays before the battle, no matter how careless his civilian life may have been. The mother prays that her son may be spared, or if his life is required to be sacrificed, that she may be given strength to bear his loss. The Empire will carry out the King's request and engage in universal prayer, and the people will be all the better for the experience, stronger for duty, stronger to bear all reverses and losses that may come to them.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MR. G. N. GORDON is young enough to wait patiently for a better chance.

• • • •

THE VEGETARIAN is about the only person who is exempt from the mandates of Mr. Hanna.

• • • •

THE ALIEN'S VOICE speaking in the polling booth is not to be mistaken for the voice of the Deity.

• • • •

LIKE OTHER PLACES that have made similar election mistakes, New York will have no one to blame but itself.

• • • •

THE MAN who claims that war is demoralizing clinches his argument by citing the result of the election in New York.

• • • •

RIGHTEOUSNESS exalteth a nation, but being "righteous overmuch" may, as in the case of New York the other day, result in restoring mob rule.

• • • •

WHEN OPPORTUNITY to enlist knocked at the doors of young men, the pity of it is so many lusty fellows beat it by way of the back door.

AND FOR the foibles of Quebec.

• • • •

A FRIEND can apply for exemption for a member of Class One. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's manifesto is a blanket application for the exemption of Quebec.

• • • •

"THERE IS FOOD for thought in the situation in East Peterborough," naively remarks The Examiner. Yes, and it is the kind of food the supply of which Mr. Hanna is not likely to attempt to curtail.

THERE CERTAINLY ISN'T. For instance, The Advertiser would deliver Canada into the clutches of the quit-the-war party.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Bigness Is Not Power.

(New York Sun.)

Russia has proved that giant bulk does not in itself make might, and in spite of the splendid military qualities of her people, Russia is unable to hold the Germans on her own front or to keep the Teutons from withdrawing troops to crush Italy.

Apologizing for Quebec.

(Toronto World.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier ignores the great fact that the balance of power in Canada is passing from Quebec to the new Canadian West; and it will soon be that the controlling power is altogether in the West. Quebec is not in line either with Ontario or the West on the supremest issue that ever came to Canada; that is, shall we fight in this great war for liberty and civilization to our very limit, even if it entails forced military service? Sir Wilfrid is more or less seeking to find an apology for Quebec's dilatoriness in the war.

NOTES ON PASSING EVENTS

(By Paterfamilias.)

The Liberal Party is, according to rumors anxious for a fusion of Reform and Conservative interests and spirit into one win-the-war candidate. At one time in this riding there was considerable fusion of Liberal spirit into individual so-called Conservatives. Provincial Liberal government patronage for Peterborough was then going pretty freely. But the one big occasion on which the parties got together and buried their differences was when the late Hon. J. R. Stratton was created Provincial Secretary. At a banquet tendered him in the then Opera House, now Victoria Hall, there gathered a grand representative galoxy of grit and tory congratulators, including Cabinet Ministers, and would-be Cabinet Cabinet Ministers. Senators and would-be Senators, M. P.'s and the smaller fry, not forgetting three men from each newspaper to cover the event.

The spirit of jovial Sir John A. Macdonald punctured the joyous atmosphere, while the spirits of men with Scottish, Irish, Canadian and American labels (all guaranteed pure and old) joined in the general fusion.

And the ladies were there, God bless 'em, seated in the gallery and privileged to look on while the men below ate, talked, smoked, and did other things.

A great time was spent; all were happy and contented, especially the Liberals, for Sir Wilfrid had at last succeeded in carrying the country after, like the children of Israel, forty years' wandering in the wilderness of opposition. Everybody entered into the spirit of the occasion, while the spirits of the evening entered into same until—"God Save the Queen."

But is there really any hope for a real, honest selfsacrificiong fusion of party interests and spirit today?

The Enemy Within Our Gates.

The other day an Austrian alien was sentenced by Justice of the Peace Harry Rush to two months in jail unless he paid a fine of $25, which he could not, for not reporting to police headquarters in town. He had been interned two years and for the past two months has wandered over the country from Montreal to Three Rivers, thence to Toronto and here to Peterborough, reporting nowhere. Surely, Canada's experience at the hands of alien enemies enjoying our hospitality calls for such men being interned until after the war. The country is full of spies and unscrupulous tools of enemy agents, and it is up to Canada to suspect enemy aliens as such unless they can prove to the contrary. A man who persistently evades reporting usually has something to conceal.

Veterans Club Rooms.

The G.W.V.A. is to choose between a flat in the Royal Bank building and the Peterborough Club for temporary club rooms. The flat in question will have to be temporarily partitioned to suit their purpose, and they will not get it at $300 a year as announced at the meeting of citizens' and veterans' committees. The other premises are to be desired. If arrangements by which both vets and Peterborough Club members could be made the desired end might be met were it not that two families in one house do not generally pull, and that the vets would naturally want to employ a returned soldier as caretaker, which might not be agreeable to the club directors.

This is a view taken by one of the veterans. If expressions by members of the Peterborough Club that but few are now using the premises are correct, the building and furnishings should be secured temporarily at a reasonable rental, guaranteed by the city, together with its upkeep. This is by far the best proposition of the two, and would be more in keeping with what is due these defenders of those great principles for which Canada is fighting.

Why Not Registering?

One reason advanced why men did not claim exemption at the tribunals is publicity. That is to say they objected to their private affairs being exposed in open session and through the press. There is some reasonable ground for objection in that, too. But then, it is also reasonable to conclude that if Tom and Dick are in the same class, Tom taken and Dick left, the farmer would want to know why he has to fight while the other stays home and, perhaps, pulls big wages created by the war. Again, while men register such flimsy claims for exemption as having their mother-in-law to keep, when everybody knows the average man wants to get as far removed from his mother-in-law as possible; and on the ground of physical infirmity when they are classed in A II by three reputable doctors, then they deserve all the publicity that can be given. As far as the press is concerned, and private conditions of a straight forward deserving claimant would not be published.

Increased Wages.

Ald. Dobbin is home from his hunt for coal, in company with Ald. Stratton, in Toronto and Buffalo, with results that are disappointing. He has returned, however, quite convinced that increased wages is responsible for depreciation in output, and takes the ground that working men are being paid such high wages that they will not work steadily. With plenty of money in hand they think they are entitled to as good a time as the other fellow. And, the worthy alderman contends, this principle obtains in Canada.

In Buffalo, he says, the coal situation is bad. When cars are to hand for distribution there is a coal line for seven hours a day, during which time black diamonds are doled out in small quantities.

High Prices Everywhere.

Prices in Toronto and Buffalo are abnormally high, declares Ald. Dobbin. Here's one instance: He priced a pair of ordinary gloves which could have been bought in Peterboro before the war, if not later, for $1, and was asked $4 for them. In Buffalo the same quality gloves are selling at $7 the pair, and Ald. Dobbin did not go further afield in search of gloves.

TODAY'S STORY

"Klumpa, darling," said Fritz von Dooser brokenly, at the end of the evening, "I have put off the bad news as long as possible, but I must tell you now. I have been called into the navy."

"Dummhumper zweiwurst gelgendrein schmeernack Zimmer!" ("My goodness!") cried Klumpa Spitzmeer. "Oh, Fritz, I suspected something as soon as I noticed your uniform."

"My observant little Klumpa!" breathed Fritz. "I leave this very night. I am to report for duty aboard the submarine U-45,870, and she sinks tonight at 11.45 by the Tuffenkraut docks. Ach, poor Klumpa, I have just time to kiss you good-night!"

And he kissed her on the top step and dashed hastily out into the night.

But once in the road he felt that he simply could not tear himself away, perhaps forever, perhaps longer, without at least one more parting kiss. So he dashed back and gave her a lingering schooch (smack) on the porch.

Again he dashed forth, only to dash back for another kiss near the fence. Thus twenty minutes sped by in final kisses, and when von Dooser got to the Tuffenkraut docks the U-45,870 had gone. Frizt crept back to Klumpa's house.

"Ich vergoogen schulch!" ("I'm glad of it") said Klumpa promptly. "Ever since the kaiser put a tax on sauerkraut I've distrusted his honesty. Let us jump into my Spelgen (Ford) and hurry to Holland and be married and live happily ever after by exporting cheese to the kaiser at exorbitant prices!"

"Klumpa!" cried Fritz happily.

The end.

Study and Exercise

Overstudy and lack of exercise means thin, bloodless children. Study does not usually hurt a child at school unless the studies encroach on time that should be spent in out-of-doors exercise. But lack of exercise and overstudy is a combination that brings on St. Vitus dance. If your boy or girl at school is thin and pale, listless and inattentive, has a fickle appetite, is unable to stand or sit still, you must remember that health is much more important than education, and more time should be given to exercise and recreation.

See to it at once that the child does not overstudy, gets plenty of out-of-door exercise, sleeps ten out of every twenty-four hours, and takes a safe, reliable tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until the color returns to the cheeks and lips and the appetite becomes normal. For growing children who become pale and thin, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not only safe, but in most cases are the very best tonic that can be taken. These Pills build up the blood, strengthen the nerves and assist nature in keeping pace with rapid growth.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO

A collection of pictures of historical interest, collected by Rev. J. C. Davidson, was unveiled at St. John's Church.

Later election returns cut the majority of Mr. Laing in East Peterborough to less than 200.

According to The Review of this date the name Peterborough was chosen in 1827 at a dinner party in a tent as a compliment to Peter Robinson, a member of St. John's Church.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

He is indeed a busy man who can never find time to find fault.

One way to acquire popularity is to keep your troubles to yourself.

Popular music is probably so called because it soon becomes unpopular.

The average man is not a singer. Neither is the average woman; but sometimes you can't make her believe it.

You don't like the cheap tea you are using. Do you?

Pretty Poor Tea, Mother

Before the war so increased the cost of living, many people used to drink better tea than they are now using.

Perhaps, this is true in your case?

Of course, you are not drinking poor tea because you like it, but because you think it necessary to save money.

But are you really saving anything?

Cheap, common teas only make about 150 cups to the pound. You are lucky if you can stretch them out to 185 or 200.

On the other hand, Red Rose Tea easily makes 250 cups. It goes further because of its fine quality, consisting chiefly of Assam teas, the richest and strongest in the world.

You may almost doubt if so many cups of tea can be made from a pound of even such good tea as Red Rose, but you can readily prove the economy of Red Rose without waiting for a package to be used up. Just use a few leaves less of Red Rose for a brewing than you use of common tea—the result we are sure will please and surprise you.

AT 60 ENJOYING PERFECT HEALTH

By the time a man or woman is 60, the kidneys and bladder need a little help to keep them in good working order.

Rheumatism and backache so often accompany the later years of life, most people have an idea health and vigor cannot be expected much after the fiftieth year.

As a matter of fact there is no basis for these fears, we could show a number of letters proving our contention that if GIN PILLS are taken to keep the urine normal, prevent colds settling on the kidneys or bladder, and ward off Rheumatic attacks, almost everyone can enjoy perfect health at this late period.

To quote from a letter received from a prominent Consulting Engineer of New York City—"Your remedy I find, at 60 years of age, to give perfect relief from the Kidney and Bladder troubles incident to one of my age."

Perhaps you know a man or woman whose life is made a torment by Rheumatism, Backache, Sciatica, or Swollen Joints. Don't let it continue, for Gin Pills will surely bring that longed-for relief. You don't have to buy Gin Pills to try them. Write for a free sample. Address the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited. "It's A Fine Thing" Says Wm. Cairns

"TANLAC CERTAINLY CHANGED THINGS AROUND FOR ME," DECLARES FARMER.

"Well, I have tried Tanlac, and I just want to tell everybody it's a fine thing," said William Cairns while in Parks & Parks' drug store, Hamilton, recently. Mr. Cairns is engaged in farming at Waterdown, R. R. No. 1, where he has lived all his life and is highly respected by all who know him.

"I have been in a bad fix for three years," continued Mr. Cairns, "and had become so run down and played out that I never felt like work. My head ached nearly all the time, and I could hardly sleep. Some nights I would stay awake nearly all night and feel so tired and stiff in the mornings I could hardly get out of bed. I always had a mean taste in my mouth, my tongue felt thick, was covered with a foul coating, and I suffered with gas on my stomach something awful at times. Every two or three hours after eating I would stagger, and hardly knew where I was going. I just seemed to be dazed and things looked faded and misty to me. I had no energy at all, and for two years, that is until I got Tanlac, I haven't felt like doing one thing.

"But I just want to say this, Tanlac certainly has changed things about for me. I had taken so much medicine with no results that I was just about ready to give up, but now life and work is a pleasure. I bought five bottles of Tanlac, have already taken three of them, and it has helped me more than I believed it would. That mean taste has gone, my tongue has cleared off, and I hardly have a headache. Tanlac just seemed to soothe and settle my stomach, and I haven't had a vomiting spell since I began taking it. I enjoy all my meals now. I sleep good every night, and get up in the mornings ready for a big breakfast, and go to work with a vim. I certainly can recommend Tanlac for the good it has done me, and I'm glad to make this statement for what it may be worth to others who are suffering as I did."

Fifteen Years Use Of Baby's Own Tablets

Thousands of mothers keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house as long as there are little ones about. Among them is Mrs. Marcel D. Leblanc, Memramcook West, N. B., who says: "For the past fifteen years I have never been without Baby's Own Tablets. Whenever any of my children are ailing the Tablets promptly relieve them. I have such faith in them that I never hesitate in recommending them to any of my friends who have little ones in the home." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MIXING DRINKS MAKES TROUBLE

Jamaira Ginger and Temperanre Beer Are Dangerous Combination.

A man from the country was this morning charged at the police court with having been drunk yesterday. He pleaded "not guilty."

Constable Sandback, who arrested the accused, testified that the man was staggering along the boulevard at the corner of Charlotte and George streets, and that his breath smelled strongly of alcohol.

Constable Pratt corroborated Constable Sandback's evidence.

Accused was fined $10 without costs.

Another man also faced the same charge, and offered the same plea, which was sustained by the court, and the accused was discharged.

Still another man was charged with being drunk at 7:30 last night opposite the Brock street rink. He pleaded "not guilty." All day yesterday, he swore, all the drink he had was 50 cents' worth of Jamaica ginger, which he was taking for pains in the head.

Asked how he came by bruises on his face and head, he replied, "in the police cell in the dark," and appeared surprised to learn that the cells are never dark, being illuminated all night. He used Jamaica ginger in local option beer.

"That was to put a kick into it," replied the Chief.

Chief Thompson declared that it is no uncommon occurrence for men to put Jamaica ginger in two and a half per cent. beer, and the experience of the police shows many cases of men getting intoxicated that way. Convictions have been made in Toronto as a result of this custom. Jamaica ginger is now being considered by the License Board as belonging to the class of prohibited liquors.

Justices of the Peace H. Rush and Frank Adams presided, and J. A. O'Brien defended all three men.

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Re-Creation of a Mighty Song

WE INVITE YOU to hear Mr. Edison's re-creation of the "Forge Song" from Siegfried in our Edison Showrooms to-day.

Jacques Urlus, the Wagnerian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera House, has sung this song for Mr. Edison. His sturdy, virile voice and his masterly interpretation lifts Wagner's great song to the heights of its power.

Come and hear this thrilling aria and judge if it is indeed true that the master inventor has re-created music. Has he established a new and an epoch-making art? Music lovers, does this re-creation actually deceive your ears in its reality? Come and decide.

Siegfried sings this song as he welds his magic sword. The majestic measures ring with the fire and vigor of the youthful hero's soul. And the strange plaintive note with the weird accompaniment of the woodwinds, cast a spell which dwells with you long after you have heard the song. All these subtle qualities Mr. Edison has re-created.

A CHILD DOESN'T LAUGH AND PLAY IF CONSTIPATED

IF PEEVISH, FEVERISH AND SICK GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills: give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative;" and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies and children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

FIREMEN NEED OVERCOATS BILLIARD TABLE REPAIRS

Rubber and Brass Trunk for Sale---Repairs to Billiard Table Comes Out of Benefit Fund.

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee met in business session last night. There were present Alderman Dobbin, presiding, Mayor Duffus, Alderman Weir, Smith and Worth.

Fire Chief Grange reported that Engineer Jamieson had quit Saturday. He had an engineer engaged who will report for duty on November 15th, and in the meantime Mr. Miller, a qualified engineer, will help out in cases of emergency.

Junk at Fire Hall.

Chief Grange said there is considerable junk at the fire hall, including rubber coats, rubber boots, brass couplings, etc., which he would like committee to inspect with a view to disposal. On motion of Mayor Duffus and Weir a committee was appointed to dispose of this junk with power to act. The committee are: Ald. Dobbin, Smith, Worth and Weir and the mayor.

Overcoats Wanted.

Fire Chief Grange also reported that the men's overcoats are six years old and shabby, and should be replaced at a cost, say, of $28 each. Seventeen coats would be needed. The rubber coats also need renewing. The above named committee will investigate this matter.

Repair Billiard Table.

Chief Grange suggested that the billiard table in the fire hall be repaired. It needs a new top and cushions, and he asked that these be repraced by drawing on the firemen's benefit fund in which there are $160. The work will cost $60 or $75. This matter was left in the hands of the chairman and chief with power to act, the enpense to be paid out of the Firemen's Benefit Fund on order of the chairman.

ON THE FARMS OF ONTARIO

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by district representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The new Fall wheat has made little growth during the past week or two, and the later sown crop is likely to enter the winter with a smaller top than is desired. The same may be said of winter rye.

The comparatively slow progress of threshing is attributed to the good general yield of grains, the lateness of the harvest, wet weather, the scarcity of help, and, one representative claims, the tough straw.

Fall plowing and silo filling have also been delayed by bad weather and lack of farm labor. It is the general opinion that the needed acreage of fall plowing will not be overtaken unless a long stretch of open weather ensues.

Corn has been an unfortunate crop most of it having been sown late. As a result of this and the scarcity of labor, a considerable portion of the crop has been kept lying in the fields in the rain and the cold. The same may be said of buckwheat. Beans were also a late crop, and a Middlesex report speaks of a field of nine acres being covered with snow.

Potatoes and Apples.

Potatoes are a fair crop, but some of them are yet in the ground. Turnips, mangels, sugar beets and other roots are also regarded as good crops, but the lifting of them, especially turnips, has been slow owing to rainy weather.

Frost caught some of the clover before it could be cut, and injured it for seed purposes. Spring seeding of clover has turned out well; but owing to the lack of growth in the fall the fields must be pastured less if a good crop is to be expected next year.

In Dundas County the St. Lawrence Valley Fruit Growers' Association, as the result of co-operation, have sold their output at the following rate per barrel:

McIntosh Red—No. 1, $7; No. 2, $6; No. 3, $4.

Fameuse—No. 1, $6; No. 2, $5.50, No. 3, $4.

Winter Varieties—No. 1, $5; Nos. 2 and 3, $3.50.

Live Stock.

The cold weather has compelled the comparatively early stabling of dairy cattle and horses, which will mean more consumption of fodder supplies. In Durham county a number of mares in foal have been purchased at good prices, being in fit condition, while ordinary horses, not being in such good form, are selling at comparatively low prices.

Oxford reports a few carloads of fat cattle being shipped out, but farmers are rather looking for "feeders" for finishing later, as there is a good supply of grain and other fodder on hand for this purpose. Stock dealers are complaining of the great scarcity of railway cars.

Milk production has fallen back to the average for the season, as pastures appear to be about finished.

In some of the Western Ontario counties small pigs are selling at from $12 to $16 a pair.

Reports from Haldimand, Brant and Prince Edward state that ewe lambs and other sheep for breeding purposes are being bought freely, and the outlook for the sheep industry is much brighter than formerly. Some of the purchasers in Brant were Americans.

Little Lucy had been listening to a lecture from her father on the folly of being afraid to be alone in the dark and of various other nervousness to which timid childhood is a prey.

"Father," she said, when he had finished, "when you see a cow aren't you afraid?"

"No, Lucy; certainly not."

"Nor when you see a black sheep with a great big sooty bag?"

"Of course not!" — with assumed scorn.

"Not even when it thunders?"

"No, no, you silly little girl!"

The little one looked at her big-bearded parent in an ecstacy of hero-worship.

"Father," she said solemnly, "aren't you afraid of nothing in the world—excep' mother?"

What National Cash Registers Do

No. 5---Give a Printed, Unchangeable Receipt Without Delay.

The New National Cash Registers give with every purchase an unchangeable receipt or sales-slip. This shows in printed figures the amount paid or charged, who made the sale, and the date.

The receipt-giving, National Cash Registers enable you to get all your money because they force your clerks to give a correctly printed receipt to every customer.

A National Cash Register receipt is a mark of accuracy and establishes a bond of confidence between the customer and the merchant.

It protects servants and children sent to the store and the amount shown on the receipt is the amount they have spent.

This receipt is printed automatically—in half a second: and at the same time a duplicate record is printed on the sales-strip.

Now is the time to install machines that print an unchangeable receipt in an instant—as an incidental part of the service they perform.

We will be glad to have our agent discuss your own particular needs. Write us and we will have him call.

ANDREW WILSON & CO TORONTO AND MONTREAL

NO COAL TO BE HAD IN BUFFALO FOR PETERBOROUGH COAL YARD

American Distributing Centre Besieged from all Parts of Country For Coal—Coal Line, 6 Hours Day, 2 Days Week, Doled Out Small Quantities,

Fuel Controller Ald. Dobbin reported to the City's Fire, Water and Light Com. last night that the city coal yard had received and distributed up to October 31st 516 tons of coal at a cost of $5176.66, including $144 for bags. This figures out per ton, with cost of bags, $10.03; deducting the price of bags, the cost per ton delivered to the consumer, allowing 14c per ton rent of shed is $9.81. This coal is being sold at $10 a ton so the city is not growing rich on its venture.

Census of Coal.

As to the cry that a census of coal in the city should be taken, Ald. Dobbin declared that the Fuel Controller is going to issue a proclamation calling for such steps, after which action will be taken to satisfy the public on this vexed question. Personally, he would be agreeably surprised were two or three hundred householders found with two years' supply in their cellars, and believed that ten would be the limit.

Flimsy Excuse.

Ald. Dobbin said regarding ten cars of coal under order from a Cincinnatti firm, they had written that they are still endeavoring to secure proper cars in which to make transportation.

The committee were agreed that neither they nor the public are particular as to so-called "proper" cars. It is coal they want, let it come in box or any other kind of railway conveyance, and this company will be so advised.

To Fish Things Out.

Ald. Dobbin suggested that when taking a census of coal, three or four citizens be added to council's fuel committee.

His worship—"Hand the matter over to the Fish Committee, and let them fish things out."

Ald. Weir here understood that the Fuel Controller is going to order that the sale of coal in 500 lb. lots be on the same price basis as though it were delivered in ton or two ton lots.

The Trip to Buffalo.

Ald. Dobbin reported that Ald. Stratton and he found conditions in Buffalo far worse than here even. No more than 500 lbs. is sold to anybody. The trestles on which the coal arrives only operate two days each week, and on each of those days for six hours there is one continuous coal line of consumers to whom the coal is doled out, like bread to the starving in hard times. People have to send rigs for the coal, and one man told him that, what with the cost of a rig and time waiting to be supplied in one's turn, the cost of delivery is not far short, if any, of the fuel's price itself.

A Forlorn Hope.

Ald. Stratton and Ald. Dobbin visited 27 coal firms in Buffalo, but without result. Every office was besieged by applicants for coal from far and near. In one Lehigh Valley office there were at one time the mayors of Ingersoll, Stratford and Berlin, an official from Medina, N. Y., and themselves from Peterborough. One manager said, "If there is any one man in Canada we are going to send coal to, that man is Fitzgerald of Peterborough," and Ald. Dobbin pressed him to get busy and send Fitzgerald coal, as he certainly is in need of it. Another firm was one with which Weir & McCarthy deal, and of whom they had many kind words to say. In comparing this firm's figures of the amount of coal shipped by them to Weir & McCarthy this year, there were but two tons difference in the figures given. Ald. Dobbin left this office with the promise that Weir & McCarthy should get coal if "possible," but as for the city coal yard, no hope was extended.

Nut Size Coke.

The Queen City Coal Co. said Peterborough had made a mistake in not ordering coke when obtainable; now it is not to be had.

Cancel Coal.

W. B. Nicol & Co. advised the burning of cannel—a hard-soft coal. This can be had at $4.50 net f.o.b. at the mine, net freight to the Suspension Bridge $1.85 per ton, thence to Peterborough $1.30, customs charges 53c, war tax 33c—$8.51 laid down in Peterborough. Add to this 35c ton for bagging and handling and 80c for delivery to consumers bringing the price per ton up to $9.66.

Ald. Dobbin drew attention, however, to the fact that Low has 100 tons of [illegible] coal in his sheds he cannot sell.

Four Cars Somewhere.

When in Toronto Ald. Dobbin and Stratton saw Miss S. Cohen of the Canadian Coal Supply Co., who told them that four cars of coal for Peterborough are somewhere between the bridge and this city.

To Keep on the Job.

It was decided to keep on the hunt for coal. The mayor will phone Miss Cohen today, if he has not already done so. Ald. Worth will try and get an order filled by the Canadian Coal Supply Co., Toronto, and Ald. Weir keep in touch with his Buffalo supply men.

To Order Cannel Coal.

On motion of Mayor Duffus and Ald. Worth, a car of cannel coal will be ordered to try it out.

SETTLED THE CLAIM.

Editor Review: At the last meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board a matter of a claim of short weight on the Shearer factory by Mr. Kerr was reported to be refused payment by the directors, and was referred to the executive of the board for settlement.

At a directors' meeting last night, called for discussion of the claim, the directors pointed out that they had not refused payment of the claim, but had asked for a written statement, and after a full understanding of the matter it was settled without delay.

READER.

Editor Review: For the benefit of the friends and others who may wish to write or send anything to Pte. William Brown, I would be thankful if you would publish this address as follows:—

He worked at C.G.E. and Wm. Hamilton's as machinist and fitter. For further particulars consult J. Smith, 546 George street, or phone 1537.

Yours truly,

J. SMITH.

Editor Review: May I be permitted, through the columns of your paper to ask—is the information of our young men regarding their financial obligations, and a mother's plea for an only son, for the benefit of the local Exemption Boards, or for the general public? As a patriotic citizen, whose sons are serving the Empire, I would like to say that I consider this one of the smallest things that could be done, and something that is going to destroy any patriotic feeling that may exist. I contend that it is quite the proper thing for the decision of the Exemption Board to be published, but just on what ground, or for what particular family reason, or financial obligations a man may claim exemption, is the private information of the Exemption Board as appointed, and not to be handed out to the public through the Press for criticisms by perhaps your next door neighbor, who has no right to know what the conditions, as they exist, in your home happen to be.

Let us have fair play, and leave these matters to be discussed by the proper members of the Boards as named, not the public.

Yours,

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

PERDUE—GEORGE.

On Sept. 10th, at the Church of the Holy Rosary, Vancouver, Rev. Father O'Boyle officiating, the wedding of Sergt. John G. Perdue, formerly of Ennismore, and Miss Winnifred George was solemnized.

The winsome and graceful bride, beautifully costumed in vieuse rose, with Miss Nellie George as bridesmaid, was accompanied by her father, while Sergt. A. G. Leighton supported the happy bridegroom.

The great popularity and esteem in which the couple are held, led to a large company assembling to witness the ceremony in addition to many of the returned soldiers in the Shaughnessy Military Hospital, to which the bridegroom is attached, and the entire staff of the mail order department of Spencers were waiting in a body outside the church to cheer the happy couple on their way and incidentally shower them with rice.

Sergt. Perdue enlisted with the 22nd Howitzer Battery on July 9th, 1915, and reached Flanders on the 1st of January, 1916, and fought at St. Eloi, Messines, the third battle of Ypres, till he was severely wounded at Courcelette on the Somme on October 2. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perdue, of Ennismore, Ontario.

Before enlisting he was employed at Spencers' Limited, where his bride was also engaged.

Mrs. Perdue is a daughter of Sergt. George of the 6th D.C.O.R., and Mrs. George, of Vancouver.

Sergt. Perdue recently passed the special qualifying examination for the outside civil service.

Mrs. Maurice H. Park Gives a Recital

St. Thomas Paper Sounds Praise of Well Known Soprano.

The St. Thomas Journal says:

One of the most delightful musical events of the season was the recital given in Knox Church Wednesday evening by Mrs. Maurice H. Park, formerly Miss Dorothy Allan, soprano, and Miss Catharine Reekie, Pianist. The audience was large and representative and the program by these two clever young artists all that could have been desired. T. H. Nixon played the accompaniments in his usual finished manner.

Mrs. Park who spent most of her childhood in St. Thomas, is the daughter of John Allan, a former organist and choirmaster of Knox church. From her mother also she has inherited rich musical ability and this combined with long and careful training has given her a voice that may well be envied. Seldom has a soprano of more power and charm been heard in St. Thomas. Mrs. Park is equally good in the high and low registers and her control is admirable. Last evening she sang some thirteen or fourteen songs some of them strenuous to a degree, and at the finish of the program, seemed fresh as ever. Of her numbers, "Spring's Awakening," (Sanderson), "Break O' Day," by the same composer, and "La Marseillaise" sung with the audience on its feet, were perhaps the favorites.

Mrs. Park was given an enthusiastic reception, dozens of her old friends being in the audience. In her childhood days here, Mrs. Park's voice gave much promise for the future and it has not disappointed. Brilliant is the one word that sums up her singing. St. Thomas will indeed be pleased to hear her on future occasions.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

The topic for Sunday, November 11th, in the Y.W.C.A.'s world's week of prayer is Old Testament foreshadowings of God's purpose for the nations.

Gen. XII, 1-3—Foreshadowed in Israel's History.

I Kings VIII, 41-43, 59, 60—Foreshadowed in the prayer of Israel's King.

Ps. LXXII, 7-11, 17-19—Foreshadowed in Israel's Poetry. The nations bring their gifts to the King that is to come, and find their happiness in His gifts to them.

Isaiah XIX, 19-25—Foreshadowed in Israel's prophecy. The clearest teaching in the Old Testament of the value of each nation to God, and of the value of each nation to other nations.

World's Y.W.C.A.

Praise for the many links which bind our National Associations together, and for the forging of new ones in spite of the restricted activities of the World's Executive Committee owing to the war; for fresh interest shown by members in Association work in other countries; for new openings for Association work.

For the increased scope of the Association's work in many countries, and for the ready response of National and other committees to new demands; for the courage and faith of the leaders faced with heavy and increasing responsibilities.

For the protection and guidance of the workers in times of danger and difficulty.

For all signs of God's blessing on our work.

Prayer for the willingness to enter into God's purpose for the nation; for the faith that God will use the World's Y.W.C.A. to draw together again the women of all nations in the fellowship of a common purpose; for hope and vision in facing the problems of the future for our Association.

For members of the World's Committee in all lands, that they may be given faith, courage, understanding, and sympathy in view of the changing conditions and needs of women in many lands.

For a more real trust in the Spirit that works, "Not by might, nor by power."

The opening service of the Week of Prayer will be held in the Green Room at the Y.W.C.A. on Sunday afternoon, at 4.15, to which all young women are invited, and on Monday afternoon at four o'clock a meeting of prayer and praise for the members of the Board and Committees, and all friends of the Association, will be conducted by Mrs. W. E. Scott.

ITALIAN ARMY MAKES NEW STAND

"IF ELECTED I WILL WORK TOOTH AND NAIL TO EJECT BORDEN" IS R.R. HALL'S ELECTION CRY

Liberal Nominee in His Speech of Acceptance Leaves no Doubt as to His Partisan Animus—Offer to Confer on Unionism Rejected.

Mr. R. R. Hall is the Liberal Win-the-War candidate—at least that is how the wording of Mr. Andrew McFarlane's nomination at the Liberal convention in Victoria Hall, Saturday afternoon, characterizes him. The nomination was adopted by the convention as many were leaving the hall, therefore its unanimity begged for by President Hartley cannot be claimed.

Lacked Spirit and Fire.

While each speaker was accorded customary vociferous reception as he mounted the stage, the old time Liberal spirit and enthusiasm was lacking. Toward the end of the proceedings the audience seemed to lose interest and an anxiety to get away was manifest. So much so, in fact, that many started to stampede from the hall in blissful forget that such a person as His Majesty the King existed.

Venom and Partizanship.

Addresses by Mr. McFarlane and Mr. Hall were clothed in venomous and belligerent utterances against Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues past and present, while the former did not forget Captain Burnham, whom he characterized as windstorm Hampden, a disgrace to both city and Canada, and whom he blamed for selling race against race. "He'll have to," he thundered, "get more support than that of Mr. Worth to send him back to Ottawa." However, Mr. McFarlane urged that every effort be put forth to win the war first and then fight Sir Robert Borden and his crowd to a finish.

No Use for Referendum.

Mr. Joseph Wearing in presenting his resolution for a joint meeting of Liberal and Conservative executives to agree on a Union candidate, said he had hoped for a straight party fight, with Sir Wilfrid Laurier taking the position of a win-the-war leader. The Coalition Government, he declared, had forced Laurier to his present attitude. While regretting the affiliation with that government of so many Liberals, still he recognised that they represent a big mass of people anxious to support the men in the trenches at the earliest possible moment. And with one brother beneath the sod of France, and another overseas, he was not satisfied to leave Canada and its present war exigencies to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his referendum. This referendum, he urged, would mean months, perhaps years wasted before reinforcements are sent, and the Liberal party should shun any action which would postpone for even one month sending support to Canada's army. He was strong for the Military Service Act, but opposed to Mr. Burnham whom he declared was neither recognized by a united Conservative party nor endorsed by Sir Robert Borden.

Urged Coordination.

Mr. Harstone, in seconding the resolution urged that party differences be sunk for the time being, and Liberals and Conservatives alike get together on the one common ground of winning the war.

Mr. McFarlane could not agree to this, and offered that Mr. Hall had assured him that he was for winning the war above any other consideration. "I'm not in sympathy with Sir Wilfrid Laurier," he added.

A Liberal Arraignment.

Mr. R. R. Hall here took the platform, and in the course of a vigorous speech his whole attitude toward Sir Robert Borden and anything and everything Borden was virulent and belligerent in the extreme. He admitted that Canada's situation is grave, that there is only one course open to all to perform their duty toward winning the war,—but had no confidence in Sir Robert Borden and his Union Government. "Sir Robert," he said, "has been prime minister the last six years and there is no appreciable change in him; he is the same man today as five years ago. And the question with me is, is Sir Robert Borden the man I can trust to steer the country through its present crisis."

MINISTERS ENDORSE LOAN

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association this morning, the following resolution, moved by Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, and seconded by Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, was unanimously carried:

"That the Peterborough Ministerial Association, in session this day, November 12th, recognizing our obligation to assist those who have special responsibility in connection with the present war, and desiring to co-operate with the Finance Minister and those associated with him in furthering the success of the "Victory Loan," it is resolved that we heartily commend this matter to our people as a safe investment and a patriotic duty."

VICTORY LOAN HAS GOOD START

CHEERING REPORTS RECEIVED FROM ALL PARTS OF DOMINION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Nov. 12.—The hundred and fifty million dollar Victory Loan "got off to a good start" in practically every part of Canada is the announcement made here today. The committee has been in communication by wire with most of the centres and all reports tell of an enthusiastic inauguration to the campaign and a very substantial response already in the matter of actual subscriptions. A statement of the amounts subscribed at the various centers will likely be available later.

Street Fighting Rages in Petrograd

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Nov. 12.—Street fighting is proceeding constantly. Junkers loyal to the Kerensky Government regained possession of the telephone station this morning. The exact whereabouts of the Kerensky army which is reported to be approaching the city is unknown at this hour.

SIR WILFRID'S OPPORTUNITY.

(From a Globe Editorial.)

Sir Wilfrid can perform a patriotic service by combatting this spirit, but all his eloquence in Quebec, and all the eloquence of others in other provinces, will not do, or begin to do, what is being done by the Military Service Act. To suspend the Act, as Sir Wilfrid Laurier is pledged to do if he returns to power, would be to withhold reinforcements from the Canadians at the darkest hour for the Allies since they stayed the rush to Paris.

HUN OFFICERS RUN FOR COVER AT FIRST FIRE

Leaving the Rank and File To Carry on the Combat Alone.

ARTILLERY FIRE EFFECTIVE

Disorganization Among Enemy Troops Is Evidently on the Increase.

(By W. A. Willison.)

Canadian Headquarters in France Nov. 12.—During an intense artillery fire last Saturday counter-attacks were launched by the enemy against our line. The first was broken up by our artillery, which swept the assembled area, inflicting heavy casualties, while the second attack, though further advanced, was equally unsuccessful, the attacking forces being driven off with heavy losses by our artillery, machine gun and rifle fire.

Since then the enemy has made no further infantry attempt against our lines.

The prisoners captured pay tribute to our artillery fire. They report that their battalions suffered tremendous losses and were withdrawn from the line after experiencing 12 hours' shelling.

Increasing disorganization among the enemy forces is indicated in statements made by the prisoners, while the decline in the morale of the officers is unquestioned. One officer says that when we attacked on Saturday all the other officers in his battalion ran back to shelter some three hundred yards behind the front line, leaving the warrant officers, N. C. O.'s and men to carry on.

BELGIUN'S FATE TO BE DECISIVE ISSUE OF WAR

Admiral Von Tirpitz Makes Violent Annexation Speech at Munich.

WHERE GERMANY'S SAFETY LIES

Teutons Must Fight Against Tyranny of Anglo-Americanism.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Nov. 12.—At a meeting of the New Fatherland party in Munich yesterday Admiral Von Tirpitz, former German minister of Marine, made a violent annexationist speech. He said the question whether Germany or Great Britain became the protector of Belgium would be the decisive issue of the war. A mistaken solution of the Belgian question would stunt our exports and the reserve capital of our industry and degrade us to being the bond slave of Anglo-Americanism said the admiral. Our military security lies in Belgium. It is the only way of obtaining compensation for our enormous economic losses.

The admiral added that it was a mistake to believe the submarine would prove sufficient protection against Great Britain as some effective counter weapon was bound to be discovered. He declared Germany must have Antwerp, that Austria must become the principal protecting power of the mouth of the Danube and that Germany was interested in the settlement of the Adriatic question. Germany's struggle, he said, is a terrific battle against the all devouring tyranny of Anglo-Americanism.

TWO LOCAL MEN GIVE LIVES FOR THE EMPIRE'S DEFENCE

PTE. HAROLD LEBARR

ARTILLERY FIGHTING ON THE FRENCH FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Nov. 12.—On the front between Chaume Wood and the Bezonvaux-Verdun sector active artillery fighting continued during the night says today's official statement. On the remainder of the front the night was calm.

NO INFANTRY ENGAGEMENTS.

London, Nov. 12.—Beyond the usual artillery activity on both sides of the battle area there is nothing of special interest to report, says today's war office statement.

Ptes. Tobin and Morrow Are Now Listed With Canada's Honored Dead—Ptes. LeBarr and Thompson Reported Wounded.

Private Austin Edward Tobin, who was reported wounded Oct. 31, died of his injuries on Nov. 6, according to an official message received by his friends. He leaves a wife and children, who reside on the River Road, Auburn.

The late Private Tobin went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was a member of a family who probably hold the record for patriotic sacrifice in Peterborough county. Four brothers have enlisted, and Austin is the second to give his life for his country, Joseph Tobin having made the supreme sacrifice on Nov. 1 a year ago. The surviving brothers in khaki are Morris and Leo. All four were members of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Ashburnham, and the Township of Douro has every reason to feel proud of the record that has been made by one of its families.

Private Morrow Killed.

Official word was received this afternoon that Private Orland James Morrow, infantry, had been killed in action on October 26. Private Morrow was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Morrow, 302 Water street, city. He was only 19 years of age, and enlisted with the 159th Battalion in Sudbury, going overseas a year and a half ago. Subsequently he was transferred to the 58th Battalion in France four months ago, and it was in his first engagement that he lost his life.

This gallant young soldier is survived by his mother and father, three sisters and five brothers. One brother, Lieut. T. A. Morrow, of the 4th Battalion, is now in France, while another, Gunner Melville Morrow (heavy battery), is home convalescing after eighteen months' active service in France.

Private LeBarr.

Mrs. Lewis LeBarr, 160 Charlotte street, has received the following despatch from the Records Office at Ottawa:

Sincerely regret to inform you Pte. Harold LeBarr, Mounted Rifles, officially reported admitted Eighth Field Ambulance October 30, 1917. Gunshot wound in left leg.

Director of [illegible].

Harold LeBarr enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and at the time was not yet 18 years old. His father, Lewis LeBarr, joined the same unit as a tailor, as he was above the age limit for combatants. When the 93rd reached England Harold was transferred for active duty at the front, and the father was put into a construction camp. Harold has been through some of the fiercest engagements of the past summer, including the battle of Vimy Ridge, and until the injury referred to in the above despatch had escaped without a wound.

Other casualties reported today are:

Pte. Harold Doleman, Mounted Rifles, gunshot wound in left eye.

Pte. George Wessen, Indian River, wounded.

Pte. Stenson, 357 Reid street, died of wounds.

Percy Lemay, 190 Baruado Ave., killed in action.

George Campbell, 438 Water street, admitted to hospital.

John Joseph Murray, 149 London street, wounded.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:
Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election-day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies, and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

WM. GROSE AND JACK HENRY DROWNED IN RICE LAKE

Gasoline Launch Upset Yesterday Afternoon 30 Yards Oft Light House—Burdine Garside, A Companion, Saved.

A sad drowning fatality occurred in Rice Lake yesterday afternoon by which two young men lost their lives and one narrowly escaped death.

The Victims.

WM. GROSE, aged 32, residence Rubidge street. He leaves a wife and five small children, the oldest of which is ten years of age.

JACK HENRY, aged 22, single. He lived with his parents in Brownton.

The Survivor.

Burdine Garside, son of James Garside, up to a month ago auto driver for A. W. Cressman Co. Ltd.

How Accident Happened.

The three young men left town at seven yesterday morning in Grose's car for a point on the river opposite Bell's property, where they boarded a gasoline launch and sailed down to Rice Lake. At one-thirty Fish Inspector Wm. Thompson heard cries for help from the lake, and saw an upturned launch with a man clinging to the vessel. Thompson immediately went to his aid in a canoe, and rescued Garside in an exhausted condition.

Garside could not account for the launch turning turtle. The accident occurred in the lake, about 30 yards off the light house at the eastern entrance. Grose and Henry attempted to swim to the Hiawatha shore, but were chilled by the extreme coldness of the water, and sank.

Search Parties.

Garside reached town last night at about 7 o'clock, and notified Mr. J. Allan of Graftone, a brother-in-law of the unfortunate Grose, of the sad news. Garside was brought to town by Ald. Duncan in his auto.

Search parties left last night and this morning, with grappling irons, for Rice Lake. Up to the hour of going to press the bodies had not been recovered. Garside returned last night to the scene of the accident to render what help he can in searching.

Jack Henry was a tool-maker employed in the C.G.E. William Grose was a brass finisher, an employee of the Henry Hope Company.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1917

UNION REJECTED.

IN A STATEMENT published in The Review the other day, and in a communication sent to the executive committee of the Liberal Association, Capt. Burnham proposed a conference between the two parties in order that an agreement might be reached on the selection of a Union candidate.

At the Liberal convention Saturday Mr. Joseph Wearing introduced a resolution providing for such a conference. This was defeated by a gathering that was carefully packed in the interests of Mr. Hall. There is no longer a chance for an agreement, no longer a possibility to avoid an election by choosing a Union Government supporter by acclamation. Mr. Hall is responsible for the division of the riding by party strife.

Capt. Burnham is a supporter of the Union Government beyond all question, even if he has not been nominated at a joint convention. Mr. Hall's position is equally clear. Unless Mr. Borden is a stickler for technicalities, it should not be a difficult matter for him to choose between the two candidates now in the field. Capt. Burnham's offer for a conference has been flatly rejected. The responsibility for the present unfortunate situation rests with Mr. Hall and his supporters.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

PETERBOROUGH is to go through a Federal election in which the worst sentiments of the voters are likely to be aroused. It is unfortunate that this should be the case, unfortunate that any man should, for the gratification of his own ambition, bring on such a contest. The spirit of the holiday season is to be poisoned by party strife. Even after the 17th of December the unrest in the constituency will still exist, because the result of the election will not be definitely known until the returns from the soldiers' vote are all in, and this will prolong the uncertainty for at least two months.

Is the Federal election to be followed by one in the city? The latter can easily be avoided by permitting the election of all officials by acclamation. There may be no precedent for such a course, but extraordinary circumstances, such as those which exist at present, call for extraordinary measures.

The Review invites discussion on this point, and will be glad to publish letters dealing with the question. Alderman Stratton, it will be recalled, made such a suggestion at the last regular meeting of the Council.

OPPOSED MR. HALL.

THE BETTER ELEMENT of the Liberal party was at odds with Mr. Hall on Saturday. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Mayor Duffas, ex-Ald. Green and others of that class who would bring strength to his campaign, voted for the Wearing resolution, thus putting themselves out of the ranks of the nominee's supporters.

"AFTER BORDEN."

MR. R. R. HALL was talking with some of his friends Saturday night on George Street, when Capt. Burnham happened along. The Captain shook hands with Mr. Hall, and remarked: "So it seems you and I are in for a fight."

"I have no desire to get you," said Mr. Hall. "Borden is the man I am after. If he was rotten in 1911, he is worse today. I hate the man."

This is the man Mr. Hall promises to work "tooth and nail" to eject, of he (Mr. Hall) is elected, the man who offered to retire in order to make Union Government possible, but who was prevailed upon to remain at his post by the best elements of both parties, who were convinced that he was the one man for the leadership.

SIR WILRID OPENS THE CAMPAIGN.

WHEN SIR WILFRID told his auditors at the meeting in Quebec City Friday night that he would never attempt to enforce conscription without their consent, they cheered him to the echo. When he went on further to add that he believed that all the men required could be raised by the voluntary system, and appealed to them to bear him out on this, they listened to him in grave silence. The spirit of the people of Quebec was clearly shown in this circumstance. The voluntary system is dead in Quebec and elsewhere.

The men who, in 1911, as Sir Wilfrid said, took the ground that Canada should never take part in the wars of Great Britain, are on his side today. They cheered at his meetings in Quebec and have pledged him their support at the coming election.

IMPENDING CALAMITIES.

THE ELECTION of R. R. Hall in West Peterborough might easily mean the one vote required to turn the balance of power in favor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and make him Premier of Canada.

There are impending calamities that may be averted. One of these is the return to power of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The soldiers in the trenches stand the showers of shrapnel from the hosts of Germany without a murmur. For this country to show ingratitude would demoralize the Canadian soldiery more than all the deviltry that the Huns can invent to bring about their undoing.

MR. MACFARLANE'S ESTIMATE.

MR. ANDREW MACFARLANE, to whom fell the somewhat doubtful honor of placing a Laurier candidate in nomination at Saturday's convention, was carried away by excessive zeal, and in heroic terms charged Capt. Burnham with responsibilities out of all keeping with the actual facts of the case. Mr. Macfarlane appears to labor under the delusion that the Captain is responsible for this race rivalry that now divides the country.

There were racial and religious differences in Canada long before Capt. Burnham was born, and certainly before he was ever heard of in public life. Because he identifies himself with one side does not prove his responsibility for the breach, any more than a man fighting on the side of the Allies can be charged with precipitating this war.

Mr. Macfarlane says that Capt. Burnham will require more support than that of J. W. Worth to win this election. He will, and he is certain to receive it, but his support will not come from the copperheads who at this time are putting party success above all else.

MR. HALL'S BLIND FAITH.

MR. R. R. HALL declares he cannot trust Sir Robert Borden in the task of carrying on the war. He cannot trust the man who was confronted with the most strenuous task ever imposed upon a Canadian Premier, and who has performed his duties in a manner that has excited the admiration of the Imperial authorities, the military experts of Britain's allies in Europe, and in the United States.

He cannot trust the man who has sent overseas troops that in equipment and in fighting force have no superiors among the enemies of the Central Powers.

He cannot trust the man who has provided the most liberal pay and generous pension allowances for the soldiers.

He cannot trust the man who now would not leave those soldiers in the lurch, but who would send them the help they call for.

But Mr. Hall can trust Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who, in everything, is the direct opposite of the leader in whom Mr. Hall lacks confidence.

A VOTE FOR R. R. HALL.

A VOTE FOR R. R. Hall in the coming election will be a vote for Bourassa, Lavergne and Co., for Bourassa has approved of the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and announces that he will support it. Mr. Hall's verbose profession of loyalty will avail him nothing in case he is elected. He will be in the minority among his own faction and forced to do their bidding. No man who openly and flauntingly accepts Sir Wilfrid Laurier as his leader can steer any other course.

WITH TOOTH AND NAIL.

"IF ELECTED," said Mr. Hall at the nomination meeting Saturday, "I will work tooth and nail to eject Sir Robert Borden."

That frank avowal should be all that is required to convince the electors of West Peterborough that Mr. Hall should be left in private life. Every elector should remember the statement, which is a threat rather than a promise.

"I will work tooth and nail to eject Borden." Yes, and vote to replace him by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

MR. HALL IN A CORNER.

GOADED INTO a burst of temper by some of the remarks made by Mr. Wearing, Mr. Hall declared that blind partisanship was the curse of the country, that more independence is required in Parliament, and that if he is elected he will not be held by party ties, but will vote as his judgment dictates.

Had he not been in something of a rage when he said this, the inference that Mr. Hall was speaking in a facetious vein would have been justified. Mr. Wearing asked him if, while he was a member of Parliament he ever voted against his party, and Mr. Hall had no recourse but to preserve silence. He has been in the game too long, his political hide has accumulated so much crust all these years, that his case is hopeless. The very fact that he is a Laurier candidate today is all that is required to bear out this assertion.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MR. HALL'S ORATORY is that of the politician whose sole stock in trade is sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

• • • •

THE SLACKERS and the copperheads have a candidate at last.

• • • •

MR. HALL says he will "work tooth and nail" if elected to eject Borden. This should convince all loyal voters of the necessity for working tooth and nail to defeat Mr. Hall.

• • • • •

GERMANY'S CLAIM that it is a democracy is no more inconsistent than Mr. Hall's assertion that he is a win-the-war candidate.

• • • •

THE ORATORY of the pro-Laurier candidate hurts the Canadian soldiers worse than the sword of the Huns, being the serpent's tooth of ingratitude.

• • • •

THE LOVE OF MONEY may be the root of all evil, but the love of office is the root of a good deal that savors of treason.

• • • •

> The man who carries Sir Wilfrid's standard is pledged, if he be honest, to the withholding from the Canadian army of the reinforcements provided by the Military Service Act.—The Globe.

AND R. R. HALL carries the standard of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

NO UNION GOVERNMENT would satisfy the man who is above all else a partisan.

ALL LIFE LOVES MOTION

(By H. Addington Bruce.)

Life loves motion. Every living thing craves motion of some sort. To be absolutely at rest, totally inert, is repugnant to the living.

Indeed, motion is a basic characteristic of life. Total inertness can come only with death. Even in sleep motion continues, as the internal organs continue to do their work.

Motion being thus indissolubly united with life, to experience sensations of movement gives a real satisfaction to the mind. This is a fact worth knowing, for it helps to explain many things otherwise puzzling.

It helps, for example, to answer this question, recently put to me:

"Why is it that women, having taken up the business of knitting for the soldiers, are able to knit hour after hour without feeling any ill effects?"

In part, this is to be accounted for by the patriotic enthusiasm with which the knitting is done. Interest in any occupation heightens the resistance to fatigue and often heightens it to an astonishing extent.

But partly also the explanation should be sought in the universal craving of human beings for sensations of movement.

The sight of the flying needles and the "feel" of their movement in the hands satisfies the craving.

Hence the interesting circumstance that many women, previously discontented and "nervous" have actually improved in health through taking up knitting.

Hence likewise the fact that automobiling has in not a few cases proved helpful to nervous patients. The steady motion of the car satisfies their instinctive craving for sensations of movement.

To the satisfaction of this craving, again, may correctly be attributed part of the enjoyment many men find in smoking.

They smoke not simply for the sedative effect of tobacco, but also that they may let their eyes subconsciously feast on the moving tobacco smoke. Which accounts for the fact that blind men seldom are smokers.

Tobacco chewing and gum chewing are other modes of satisfying the movement craving.

Many have marveled at the prevalence of the tobacco chewing and gum chewing habits. They cannot understand how anybody can acquire these. Nor can they understand the difficulty of breaking these habits when acquired.

In the subtle relationship between movement and life lurks part of the explanation.

So, too, we find in this relationship in the instinctive craving for sensation of movement the explanation of the delight little children take in being rocked in their cradles, and later in swinging through the air.

And partly the same psychological fact accounts for the passionate devotion of older boys, and of many older girls, to the outdoor games of the playground.

To the end of life, if in varying measure, the craving for movement persists.

Often obscurely, but none the less surely, it is a determinant of human behavior. No one can afford to overlook it who would gain real insight into human behavior.

TODAY'S STORY.

"The story that will make one man break a slat laughing falls flat with another," observed the lawyer. "I have been laughing at intervals for a quarter of a century over a yarn I heard so long ago as that, and I used to tell it often, but it never seemed as funny to other people as it seems to me.

"James Russell Lowell was visiting W. E. Gladstone, informally, one day, and asked the English statesman how tall he was. Mr. Gladstone announced his altitude, and Lowell said, "I don't blieve you're quite that, Mr. Gladstone.'

"Gladstone backed up to the wall and was measured, and the result astonished him. 'Why, he exclaimed, 'I was two inches taller when a young man.'

"Lowell explained that men lose height as they grow old. He said it reminded him of a story he had heard of Methuselah. That patriarch was celebrating his 900th birthday, and a number of neighbors dropped in to congratulate him and ask him how he was. 'I'm all right,' said Methuselah, 'only my blamed shoelaces keep flapping in my face.'

"Now that," concluded the lawyer, "is what I call a funny story."

The innocent bystanders grinned feebly.

"Alfred Henry Lewis used to tell a story that made me giggle," said the bookseller. "It treated of a number of colored gentlemen who were telling fish stories. They didn't believe that the truth had anything to do with such a contest, and one after another strained his inventive faculties.

"Some of the falsehoods were pretty far fetched, and they had a wearying effect on one old man, who waited until the others had finished and then told of a trifling exploit of his own. He hooked a black bass, he said, and fought with it for three hours. It was the most titanic struggle he ever had. Finally he conquered and lifted the fish out of the water. As the bass swung through the air it was so mad it shook itself so its scales sounded like shot in a bottle, and I let out a yell that could be heard a mile away."

"Well," queried the doctor, after a pause, "why don't you finish the story?"

"I told all there was of it," replied the bookseller. "I think it a very humorous story just as it stands, but there's always a sepulchral silence, like that surrounding me now, whenever I tell it."

"Sir Walter Scott always had a dog or two along with him when he was at home," remarked the librarian. "One tempestuous day he was seated in the house, with a big collie lying at his feet, when a couple of squires blew in out of the storm and made themselves at home.

"After a while they began arguing some point of heraldry, a subject on which Sir Walter was wonderfully posted. They got loud and excited and waved their arms and stamped their feet, and the dog, evidently thinking they threatened his master, got up and barked.

"'Shut up, you fool!' said Sir Walter to the dog; 'you don't know any more about heraldry than they do.'

"That was the wittiest rebuke I ever heard," added the librarian.

There was a wayward, rebellious and charming congressional creature recently, who, as the fateful hour approached when she was to be "at home," suddenly put on her hat and bolted, panic-stricken, around the block. But when, forcing herself to pass her house again, she saw a group of ladies ringing her doorbell, she impulsively joined them and went in. Was she not, like them, a congressman's wife, with a right to call anywhere, even upon herself? They sat down, and, while waiting for the hostess, chatted agreeably. And when, at the end of it, the callers began to comment wonderingly upon the continued absence of the lady of the house, our heroine smiled enigmatically: "I don't believe," she said, "we had any of us better wait any longer for her. I hear"—she paused and she spoke with meaning—"I hear she's very odd!" She rose and the other ladies with her. She went with them to call on another congressman's wife.

Soldiers' Chances To Come Back Alive

Men at the Front Have Odds of 29 to 1 in Their Favor.

If your boy goes to the front:

He has twenty-nine chances of coming home to one chance of being killed.

He has ninety-eight chances of recovering from a wound to two chances of dying.

He has only one chance in 500 of losing a limb.

He will live five years longer because of physical training.

He is freer from disease in the army than in civil life.

He has better medical care at the front than at home.

In other wars from ten to fifteen men died from disease to one from bullets.

In this war one man dies from disease to every ten from bullets.

This war is less wasteful of life than any other in history in proportion to the number engaged.

Only ten per cent. of all Canadians disabled for further service have been physically unable to engage in their former occupations. If your boy is one of the ten per cent., the Government will re-educate him in another vocation at which he can earn a living.

WHY SHOULD A WOMAN GIVE UP HER NAME WHEN SHE WEDS?

Why should a bride be "given away" in the marriage service? In these days of feminine initiative and activity this quaint old custom seems more than a trifle superfluous though it has a certain picturesque beauty. But whether she is given or gives herself she leaves behind her her name. She may, of course, keep her girlhood's name, her father's name, in a certain degree of social recognition by its use in conjunction with her newly acquired name. And if, for property or other reasons, she has to appear in a legal matter the lawyer's papers recognize her original personality by making mention of her as "Dame Mary Smith, wife of William Brown." Family pride in a name is too good a matter to lose. And now, so many of the lads who would have carried on the name have gone far from earth's ties. So the daughters might do well in holding as much as possible to their girlhood's surname.

In one instance lately, in New York, this was done even to the extent of the bridegroom adopting the bride's name, in reversal of the usual custom. Her name had been borne by many prominent men, including surgeons, psychologists, divines, and historians; and the change in the bridegroom's name was made to keep alive the family name, as her only brother had expressed his intention of not marrying.

The history of how a bride became endowed with her husband's name would make interesting reading. Property-holding under marriage laws was doubtless the original cause, the bride being included in the property. As in our tongue we are not furnished with the suffixes that in some lands express certain relationships; the daughter in being "given" in marriage is given without a name. Democratic teachings tend to make little of name and much of the individual only, but the individual often needs the stimulus of the name if he or she is to do great things, or even to do ordinarily well.

Though a name seems something artificial, something tacked on, just a combination of letters, what a reality it is. Sometimes we read of a man or a woman who for some sad reason would lose his or her identity. In vain attempt, the name is changed. Or, a mental illness causes someone to wander from former surroundings, to forget personality and name. A new person grows in the new surroundings until memory gives back the old order of life and with it the name. Certain names have come, too, to represent in a way certain orders of society. In the case of a man who was to be married lately a woman friend of the bride-elect was anxious that he should change his name to something more representative of social standing. "He should just call himself something else; no one knows him," she said, and it seemed to her there was no hindrance in his doing so. She was a well informed person generally, and her friends found amusement in this lapse in her ideas. They remembered what she had forgotten: an illegal marriage, and a thousand and one difficulties that would follow through the years, if a man should separate himself from so real a possession as his name.

The electric light department showed a surplus for the period of $15,345, and the waterworks department $7,745. Light and power taxes amounted to $14,375, and property sales contributions to $8,573. The street railway department had a deficit for the five months of $27,124, being about half the estimated loss for the entire year. A Cat Marooned In a Treetop Arouses His Pity.

LIKEWISE HIS INDIGNATION.

What Are Suffering Cats to Callous Hearted Mrs. Bowser? Nothing! But He Will Save the Feline—Mr. Bowser Is Better Now, Thank You.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

AT the office during the afternoon a caller on business had mentioned that Mr. Bowser was looking ten years older than last month.

Another caller had doubted his integrity.

He had been dunned for his club dues.

A life insurance agent had told him he was too fat to take a risk on.

He had had his corns stepped on while bound for home.

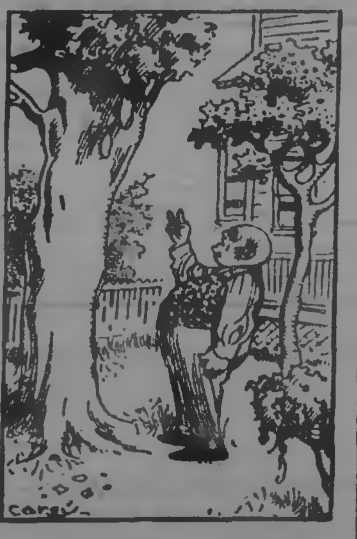
He had to sit beside a drunken man for a mile.

Of course, Mrs. Bowser was to blame for all this, and he determined she should pay the penalty.

Mrs. Bowser, however, seemed to be on her guard, and he got no opening until dinner was over and he had sat down to smoke and read. Then came the sustained mewing of a cat, and after a bit he flung his paper away and asked Mrs. Bowser:

"Do you know whether our cat is in the house or caught in a trap in the back yard?"

"I saw her in the dining room a few minutes ago," was the reply. "The cat you bear mewing is a strange one and is up a shade tree in front of the house."



BEGAN CALLING AND COAXING.

Monstrous Cruelty.

"But you never told me when I came home that there was a cat up a tree."

"Why should I? What have you got to do with a cat up a tree?"

"How long has that cat been up the tree!" he demanded as he flushed up.

"Since about 5 o'clock."

"How came she to go up the tree?"

"A dog was chasing her."

"And you—you have never moved hand or foot to rescue that poor creature from her perilous position!" he thundered as he struck the wall a blow with his fist.

"I'm not climbing trees to rescue stray cats," answered Mrs. Bowser.

"That's you—that's you to a dot. Right in front of our own house a poor creature has been suffering for hours and you have been too stony hearted and indifferent to even inform me of the fact. It's monstrous, Mrs. Bowser, perfectly monstrous."

"Have I hindered the cat from coming down the tree?" she protested. "Do you expect that every time I see a dog with a tin can tied to his tail run past the house I am going to follow him?"

"But you haven't a grain of mercy in your soul," he went on. "It is your utter indifference, your callous heartedness that I complain of. Ah, there is our cat. Suppose she were up a tree over on Beach street and suffering untold agonies. What would you say to a woman who would listen to her plaintive calls for mercy without stirring a finger?"

"I'd say it was our cat's business to keep out of trees!"

Mr. Bowser to the Rescue.

Just then the Bowser cat walked in from the kitchen.

"Heaven help the human being with such a heart as you have," groaned Mr. Bowser as he started down the hall. "That cat is coming down from the tree if I have to get out the whole fire department. In some home near by there are innocent little children crying because she has not come home. They shall cry no more."

He clapped on his hat and went on out. His own cat followed. In a shade tree in front of the gate the starlight showed him the strange cat. He went down to the tree and began calling and coaxing. There seemed to be no good reason why she shouldn't come down, as it is as easy for a cat to descend as to go up, but the feline remained fast to the [illegible] ser went to the kitchen after a stepladder. As he brought it out and placed it against the tree two men came along and halted. He had climbed halfway up the ladder when three more came along. Then came two boys, and he offered one of them a nickel to go up and bring the cat down.

"I'm no cheap kid," was the reply. "If I go up after dat cat she'll bite me, and cat bites mean six months in de hospital. It's 50 cents or I don't go."

"What's the use anyhow?" queried the eighth person who came along. "If a cat is fool enough to climb a tree, let her be fool enough to come down again."

Rebukes Heartless Onlookers.

"Men," said Mr. Bowser as he looked around him, "have you no hearts? Would you deliberately permit the helpless to suffer?"

"But if she is suffering, why don't she come down?" protested three or four voices in chorus.

"Because she's lost her nerve. I wouldn't have believed such cruelty existed in the twentieth century!"

And Mr. Bowser got to the top of the stepladder and hung to the tree and coaxed again. The cat was ten feet away and refused to stir. He increased his offer to the boy to 10 cents, but it was refused. He must either climb the tree or back down, and the reader knows that Mr. Bowser is a man who never gives up unless knocked unconscious.

"Say, you can't climb that tree!" shouted one of the crowd below as he witnessed the preparations.

"But I shall!"

"Bet you ten to one you come down a-flying. You are too fat. Better cut the tree down."

An Appreciative Audience.

The crowd now numbered a score. Of the fifteen different remarks addressed to Mr. Bowser as his feet left the stepladder not one was replied to. He was too busy. His first move ripped his coat under each arm and barked his knees, and the crowd yelled and applauded. There was a momentary hesitation, and then he went ahead and tore a piece of cloth out of one leg of his trousers and ripped two buttons off his vest. The applause that followed was enthusiastic and sincere, and one of the crowd followed it with:

"Well, if any one had told me that that old duffer was such a monkey to climb, I wouldn't have believed it."

By the time the crowd had numbered fifty Mr. Bowser was almost within reach of the cat. His eyes were glassy and his jaw set. He knew that Mrs. Bowser was watching him from a front window and that he had no other sympathizer in the crowd, but he would accomplish his object if death overtook him in the doing of it. He now got a toe hold on a limb and reached for the cat, but the feline spat at him and jumped away, and as he started back the limb broke, and there was a Fourth of July yell from the crowd below. Mr. Bowser descended like a load of brick, but fortunately the stepladder was below to receive him. He struck it in a heap and twisted around until he lay across it on his stomach and heard far off voices saying:

"Go to the drug store and ring for an ambulance."

"Didn't the old duffer know better than to climb a tree? Who knows where he lives?"

"Dere's a woman comin' out, and mebbe she owns him!" called a boy as Mrs. Bowser appeared.

Home Again.

She soon settled all doubts of her ownership. She asked assistance to separate Bowser from the stepladder, and when he had been straightened out as well as possible four men volunteered to carry him into the house. He knew he was being carried, but he made no resistance. He knew when they bumped his back along the hall floor and left him in a disorganized heap in the sitting room, and he plainly caught a voice which said:

"Here he is, ma'am, and, though he ain't dead, he'll probably let cats alone [illegible]

Little by little Mr. Bowser recovered from the shock. He opened his eyes and saw the family cat and Mrs. Bowser watching and waiting. He sat up and decided on what he would do, and as he crawled over to the lounge and sat down on it he hoarsely whispered:

"Woman, do you think I'll forgive you if I live to be a thousand years old? Think of me, Mrs. Bowser. Think of the ridicule and contempt."

"The cat came down while they were bringing you in," she quietly replied.

"Do you mean—mean"—

"I mean that the cat came down. She could have come any time. If you haven't any papers to look over in the library and don't want to see your lawyer about a divorce, you'd better go to bed."

And Mr. Bowser went.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

Sir Robert Borden's Appeal for Harvest Workers.

An appeal to the people of Canada, to the great industries, banks, commercial institutions and employers generally to assist in providing labor to garner in the harvest has been issued by Sir Robert Borden. Owing to many representations to the Government with respect to the shortage of labor for harvesting operations the Prime Minister called a meeting of transportation companies and of several other important bodies for the purpose of arranging as far as possible for the provision and transportation of labor to those portions of the country where it is most needed for gathering the harvest. At that meeting representatives were present on behalf of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Grand Trunk Railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, the Canadian Northern Railway Company, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Bankers' Association, and the Imperial Munitions Board. In the absence of Mr. R. B. Bennett the National Service Board was represented by its secretary, Mr. Peterson. The Ministers of Trade and Commerce, Railways and Canals, Labor, Militia and Defence, the Interior and Agriculture were also present.

The following appeal has been issued by the Prime Minister in pursuance of suggestions made at the meeting:

"The Government has received from many quarters urgent representations as to the need of arranging for the provision and transportation of labor necessary for gathering the harvest in some portions of the country, especially the Province of Ontario and the Prairie Provinces. An urgent appeal is made to the people of Canada for assistance and co-operation to meet this very urgent need. It is vitally necessary that no portion of the approaching harvest shall be lost through it. That harvest is required for the sustenance of the men who are fighting the battle of civilization and humanity in every theatre of war, it is necessary also for the sustenance of our own popu[illegible] nations. The time during which the harvest can be gathered is very brief, the necessary labor must, then, be available, for the work cannot be performed at any other time.

"There are many other industries of the highest importance for the purpose of winning the war, but in almost all these industries work can be carried on during twelve months of the year. The Government appeals for every possible effort by the great industries of the country, by the banks, by commercial institutions, and by all employers of labor to assist and co-operate. To those who are employed in industries other than agriculture the Government appeals for such co-operation and aid as will ensure that all available labor for this most essential need shall be forthcoming. There is in Canada abundance of human energy to ensure the gathering in full of the approaching harvest without materially interfering with other essential industries. By the good-will and co-operation of all our people that most vital and essential purpose can be fully secured. We appeal also to the women of Canada who can assist by supplying the places of those who leave their employment to take part in harvesting. The Government is confident that its appeal to the Canadian people for this great purpose will not be in vain."

Lacrosse Player Honored.

One of the best known lacrosse players in Canada has proved that he is as fine a performer in the national game of the moment as he was for many years in the Dominion's national game. Corporal Guy Smith of Cornwall learned to play lacrosse in the Factory Town, and he played for several seasons with the Cornwall team. When the Big Four was in existence, Guy Smith moved to Toronto to play with the Tecumsehs. He proved a hard working and aggressive player and soon became a favorite with the Toronto fans. He enlisted early in the war, and distinguished himself by such signal [illegible] last September that he has been awarded a military medal. During the Somme battle Corporal Smith lead a charge that resulted in the capture of several guns and 128 prisoners. For some time past the lacrosse player has been a patient at the Cottage Hospital, Southport, England, recovering from wounds, and the medal was pinned on his breast in that institution by Colonel Burns Gemmill, in command of the First Western General Hospital, Fazakerley.

Mild Irony.

When his detachment came to relieve a small advance party on the firing line, somewhere on the western front, Lieut. N. naturally took possession of the only shelter he could find—a sort of hut rudely contrived by his predecessor amid the blackened and battered ruins of one of the houses in that blasted village, still swept night and day by a furious tempest of shot and shell. The only roof was a piece of tin torn and riddled with bullet holes, while inside a pile of muddy straw did duty as a couch. Over the straw hung a bit of chain, and fastened to the chain was a scrap of paper upon which was scrawled in the handwriting of the former tenant these words: "Alarm bell. Do not pull the cord except in case of danger."

High Cost of Suicide.

Harry—And what changed your mind about committing suicide? Was it some spiritual message?

Carrie—Naw; I'd a had to put another quarter in the gas meter.

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.

The Honor System Marks New Milestone

THIS GREAT AMERICAN PHOTO-DRAMA WILL RANK AS AN EPIC.

What is the ultimate province of the cinema has been a matter of never ending discussion. Every time a film producer offers anything unusual in the way of a picture there is a temptation on the part of the critics to say, "This, at last, is the ultimate of the screen."

Unquestionably this will be said of "The Honor System," William Fox's latest triumph in film production. Intense melodrama, the grip of human emotion, the tug at the heart strings, this is the ultimate province of the screen.

When Mr. Fox produced his marvelous photo fantasy, "A Daughter of the Gods," the same thing was said, only then it was to be the fairy tale of exquisite, bewitching beauty that would mark the final word in film production.

FILM ART LIMITLESS.

In "The Honor System" virtue finds itself in that immemorial conflict with the forces of evil that the historic stage of Drury Lane so often has witnessed. The story is laid among the timely scenes along the Mexican border. The border foray is pictured in all of its thrilling interests. The spectator can see the hordes of Villa sweeping down on helpless Columbus, the terrified citizens, the hasty organization for defense, the daring ride for assistance, the dash of the mounted reenforcements, the final repulse of the invading bandits. Minor thrills there are without number, each gripping in its intensity, but nothing equal to this "big thrill," for the very good reason that never has it been equaled on the screen.

"The Honor System" is as vivid as a battle picture. It is as up to date as a News Pictorial.

FUEL CONTROLLER'S NEW RULES FOR COAL TRADE

Storing of Coal Above A Certain Quantity is Expressly Forbidden—Excessive Supply May be Requisitioned

The issue of The Canada Gazette for date of October 31 contains the new regulations concerning the buying, selling and delivery of coal throughout the Dominion of Canada.

The regulations are of especial interest to the public, inasmuch as they provide for the business of selling coal, maximum prices therefor, conditions on which such business may be carried on, and also for such action as may be required to meet any emergency likely to arise during the coming winter season.

These regulations apply more particularly to all months of the year, with some exceptions to prevail during the months from April 1 to September 1.

Ample regulation is made for the mining, selling by brokers and the wholesale dealers, and legitimate charges in connection therewith, and these regulations can be consulted by those interested in such branches of trade. But what especially interests the consumer are the regulations made for his protection and to ensure as far as possible an equal distribution of coal during the winter months. These regulations are summarized as follows:

The maximum price of coal shall be the average cost delivered to the dealer, plus a reasonable proportion of overhead expenses and fixed charges and a profit of fifty cents per ton. This price remains steady during the month in which it has been fixed.

Subject to contracts existing at date of these regulations, no one shall sell or deliver to a consumer any quantity of coal which, added to the quantity of coal which the consumer may have on hand, would constitute more than an estimated supply for the consumer's needs for two months.

Certain industries and occupations are relieved from the enforcement of this clause, as to its conditions, but with the exception of public institutions, such as hospitals, etc., the maximum amount to be taken in by any one house or residence between April 1 and Sept. 1 shall not exceed three tons. This clause, it would seem, would effectually prevent for the future getting into store any large amount of coal, to the detriment of other users.

Any broker or dealer (the dealer is one who sells to the consumer as well as one who sells wholesale) may require the customer to sign a statement in the following terms:

"I, ..., hereby certify that the quantity of coal for which I now apply added to the quantity which I have on hand at the present time, will not exceed the supply which I am permitted to have under the above regulations."

No dealer shall be allowed to deliver more than the minimum amount of coal called for by any arrangement or contract, until he has met reasonable requirements of others desiring to purchase coal from him. This provision does not apply to public institutions, etc.

Should any emergency arise in a community whereby the available supply of coal in the hands of dealers be not sufficient to meet the needs of such emergency, the Fuel Controller may requisition any quantity of coal in the possession of any consumer, in excess of supply as indicated for period as above noted in preceding paragraphs, and may direct the disposal of such excess coal.

The significance of this regulation is seen when it is found that not only may coal be taken from those who have an excess supply, such as two years' fuel, but even those who have what might be termed a winter's supply may have to give up the coal in the cellar, leaving only two, or at the most three, tons. Due regard is paid to the matter of compensating any one whose coal has been taken, and at the current market rates. But persons benefitted by getting the coal will have to pay, in addition to the cost of the coal, the costs of re-delivery and 25 cents per ton in addition. And in addition seven per cent. interest on the value of the coal while it has been in the bin of the consumer who first purchased the coal.

For the information of the Fuel Controller, in carrying out the provisions of the new regulations, the mayor, warden, reeve or overseer of any municipality may be required

To cause an immediate investigation to be made into any application for the requisitioning of coal.

To submit to the Fuel Controller recommendations with regard to any matter connected therewith.

To certify whether or not, in his opinion, an emergency justifying the requisition of coal exists.

To fix the value of any coal requisitioned in case the parties concerned cannot agree, and,

Generally to act as the agent of the Fuel Controller for any such purposes.

With regard to ascertaining just what coal has been brought to a municipality, and delivered to persons or firms, should such information be needed, the following provision would seem to be full and ample:

The Fuel Controller, or his duly authorized agent, shall have access to all books, records, documents and papers of any kind dealing with and relating directly or indirectly to the business and affairs of any person producing or buying or selling or otherwise dealing in coal, or of any person importing coal, and all persons shall supply the Fuel Controller or his agent with all information as and when required by the said Fuel Controller or his agent. Any person failing or declining for a period of thirty days to give any information demanded shall be guilty of an offence and subject to penalties.

Further regulations are made as to procedure; and as bearing on infractions of the regulations in specific or assumed cases. No information shall be laid against any dealer or broker without first submitting the facts to the Fuel Controller and obtaining his consent in writing. The regulations shall be in force from the first day of November, 1917.

Hymn Incites To Terrible Cruelty

Bulgarian Poet Tells the Troops to Spare No One.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Publication of the Bulgarian hymn of hate, teeming with incitement to cruelty and atrocities, has aroused officials and diplomats here and drawn from the Bulgarian Minister, Stephen Panaretoff, the declaration that the purported author, Ivan Arnaudoff, described as "The Bulgarian Pindar," is of no standing to bespeak the national sentiments of Bulgaria.

A literal translation of the poem bristles with expressions of phrases of revolting incitement to the most unspeakable cruelties of the men, women and children of enemy countries overrun by Bulgarian troops.

"To call Arnaudoff the 'Bulgarian Pindar,' is to call a very small thing by a very large name," said the Minister. "He is connected with the Bulgarian Department of Education and writes occasionally. He is what you call in America a 'box-car poet'—a scribbler."

"Let not one stone rest on another," says a translation of Arnaudoff's poem to the Bulgarian troops. "Let no one child rejoice on its mother's breast, not one old man lean on his grandson's shoulder. Throw their skulls to the starving dogs. . . . Let there remain on the ruins your hand has sown only skeletons and ghosts. . . .

"See that decrepit old man who drags his miserable years seeking to cheat death and your zeal. Fell him under your boot and with the fork tear out his troubled eyes. . . . ."

The remainder of the lines are devoted principally to incitement to unspeakable excesses of rapine and murder.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN!

Sufferers from Deafness and Head Noises should know of the following advertisement which is now appearing in numerous newspapers in all parts of the world:

HOW TO CURE DEAFNESS.

A simple preparation has recently been discovered by an eminent physician, which has been found wonderfully effective in curing deafness and Head-noises.

Severe and obstinate cases which had resisted all the ordinary remedies and expensive treatments, have been permanently cured in a few days by this simple preparation called "Auralon."

Mr. Wm. Bristow of Worthing writes: "The curative properties of your new remedy, 'Auralon,' are truly wonderful. After being deaf for nearly twenty years I am now able to hear distinctly, and the head-noises, which were so distressing, have completely disappeared. No sufferer should hesitate to try this splendid cure."

This is just one report out of many. "Auralon" is sold in packages at $1.00 each and can be sent to any address postpaid upon receipt of remittance. Send your order direct to "Auralon," care of Kirk's Agency, 12 Railway Crescent, West Croydon, Surrey, England.

SAM CHARTERS ENDORSED

Former Candidate Considered—Liberals Not Officially Represented.

Brampton, Nov. 12.—Mr. Sam Charters was on Saturday endorsed as candidate for Peel county for the Federal House by a mass meeting consisting in overwhelming majority of Conservatives, but to which the Liberals had been invited, though they declined officially to take part. It was freely stated, even by the two score or so of Liberals who attended in a private capacity, that official Liberalism had ground for feeling because of the alleged "jockeying" of Conservatives.

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

Instead of nasty, harsh pills, salts, castor oil or dangerous calomel, why don't you keep Cascarets handy in your home? Cascarets act on the liver and thirty feet of bowels so gently you don't realize you have taken a cathartic, but they act thoroughly and can be depended upon when a good liver and bowel cleansing is necessary—they move the bile and poison from the bowels without griping, and sweeten the stomach. You eat one or two at night like candy and you wake up feeling fine, the headache, biliousness, bad health, coated tongue, sour stomach, constipation, or bad cold disappears. Mothers should give cross, sick, feverish or bilious children a whole Cascaret any time—they are harmless and safe for the little folks.

ELLIOT'S STORE, PETERBORO

Our November Sale of Winter Needs at Special Prices

In spite of the well-known fact that prices of every kind of goods have risen in value, and the ever-increasing scarcity is still sending prices skyward, we are going to give you a sale that will impress its value on your mind for some time to come. We are able to do this only because of late shipments on old orders. We are giving you the benefits.

Every piece of merchandise involved in this sale bears a special sale ticket, so you can easily identify the special items mentioned here.

EXTRAORDINARY VALUES OF THE HIGHEST TYPE, COMMANDING YOUR UNDIVIDED ATTENTION, ABOUND IN EVERY PART OF THE STORE.

A great saving on everything you purchase, bearing the special sale ticket—on Millinery and Winter Mantles—(and every one of them exhaling the breath of the newer fashions).

On these highly necessary adjuncts to your wardrobe, to get the sale price, you just simply divide the price in three, and the third is yours. For instance, when you buy a coat worth thirty dollars, you put ten dollars in your pocket and take the coat; or when the coat, say, costs $10.75, you just pay $7.17 and put $3.58 in your pocket and take the coat.

And when you buy a hat that costs, say, $6.00, you just pay $4.00 for the hat and put $2.00 in your pocket, and take the hat. And it will be just the same in proportion for any hat or coat in the store during this sale.

We have just room for a few special items in this bill. There are hundreds more spread all through the store.

Come and see us. You will save money, not only now, but, in addition, the prices will be greatly higher soon.

IF ELECTED

Mr. Hall here characterized Sir Robert's government as one which had encouraged profiteering and grafting, the tool of parasites; and warned his audience that the undoing of Russia has been the work of such parasites and grafters as, he declared, are and were influencing Canada's federal government. He accused Sir Geo. Foster of endorsing an expenditure of $72,000 for knock-kneed, spavined horses and playing into the hands of profiteers in regard to the purchase of motor trucks by which Canada is out of pocket $80,000 and over. He also denounced the Canadian Northern purchase for a maximum price of $10,000,000, but forgot to add that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had in 1914 fixed the maximum compensation to the Mackenzie and Mann's interests at $30,000,000.

Army Supplies.

Turning his "Liberal" attention to the needs of the army, Mr. Hall protested against rotten boots being sent boys in the trenches, and could not pardon a government which had, he said, not eliminated the Ross rifle after the experience with it at St. Julien. "No," he declared, "to the contrary, the second, third and fourth contingents were sent to France with rifles that jammed." He had seen no explanation in regard to this and contended that the government are not putting before the people a plain straight forward statement of what they are voting on. That being the case, Mr. Hall asked, have you sufficient confidence in the man who sent our soldiers to the front with Ross rifles which jammed as to leave the welfare of this country in his hands during the remainder of the war.

Mr. Hall here declared that some ammunition concerns are making huge unwarrantable profits and contended that the people of Canada have a right to a voice in all such matters of profiteering. Such questions should not be smothered up in a Union Government, and no effort made to enforce a return from profiteers of exhorbitant profits.

Sir Sam Again!

The speaker here referred at length to Sir Sam Hughes and his letter of May, 1915, to Sir Robert Borden, contending that the fact of the Premier retaining Sir Sam in office 16 months after receipt of such letter was proof either that the charges were correct or of the weakness of Sir Robert. He here quoted from Sir Sam's letter at the time the casualties from St. Julien were coming in, that "the interference with the plans of the sub-committee of the contract branch of the Canadian service could hardly have been more successful in holding up supplies and equipment had the most ardent agents for Germany been in control."

"Can you have confidence in Sir Robert Borden in the face of this, and why did he hold up motor trucks were it not that some one might profit by their purchase retail?" asked Mr. Hall. "Purely to help some friend of Bob Rogers," was the speaker's own reply.

An Open Charge.

Mr. Hall here went on to openly charge Hugh Guthrie with having entered the Union Government by questionable means, and could not take as a guiding star a man like Rowell who left his old associates without so much as a word of farewell.

Liberals in the Field.

In excuse of his own evident party stand Mr. Hall said the Liberals are putting candidates in the field in many constituencies throughout the country, and if that is the case why not West Peterborough follow the example. "Liberals and I," he went on, "are as anxious as any other party to send help to the men at the front and to prosecute the war to a successful issue. If elected, I shall vote with any one or any body, Liberal and Conservative alike, with that end in view, and support and advocate measures to bring grafters to justice, eliminate all parasites, tax profiteering to the highest possible extent, conscript wealth as well as men, and to assure a reduction in the high cost of living.

Tells Us to Eat Less.

Mr. Hall here ridiculed Mr. Hanna's policy of food control, and thought it absurd to ask people to eat less to meet the situation. What is wanted, he urged, is greater production. Great Britain and France are 300,000,000 bushels of wheat short, and has the government taken one initiative step to increase production or secure for farmers necessary labor? Have they in the Northwest adopted concerted action to stimulate a greater production of grain? No! And had proper equipment been applied in the West, including traction plows, millions of bushels of additional grain could have been grown this year enough to supply England, while leaving plenty for Canadian consumption. Canada is doing no real thinking, the Government is doing no real thinking, and Hanna says, starve yourself.

The high cost of living, concluded Mr. Hall, is due to some 25,000,000 men being withdrawn from industrial and mercantile pursuits to prosecute this world-war and concerted action is necessary to increase production. We should, he told the convention, be derelict in our duty were we to endorse a resolution which is not in the best interests of the party and country, and he contended that those best interests could only be served by having a straight untrammeled fight, and were he elected he would work tooth and nail to elect Borden.

Resolution Lost

Mr. Harstone here asked that all Liberals be united, that proceedings be delayed for a joint executive meeting of Conservatives and Liberals, that the convention adjourn and take time to think the matter over.

Must Support Laurier.

Mr. Wearing: "If Mr. Hall is nominated, he says he will not support Sir Robert Borden, and whether he likes it or not, with the platform he has laid down, he would find himself forced behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier." Mr. Hall replied that he was not one of those hide-bohnd partizans who know not right from wrong. The more independent spirit in the House of Commons the better for the country.

No Fusion of Interests.

Mr. Wearing's resolution for a conference with the Conservatives, with agreecent as to a Union candidate in view, was here put to the meeting and lost by a big majority.

G. N. Gordon Nominated.

Mr. G. N. Gordon was here nominated by Thos. Grimmison and R. Walker.

In response to insistent calls he made a brief non-partizan speech, in the course of which he talked mainly to labor interests. He characterized Sir Joseph Flavell and others as profiteers eating off others' plates, and unless there is conscription of wealth there is bound to be an undesirable growth in the number of millionaires and of excessive profiteering. After years of this country's control by the two great political parties, the time has come, he contended, when organized labor must play a strong part in the nation's affairs and seek the development of the nation.

Continuing, Mr. Gordon declared for public ownership of all municipal utilities, and, in fact, of all sources of wealth; the nationalization of banking and credit systems, so that the working man who owns a little property is entitled to credit when he needs it. He also advocated the abolition of property qualifications in respect to municipal elections, which he contended should be freely open to all men alike; the abolition of parliamentary election deposits; and the abolition of the senate, which he considered the resting place of sleepy, dull, old party fossels, with no other object in the senate but to vote for the party which sent them there, and whose maintenance expense of half a million a year might better be applied to the pension of soldiers. (Cheers).

Equal Pensions.

Mr. Gordon here favored equal pensions for all, and for the mother with dependent children. As to old age pensions, the speaker was strong on that question and sure of such a measure being finally adopted. "But," he declared, "Mr. Burnham has been sitting six years on that nest of eggs and has not hatched them yet. There is no question, he here interjected, that both parties have to get away from past policies and see to it that capital is applied in the interests of the toilers.

Will Support Labor.

"I do not want," said Mr. Gordon, "nomination from this Liberal convention as a Liberal candidate. If nominated on a Labor platform in a Liberal convention, I might consider it. I do not intend to support a straight Liberal platform should be an independent candidate standing on a Labor platform. The Labor party is going to have representation in the next House of Commons which will surprise everybody in this room."

Two Spot Politicians.

In conclusion, Mr. Gordon said this is no time for a bunch of two-spot politicians to get out and talk party politics, for we all must hang on, support the men at the front and fight this war to a triumphant finish. Warning his hearers against weasels and foxes who are emerging from their holes in search of what they may devour, he urged the election of six cylinder, substantial representatives at Ottawa—men who are not seeking personal advantage—if such can be prevailed on to stand. The soldiers, he urged, are insisting upon representation which will eliminate the possibility of a man building a million dollar house, or men piling up $3,000,000 profits in war time; and labor men want a decent wage and the war brought to a speedy and successful conclusion.

Rip-Van Winkle Awakes.

Mr. Gordon's speech apparently awakened Mr. Hall to the fact that there is a labor element to be contended with, for he rushed to the platform, and declared that so far as the working man is concerned, he must cut adrift from parties and side with whoever, represents his ideals. Sometimes this can be most effectively done by putting a labor candidate in the field. "But," he said, "I venture to say that if there is no labor man in the field, were the working man to examine my platform, so far as my opponent is concerned, he (the working man) will see his way clear to vote for one."

Mr. Hall here took a rap at Flavelle and all profiteers, and the Canadian Northern deal, and asked if labor men can afford to support Sir Robert Borden, behind whom Mackenzie and Mann are standing, resulting in the waste of millions of the people's money.

Papers Are Liars.

The candidate said the papers are in control of money interests, and are suppressing truths. He referred specifically to Toronto papers, but left the local ones severely alone.

"I am absolutely at your command," he concluded, "and if elected will do my duty in connection with prosecuting the war to a satisfactory end." He claimed that no one had done more useful and effective work in the House of Commons for West Peterborough than he during his four years of office.

No Labor Nomination.

President Hartley here invited labor nomination on a Liberal ticket, but none was forthcoming.

Mr. Hall was here voted the Liberal Win-the-War nominee.

No Soldier Representative.

Strong pressure had been brought to bear upon a returned soldier to address the meeting, but he declined with thanks. (This was before the convention opened). However, the veterans were represented in the attendance although they took no active part in the proceedings.

Bobcaygeon Man Is Shot While Hunting

Mr. Richard Junkin of Bobcaygeon while hunting last week was shot in the leg by one of his party. He has quite a hole in his leg which will take some time to heal. It appears that the men having seen a deer pass in the thick woods, separated a short distance, and, soon afterward, the rustle Dick made in the leaves sounded like that of a deer. The other man "blazed" twice at him, the second bullet tearing quite a hole in his leg.

Shipbuilding in N. S.

The S.S. War Wasp, the first steel ocean-going steamer built in Nova Scotia, was successfully launched recently by the Nova Scotia Steel Company. Work on this vessel was commenced in October last. The boat has a carrying capacity of about 2,000 tons, a displacement when loaded of 2,870 tons and a speed of eleven knots per hour. The dimensions are as follows: Length, between perpendiculars, 220 feet; moulded depth, 20 feet, and beam, 35 feet.

The War Wasp has been sold to the British Government. A second vessel, about 25 per cent. larger, is under construction, and a third vessel will occupy the berth vacated by the War Wasp.

A Growing Industry.

Canada now has a total of 90 pulp and paper mills, many of which are large and of modern design. The export figures for the calendar year 1916 show that pulpwood, wood pulp, and paper produced have increased in value to nearly $50,000,000, or about half of the total export value of forest products, with the exception of the small proportion of specially manufactured articles.

GREAT NURSES.

Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton, Two Best Known.

Here are facts about two great nurses:

Florence Nightingale was an English philanthropist, born in Florence, Italy, the daughter of William Edward Nightingale of Embley Park, Hampshire. Her attention was early directed to the condition of hospitals; she traveled extensively on the Continent to study such institutions, and entered upon a course of training in nursing with the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul in Paris and at the Kaiserswerth Institute on the Rhine. When the Crimea War broke out in 1854, she organized a nursing department at Scutari, and by her untiring energy and extraordinary ability in alleviating the suffering of the sick and wounded acquired a worldwide reputation. At the close of the war she gave a testimonial fund of $250,000 to the founding of the Nightingale Home at St. Thomas Hospital for the training of nurses. During the American Civil War and the Franco-Prussian war she was often consulted on questions concerning camp hospitals. She wrote several books on the general subject of hospitals and nursing among them "Notes on Hospitals" and "Notes on the Sanitary Army in India."

It was Clara Barton, who during the Civil War, when the North was battling desperately against the South, first volunteered to go as a nurse and, in addition, volunteered to deliver money or small comforts to the men at the front. From this humble beginning arose the American Red Cross.

Clara Barton was a Government employee in one of the many offices in Washington when the war broke out. She immediately went to the front as a nurse, and her sorrow at the terrible suffering which the soldiers had to endure made her the friend of both sides. She soon decided to give her life to the nursing of the wounded. From personal experience she learned that some means of getting comforts to the soldiers was badly needed, and she set about organizing it. It was one of the greatest steps ever taken in humanizing warfare, as far as such a thing is possible.

She was in more battles than probably any single general or officer in the army, and wherever she went she did wonderful work for the relief of the suffering of the wounded and dying men. At the close of the Civil War she was, without doubt, the most remarkable woman in the United States, and her name was mentioned with Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, and Seward.

When the French and Germans went to war in 1870 Miss Barton went to Europe and did much gallant work in helping the suffering soldiers of those two nations. Her labors endeared her to the people of Europe as much as to her own nation, and she received many marks of love and esteem.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

A RUNNING RECORD THAT HAS STOOD FOR 33 YEARS

P. Connor Ran Four Miles in Nineteen Minutes and Twenty-five and Two-fifth Seconds in 1888.

In those days of constant improvement in all forms of athletic sports, a record that has stood for almost thirty years is a decided rarity. Yet it was just twenty-nine years ago November 8, 1888, that P. Cannon hung up a professional running record that still holds its place in the dope books. Cannon's memorable feat was performed at Glasgow, Scotland, where he ran four miles in nineteen minutes and twenty-five and two-fifths seconds, making new records for all distances over two miles. Cannon covered three miles in fourteen minutes and nineteen and a half seconds. At the three and a half mile mark his time was seventeen minutes and two and one-fifth seconds. It remained for an amateur, A. Shrubb, the English runner, to beat the professional record. In 1904 Shrubb covered four miles in nineteen minutes and twenty-three and two-fifths seconds, beating Cannon's time by two seconds. It is noteworthy that this feat was also performed in Glasgow. On this occasion Shrubb also beat a professional running record that has now stood for over half a century by doing five miles in twenty-four minutes and forty seconds. At the six mile mark, however, Shrubb fell behind White's ancient record. White's time was twenty-nine minutes and fifty seconds, and Shrubb's twenty-nine minutes and fifty-six and two-fifths seconds. White covered seven miles in thirty-four minutes and forty-five seconds, and Shrubb took nineteen and three-fifths seconds longer to make the same distance. At eight, nine and ten miles, however, Shrubb beat the professional record made by W. Cummings in England in 1885. Another professional record that has withstood the assaults of over half a century is that for the twelve mile distance, covered in one hour, two minutes, and two and a half seconds in England in 1863 by L. Bennett, better known as "Deerfoot." S. Thomas, an English runner, who was an amateur, did the dozen miles in one hour, two minutes and forty-three seconds in 1899.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

Pitching records just completed indicate that Eddie Cicotte was the only pitcher in the major leagues during the past season to pitch a no-hit, a one-hit, a two-hit and a three-hit game.

Fred Toney of the Reds was the most efficient boxman in the two leagues when it came to limiting opponents to three hits. Toney turned in five of these games, scoring two over Pittsburgh, one against the Cardinals, one against the Braves and one against the Phillies.

Babe Ruth pitched four games in which he limited opponents to three hits or less, but failed to get into the no-hit class. He set the Tigers down with one hit, the Senators with two, and both the Yankees and the Browns with three hits.

Jim Vaughn of the Cubs led the National League in pitching two-hit games. The big southpaw turned the trick four times, his victims being the Pirates, Reds, Robins and Giants.

George Dauss of the Tigers and Walter Johnson were the best of the three-hit pitchers in the American League. Each performed the feat four times, Dauss' victims being the Senators, Browns, Yankees, and Red Sox. Johnson did the trick against the Mackmen, White Sox, Indians and Yankees. Johnson also pitched two two-hit games and once allowed one hit.

Five no-hit games were pitched in the American League during the past season but the Yankees escaped the treatment. They were held to one hit by Covaleskie of Cleveland and Boland of Detroit, to two hits by Walter Johnson, Cicotte and Lam[illegible] to three hits by Ruth, Mays, [illegible] Walter Johnson.

The Giants were not victims of no-hit or one-hit pitching during the season. McGraw's men were held to two hits by Rixey, Vaughn and Ponder, and to three hits in a game against Boston in which both Nehf and Ragan pitched.

None of the Brooklyn pitchers got through a game with a no-hit or a one-hit performance during the season. The best work in limiting hits was done by Marquard against Pittsburgh and by Pfeffer against St. Louis, each allowing two hits.

Mogridge led the Yankees' boxmen in allowing few hits. He set Boston down without a hit, allowed Philadelphia two hits in a game and Chicago three in another. In the two-hit class were Caldwell against Chicago, Fisher against Boston, and Cullop and Mogridge together in a game against Detroit.

The best performance of airtight pitching in a short space of time was made by Tom Seaton of the Cubs, who pitched three-hit games against Pittsburgh, Brooklyn and Boston between May 7 and May 17.

There Are Good Natured Husbands, Skeptical Wives Notwithstanding.

"HUBBY," said young Mrs. Wombat brightly, "I think I'll give away your old winter suits. You'll never wear them again."

"Quite true, my dear. In fact, you might sell them, and thus earn a little pin money for yourself."

"No; I have tried that at various times with father's old clothing. The prices you get from old clothes men are not worth considering. Fifty cents for a suit that cost forty dollars is ridiculous. Such a suit would mean much to the janitor or to one of the elevator boys. They run a great many errands for me, and I prefer to see them get the benefit."

"I think you are right, my love," assented Mr. Wombat indulgently. "But, by the way"—

"Yes?"

"I wish you would save me one of those suits for a fishing suit."

"Very well."

"One of those winter suits will not be too heavy, as it gets quite cold in Maine."

"You are right. I'll save out a good suit and brush it nicely."

The suit was indeed nicely brushed and folded when Mr. Wombat came home that afternoon. He examined it and smiled.

"Did you give away all the other suits, my dear?" he inquired.

"Yes; but I saved the best for your fishing suit. It's your old dress suit, dear. What's the matter?" she added, as she noticed Mr. Wombat's somewhat wry smile. "Isn't it the thing for fishing?"

"Just the thing for fishing," declared Mr. Wombat, as he bore it away. "I always fish in a dress suit, pet."—Judge.

Good Excuse.

A hunter over in the mountains once had a dinner with a querulous old fellow who was complaining about hard times. "Why, man," said the Nimrod, "you ought to be able to make lot of money growing and shipping potatoes to market."

"Yes, I orter," was the sullen reply.

"You have the land, I suppose, and can get the seed."

"Yes, I guess so."

"Then why don't you go into the business?"

"No use, stranger," sadly replied old lazy bones, "the old woman is too pokey to do the plowin' and plantin'."—National Monthly.

WHY EGGS ARE DEARER

HAVE GAINED PLACE IN BRITISH MARKET.

Russia May Yet Offer Serious Competition, but Cutting Off of Britain's Usual Sources of Supply Has Given Extra Trade to This Country During the Three Years of the War.

ONE of the very obvious reasons why the price of eggs has been increasingly high in Canada since the outbreak of war three years ago is that instead of keeping all her eggs at home, as was practically the case in 1914, Canada has been exporting large consignments of eggs to England. Formerly Great Britain got fifty per cent. of her eggs from Russia, but that source of supply was almost completely cut off, and the void has been filled as far as possible by eggs from Canada and the United States. To-day Canadian eggs occupy a strong position in the British market. The question which the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Liverpool now asks is whether or not Canada can hold her greatly extended egg trade in the United Kingdom.

He points out that "during the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the war imports of Canadian eggs, which had formerly been well known on the British market, fell to negligible quantities, the Board of Trade returns noting only 14,700 great hundreds (of 120 eggs) in 1911, none at all in 1912, and 1,950 in 1913. Home requirements had so greatly increased that Canada had become a large importer of eggs, and the total output was readily absorbed at satisfactory prices. At the same time the increasing competition of continental sources of supply on the overseas market, favored, as they were, by steadily growing efficiency in organization for collecting, packing, grading, storing, and marketing, lower production costs, and by a natural advantage of geographical situation, had brought prices to a level that ceased to hold out special attractions to the shipper.

"The war had an immediate effect upon these supplies, the total imports dropping from 21,579,950 great hundreds in 1913 to 17,804,805 in 1914, 10,246,926 in 1915, and 6,606,411 in 1916. Russian eggs, in particular, which had furnished over fifty per cent. of the total in 1913, dropped from 11,453,277 great hundreds in 1913 to 6,970,827 in 1914, 3,074,156 in 1915, and 734,525 or eleven per cent. of the total in 1916. This decrease in supplies from the continent resulted, naturally, in producing high prices and a strong demand for transatlantic eggs, and the greatly increased production of Canadian eggs has enabled our shippers to take full advantage of the situation. In 1914 Canadian egg imports into this country were 361,173 great hundreds, in 1915, 916,326, and in 1916 1,431,778.

"Considerable complaint was made of the pack of eggs sent forward in 1914, and the resulting condition in which the product reached the market. These initial disadvantages, however, have been largely overcome by the shippers, and at the present time Canadian eggs occupy a very satisfactory position in the eyes of the trade. They are very attractively packed, clean, and of the desired color, of good size and weight, and, while they must necessarily rank below Danish and Irish fresh eggs, they are generally superior to all but the best grades of Russian eggs, especially as regards size and appearance. They always command a premium of from one to two shillings per case over American eggs."

The Canadian Commissioner predicts that "the principal competition in the future will come from Russia. Danish eggs, while an important factor on the market, furnishing twenty per cent. of total imports in 1913, are largely sold as fresh eggs, bringing top prices, and they may be regarded as in a class by themselves. They are, moreover, largely distributed from London. Danish eggs are very carefully graded as to weight and size, the various selections weighing 13 pounds, 14 pounds, 15 pounds, 16 pounds, 17 pounds, 18 pounds, etc., per 120, while Canadian eggs practically all weigh from 14 to 15 pounds per 120. Irish eggs rank somewhat lower than Danish, are sold mainly as fresh eggs, and always [illegible] excellent prices. Egyptian [illegible] per cent. of total imports in 1913. They are usually of good quality and pack, but they are very small, not much larger than pullets' eggs, and are always sold at a discount on account of their size. Their season also is different from that of Canadian storage eggs. They are usually on the market from the beginning of January to the end of April, while Canadian and Russian storage eggs both sell, principally, from October to December. Egyptian pre-war transportation costs were 4s per case of 120 dozen from Alexandria to Liverpool or Hull.

"The Canadian packing is reported to be highly appreciated by the Liverpool trade. The thin cases formerly used gave much dissatisfaction on account of their liability to breakages, but most shippers have now replaced these by heavier cases which come through, generally, in very satisfactory condition. In this respect, they contrast favorably with American packs, which still reach the market, to a considerable extent, in cases too frail to give adequate protection to their contents. There is also favorable comment on the leaving of space between the slats for ventilation, a matter that was formerly neglected to the detriment of the product. Another point emphasized by dealers consulted was the superiority of the strong white, odorless fillers, now extensively used, over the [illegible] brown strawboard ones, forma-

WITH THE RED WATCH.

Some Anecdotes Told of the Toronto Kilties.

This is an interesting letter written almost wholly by Colonel J. A. Currie, M.P. He commanded the "Red Watch," or 48th Highlanders, a Toronto "kiltie" regiment of some twenty-six years' standing, whose men and officers volunteered as a unit in 1914 for service overseas. They got it, too. After the battle of St. Julien they mustered 212 strong out of 1,034, yet remained gluttons for fighting. Paraded in line before the King on Salisbury Plain the front rank men stood, every one of them, six feet tall or over. A large proportion of them were from the professions and business. Colonel Currie is a business man, who was formerly a journalist. After this sentence you will be reading his own words:

"While Fraser's regiment was in garrison at Quebec (1759-65 A.D.) an incident occurred that was later on duplicated in Flanders. Owing to inclement weather in Quebec, some of the officers in authority decided that the men should discard their kilts and don trousers. The officers and men of the regiment would not hear of it; the historian of the regiment says that the kilt was retained winter and summer, and that 'in the course of six years the doctors learned that in the coldest winters the men clad in the highland garb were more healthy than those regiments that wore breeches and warm clothing.' In the trenches at Neuve Chapelle an agitation arose to give the kilted Canadian soldiers in the trenches trousers. With snow on the ground, and half an inch of ice on water-pails in the morning, they would not hear of anything of the kind. Their health was similarly good, colds being unknown.

"It is strange how the idea seems to get hold of a man, the minute he gets into khaki uniform, that he is a fully fledged soldier. In Canada, for years, we had no regular soldiers, and the training generally was of a kind patterned after the South African war. Straw hats and overalls were worn by the infantry, and the irregular cavalry swagger was the fashion. It was fondly imagined that any Canadian who could shoot straight and who had a week's training would be just as good a soldier as a regular of the King's first army.

"I had done everything in my power to suppress gambling and swearing amongst the men. On several occasion when individuals were paraded before me for bad language I had reprimanded them, and informed them that strong language was always left to the officer commanding. This particular morning some choice words had to be used to get the transport moving. They moved, however, to the tick of the clock, and Sergeant-Major Grant, with a grin on his face, suggested that from now on there would be no more swearing in the ranks, as everybody was quite satisfied with the commanding officer's qualifications in that regard.

"It did not take us long to get the swing of things and feel quite at home. It is a law of the trenches that at night the men must sleep on their arms, that is to say, sleep, if they sleep at all, in their greatcoats, clothing and boots, with equipment and ammunition buckled on and rifle [illegible] to' at a moment's notice. 'Stand to' means to fall in behind the parapets ready to repel or take part in an attack. In the trenches the men 'stand to' at least half an hour before daylight and remain in readiness to man the parapets until half an hour after dawn. Then they are ordered to 'stand down.' The first duty of a soldier after he 'stands down' is to take out his oil-bottle and cleaning apparatus and clean his rifle. Then he takes off his puttees, boots, and socks, rubs his feet to restore circulation, and if he has an extra pair of socks he puts them on, or if not, he changes his worn ones from one foot to the other, puts on his boots and puttees again. Cotton socks are very uncomfortable, for when a man stands all day and sleeps at night in his boots, the socks, [illegible] are hard, will leave a mark in the feet. Unless the men change their socks, boots, and puttees once a day they are liable to 'frost bite,' 'trench feet' or varicose veins. The [illegible] soon render them fit for nothing. After rifle and feet are attended to the men shave. Our men shave every day, and were proud of their clean appearance in spite of the mud. One man was brought before me shortly after he went into the trenches, for neglecting to shave. He explained that he had served in one of the South African wars, and that on service there he was expected to wear a beard. I fined him for neglecting the King's regulations and orders. His comrades, who had warned him against trying to put anything over on the commanding officer, 'gave him the laugh.' He asked to see me, and expressed so much regret that I forgave him. He was a splendid soldier, and his fine example made a rule for the others."

A Great Country.

The enthusiasm of the Canadian soldier for his own country—a land "flowing with milk and honey" gives the tone of his description—will assuredly result in a great tide of settlers from the Old Country after the close of the war. Who could fail to be impressed by the remark, made by way of encouragement to an English pal: "Don't worry, sonny. We can swamp this little island with grain. Why, on my farm, before I joined up, we stored the stuff in the open air. And when that was filled up we had to use the barns."

Any man has too much money who has more than we have.

AS CHARLIE SAYS.

The cigar which was admittedly good enough when I made my debut as a smoker, falls lamentably short of an ARABELA to-day. The art of blending leaf has made strides.

Humor of the Trenches.

From the trenches on the western front comes the story of a soldier's narrow escape from death and the levity displayed by a comrade, illustrating how viewpoints change when men get on the firing line.

Private Mac of an Alberta regiment had a pious upbringing in his early home in Scotland, and his religious inclinations did not desert him when his family settled on a farm in western Canada. All through the war he has carried "Spurgeon's Sermons" in his breast pocket, and occasionally he does some preaching, with his comrades in arms as the congregation.

Private G of the same regiment lacked the upbringing and the book of sermons, but possesses a sense of humor. The two were in a group resting and smoking when a shot from a German sniper hit Private Mac in the breast, the bullet being deflected by the book.

Fearing that Mac was about to improve the occasion, G "beat him to it" and in a fair imitation of his friend's best preaching manner started in:

"Oh, dear friends, what a blessed thing it was that our dear brother wasn't a-reading of his book of sermons—as he ought to have been—instead of engaging in worldly conversation with sinful soldier men. For if dear Brother Mac had been a-reading of his book of sermons, where, oh, where, my dear friends, would Brother Mac (priceless old thing) have been then?"

Winnipeg's Aqueduct.

Mayor Davidson, of Winnipeg, and Commissioners R. D. Waugh and J. H. Ashdown, of the Winnipeg Water District, have completed arrangements for the further financing of the Winnipeg aqueduct work by a bond issue. The Winnipeg Water District was created in 1913 to provide a suitable water supply for the city of Winnipeg and surrounding suburbs. The district has an area of 81.79 square miles, with an assessment of [illegible] and a population of [illegible] cured by [illegible] land in [illegible] tro city of [illegible]

Inheritance Tax Argument

Inheritance taxes are very heavy. Unlike fire hazard, they are not merely possible, they are absolutely certain.

They deplete your estate at once, and to your heirs represent a specific and definite loss of money.

In New York a $250,000 estate would pay a combined federal and state tax of about $12,000. If left to a friend or distant relative, about $22,000. The John Jacob Astor estate paid $3,150,000. J. P. Morgan has insured his life for $2,500,000 to cover a similar loss.

Thus the estate is provided promptly with the ready cash to pay this tax and other expenses without the need of hurriedly disposing of securities or other assets, perhaps at a loss, to meet such needs. The logic of the situation urges immediate action. Premium rates, however low, advance with age and so does the possibility of entering the physically impaired group and losing the opportunity to secure this protection.

Knowing that this loss is actually coming, it is simply a matter of ordinary business prudence to guard against it. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada offer you a plan to do so at very low cost.

Irish Cinderella A Dashing Comedy

BRIGHT IRISH PLAY PRESENTED AT GRAND SATURDAY NIGHT.

"My Irish Cinderella," a dashing comedy of romance and adventure, presented at The Grand Saturday night, contained a charming story of a girl of good parentage, born in the environs of a poor house, but even these adverse conditions were not strong enough to overcome the qualities that she acquired by heredity. Daisy Carleton, the heroine, who played the part of Peggy, "the poorhouse brat," was a charming exponent of the true Irish character in which hatred of fraud and a love of justice and truth predominate. The plot was interesting, and every part was ably presented.

LIBERALS SIGN FOR BOURASSA

Quebec, Nov. 12.—Henri Bourassa, leader of the Nationalist party, was in Quebec yesterday and conferred with his lieutenants here. It was decided not to oppose the candidacy of Lucien Cannon, a Laurier Liberal, in Dorchester county after Mr. Cannon had signed the following statements:

"I, the undersigned candidate for the Federal deputation, by these presents, agree, if I am elected, to exact the immediate suspension of the Military Service Act of 1917, and of all its effects, until the Canadian electors have been consulted by a plebiscite, and, should the majority of the people condemn conscription in this referendum, I agree to require that it (the Military Act) be considered as void and without effect from its very origin, and that in consequence the conscripts be liberated from service and discharged.

"I also agree to vote against any Government that would refuse to adopt the above mentioned policy."

Lucien Cannon has signed this engagement, but Mr. Sevigny flatly refused to affix his signature to it. It is understood this statement from the Nationalist party will be presented to every candidate in Quebec.

SIR GEO. FOSTER WILL SPEAK AT ARMOURIES TO-MORROW NIGHT

CAPT. BURNHAM ENDORSED BY VETS AS THEIR CANDIDATE

Will Cable This to the Men in the Trenches- - Fight Sir Wilfrid Laurier and R. R. Hall to a Finish.

THE Great War Veterans' Association last night unanimously endorsed Capt. J. H. Burnham as the win-the-war candidate, in the following resolution:

Moved by Comrade R. H. Muir, seconded by Comrade Alfred Glendennen, "That this Association endorse and unanimously support Capt. J. H. Burnham as the win-the-war candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Union Administration, and that we cable our comrades in the trenches the action we have taken and impress upon them that we who have fought by their side call upon them to fully support the candidate whom their comrades here who have returned to Canada are placing before them, and who is pledged to support the Union Government in the full prosecution of the war. Also that we who have returned assure them that we are still in the great fight with them and are prepared to go to the limit to see that they are not left alone by Sir Wilfrid Laurier or his followers."

Can't Side-Track Vets.

Talking of the above resolution Comrade Muir thought the Veterans were entitled to a voice in the selection of a Union candidate for the House of Commons, and complained that the soldiers seemed to have been side-tracked at the political meeting in the Victoria Hall last Saturday.

President Staunton explained that the meeting in question was a straight Liberal convention, and the G.W.V.A. is not supposed to mix in party politics, but only in a Union gathering of all parties.

The Liberals Have Spoken.

Capt. Burnham could not see how a Union convention could materialise now. A Union convention is a meeting of Conservatives, Liberals, Labor, and, in fact, any party which may be in the riding, with a view to selecting a candidate for the one common end—to win the war. But the Liberals have spoken, and it is impossible to have a Union convention, in the true meaning of the term, without them. He urged, he said, in the press a meeting of all parties, and the Liberals refused. They met on Saturday, spoke to a resolution by Mr. Wearing, calling for a meeting of Liberal and Conservative executives for the purpose of arranging for a Union Convention, and the meeting turned the resolution down by a large majority. They then nominated a straight Liberal candidate.

Comrade Muir nevertheless thought the Veterans should endorse a candidate to show the Liberals where they stand.

President Staunton contended that action should be deferred until after nomination on the 19th, when the

KERENSKY SAFE IN CATICHINA

HIS ARRIVAL THERE AT THE HEAD OF LOYAL TROOPS IS NOW ANNOUNCED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Nov. 13.—A Washington cablegram received here today from Petrograd, via Paris, says the Narjdnco Slovo publishes an ukase by Kerensky, dated from Gatchina, announcing his arrival there at the head of Loyal troops, and ordering all units of the Garrison who had joined Bolsheviki to return immediately to their duties. The paper also prints an order from General Korniloff, who had been named by Kerensky as Commandant of Forces and Operations against Petrograd, demanding from the Garrison that delegates should be sent to him in order to know who were traitors to Russia.

TO ARREST DRAFT DODGERS

Chief of Police Thompson received this morning from Ottawa his military service papers, instructing him to round up all men who have not complied with the terms of the Military Service Act. This means that the police have authority to arrest without warrant any man in the class called to the colors who has not either reported for service or registered his claim for exemption. Such men are subject to five years' imprisonment on summary conviction, and the Government seems determined to enforce the Act.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS

TO THE ELECTORS OF WEST PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Election-day is December 17th. Its nearness admits of no further delay on the part of candidates in formally addressing you. It was hoped that political parties in West Peterborough might unite, as the members of the Borden Union Administration have done, in its support. But since the Liberal Convention has met and chosen its standard-bearer, who has not declared himself to be a supporter of the Borden Union Administration, it becomes necessary for me, without more, to solicit your suffrages. At the convention of the Conservatives of West Peterborough, duly assembled, I was chosen as their candidate to support Sir Robert Borden and his Administration. The Prime Minister has formed a Union Administration, composed of Conservative, Liberal and Labour representatives, to the end that he may the more fully and surely carry in a spirit of national unity and co-operation Canada's share in the war to a successful conclusion.

I pledge myself, therefore, with that same spirit of unity and co-operation, to support the Borden Union Administration and its policies, and I earnestly and respectfully solicit your votes and support accordingly. This is no ordinary political campaign, and it is hoped that all well-wishers of the Borden Union Administration will make every effort to secure the return of its supporters.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

KERENSKY WINS GREAT VICTORY FROM BOLSHEVIKI

Russian Premier's Troops Are in Control of a Portion of Petrograd.

BOLSHEVIKI FLEES TO SMELOY

Bolsheviki Leaders Negotiating With Kerensky for New Socialist Cabinet.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Petrograd, Nov. 13.—Leon Troskey, the principal aid of Nikolai Lenine, at Smolny Institute today, replied to a request from the Associated Press for his views on the situation, as follows:

"I may say that we are making all our statements now by means of cannon. I have nothing to say otherwise."

Premier Kerensky is reported living in a palace at Gatchina. The Bolsheviki leaders appear to be confident of the support of the army.

A London cable says that Bolsheviki leaders are negotiating with Kerensky for a new Socialist cabinet

CRITICISM OF NEW ALLIED WAR COUNCIL

Stir in London Press Over Premier's References to Allies' Blunders.

PLAN TO DIRECT ALLIED CAMPAIGN

Rumors That Field Marshal Haig and Gen. Robertson Are To Retire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Nov. 13.—The speech made yesterday by Premier Lloyd George in Paris has made stir in the local press, where his references to the Allies' "incredible blunder" and other matters are printed under sensational headlines

Comment on his speech is mixed up with criticism of the new Allied War Council as announced here yesterday by Chancellor Bonar Law. Some of the newspapers endorse the speech in main, or are non-committal. Others criticise it adversely as a military plan, and accuse the Premier of wishing to take over the strategic direction of the allied campaign.

Rumors in Sunday newspapers of the impending retirement of Field Marshal Haig and Gen. Robertson, chief of the general staff, caused some commentators to insinuate that the reports were sent afloat intentionally by semi-official hints.

LIBERALS TO HAVE SEAT.

Conservatives in Toronto Are Willing To Divide.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—At a meeting of the Central Conservative Association held last evening a resolution was passed recommending that one of the Toronto constituencies be given to a Liberal-Unionist, and also that Liberal-Unionists be permitted to attend Conservative-Unionist conventions in the city as delegates.

BOURASSA BACKS LAURIER.

"Not Our Foult if He Fails"— Nationalists to Stay Out.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—Henri Bourassa seems not very happy in casting in his lot with Laurier in this election. He wound up a series of articles on the Laurier manifesto in his paper Le Devoir by stating:

"Needless to say, we are no more united to the Liberal party than we were to the Conservatives in 1911."

After declaring that Nationalism is not a party, Bourassa says: "The immediate evil to combat is the policy of the Ministry, the policy of disunion and of national treason, and although the Opposition is far from satisfactory, it is less an evil than the Ministry." He is not in favor of putting Nationalist candidates in the field. He says: "To bring out Nationalist candidates would be risking the success of the Ministerial candidates, while in supporting the Opposition we are working to defeat the Government, which is urgent. If Laurier fails it will not be our fault."

German Raids Again Result in Failure

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Nov. 13.—In the region to the northwest and east of Rheims last night, the Germans, after lively bombardments, carried out several raids, says today's official statement. Their efforts brought them no success. Elsewhere the night was calm.

ARRIVE IN ENGLAND.

Peterborough Officers Ready For Duty Again.

Mr. A. W. Cressman received a cable this morning stating that his son, Lieut. Fred Cressman, Lieut. Leslie Stevens and Lieut. Wilfrid Stratton had arrived safely in England.

Ministeral Association Also Take Ground that Work is Military Necessity as Armies of the Allies Must be Fed and Factory is Needed for that Purpose.

The matter of Sunday work on the new Quaker Oats building has attracted the attention of the local branch of the Lord's Day Alliance as well as the Ministerial Association. Complaints from friends of the Lord's Day have been frequently made to these two bodies. It was urged that some action should be taken to stop the work. The matter received careful attention, not only from the local branch, but also from the head office in Toronto. The plea advanced by the Company was 'military necessity.'

It was pointed out that it was not the policy of the Leonard Construction Co., Ltd., who are doing the work, nor the Quaker Oats Co., to do anything on Sunday that is not absolutely necessary. The British Government have placed orders with the Quaker Oats Co. for immense quantities of supply, and it is urging the delivery of every pound of their products that can be made. The Government at Washington and the Government at Ottawa are classing machinery and metals of every kind for the purpose of reconstructing the Peterborough plant, the same as machinery imported for the manufacture of munitions, stating clearly that food for the army is quite as necessary as munitions. They are endeavouring to get the mill building under cover before the winter makes it impossible to continue, and the few Sundays on which they will work in the completion of this building will save them many weeks later.

These facts were recently laid before the Ministerial Association, and after consideration it was felt by all that in view of the difficulty of feeding our armies at the front, and the

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1917

CAPT. BURNHAM'S STATUS.

THE EXAMINER insists on the observance of technicalities and still vigorously maintains that Capt. Burnham is not properly before the people as a candidate for Parliament.

It is not Capt. Burnham's fault that he is not the choice of a Union convention of both parties. That formality would have been observed if his offer to submit to a conference had not been rejected by the Liberal gathering last Saturday.

The Examiner must concede that Capt. Burnham was at least nominated by a regularly-constituted convention two years ago by an all but unanimous vote. He was not chosen by an impromptu gathering, the members of which were combed from the highways and byways to support Mr. Hall and his morbid ambition for place and from which the better elements remained aloof.

The Examiner professes friendship for the soldier, but has never missed an opportunity to knock the only soldier candidate in the field.

Capt. Burnham has been unanimously endorsed by the members of the Veteran's Association. That fact should give our contemporary reason to reflect on the wisdom of playing up a straight Laurier candidate against him.

The soldiers who have returned from the front will support Capt. Burnham. The newly-enfranchised women who have relatives in the trenches, in the hospitals or in the cemeteries in France, will vote for him. The men overseas will be notified that he is the soldiers' choice as Parliamentary representative. Premier Borden under the circumstances will have no alternative but to designate him as the Union party candidate. What possible chance, then, has Mr. Hall, tarred as he is with the mark of Laurierism, against such a combination of forces?

The pity of it is that there is to be an election in West Peterborough at all.

MORE INSINUATIONS.

"WE NEED MORE MONEY to increase the pay of the soldiers, increase pensions and provide more liberally for the dependents of soldiers," remarks The Examiner.

Why these insinuations, this attempt to create the impression that in these matters the Government is indifferent? Why not be fair?

The soldiers' pensions have recently been increased by forty per cent. ,and the question of raising their pay is under consideration. Drafted men, at least, should make no objection to the compensation that the volunteers did not hesitate to accept.

The Patriotic Fund allowance to soldiers' families in this county was some months ago raised by an equivalent of twenty per cent. This may not be a matter under Government jurisdiction, but the Administration has taken the opinions of the beneficiaries of the separation allowance with a view to making a more liberal grant. Our contemporary should endeavor to keep itself on the inside of its vesture.

THE DANGER OF DELAY.

SPEAKING IN ENGLAND yesterday Sir E. Geddes said that the war would drift into 1920 and probably longer, unless the people pulled themselves together and got down to united effort.

The war will last longer than that if the policy of procrastination outlined by Sir Wilfrid Laurier is adopted, if he is given the opportunity to go on a trip to England to find out what all this trouble is about and what Canada is expected to do, and then, on his return with the desired information, to take a referendum as to whether or not that something is to be done.

A CAMPAIGN OF INSINUATION.

IN THE COURSE of a column-long editorial, in which it attempts to anticipate the platform of Mr. Hall, the Laurier candidate, The Examiner betrays the weakness of its case as well as its innate spinelessness, by making insinuations rather than definite charges against the present Administration. For example, it says that the nation's army must be supported by men, and yet it has never brought itself to the point of maintaining that these men should be raised by the draft. Some time ago, however, it took the stand that conscription was unnecessary because the number of enlistments for a carefully selected period was slightly in excess of the wastage of war.

The two main planks which The Examiner prepares for Mr. Hall's platform, now supposed to be in the hands of the builders, are increased production and some vaguely-defined means to curtail the high cost of living. Here is where the policy of making insinuations and not definite charges is brought into full play.

The insinuation is that the Borden Administration never did anything to encourage increased production. All the records prove such an assertion as false. From the earliest months of the war the Government preached patriotism and production from the platform and in the press. When the wheat crop failed in the West in 1914, so that the majority of the farmers lacked grain for seed, the Government came to their rescue, and, by distributing grain for the purpose, rendered possible the record wheat crop of the following year. This is only one case of practical aid to production among scores that could be cited.

During the fifteen years that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party were in power, the cost of living in Canada increased by a higher percentage than that of the increase since 1911. There was no war to explain this change then, no four hundred thousand of the best men in Canada had been taken out of the ranks of producers and sent to the trenches to be cared for.

Statistics show that the cost of living has increased more in other countries than in Canada since the beginning of the war. The people have to accept this condition as one of the evils that follow in the wake of the greatest war in history.

Referring again to the question of production, Mr. Hall in his speech Saturday said that the Government should have set tractor plows at work tearing up the soil of the West as an inducement to the farmers to increase their acreage.

Mr. Hall knows, or should know, that such matters as these are for the various provincial governments, and not the Federal authorities, to deal with. The Ontario Government put tractor plows to work in Ontario, in Peterborough County, too. All that militated against the success of the project was the scarcity of labor. Mr. Hall in this case was simply talking for effect. Any statement that sounds plausible is used as an argument in the heat of a political campaign.

Perhaps Mr. Hall has in his possession some plan to raise men for farm work just as he has for military duty. It is to be hoped that he will declare it in his platform. Probably it consists of first ascertaining that men are needed for the purpose, and then the taking of a referendum on the question of whether or not they are to be provided.

A FIGHT IN THE OPEN.

THE UNIONIST PARTY in West Peterborough is conducting a campaign that is open and above board. They have nothing to conceal. The Laurierites are meeting in secret, in dark and hidden places. Each worker is equipped with gumshoes and has trained his voice so as to be heard in whispers.

Why not come out into the open? If they have nothing to conceal, why attempt to hide?

MR. HALL'S RESPONSIBILITY.

MR. HALL WAS at one time an active worker of the Speakers' Patriotic League. None worked harder for the cause. Mr. Hall's fervid eloquence induced many a hesitating young man in this city and district to don the uniform of his King. Many a man in the trenches is there because he was moved by Mr. Hall's appeal.

Mr. Hall's responsibility is outstanding. Is it possible that he will now turn his back on the men he induced to enlist, and, joining forces with the quit-the-war party, leave Canada's defenders to work out their destiny unaided? That is what Mr. Hall's attitude really amounts to, disclaim the fact as he may. If the party with which he is associated gets the upper hand, there will be no more substantial aid for the men at the front. The soldiers, in whom Mr. Hall should have a paternal interest, will be neglected.

Mr. Hall talks eloquently these days against the war profiteer. The man greedy for financial gain is at least no worse than the man who would avail himself of the throes of his country to make political profit for himself and his party. The fate of the profiteer is before the public, the fate that befel the Garlands, the Fosters, and the Fallises. Similar fates are in store for the political opportunists.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

CAPT. BURNHAM is the soldiers' candidate. Premier Borden is the man on whom the soldiers rely.

• • • •

MR. HALL will probably insist upon making his own platform. He could hardly do worse than some of those who volunteer their help.

• • • •

GIVE A MAN plenty of binder twine and he can accomplish the same purpose as if it were a supply of inch rope.

• • • •

BY DECIDING TO start an employment bureau in this city for the benefit of their comrades, the Great War Veterans' Association have furnished the best possible justification for their existence.

• • • •

MR. HALL SAYS he hates Borden. If Mr. Hall were elected he would give scant support to the man he is out to "get."

• • • •

IF THE PEACEMAKERS are blessed, alas for those who stir up party strife.

• • • •

"IT IS A QUESTION whether Union Government has lessened or intensified the party spirit," remarks The Examination. Our contemporary was at the convention Saturday and should know.

• • • •

"THIS IS A WAR of regeneration," says an exchange. Then evidently, to judge from recent events, either the war has so far failed to achieve its purpose or there are some people past redemption.

• • • •

WHEN ALL ELSE fails The Examiner, it can say that we must have vigorous and effective prosecution of the war. Does it regard pausing in the middle of it to take a vote as to whether to quit or continue, either vigorous or effective?

• • • •

"Mr. Hall is frankly the candidate of the Liberals,"—The Examiner.

AND THERE ARE varieties of frankness that prove many a man's undoing.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

The Last Call.

(Montreal Star.)

The best way to enjoy Christmas this year is to make sure that your son, father, brother or friend in the trenches receives an appropriate present from home. Thousands of soldiers overseas will be remembered, and this will make it harder for those who are neglected. The boys will all be thinking of home. Send them gifts to carry the home atmosphere across the seas, and mail these now.

Brains of the Liberals.

(Guelph Herald.)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier refers lightly to the Liberals in the Union Government. At least they were the brains of the Liberal party, and they couldn't stand for Laurierism.

Insidious Propaganda.

General F. B. Maurice says that a great part of the trouble on the Italian front has been due to insidious enemy propaganda. The Socialists have done more for the Kaiser than his armies could do.

(Athens Reporter.)

COMPULSION THE ONLY FAIR WAY

Speed in supplying the reinforcements for our fighting units in the very early spring, when they will be most urgently needed and the present supply exhausted, is the first and most compelling argument for an immediate enforcement of conscription.

We must, however, not overlook the obvious defects of our old voluntary system, some of which have been well stated, as follows: "It tends to deplete the country of its most patriotic and self-sacrificing citizens and to leave slackers in possession. It allows men to enlist for the front whose services would be invaluable at home, while others who could easily be spared thrive and fatten by increased wages and profits. It fails to equalize the task of defending our freedom. It fails to bring out the full strength of the country's manhood." We can see all this as we look back. The magnitude of the effort still to be made leaves us no option but to back to the limit the Union Government which is enforcing conscription, the only just method in a democratic country. For, where the citizenship is equal, every citizen is equally responsible for its defence. Delay is fraught with the utmost peril. Every seat carried in the approaching election by a candidate who withholds his absolute support from the Union Government will hearten our enemies. Let the Hun hear the good news of a fighting Canada backing the fighting Canadians, at the coming election, and so hasten the end of the war.

TODAY'S STORY

"Have any of you written the boys at the front yet?" demanded the landlady for the eleventh time. "The Budd boarding house has sent five men to fight for freedom and not a single one of you has written a letter to any of them, I'll bet a dollar! The boys are complaining about it. I declare, it is a shame'"

"They haven't written to us, either," retorted the argumentative boarder.

"They have! I had a nice long letter from Jimmy Jones this morning."

"Yes, but there wasn't anything in it but the boy's address," complained the landlady's daughter.

"You can't expect to get more than a soldier's address in one letter, can you?" demanded Stews. "The address is something like this: 'Sergt. John Jimmy Jones, Jr., A. Company, 18th Engineers, Railway, United States Army, American Expeditionary Force in France via New York City, N.Y., That is an unofficial approximation."

"Well, perhaps he can't be expected to put any more than the address in the first letter," conceded the argumentative boarder, "but he ought to put a little more in the second letter."

"He can't," explained the patient Stews. "If he put anything in it the censor would sense it out."

"But there is some real news in this letter I got this morning," insisted the landlady. "If you'll keep quiet long enough I'll read it to you."

A deep and respectful silence ensued, whereupon the good landlady read:

"'We are now encamped at (censored) which is a very beautiful place in the midst of (censored). When I was in London I saw Westminster abbey and the queen and all the sights.

"'What our work is I am not allowed to say, but I am perfectly happy and contented. The captain told us something definite — of course, he could not be sure of it. Nothing is sure, you know. But it was what I was hoping to hear. It will mean work that I enlisted for and that I came over here to do.'"

Sighs of gratification came from the lips of the pretty teacher and the landlady's daughter and the professor and Mr. Stews. The argumentative boarder shook his head, but observing how overwhelmingly he was in the minority he held his peace.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Editor Review: Dear Sir,—I see it has been suggested that no municipal elections be held this year and that suggestion appeals to me as a move in the right direction. Why have an election? We have a good energetic and capable mayor, tried and proven in two years strenuous service, and supported by an equally capable board of aldermen. The work of the City Council this year has been prosecuted harmoniously, economically and, I consider in the best interests of the whole community. They are in touch with important work in connection with the war and otherwise which must necessarily lap over into 1918, and would be more readily and satisfactorily continued than were the personell of the Council changed. I do not consider this council would be improved by an election—it never is, according to a certain bunch of disgruntled citizens—then why not save the expense of a campaign these war times, apply the money thus saved to the Patriotic Fund, and elect by acclamation as good a mayor and aldermen as Peterborough has ever had.

Yours respectfully,
RATEPAYER.

A Chance To Hear Western Farmers

PROMINENT AGRICULTURALISTS FROM WEST TO ADDRESS LOCAL MEETINGS.

That the farmers clubs in the vicinity of Peterborough are wide awake has been shown within the past few days, when following the receipt of word that farmers prominent in the organized farmers movements in Western Canada were to be in the vicinity of Peterborough, arrangements were made within a few hours for these men to address a series of meetings this week.

Tonight Mr. J. Orchard, a director of the Saskatchewan Grain Grower's Association and Mr. A. A. Powers of Orono, a director of the United Farmers Co-operative Company, Limited, of Toronto, will address a meeting in Stewart's Hall, Otonabee Township.

Tomorrow, Wednesday night, Mr. P. F. Woodbridge, the secretary of the United Farmers of Alberta and Messrs. Orchard and Powers will address the members of the Fairmount Farmers Club, near Ida.

On Thursday evening Messrs. Powers and Orchard will attend a meeting of the Sixth Line Farmers Club in the Sixth Line School House, Otonabee.

Other clubs in the vicinity would have been pleased to have heard these speakers but they could not stay long enough to make this possible.

Arrangements for these meetings were made through Farm and Dairy, which received word from Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, that these speakers would be available for the meetings.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

World's week of prayer. Topic for Monday, Nov. 12, "Man's Resistance to God's Purpose for the Nations."

Jonah, I, 4. The Elder Brother of the Old Testament. The most vivid picture of the struggle within the Jewish nation of the spirit of exclusiveness and the Catholic spirit. Note the contrast between (1) the generosity of the heathen and their responsiveness to the light they received (1, 5, 6: 12-14; 3, 5-9) and the grudging unwillingness of Jonah to see any good thing come to them (IV, 2, 3); (2) God's love of the nations and the prophet's love of himself.

The countries to be remembered in prayer today are:

Africa.—The Young Women's Christian Association in South Africa asks that we join with them in praise for every token of the good hand of our God having been upon us through a year of extraordinary difficulty; for a new building in course of erection at Johannesburg; for a property secured by the Capetown Branch which will be opened this year as a seaside holiday home; for the training centre for workers which will be established at the Cape within the next two or three months. Prayer, that more workers of the right kind may be sent to us; that God's blessing may rest upon the training centre, and that it may attract young women from South Africa to offer themselves for Association work; that we as workers may know how to lay hold of all needed equipment which God has provided for those who would be His channels of life and power to others, and that in all methods of work we may be kept in line with His will.

Egypt.—Praise for the coming of Miss Grace Saunders, that a suitable permanent house has been bought in a central position in Cairo; for guidance and encouragement in opening a campaign for £6,000 to pay off the debt on the house; for further enlargements of Victoria House in Alexandria; for extension of work among school girls. Prayer for more spiritual life in the branches; for guidance in dealing with many nationalities; for blessing on the new house in Cairo, and that the whole debt may be paid off before Christmas; for a secretary for Alexandria, an assistant Secretary for Cairo, and a travelling secretary for student work in Egypt; for funds to start a magazine for the girls of the country.

Nairobi.—Praise for blessing on the Association; for sympathy and financial support given by residents of the city. Prayer for still more help in the future; for the secretary, committee and members; for funds to open the new building free of debt.

Let us pray also for work for girls in Tunis, Algiers, Mambasa, Onitsha, Abeokuta, Lagos.

Today's Program.

In the programme for the world's week of prayer special attention is given to the countries in America.

Canada.—The Association in Canada gives thanks and praise for a year of real advance; for enlarged opportunities of reaching girls in factories; for the opening of new departments of National service, both for munition workers and for girls working on the land. Prayer that the right workers to go abroad under the Foreign Department may be found, now that the interest and giving is increasing; for the rapidly growing Girl's Work Department in many cities and the conferences held in conjunction with the Sunday School; that the training course to be held in Montreal next winter may be blessed, and that University graduates may see in Association work a great field for Christian service.

United States.—Praise for the opportunities offered in connection with the cafeteria near the Billy Sunday Tabernacle where for ten weeks many thousands have been ministered unto in many ways; for the satisfactory work done on the border in connection with the mobilization camps, and for the opportunities opened in connection with the new camps all over the country; that among the students there have been results along religious lines which are deep and satisfying, especially through evangelistic campaigns; class and round table work and the splendid giving of the part of women students to the prison camp work in Europe.

Barbadoes.—Praise for steady continuance of work in spite of many difficulties. Prayer for a revival of spiritual life, and that sympathetic friends and supporters may be raised up for the Association.

GLADYS BROCKWELL
DIRECTION WILLIAM FOX

"The Honor System," a powerful human interest drama, will be presented by William Fox in this city for two days commencing with matinee performance next Friday, Nov. 16. The staging of this spectacular play in Arizona and California caused a sensation in the far West.

The resources of the States and the wealth of one of the largest film corporations were taxed to produce a work the direct appeal of which is to the hearts of the people. This is because "The Honor System" deals with the here and now of one of the world's most perplexing questions. It shows the individual in a tragic battle against the forces of society. Since "Way Down East" and "The Old Homestead" on the legitimate stage nothing else has been produced of such vital dramatic fibre.

The big ten-reeler will be shown here with all the effects and the special music of the New York production.

SAXAPHONE MUSIC.

Lovers of the Saxaphone—and there are many—should hear Victrola Record 18344. The two numbers given are "Aloha Oe," the most popular of Hawaiian melodies, and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." They are played by Benne Henton, that master of the Saxaphone, and Conway's Band. Hear this record at Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd. B. H. Britton, District Manager, George and Hunter streets.

COATS BELTED THIS YEAR OR LEFT FLYING LOOSE

Duver de Laine in Shades of Rust or Deer Color Most Fashionable for Practical and Ever-Popular Long Topcoats.

(By Mme Qui Vive.)

Paris, at the beginning of the world conflict, adopted the separate coat as a means for practising economy. And despite the vicissitudes of a universe distraught and upset and a great deal of yodelling about America dethroning the capital of France as queen of fashion, Paris continues to have the say-so, like a good old mother who has ruled her family all her life long. Who is there who would have the impertinence to dispute her authority? London, New York and Chicago are the daughters of Paris in the sartorial family, and they are making good in a way. But for live stuff we must seek the old lady.

If Paris says separate coats, it is separate coats, that's all. One of these graceful manteaux coats less really than a first-class, expensively cut up tailleur, and it has a longer lease of life. A top coat does not in the least mind performing during a second season, and it will, even upon necessity, do a third term as understudy. This fact is especially true these days, as dress economy has been the inspiration for styles that show but little change and slight variation one season to the other.

It's a rather good joke on the fashion strafers who would verboten everything that bears marks of modernity. They can't produce a squawk or a squeak without meeting a perfectly good argument that floors them. So what do they do, my hearties? They fall in line, naturally, as they rightly well should. They go buy a long coat of the newest, latest mode, and find it comfortable, beautiful, practicable, wearable and durable. If anybody can reasonably ring up a protest under conditions such as these, we give up. Anybody can't.

The few couturieres of Paris who have not featured the long coat have produced a tailleur with a jacket which extends into long lines that might be a top coat with a bobbed cut. Side slashings contribute an air of jauntiness to this clever garment and permit a brief diagnosis of the pretty skirt and blouse beneath or the one-piece frock composed of the same material as the jacket. The jacket that shows the irregular and uneven hem arrangement is distinctly of the mode, and when a designer starts shearing off that part of a coat's anatomy you can know that it will not be a minor operation, but something remarkable.

The coat may be longer in the back than in the front, but it is just as likely to be the other way about. One stunning model displays long dippy dips on either side, and just where they are ready to caress the shoe tops they are placed in a pair of patch pockets. The motive? We do not know, unless it is to provide a warm place for the lady's feet.

On manteaux of extended measurement and dimensions there is often a defined waistline, but as a rule the toothpickian silhouette rules and rages. Some models are positively vexatious, since they are circular and hang straight. The most astonishing seams appear, not any of which seem to know where they are going or why. Sleeves are more or less demented, and as for the arm seye, it is seldom cut according to the good old regulations, but goes capering in irregular lines, double curves and rebounds.

In the matter of colors it is best and safest to adhere to dark tones. A bright and dazzling coat is a shocker; somehow it doesn't seem to fit when women's chief athletic exercise is that of knitting socks for soldiers, not to mention sweaters for sweethearts and wristlets for patriotic wrestlers. The two best and most fashionable shades are deer color and couille or rust, while the color song trills between the two of them, including every possible note of grey and brown. These lovely woodsy tones are delightful for the autumn season when the forests rouge themselves up and put on their gold jewelry.

Never in any season within our memory has navy blue been such a forsaken wallflower in the festivities of fashion. Navy blue always started the style parade, just as the drum major precedes the band. Not so in the autumnal procession of 1917. Navy blue simply isn't; that's all. The wine shades linger along, but they are a bit passe, like beauty worn and withered.

Purple suffers from excessive popularity; last year it attended all the parties and wore its welcome out. Purple is like other luxuries—a little of it goes further than it should and does not know when it's a bother.

The fashionists are having a real time of it trying to make women understand that short skirts are out and long skirts are in. All of which is a bit amusing, since women who are entitled by right of good manners and gentle breeding to be called fashionable have never worn the extremely short skirt. Well-bred women never make themselves conspicuous by exploiting exaggerated styles. There is among the real cult of gentlewomen an understanding that the first requirement of correct dress is that it shall be ladylike. If it lacks that quality which old-fashioned folk used to call "gentility" it has no element that justifies praise or admiration.

Is Beloved For Her Devotion to Cause

Miss Helen Losanitch, daughter of a Serbian professor, will lecture in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, Wednesday evening next, in aid of the Serbian Relief Fund. Her lecture has won high commendation and is illustrated with limelight views.

Among the pictures was one showing a group of soldiers on the Macedonian front, in their midst, in officer's uniform, Miss Sanders, an English girl, who went to Serbia as a nurse, fought with the soldiers, and finally enlisted. She is much beloved among the soldiers for her devotion to their cause.

TO SEE LAW OBEYED.

C.P.R. Ordered to Tell Govt. of M.S.A. Defaulters.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—The following has been sent out by Lord Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., as a "23 message," which takes precedence over all other messages, and is communicated to every employe of the company.

"Under the Military Service Law, it is illegal to engage or to continue in the company's service, any person within class one, who has not on or before November 10, 1917, reported for military service, or applied for exemption, and the company is required forthwith after said date to ascertain and report to the Government the names, addresses and whereabouts of all employes within class one who have not so reported for service or applied for exemption. Please take measures to secure observation of the law in these respects. (Signed) Shaughnessy."

The Victory Loan campaign was ushered in by noisy demonstrations all over the Dominion. The first day's response was very fine.

Mrs. R. L. McIntosh of Sturgeon Falls, while driving a motor car to North Bay, was suddenly taken ill, stopped the car, and died.

Unable to Work For Six Months

"TANLAC HAS BROUGHT ME OUT OF MY TROUBLE SOMETHING WONDERFUL" HE SAYS.

"Honestly, if it hadn't been for Tanlac I might have lost my job that I have held now for eighteen years, and my wife is so delighted over my improvement that she has started taking Tanlac, too," declared George Shields, a long time employe of the Grand Trunk Railway and residing on High street, London, the other day.

"When I came down with that spell of typhoid fever some time ago," he continued, "I wasn't able to do a lick of work for six months. My appetite left me, and I just had to force down enough to keep alive, and it looked like I never would get back my strength. Anything but the lightest kind of diet would tear me all to pieces and made me miserable all day. My nerves were all unstrung and the least little thing would excite me so I couldn't rest. I would wake up half a dozen times during the night, and felt so wretched it was all I could do to get up in the mornings; I was so weak and run down I couldn't even lift a trunk without feeling the strain in my side for two or three days afterwards, and I had so little life and energy left that I just felt like dropping down anywhere and staying there.

"I heard so much about Tanlac that I got a bottle, and it has certainly brought me out of my troubles something wonderful. My appetite has increased so I feel hungry all the time, and I can eat such things as cabbage and pork without the least trouble. I have gained three pounds, and handle heavy baggage with ease, or do any other hard work that comes in my line. My nerves are in fine shape, I sleep as sound as a log all night, and get up ready to tackle anything. I never have that tired, worn-out feeling any more, and at the rate I am now improving I am sure that Tanlac will soon make me as well and strong as I ever was."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

TWO LOST BOYS FOUND ON FARM

RAN AWAY FROM TORONTO — ONE RETURNED; OTHER HIRED BY FARMER.

Two boys, aged 12 and 14 respectively, who had been through the Juvenile Court in Toronto, ran away from home last week and were traced working their way toward Peterborough. Mr. Geo. W. Powell, local agent for the Peterborough branch of the Children's Aid, on being notified, instituted a search for the missing lads, and found them last Thursday on the farm of Charles Moore, Smith, with whom they had hired, after telling a plausible story. Mr. Powell then notified Mr. Kelso, head of the Children's Aid Society, Toronto, who sent down a man from the Juvenile Court after the boys.

Mr. Powell and the Toronto agent agreed to leave the oldest of the boys with Mr. Moore under satisfactory arrangements, but the younger lad was taken back to Toronto to be examined as to his sanity.

ITALIANS NOW READY FOR FRAY

ARMY HAS BEEN REORGANIZED AND NEW POSITIONS TAKEN UP.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Italian Headquarters in Northern Italy, Nov. 12.—The re-concentration of the Italian army along the newly-chosen line of defence is now virtually an accomplished fact. The troops have taken up their positions in the trenches, the gun emplacements have been made ready, and the whole vast organization is preparing for the battle that is not so far off. The men are in good spirits, and a feeling of determination prevails in all ranks.

The retirement of that part of the Italian force in the Carnia district of Northern Venetia has shortened the Italian main front, which now presents a compact line extending about twenty miles along the new river defences to the sea.

Gordon Matthews In Football Game

Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Hunter street, have received a letter from their son, Ray, who has recently been made senior medical officer in his division, and in which a short account of a Rugby match is given, which was played in England. The letter, in part, dated at East Sandling, Oct. 21, is as follows:

"Yesterday afternoon there was a Rugby game between Rexhill and Thorncliffe, and both teams had some of the best players from Toronto and McGill Universities, besides several of the Argos and the Hamilton Tigers. We (Toronto University) won 16-17. And whom do you think played for us? Gordon Matthews, and he played through the whole game and played well.

John A. Westaway, Superintendent of Car Ferries at Windsor, lived to his eightieth birthday, according to his strong desire, though he suffered a paralytic stroke eight weeks ago.

IN FIVE MINUTES NOSICKSTOMACH INDIGESTION, GAS

"PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN" IS THE QUICKEST AND SUREST STOMACH RELIEF.

You don't know what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin to neutralize acidity, and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have dyspepsia. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach sweetened, and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it stops food souring and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Your stomach will digest your food if you keep acids neutralized.

PRESIDENT AT LABOR MEETING

MR. WILSON CHEERED BY SIX THOUSAND DELEGATES AT BUFFALO.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Buffalo, Nov. 12.—President Wilson today delivered a message to the working men of the United States and Canada in an address before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. His entrance to the convention hall was the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheering from six thousand persons assembled to hear him.

Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation, in introducing Mr. Wilson referred to him as "This man of destiny, spokesman for freedom, interpreter of the aims and spirit of our time, leader of thought and action among the nations of the earth."

President Wilson referred to the present as a time more critical than the world has yet known. He said the war was started by Germany. "Her authorities deny it but I am willing to await verdict of history on the statement I have just made," he added.

CAPT. BURNHAM ENDORSED BY

association would know just what candidates are in the field.

Let Every Woman Know.

Secretary Whatley was for letting the Liberals know where this association stands at once, and let every woman entitled to vote, and every man at the front know whom the Veterans endorse.

Why Address Issued.

Capt. Burnham here stated that he did not wish to take advantage of Mr. Hall by his being present at this meeting and Mr. Hall not. But he (Capt. Burnham) had been invited. His address had been issued simply because the whole principle of Unionism had been turned down at Saturday's Liberal convention. He thought the Association justified in going ahead and picking out the man they could support. "It may be that Mr. Hall may say some things that please you more than my pledges, and it may be that I may say some words in support of Mr. Borden which will induce you to give me your support. There can't be any other consideration arise unless indeed a third man enters the field, and that would only have a tendency to wreck the whole issue at stake."

Hall Pledged to Laurier.

Secretary Whatley here explained that some time ago the association had been notified from headquarters that when the candidates were before the public to invite them to the floor of the G.W.V.A.'s club rooms to give their views on the great issue before the country. But the fact that Mr. Hall is pledged to Sir Wilfrid Laurier renders it unnecessary to call on him at all. "What we want," he continued, "is a man out-and-out for the Conscription Bill, and get men over the water in support of our comrades as soon as possible."

Comrade Bird urged that the man who stands for wining the war should have the Veterans' support. "And there is only one man in the field so far," he added.

Comrade Glendennen—"You all know we can't support Laurier at all. He is against conscription. We want conscription, and the only way to get it is by supporting the Borden government."

Won't Have Hall.

Comrade Coppick advised the Association endorsing its man at once. "We are certainly not going to line up behind Mr. Hall, and if action is postponed we'll get side-tracked."

Comrade Theobold—"Would it not be well to notify the Liberal party to the effect that as they have nominated a Laurier candidate they can look for no support from the Veterans."

Comrade Gilbert—"Every man here should back up the man who has proved himself, and we have that man here with us tonight."

Comrade Muir—"Maybe if we endorse our candidate tonight it might have pressure on any Union convention which might be held. We and our comrades in the trenches should have more voice in the land than anyone. Let them see that we are not afraid to face Laurier and his crowd. I am prepared to sacrifice my life to defeat Laurier or any of his followers. With me, our comrades battling at the front come first, last and always."

Comrade Smith was for immediate action.

Comrade Elliott—"There is only one man I know of to support. There may be the possibility of a so-called Union Convention nominating a candidate with the same platform as ours, and then there would be a split. Come out tonight with the man we want to endorse and eliminate any third party. And let the Veterans' views be circulated in every home in Peterborough. Time is short, as Mr. Burnham has warned us."

The resolution was here put to the vote, and carried unanimously.

Not Unionist Administration.

Capt. Burnham here expressed his appreciation of the confidence reposed him. He was, he said, a staunch supporter of Sir Robert Borden and his administration. But, he contended, it is not now a Unionist in the true meaning of the word. When Sir Robert Borden invited Sir Wilfrid Laurier to join with him in selecting members from both parties in the House to unite in a coalition government, Sir Wilfrid refused. Sir Robert then selected Liberals willing to unite with him and his policy. But they do not represent official Liberalism. Hence the administration is not a Union of official partyism. The one-time Liberals now in Sir Robert's administration are men invited by the Premier to unite with him in a desperate attempt o win the war. They are pledged to support Sir Robert in an effort o bring into parliament men from the country representing no one political party, but pledged to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion.

In conclusion, Captain Burnham only asked the veterans to support whoever appealed to them as best representing their interests. Should a candidate come forth who they preferred to support rather than him, they could withdraw their allegiance expressed in the resolution; he would not hold them to a technicality. The whole election is a desperate attempt to support loyal men, and unite together in winning the war and save this glorious Canada of ours.

In referring to the veterans signing his nomination paper, Captain Burnham said he would rather have one soldier's name thereon than those of all the people in Peterborough.

Don't Say— "Call Again."

Yesterday an army of men started out to sell Victory Bonds.

For the next three weeks theirs will be a colossal task.

From Cape Breton to the Yukon, they will try to call at every city home, every farm home, and every office, factory, and business institution to ask people to buy Victory Bonds.

Conceive, if you can, the magnitude of their work; the hard labour it involves, and the high necessity for it.

Then, realizing all these things, do your utmost to make their task easier.

Decide now to buy.
Decide the amount you will buy.
Be ready to sign your application when the salesman calls.

You should and will buy Victory Bonds, but, don't—please don't—ask the salesman to call again.

The worker's time is limited. He has hundreds of calls to make; and although there is an army of workers, each one has a large field to cover.

Don't say you're going to hold your application for someone else, because each worker is limited to his own district.

The salesman will not accept money. The application blank includes a form of cheque, payable to the Minister of Finance, which you can draw upon your bank; or, if you have not a bank account, there is a form of undertaking which you can use.

Be Ready— Don't Say, "Call Again."

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

A VICTORY BOND BETTER THAN GOLD

A man who never lied said: "A Victory Bond is better than gold."

A man who didn't believe said, "Show me!"

This was the reply:

"Suppose you had $100 in gold. You can't put it in the bank, for then it ceases to be gold. So you have to hide it somewhere in a safe place. If you hide it, it earns no interest."

"Now take a $100 Victory Bond. You pay the Government $100 in bills or in gold, and you get an engraved certificate. That certificate bears the promise of the Government of the Dominion of Canada to give you your money back at a certain time. It bears also the promise of the Government to pay you 5½ per cent. per year on your money in the meantime. The interest comes to you at your address every six months.

"Is the written promise of the whole Dominion of Canada as good as gold?"

"Of course," replied the other.

"Then it is BETTER—because you can't have $100 in gold and get interest on it. And with a Victory Bond you CAN!"

POLITICAL NOTES

Labor nominates two straight Labor candidates in North and Centre Winnipeg.

North Toronto Liberal-Conservatives chose delegates to South York convention.

War Veterans nominate Mayor Redman in East Calgary.

London Liberals endorse candidature of Geo. S. Gibbons.

Liberal candidate in Brantford asks time to consider deadlock.

Bitter contests assured in both Hamilton ridings and Wentworth county.

Fusionists in South Bruce nominate A. E. McNab as win-the-war candidate.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

There was no mistaking the temper and enthusiasm of the big meeting of the Great War Veterans at the Armories last night. They want Borden, they want Burnham, and they don't want any third candidate. Their comrades overseas will likely obey their cabled instructions when the men in the trenches get the wire from their returned comrades here to vote for Burnham. The third party clique will not be heard of. Little secret meetings in lawyers' offices are a poor substitute for public opinion, and are apt to raise more of a laugh than a smile on the lip of the public.

DRAFT EVADERS GIVEN FEW MORE DAYS OF GRACE

Those Who Submit at Once to Act will not be Punished as Deserters.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The following announcement is made by the Military Service Council:

The 10th of November, the date fixed by proclamation for members of Class One under the Military Service Act to report for service, unless a claim for their exemption should be made, is now past. The great majority of the men in the class have satisfied the obligation imposed upon them by the statute, but there are still a considerable number who have disregarded the imperative requirements of the law.

On the 13th of October, when the proclamation calling out Class One was made, these men became, with other members of the class, soldiers on leave. By their default they have now placed themselves in the position of soldiers absent without leave, that is to say, deserters, and subject to apprehension and punishment as such. If no reasonable excuse for their default exists, they are also liable, on conviction, by the civil courts to serve a term of imprisonment with hard labor.

Turned by Foolish Advice.

Such wide publicity has been given to the law and its requirements that it is impossible there should be any considerable number of those affected by it who have not known or had an opportunity of knowing what was required of them. It is recognized, however, that many defaulters have become such through carelessness and a failure to realize the vital necessities of the time, and that others have been turned from the performance of their duty by the foolish advice of unpatriotic and evilly-disposed persons.

It is impossible that those who have failed to meet the requirements of the law should be placed in the same position as those who have rendered it prompt and punctual obedience.

At the same time it is not thought necessary that they should be visited with the full legal consequences of such failure, provided submission is no longer deferred. It has been decided that these members of Class One, now in default, who surrender themselves to the military authorities without delay, and before civil proceedings have been invited against them, shall not thereafter be subjected to civil proceedings, and officers commanding districts have instructions to deal with such cases as leniently as the requirements of discipline may permit.

Exemption Chance Extended.

While defaulters have forfeited their right under the statute to have any claim they may have had for exemption considered, it is not overlooked that the national interest is the controlling factor which should govern all questions of exemption, and that such may be served by retaining a member of the class in Canada, even though by his conduct he may have lost the personal privilege of claiming exemption.

Officers commanding districts have accordingly received instructions that any men who surrender themselves or who are handed over to them by the civil authorities without having been convicted, may put forward any grounds which they think might furnish reasons for their exemption and that such grounds should be transmitted to the appropriate registrar for submission to an exemption tribunal for determination. Pending such determination the board will continue on service and subject to military discipline. In the case of men against whom the civil courts find it necessary to register a conviction, it will be impossible to consider the question of exemption.

Invalid Father Pleads For His Son

EXEMPTION TRIBUNALS ADHERING TO STRICT LETTER OF THE LAW.

At the Tribunal in the Council Chamber this morning Vincent McCabe, an A1 man, asked exemption on the ground of nervous affection. Judgment reserved.

A Father Pleads.

The father of George Carmon Brock of 328 Charlotte street, claimed exemption for his son, a machinist 21 years of age. The ground offered for exemption was ill-health of his father. Mr. Brock was instructed to get a more definite statement as to his physical condition.

Exemption Granted.

Frank Milliken, inspector for the Imperial Munitions Board, claimed exemption on the grounds of domestic trouble and that he was rejected after serving seven months here in the 93rd Battalion. Exemption was granted as long as he remains with the Imperial Munitions Board.

Claim Rejected.

Gilbert Downer, another A1 man, claimed exemption on the ground of domestic responsibility. He was married September 17th. This claim was refused.

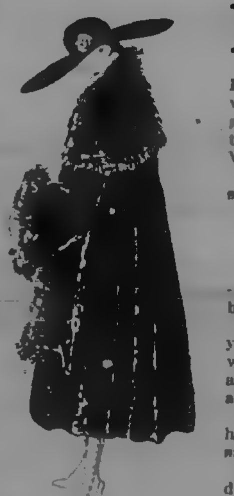
James D. E. Flett, single, an A1 claimant for exemption on the ground that he is a telegraph operator, has to await judgment.

Must Report at Kingston.

Edward Naylor, an E man who had not registered was instructed to report to the Registrar at Kingston.

ELLIOT'S STORE, PETERBORO

Our November Sale of Winter Needs at Special Prices



In spite of the well-known fact that prices of every kind of goods have risen in value, and the ever-increasing scarcity is still sending prices skyward, we are going to give you a sale that will impress its value on your mind for some time to come. We are able to do this only because of late shipments on old orders. We are giving you the benefits.

Every piece of merchandise involved in this sale bears a special sale ticket, so you can easily identify the special items mentioned here.

EXTRAORDINARY VALUES OF THE HIGHEST TYPE, COMMANDING YOUR UNDIVIDED ATTENTION, ABOUND IN EVERY PART OF THE STORE.

A great saving on everything you purchase, bearing the special sale ticket—on Millinery and Winter Mantles—(and every one of them exhaling the breath of the newer fashions).

On these highly necessary adjuncts to your wardrobe, to get the sale price, you just simply divide the price in three, and the third is yours. For instance, when you buy a coat worth thirty dollars, you put ten dollars in your pocket and take the coat; or when the coat, say, costs $10.75, you just pay $7.17 and put $3.58 in your pocket and take the coat.

And when you buy a hat that costs, say, $6.00, you just pay $4.00 for the hat and put $2.00 in your pocket, and take the hat. And it will be just the same in proportion for any hat or coat in the store during this sale.

We have just room for a few special items in this bill. There are hundreds more spread all through the store.

Come and see us. You will save money, not only now, but, in addition, the prices will be greatly higher soon.

Common Cotton Stockings, we are told, will soon be a Dollar a Pair

In view of these conditions, the following prices of real good wool and Cashmere Stockings will soon dispose of thousands of pairs, and we have a wonderful stock of Hose & Underwear, all good values at special prices.

Ladies' Cashmerette Hose

While these last the price will be only 35c per pair, or three pairs for a dollar. At present we have every size. Don't wait—be sure and come early. We never like to tell our customers that goods are out, and, though we have many thousands of pairs, they will run out, you know.

Ribbed Cashmerette Hose

These stockings come in every size from size 6 to size 10.

Your choice of any size for just, per pair 25c
Fine Texture Hose, special quality, per pair 50c
All-wool Fine Cashmere Hose, special price 69c
All 90c and $1.00 Cashmere Hose will be placed on sale for just, per pair 79c

WAR VETS WILL ORGANIZE AN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

Ask Employers to Notify Association When in Need of Help — Concert by Madam Gardine in Aid of Club Rooms

At the meeting of the Great War Veterans last night it was voted to recommend Comrade Coppick for the position of letter carrier, vacant until after the war.

Employment Bureau.

The Veterans also decided to establish an employment bureau of their own, and to notify employers to that effect. In this way it is felt that unemployed members will receive better attention than under present conditions.

Alderman Dobbin, of the Patriotic Fund, who has been doing the work this employment bureau is intended to absorb, will be notified of this action, and asked through the proper channels to kindly supply the new department with any openings for returned soldiers which he may have on his list now or which may subsequently come to his attention.

The Jardine Concert.

Madame Nellie Jardine, the famous soprano, has offered to give a concert in aid of the Veterans' club rooms, in the Grand Opera House on Nov. 24, and the Veterans have accepted. The association guarantees $150 and the opera house, and will take the net receipts. The Daughters of the Empire and the Red Cross will co-operate toward making the event a success. The following are the Vets' committee named to arrange the program and all details: Comrades Elliott, Watson, Hughes, Perks, Fallon, Cook, Barnes and Badley.

According to His Folly.

The new minister was dining with an old lady. She had fried chicken for dinner, and he was very fond of chicken gizzard. Just for fun he told her he ate them to make him handsome. She adjusted her glasses and, looking him over, said, "Well, you ain't been eating them long, have you?"—Christian Herald.

SENSITIVENESS.

Our Queer Language.

An exchange prints the following list of words ending in "ough," and adds the pronunciation of the more obscure words, as far as ascertainable from the dictionaries: Messrs. Gough (goff), Hough (huff), and Clough (cluff), though tough enough, thought through the day that they would visit Mr. Brough (broo), who, having hiccough (hiccup) and a cough, lived in a clough (cluff or clow), with plenty of dough, and a tame chough (chuff), kept near to a plough in a rough trough, hung to a bough over a lough (loch). A slough (sluf) of the bank into the slough (sloo) injured his thoroughbred's hough (hock).

An Ingenious Device.

Coins placed in a change holder intended for public places complete an electric circuit and cause a picture or advertisement to be illuminated.

His English.

"The King of Siam," said a diplomat, quoted by the Philadelphia Bulletin, "who is the latest power to declare war on Germany, prides himself upon his English. When the king last visited London he met the late Lord Kitchener, whose Egyptian triumphs were still fresh. Desirous of telling Lord Kitchener that he was born to command, the Siamese monarch said: 'Brave lord, you was made to order.'"

THE DIVINITY STUDENTS.

College Men Have Gone to the Front in Large Numbers.

"Divinity, Divinity, Divinity, Faith Hope and Charity. Long-tailed coats and poverty.—Amen." It is a college yell of one of our big Divinity schools, given more in jest than earnest, yet the yellers realize that the profession they have chosen is not highly lucrative.

When war was declared, and men's spirit of loyalty and sacrifice was challenged, many of these students volunteered. War did not come naturally to them, but by training they were fitted for it. As home missionaries, during their vacations, they had lived the life of pioneers. Few of them had not been frontiersmen. For the "Sky Pilots" are inherent warriors.

One is surprised at their selection of units. Every branch of the service has received them. Some became sappers, others became gunners or drivers, some signallers, others despatch riders, many are with the university companies of the "Pats," and others joined field ambulances, or the Y.M.C.A.

There they are, students from Pinehill, students from the United College at Montreal, students from Queen's, students from Wycliffe, Trinity, Victoria, Knox, McMaster, and students from the new Theological Schools in the West, where they seem to have enlisted en masse.

Some of the brightest and sweetest have fallen. Jack Lumsden enlisted from Victoria College in the first winter of the war. Crossing to France with the 5th Field Ambulance, he performed meritorious service at the dressing station. He was tender as a woman with the wounded, and by his words of cheer and comfort brought solace to many a dying comrade. Transferring to the Y.M.C.A., he became the secretary for the 4th Canadian Field Artillery. For a time he served the men from the ammunition column, but he found that he could do more effective work if he moved his headquarters farther forward. He sought a suitable centre in a ruined village of the dreaded Ypres salient. There is scarcely a whole wall in the village, but the Camp Commandant willingly gave him a battered house. He toiled all day of May 9th, 1916, gathering new stock and equipment. As evening fell, he took the load into the village and having deposited it, started to prepare a "Shake-down" for the night. The enemy started their evening hymn of hate, and the third shell went clean through the torn roof of the Y.M.C.A. There was no pain for Jack, as death was instantaneous. Thus passed one of our Divinity students, who could have, if he cared to do so, stayed back in comparative safety, but he chose to go forward.

There were two of Queen's most lovable Divinity students killed by the same shell in the same dug-out. Ed. Corkill, laughing Ed., who, by his winsomeness, had won the hearts of miners in the North Country and ranchers in the west. And Percy Caverhill, quieter than Ed., but one of the finest classical men in the university. Both went to France with the Queen's Battery, and displayed great devotion to their king, with an utter disregard of their own safety. In the Somme offensive, they moved the guns forward, and the new covering was very inadequate. The Germans were searching for their battery and a well-placed shell destroyed the dug-out where Ed. and Percy were loading. They died together.

Or does one know of a finer life story than that of Harold Owen, who was studying at Wycliffe with the intention of going to the foreign field as a medical missionary? He went to Valcartier with the First Contingent as a lieutenant in the 7th Battalion. When the contingent was going overseas he found that as a supernumerary officer he would be left behind, so he relinquished his commission and went over as a private in the 3rd Field Ambulance. After Festubert, when the Seventh had lost most of its original officers, they desired him to retake his commission, which he did. Soon his daring and skill in reconnaissance came to the notice of his commander. He planned and executed with a party of men, the first "Trench Raid" that had ever taken place. After several months' splendid work as a scout officer, his party fell in with a German party many times their number while reconnoitering in "No Man's Land." Harold covered his men while they retired, but he fell a victim to the enemy fire. For his valor displayed on several occasions, he was recommended both for the V.C. and D.S.O., and we believe his father, Major Owen, who has been serving as a chaplain in France for the past two years, received some posthumous decoration.—Canadian Churchman.

GERMAN AMBITIONS.

Maps and Books Call for Mutilation of France.

The historian Camille Julian writes to the Paris Temps regarding the famous map (carte au lisere bleu) with the blue border, drawn in 1815 by the Austro-Germans showing Germany's claim to all the territory which used to belong to the Germanic empire from the Franche Comte to Dunkirk. In a recent article of the famous Berlin paper Die Vossische Zeitung this phrase appeared: "We are ready to enforce our right up to the treaty of Verdun." This is not mere brag, as one might be tempted to believe, says M. Camille Julian. The whole of the German youth has been systematically brought up to a recognition of the rights of the holy German Empire. And, in order to instill this recognition thoroughly, every means has been thought good, and among others was precisely the use of the famous blue-bordered map. A few months before the war, in March, 1914, boys in the average and upper classes of the whole of Germany, and particularly at Metz, where I saw these books, were studying, as recognised school books, small atlases in which a colored line showed the limit of the former Germanic empire; and this frontier was not only indicated on the maps which referred to this empire, but even on those of contemporary France, with the explanation: "The line shows the territories which once formed part of the Germanic empire." Thus tens of thousands of young men, looking at the map of France in the nineteenth century, concluded that she still kept, against all historic right, territories belonging to Germany. We may be quite certain that if victory permitted it, none of these pretensions would be forgotten.

The Temps goes on to point out that it is not only in the school books that this influencing of public opinion is carried on in Germany, but that it is the great aim of German publications which spread the idea of German aggrandizement throughout the entire people. Recently a Pan-German review published the views of Herr von Spantz, a Saxon who has become a Prussian official and is vice-president of the Pan-German League. His program with regard to France is as follows: "Only a territorially diminished France, limited to her primitive frontiers, will give up all idea of revenge and will consent to an alliance with Germany. We will once more become possessed of all those territories which once belonged to the Empire and the German people, that is to say Burgundy, with French Lorraine, Flanders, Hainault, which fell into French hands after Alsace. Besides we want Belfort and Montbeliard with the Alsatian Sundgau, the possession of which enabled France to invade Alsace in this war." It is well that those who enjoin respect for German development should read such things, comments the Temps. They are not all Russian extremists. German development means the mutilation of France.

Insects Have Calls.

Insects, like birds and animals, have their calls. But the sounds they produce include the rubbing together of their limbs or wing covers and the vibration of their wings, so they cannot always be spoken of as voices. Flies and bees undoubtedly mean something when they hum louder and louder.

Landoise, the famous naturalist, has calculated that to produce the sound of F by vibrating its wings they vibrate 352 times a second, and the bee to creat A vibrates 440 times a second. A tired bee hums on E sharp. This change is, perhaps, involuntary, but undoubtedly at the command of the will, and is similar to the voice.

When seeking honey a bee hums to F sharp. Landoise noticed three different tones emitted by insects—a low one during flight, a higher one when the wings are held so that they cannot vibrate, and a higher one yet when the insect is held so that none of his limbs can be moved.

No music is as familiar as that produced by the locust grasshopper and crickets, and, although they are not produced by the mouth, they answer as calls, and are undoubtedly a language to a certain extent; and, indeed, their calls have been reduced to written music. The music of grasshoppers is produced in four different ways, according to Scudder.

First, by rubbing the base of one wing upon the other, using for that purpose veins running through the middle portion of the wing; second by a similar method, by using the veins of the inner part of the wing; third, by rubbing the inner surface of the hind legs against the outer surface of the wing covers; and, fourth, by rubbing together the upper surface of the front edge of the wings and the under surface of the hind legs.—Tit-Bits.

Nonshrinkable.

A man purchased some red flannel shirts guaranteed not to shrink. He reminded the salesman forcibly of the guarantee some weeks later.

"Have you had any difficulty with them?" the latter asked.

"No," replied the customer, "only the other morning my wife said to me, 'John, where did you get that pink coral necklace?'"—London Tit-Bits.

OTTAWA MAY HAVE PLACE IN NEW INTERNATIONAL

The announcement of the formation of the new Union Baseball league, consisting of teams from the International league and American association, has aroused considerable interest in Ottawa by reason of the fact that that city will likely be included in the proposed new International.

It is a foregone conclusion that the cities eliminated by the organization of Toronto, Buffalo, Newark and Baltimore into a circuit with four of the American association teams will be followed by the launching of a Class A league. Already New York reports are to the effect that Ottawa will be linked up with Montreal, Albany, Syracuse, Providence and other cities in the reconstructed International. Hopes, in fact, are held out that play will be resumed in Ottawa next summer.

That the capital is a great little baseball burg was shown in 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915, when the Ottawa won the pennant in the Canadian league. Until 1915, when wartime interference and a lopsided pennant race interfered, the Ottawa club made big money. It was favored by Sunday baseball on the Hull side of the river, and games over there never failed to draw big crowds. Frank Shaughnessy managed the team in 1913, 1914 and 1915, and among the players he developed was Urban Shocker, now of the New York Americans. Baseball became immensely popular in Ottawa, and visiting teams always did well financially on their trips to the capital.

WILLARD'S CIRCUS.

U.S. Army Takes the Big Top Off Jess' Hands.

Jess Willard's circus, which was installed in winter quarters near Jacksonville, Florida, has been leased by the government, according to Walter Monohan, sparring partner of the heavyweight champion, who has been traveling with Willard's show. Monahan came to Chicago from the south after the show quit for the year. Jess intends to winter along the Florida beach.

The show was taken off Willard's hands by a department of the United States army quartermaster corps, and the numerous saddle horses and other animals will bring a good rental, besides taking the heavy expense burden of winter feeding off Willard's purse. When the show was leased the government also contracted to take over the services of the big force of workmen with the show.

AD WOLGAST.

Weighs Only 86 Pounds and His Hair is Grey.

Ad Wolgast, once champion of all the lightweights and once one of the sturdiest fighters to ever step inside the roped arena, is nearing the end in a Milwaukee sanitarium. According to Ad's brother, Louis, the former title-holder is, in truth, but a shadow of his former self.

"Ad only weighs eighty-six pounds and his hair is rapidly turning gray," states Louis Wolgast in a letter to a friend. "The chances are he will never leave the sanitarium. Ad wants to become an instructor in boxing in the United States army, but, of course, he could not do that. His physical condition would not permit it."

Just before the regular hour of church service Sunday evening at Chapleau Rev. C. S. Applegath led his congregation and many other citizens to meet the Governor-General at the station, and introduced his Excellency to the large crowd to which the Duke made an appreciative address on the "first birthday as a Canadian citizen."

Lord Northcliffe and Lord Reading arrived in England from the United States.

In view of the prevailing danger of famine in the occupied district of Belgium, the capture of the Haelen increased the acuteness of the situation.

CITIZENS URGED TO EAT FISH

To the Citizens of Our City:

Your City Council, realizing the responsibility of this community in helping to conserve the food of the country so that we may better support those who are gallantly fighting for us in the trenches in Europe, would ask for the co-operation of every householder in the city by urging them to buy fish rather than beef or bacon, which are needed for the army.

Fish food is especially recommended for the reasons that with proper cooking it is appetizing and is one of the most healthful foods known. And it is very reasonable in price.

To encourage larger consumption of fish in the community a committee has been appointed by the Council to co-operate with the Dominion Fish Committee and fish dealers, with the object of ensuring for the householder a continuous supply of fish at reasonable prices. Absolutely fresh fish.

Any complaints or suggestions that will tend to benefit the service may be addressed to the Fish Committee, City Buildings, Peterborough.

THE FALL OF A DYNASTY AS TOLD ON THE SCREEN

There is a series of articles running through some of the newspapers the avowed object of which is to settle a dispute as to whether Rasputin, the adventurer, who really, from his place behind the throne, ruled Russia for years, was a saint or a devil. The reader is bewildered by conflicting arguments. If he follows the articles day after day he may be in a position to venture an opinion of his own in six months or so.

Any person who is interested in the trend of Russian events that are changing the history of the world and upsetting all traditions, can acquire all the information that is necessary by spending a couple of hours at the Grand Opera House, where the story of The Fall of the Romanoffs is being told on the screen. It is a graphic presentation of the history of the Russian revolution and all that led up to it, and the value of the pictorial recital is in its fidelity to the record.

The deposed Czar of all the Russias was a weakling rather than a degenerate or a tyrant. His weaker will was opposed to that of his consort, a relative of the Kaiser, and whose devotion to her native land was stronger than that for her adopted country. The Czar receives a measure of justice from the film that represents him as holding out for his own country's welfare against the machinations of the Czarina and Rasputin, the man who may not have duped her, but who was willing to be used as her instrument in intrigue.

Leave it to the screen story and Rasputin was a genius of evil, a dissolute adventurer, a creature of fortune, and above all a coward, as such characters invariably are. He worked in secret, like the average small-bore politician and like the heavy villain in every human drama, met his just deserts at last.

The story as presented at the Grand is an excellent presentation of life at a royal court, where moral ethics are held in light esteem. It abounds with thrilling climaxes, among the best of which is the scene which represents the Czar as calling upon his soldiers to fire upon the people who are clamoring for the despot's abdication.

"Damn them! Fire!" orders the Czar, and the royal soldiers to a man fling down their rifles, to the lasting honor of human nature, crushed under the heel of autocracy as it had been for centuries.

The film is coming into its own as one of the best means for educating the public, even though the world is rather slow in realizing its advantages.

The performance will be repeated at the Grand tonight and tomorrow night, with daily matinees. "The Fall of the Romanoffs" is being presented in the leading Canadian and American cities, and is regarded as a standard photo play.

YEAR'S WORK OF WOMEN'S GUILD

WHAT LADY TEACHERS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS HAVE BEEN DOING.

The work of the Women Teachers' Guild might rightly be divided into three phases, patriotic, educational and social.

To raise the necessary funds to carry on the work of the first phase, patriotic, the guild procured the able services of Ada L. Ward. Her lecture "With my Blackboard at the Front" was very much appreciated. Also each teacher paid a fee of one dollar. With this money wool was purchased and one hundred and seventeen pairs of socks were knit by the teachers.

During the year the Guild met the last Friday of each month in the Kindergarten of one of the schools. The program carried out at these meetings was both educational and social. The countries of the Allies were studied.

At each meeting a paper was read on one or two of these countries and as far as possible, a few times, the refreshment served was the food used by the country studied.
